Is there a man amongst us who will ever banish from his memory some of the food swindles that came into our courts, during the very acute stage of food shortage of the early part of 1917? It was at this time that the infamous "Gingerbread Gang" the great "Corned-beef Corner," and the case of "The Baldheaded Club," were discovered. Of the two former, little need be said, other than that the perpetrators of these schemes for foodhogging, were not "called up" for military service. But of the latter none knew what sinister mystery lay behind the gang of scoundrels who camouflaged their identity under the title of "The Baldheaded Club." The whole affair reminded one of such a thing as the 97th episode of "The Crimson Band," where at the end, the film punches out a question of this type, "Who is the man with twisted nose?" and an admonition not to miss episode 98.

But we are leaving our muttons to get cold, and will recapitulate the case of "the Baldheaded Club," which was as follows. A well dressed man was arrested and charged with having in his possession a pound of butter, when his coupon book showed him to be entitled to ½ of an ounce. He refused, at first, to make a statement, but later volunteered the information that he obtained the butter from his club. On being searched, a visiting card, amongst other things, was found upon him, bearing the inscription, "The Baldheaded Club, Fruitree St. London W." The club was promptly raided by the police, with important results. No persons were found upon the premises, but in the cellar, a sensational discovery was made. Several casks, bearing the label "Government Ale" were found, which, on being opened contained not the familiar amber liquid, but larg quantities of butter and margarine. This clinched the matter for the police, and the man in custody was committed for trial at the Old Bailey. On that momentous day, a long queue formed up waiting for admission. Along Holborn and New Oxford St. the long line stretched; indeed, some optimists fell in at the Marble Arch, but it is said, they were mostly soldiers out on pass. The pound of butter, being "Exhibit A" of the case, was escorted to the court by a battalion of the Devons (where the butter comes from) and "Weary Willie," a war-savings tank commandeered for the occasion, bringing up the rear.

Unfortunateley something went wrong with "Willie's" internals, and he had to be pushed by a boisterously happy crowd, thus adding to the gaiety of nations. Inside the court, Mr. Justice Starling occupied the Bench, and was in his very best form; a childlike enquiry, "Is margarine a breakfast food," uttered during the trial evoking a titter of merirment which was discreetly suppressed by the ushers in due course. The opening of the case, made by the Crown Counsel for the prosecution, showed in a few words the dastardly nature of the charge, and caused a thrill of horror to pervade the court. As he finished, counsel for the defence rose, and in a lengthy and academic speech, pointed out that the presence of the store of butter etc. on the premises of "The Baldheaded Club" could be easily accounted for. "It will be observed" he said, „that my client is entirely bald." As he spoke, all eyes were focussed on the prisoner in the dock. The fact seemed too obvious, for the prisoner was bald enough to make a billiard ball manufacturer go green with envy; and as a ray of sunshine fell on his polished pate the sight reminded one of the dome of St. Pauls in the distance, on a spring morning. Continuing, Counsel stated that his client was a member of the aforesaid club, and each member was bald, such being the onus of membership. Counsel pathetically outlined the shortage of hair oil and pomades, and with tears in his voice, showed how the club members were compelled much against their will and desires, to use butter to anoint their scalps. (Sensation in court.)

Reply to a question from the Bench, counsel stated the margarine was for the use of the club doorkeepers, who were also bald (up oar in court). When order was restored, prisoner was placed under cross-examination, and stated that the butter in question was what is known as bitter butter, and was not of much use for human consumption, and as the club member found bitter butter better than metal polish they use it. On hearing this, a reporteress fainted, and it was afterwards discovered that she was only conversant with Muttons shorthand, thus the shock.

Order being once again restored counsel for the prosecution delivered his final peroration. "Gentlemen of the Jury" he cried, "This false alarm who stands before you, I cannot call him a man," he added with fine sarcasm "has the effrontery to tell the court that he used such a necessary commodity as butter to polish his scalp, so that he could do the lark — de — da!" These words seemed to take all the shine out of the prisoner, and it was noticed that the whole of his head went pale. The counsel's stentorian tones had the effect of waking His Honour, who, with a look of owl-like wisdom was observed to be making notes with the wrong end of his pen. After passing sentence of penal servitude for five years, the learned Judge remarked that this case had most certainly opened his eyes. Then the newspapers had a turn.

"The Daily Blues," in a windy rigmarole purporting to be a leading article, considered that cocoa-fat would have answered the prisoners purpose just as well, "The Daily Howl" was in its element. Relegating war news to a half back page, with the football items, its main columns were devoted to the case of "The Baldheaded Club," and inaseries of slashing articles, it belaboured food-hogs and food-controllers indiscriminately, going the whole hog, so to speak.

Its flaring headlines, "Should Baldheads Be Buttered" and "Baldheads and Balderdash," attracted great attention.

Let those who would harshly blame the unfortunate citizen of Cologne heretofore mentioned, ponder the words written here, and think of our shortcomings of the same nature, away in "Blighty," in the days gone by, "Lest we forget."

Leave Trains, Old and New.

Dear Maister Editor,

Since vreetin' tae ye last A've been on a fleein' veesit, though nae by airyplain, tae the lan' o' mountain-dew, ream an' butter'd bannocks, sonsy deems, an' big ha' Bibles.

Like Davit Elshender, ilka ane greetit me but an' ben at kirk an' mairt for a hale fortnicht wi' "Ay, ay! an' so that's you yerself, Maister Peter. Losh, but it's a lang time sin A've seen ye. Ay, ay! an' fat's brocht ye this length? Are ye on laive or demobilees'd? Fan dae ye gae back agin?

It's nae aboot m' holiday in Scotlan' hooever, that I mean tae vreet ye, but aboot the traivellin' there an' back. Man, it coo's a'. Enterin' a horse boax for 40 homes an' aucht chevrons (fatever they mean by that), I set oot rale cantykin' frae Coloan on a Tuesda' efterneen. The sun was glintin' bonnie i' the sou'-wastern lift, though a snell win' blew frae the cauld an' icey north.

A gweed curnie o's were stappit into ilka horse boax like sae mony bowies, an' at nichtfa' there lay roon' the ingle-neuk sma' hillockies o' snivelin', hoastin', sneeshin', pyocherin' youkie craiters, aince dress'd in his Maijesty's uniform an' noo resemlin' orra dishcloots.

The late Beerboam Tree — a prince o' wags gin ever there was ane — aince reportit a Romèn chield as sayin', "Sick transit gloria Monday." This Coloan—Cally bisness was dirty transit withoot ony glory aboot it on ony day o' the week. That there was a sartin amoont o' method in their madness, hooever, was appawrent. Tae clean the fleers, or raither the middens o' ruckies o' strae an' coal-dust, maist o' the sodgers were dished oot in braw nyou claes b' their respectiv' quartermaisters. They wintit the job dune weel, A suppose, hence the supeerior quality o' the tunicks, the breeks, an' the kilts. As my copybuik used tae say, "The nyou besom sweeps clean."

A TIME TO LAUGH.

Vicar: On strike again? What's the grievance this time?

Striker: We don't rightly know yet. We're just waitin' to 'ear from headquarters.

Hokus: It must be very sad for an opera singer to realize that she has lost her voice.

Pokus: Not half so sad as when she doesn't realize it.

"If you plead guilty, which you are, the court will be easy with you. But if you plead not guilty, which you ain't, and the court finds you guilty, which it will, it'll go hard with you. What do you plead—guilty or not guilty?"

Cynicus: Of course she is a flirt, but she's a mighty comforting one.

Sillicus: What do you mean by a comforting flirt?

Cynicus: Oh, she's the sort of girl a fellow can propose to without any serious danger of being accepted.

An American and an Englishman were speaking about which country had the largest guns.

"Well" the American said, "we have guns that can fire 50 to 60 miles." "That's nothing," said the Englishman, "we have a gun in the English army so extraordinary that when it fires the gunners go on a month's leave waiting for the recoil to come back."

IN THE WRONG BEDROOM.

FINE ENTERTAINMENT BY "THE LIVE ROUNDS" AT HENNEF.

"The Live Rounds", the brilliant concert party of the 10th. Royal West Kents, visited Hennef on Friday, and gave one of their very fine entertainments to 51st. Bedforshire Regiment. The band of the 10th. Royal West Kents accompanied the party, and the show opened with "The Rhine Army", conducted and composed by Sergt. Barnham.

The life and soul of the party was, without doubt, L/Corpl. Stan. Darbourne. He moved with equal ease as a perpetrator of pungent puns; as an eastern mystic, shrouded in a thick veil; as the leading figure in a sketch, when he unfortunately finds himself in another's bedroom, and is discovered by the most blooming and blushing of "Ladies", Pte. Harry Langstone; as the singer, of some good part songs; and finally, as hero in the "Live Rounds" special film, in which he rescues Miss Langstone in the nick of time from the clutches of Sergt. "Massa" Johnson, greatly to the relief of the assembled "Beds". But the feminine attraction was quite too strong for Stanley, and in spite of her earnest remonstrances, his black head and her flaxen hair were often to be seen together.

AN INDIAN SCENE.

A special feature was the Indian Scene, in which Squaw Harry Langstone sighed plaintively for her "Temple Bells", and "Massa" Johnson scored a real hit with his "Indian Rag". In contrast to this lighter vein, the audience was treated to the patriotic songs of Dan Barnard and Frank Spencer; nor must we omit Billy Pales in "I want to go home" or Pte. Norman's delightful sketches of a "parvenu" J. P., and a country parson's Mothers' Meeting.

Altogether, the 10th. Royal West Kents must be congratulated on having a battalion concert party much above the average; their fame had evidently gone before them, for the Hennef Cinema, big as it is, was unable to seat all the spectators.

RETIRING FROM ACTIVE SERVICE.

No. 3 GARRISON COY, 43rd R.F. BID GOOD-BYE TO OFFICERS.

A farewell gathering of No. 3 Garrison Coy 43rd Batt. Royal Fusiliers was held on Tuesday evening in the barracks, Bonner Wall, Cologne, to bid farewell to Major J. Kenneth Aitken, the Commanding Officer, on his retirement from Active Service, and to Quarter-Master Segt.-Major J. W. Oliver who is also retiring.

An excellent repast was presided over by Lieut M. H. Wyatt supported by Lieut. A. H. T. Broderick.

Lieut. Wyatt paid a high tribute to the valuable work accomplished by Major Kenneth Aitken before and during the war, and the company was the poorer for his retirement.

Major Aitkin on rising to address the assembled company was received by the singing of "He's a Jolly Good Fellow" and the lusty and boisterous applause scured only to show how much the Major was esteemed and respected. In a well chosen speech he referred to his Army career and impressed upon his hearers the advisability of keeping and pulling together. Other speakers were Lieut. Broderick, Quartermaster Sergt.-Major Oliver who was greeted with "Good Old Jock", Sergt. Hobbs and Pte. Shirley.

At the conclusion of the speech-making a concert followed, songs being rendered by Lieut Broderick, Cpls. Scnofield and Hunter Private Dawson, Private Fartell, Private Handel and Private Manley. Singing and dancing were indulged in long after "lights out" had sounded. Private Dawson acted as M.C. During the evening Quarter-Master T. W. Oliver gave several Scotch songs, which greatly amused the company. Cpls. Forster, Frost, H. Ward. Hunter and Davies also assisted along with Sergt. Walker to make the gathering an enjoyable success.

BOOKS, BILLIARDS and BRIDGE AT BONN.

Y.M.C.A's LATEST ACQUISITION.

Anyone who knew No 10 Munster Platz Bonn, a month ago, would hardly recognise its interior at the present time.

The Y.M.C.A. has taken the place over and transformed the rooms thoroughly to that of a club. It now offers many comforts and conveniences. There is a bilhard room with three tables; a lecture room (wherein classes in the German language are held as well as lectures on economics etc.) and games rooms containing ping-pong sets, chess, draughts, dominoes etc; and a card room where bridge is having a great boom. For music lovers there is a piano and a gramophone with "umpteen" records.

A lending library and book shop provide ample and well varied reading material for officers and other ranks with literary tastes.

CONCERT AT MUNSTEREIFEL.

The concert hall of the girls school was packed to excess on two nights of last week when Miss Inez Bensusan's Woman's Theatrical Coy. appeared. The Coy. showed to great advantage in three sketches, "The Food Control", "The £12 Look and "A Bit of Blighty", Miss Inez Bensusan's character acting in the last-mentioned being exceedingly clever. In addition Miss Gladys Norton, and Miss Hilda Potts contributed items to the programme. The arrangements for the Concert were admirably carried out by 2nd Lieut. G. F. Duchett, ably assisted by the stagemanager Lieut. J. Cotham.

GRAND BOXING TOURNAMENT.

The 53rd Battalion Northumberland Fusiliers are holding a Grand Boxing Tournament in the Artillery Kaserne Bonnerstrasse beginning today, and to-morrow at 1400 hours each day.

The Tournament, which opened yesterday, comprises 70 contests of three rounds, each round lasting two minutes.

LIST OF ENTRIES FOR "THE COLOGNE POST" CRICKET CUP.

A REQUEST OF ALL CLUB SECRETARIES.

The allotment of the entrants to the various leagues in connection with our cricket cup competition has "got us beat some," as the "Yank" would say. As we stated yesterday, a great many entries do not inform us of their location, and it is extremely difficult to place their exact positions. In other cases the station of a unit happens to be between two league areas so that it is impossible to decide which would be the more suitable league in which to include the team.

Consequently, we shall be very pleased if secretaries will help us out of our difficulties by 'phoning or wiring the whereabouts of their stations and informing us in which league they wish to be included.

A central town has been decided upon in each area and we desire to know to which one of these your team is nearest. These towns are:—

Cologne, Duren, Euskirchen
Bonn, Solingen, Overath.

In the meantime, we publish below a complete list of the entries received. None of the stations are mentioned, but these will be included when the list of fixtures is published.

The whole organization of the competition is now being held up pending the receipt of the information asked for, and we hope club secretaries, will assist us to get things going with as little delay as possible by 'phoning or wiring NOW.

AT THE SIGN OF THE RED TRIANGLE.

TALK BY MR. E. W. HORNING ON STEVENSON, CONAN DOYLE AND JACOBS.

The great hall at the Central Y.M.C.A., Cologne was again packed to the doors on Tuesday night when the Band of the 12th Lancers paid their return visit.

The programme comprised selections from "The Mikado", which is probably the most popular of Sir Arthur Sullivan's light works; Coleridge Taylor's "Onward! Awake, Beloved" from "Hiawatha's Wedding Feast"; the Tubaphone solo "Fairyland Chimes" by Musician J. C. Browne; two songs by Mr. Arnold Jones, namely "To Anthea" and "The Two Grenadiers", both of which were excellently rendered and well received; the overture "William Tell"; clarionet solo, "Ancient Scotch Melodies" by Corpl. C. Carrol; and three charming pieces originally written for a small orchestra. The concluding item on the programme was a selection from "The Bing Boys."

Notwithstanding the foregoing counter attraction Mr. E. W. Horning in the Loreley Hall had a crowded attendance for his sixth and last "Talk on Short Stories and their writers," the subject being "Stevenson, Conan Doyle, Jacobs." On Friday Mr. Horning will hold a general discussion on the series in the Loreley Hall.

29th BATTALION M.G.G. v 51st HAMPSHIRE REGT.

This most interesting match, played on the Machine Gunners' ground at Dabringhausen on Sunday, resulted in a win for the home team by one goal to nil. The 51st. Hants kicked off, and immediately made an onslaught on the Machine Gunners' goal, their inside left only just failing to score from a cleverly placed ball.

After some exciting play, Lieut. Curram, (inside right) scored for the Machine Gunners with a clever shot. Keen play followed, a promising movement by the Hants forward line only being frustrated by the whistle blowing for off side. At half time the score remained Machine Gunners 1, 51st. Hants Nil.

Owing to the rain the ground had become very slippery; and during the second half the game was not so fast. Both sides strove hard to score during the last few minutes, the home backs continuing their splendid defence, but neither side was successful. Thus a keen and sporting game ended in a victory for the Machine Gunners by one goal to nil.

GERMAN SPECTATORATE.

An Anglo-American Soccer match was played at Brohl near Coblenz on Sunday the 11th inst., between the American Engineers and 2nd Brigade R.A.F.

Teams.: — American Engineers: — McLean; Chatterton & Hindle; Raynor; Holmes and Curry; Pierson; Buckley; Jones; Gendron and Dumaine.

2nd Brigade R.A.F.: Wood; Gadd and McKay; Hothersall; Campbell and Austin; Prudham; Pratt; Knight; Skeels & Carter.

This match proved such an attraction that even the German civilian population turned out to see it. The airmen lost the toss and had to defend the Rhine end. The game was exceedingly fast, both teams striving their hardest to get through. Several times the American defence prevailed, when the airmen seemed all but through, Curry being chiefly responsible. The American left retaliated and tried hard to score. Resuming the attack the airmen strove their utmost and neat combination between Prudham and Hothersall ended in Capt. Pratt pouncing on the centre and registering the first goal, after twenty minutes play. The pace was now equal to that of a winters day and every ounce of energy was being brought into the game. Gendron was continually dangerous. Half time arrived with the airmen attacking.

SECOND HALF.

Resuming, the Americans at once pressed which culminated in the R.A.F. goal-keeper saving the situation; then excellent combination on the part of the Britisners enabled the battle to rage in the American goal-mouth where a defender handled a centre from Carter. Campbell scored from the ensuing penalty. Not in the least discouraged by this piece of bad luck the Americans again played with great dash and only the sound judgment of the defenders saved the situation. The airmen resuming the attack by the right wing the ball was transferred to the left and centred where the inside right trapped the ball and scored the third point from amongst a ruck of players.

A feature of the game was the hard working American left half who was always a thorn in the airmen's side and relieved his team of many anxious moments, also the understanding which existed between the airmen. The Americans pressed again and forced a corner; this was beautifully placed and Gendron headed past the goal-keeper, Capt. H. G. Wood.

The game was now evenly contested and the final whistle blew with the Americans pressing.

The sometimes unenviable role of referee was admirably filled by Lieut. C. H. Sanders in whose excellent judgment no fault could be found.

Result.: —

2nd Brigade R.A.F. 3, American Engineers 1.

RUGBY AT SECHTEM.

6th WELSH v. SOUTH WALES BORDERERS.

At Sechten the undefeated 6th Welsh met a team selected from the 51st and 53rd S.W.B's. From the commencement it was obvious that the Welsh were streets ahead of their opponents, and it was simply a question of how many points they would compile. Within five minutes from the start Allen romped over and tries were added in the first half by Grant, Lloyd, and James, all of which were unconverted. The visitors were hopelessly beaten all round. It was true that Major Long, Lieut. Glover, and Pte. Riella put in a lot of defensive work but the visitors never looked dangerous.

In the second half the homesters were even better than in the first, and a great deal of pretty open play was witnessed. Tries were scored by Davies, Peters, Lloyd, Grant (an unconverted) all being the result of good open play and passing movements.

51st v. 52nd SOUTH WALES BORDERERS.

In a football match at Arsoff on Saturday in connection with the 8th Brigade League, the visitors opened but were forced to act on the defensive. Royce was prominent in clearing an attack and then Dyer broke through and struck the upright, and Dawson catching the rebound put the visitors one up. Play continued to be of a high standard, each goal being visited in turn, but there was no further scoring until the interval.

Five minutes after the resumption Ayers was injured and compelled to retire. Some very exciting play took place in the 52nds' goal-mouth, the "goalie" being severely tested.

At the other end Glover and Potter were responsible for some good kicking, but the relief was only temporary and just before the finish, Sotham equalised.

Result:—

52nd S.W.Bs' 1 goal; 51st S.W.B's 1 goal.

145 v. 481 SIEGE BATTERY.

This football match was played on 481 S.B. ground at Rottgen on Monday. McDonald soon got well away on the right wing of 145 and acurately centred to Colley who shot, but the goal-keeper tumbled and Colley again got possession and scored. For a considerable period the ball travelled rapidly from end to end, both sides missing opportunities but eventually Steeple scored with a long shot. Soon after, half-time was called, the score being one each.

Following the resumption 145 were awarded a penalty but Lemons failed to convert. Midfield play followed after which Done broke away on the visitors' left wing and centred which enabled Colley to score. Done again broke away and centred and Capt Robson taking advantage of this centre scored. After the kick-off 481 broke away and Colley passed to Lemons who scored with a low drive into the left hand corner. After another unsuccessful attempt by 481 Colley again scored from a pass by Capt Robson. The 145 continued to press but no further goals were registered.

Final result:—145 5 goals; 481 1 goal.

THE WOMEN'S THEATRE COMPANY.

PERFORMANCE AT THE BRITISH EMPIRE LEAVE CLUB.

Among the happy memories that will be carried away by the first party of troops to visit the British Empire Leave Club at Cologne, by no means the least outstanding will be those inspired by the delightful entertainment submitted by the Women's Theatre Company on Tuesday.

The writer arrived at the brightly decorated theatre (which is an adjunct of the Club) in time to find a crowded audience smiling the smile of entire approbation towards Miss Gladys Norcott, what time that charming and talented young lady dispensed light, tuneful little songs from the stage. The combination of a voice of distinctly pleasing timbre, an agreeable stage presence and other evidences of instinctive artistry recalled recollections of some of those refined and entertaining turns that promised to become so popular at the dear old London Tivoli, shortly before that theatre closed its doors.

A Lesson in Love Making.

Then came a change in the programme in the way of a little one-act playlet which Lieut. Esme Percy, H.L.I. produced, for the first time in Cologne, together with Miss Gabrielle Paul. "The Constant Lover," which is its title, written by Mr. St. John Hankin, was an immediate winner. The two characters in it are real and alive and Mr. Percy and Miss Paul presented them with delightful verve and spirit on Tuesday.

There is no plot in the sketch. The curtain rises to reveal the perfect lover, and the recipient of his affections, in very "mid-summery" attire 'neath the shade of an accomodating tree. One learns in the first few lines of the duologue that follows, that, arising from a "chance" acquaintance a week ago, these two young people have met each subsequent day under the self-same tree. And in view of our hero's wonderful capacity for rapid love-making, as revealed during the next ten minutes, one wonders why he has made such slow progress in his wooing during the preceding six days. However, that can pass.

It is sufficient to know that all those whose privilege it was to witness the first performance of "The Constant Lover" must have learnt a valuable lesson in the delicate art of love-making. Miss Paul presented the rather shy and prudish maid to perfection. She looked deliciously fresh and attractive, she spoke with a musical, captivating voice and her whole bearing was sufficiently demure to win the admiration of the whole of the audience as well as that of the constant lover.

Mr. Percy, young and vigorous and handsome had many clever little things to say, and he said them with zest, accompanied by affectionate little actions that gave the impression that one couldn't have done it better one's self.

Abundant Variety.

Following this, Miss Hilda Potts delighted the audience with three songs of different type, but all rendered with the same high degree of talent. The purity and flexibility of her voice are wonderful, so that, whether she is singing a dainty little love melody or an elaborate excerpt from Opera, her treatment shows adaptability and is always extremely pleasing to the ear. All who have heard Miss Potts in Cologne for the first time will anticipate with the keenest pleasure a renewed acquaintance with her vocal efforts at the concert halls in England.

The concluding item on the programme was another playlet, "A Bit of Blighty", which has entertained the troops for four years and which never fails to win an enthusiastic reception.

Mrs. Eagle, a soldier's mother, is the central character round which the other two gravitate. Miss Inez Bensusan took this part and in the process, displayed some character acting that was as true to life as any artiste could make it. Mrs. Eagle's ecstasy on receipt of a letter from her son; her jealousy when she fears her son has been "hooked" by a "munition hussey," and her delight when she meets the said "hussey" and finds she is not such a bad sort after all, are emotions exceedingly well impersonated. Miss Shirley King plays the sweetheart's part with considerable skill and Miss Paul, as Miss Holt (from the Snapshots from Home League) fills a rather trying role (since she has to occupy the stage the whole time without having very much to say) in every way successfully.

At the conclusion of the performance Miss Decima Moore, director of the Club, addressed a few remarks with characteristic vivacity. She thanked the Women's Theatre Company for their excellent effort, handed Miss Bensusan a beautiful bouquet of flowers and told the boys what had been done and what was intended to be done in connection with the club.

B. COY 5th K.O.S.B. v. C. BTY., 50th BDE. R.F.A.

The Brigade inter-company semi-final between "B" Company, 5th K.O.S.B. and C. Bty., 50th Bde. R.F.A. was played on the Ritter Strasse ground Solingen last week in fine weather.

During the first 1¼ hour the game was very fast and even. Then the K.O.S.B. forwards took the ball down the field and in a melee round the goalmouth Lieut. Young beat the goalkeeper with a strong drive. After the kick-off the Infantry again pressed hard and from a throw-in Lieut. Young added a second goal to his credit. Half-time blew soon after with the score K.O.S.B. 2; R.F.A. 0.

The second half started as in the first half, both sides playing well. About twenty minutes from the end the R.F.A. seemed to put more life in their attack and rushed the ball down the field and their centre forward Gunner Gregory scored a good goal.

Result:—

5th K.O.S.B. "B" Coy, 2 goals; "C" Battery, 50.h R.F.A. 1 goal.

A NEW INDIA.

SIR V. CHIROL ON RECONSTRUCTION.

At the London Day Training College, on Saturday, Sir Valentine Chirol delivered an interesting lecture on the new policy of Indian Government. In addition to giving the outlines of this new policy, he spoke in admirable terms of the help which this great empire has given to England during the war.

Whatever might be the value of India, said Sir Valentine, from the military or economic point of view, or from that of prestige, the fact remained that we had become responsible for 315,000,000 people, and that responsibility we must discharge. The Indian Army filled, in the critical winter of 1914-15, a gap on the Western front which our own unpreparedness for such an immense struggle rendered it impossible to fill up from any other source. Our own armies were in training, and the one force that could be flung into the battle line at the time was the Indian Army, which rendered an immense service to the Empire; and, certainly, among our rulers and educated public opinion, our great indebtedness to India was generously recognised.

CAUSE OF UNREST.

He then referred to the duties of the Special Mission of State which had been despatched to India in order to consult with the leaders as to the methods of giving effect to the new policy. An enormous step in advance had been made, Sir Valentine said, but we must not conceal from ourselves the very great difficulties confronting us, owing to the peculiar conditions of Indian society. Even since the declaration of a new policy the unrest in India, which it was hoped the promise would stop, had continued, and within the last few weeks it had assumed an alarming form. It might well be asked how it was that the promise of such far-reaching reforms should have failed to bring a larger measure of contentment, or at any rate, of patience, to what Mr. Montagu in his report called "the politically-minded classes of India." One obvious explanation might be that, in spite of the splendid services India rendered during the war, she never realised as acutely as we had in this country the sufferings and horrors of the war. In comparison with her population, her sacrifices in blood and treasure had been relatively small. Moreover, the battles had been fought on remote fields, and the Indian casualties consisted chiefly of the fighting races, from which the Indian army is mainly recruited, and scarcely at all from the intellectually advanced classes, who represent such public opinion as there is in India.

The real explanation, however, he believed, was to be found in the peculiar structure of Indian society, which differentiates so widely from that of our own civilisation; and also in the evolution of the British rule in India, and the varied and conflicting effects of the impact upon its population of our own civilisation, which is so vastly remote from their own civil and religious life.

ONE-FIFTH OF HUMAN RACE.

What we had undertaken, said Sir Valentine, was the political education of India, and the political education of one-fifth of the human race was no slight task. We had to do it in the face, on the one hand, of the conservatism of our own people in the country, who had, on the whole, made a very fine use of the great powers that had been entrusted to them as representatives of a beneficent despotism, and who honestly dreaded that those powers would not be exercised with the same impartiality and integrity by the natives of the country subjected to those influences of community, religion, trace, and caste which make it so very difficult for the most upright Indian to emancipate himself from them. On the other hand, we had to carry out this process of education in the face of a great deal of covert, and sometimes overt, opposition from the reactionary forces of India, especially Hinduism, which saw in the civilisation for which we stand, the possibly distant but ultimate downfall of all those institutions upon which their own social and religious supremacy depend. A great deal of what is called the revolutionary forces and anti-British forces in India which have broken out with such violence in the last few weeks are, at the bottom, reactionary forces that have borrowed the language and methods of the West, including even Western anarchism. They will use them against Western civilisation because it threatens the future of the social ascendancy of their own people.

After considering an offer from the Marconi Company to establish wireless telegraph stations in Australia for international messages, the Commonwealth Government has decided to give no rights to private companies.

THE CINEMA AND EDUCATION.

BISHOP'S ADDRESS.

The 51st. Bedfords have added one more weapon to their Educational armoury—the cinematograph film.

Last Saturday, at the Hennef cinema, two companies, during the period usually allotted to education, saw the war film entitled "The Battle of Arras", to the accompaniment of martial music. The majority of the men, owing to their youth, have seen no actual fighting, and they showed all the more interest in these pictures, which portrayed faithfully the varied life of a soldier in the battle zone, and the cruel wanton destruction to trees and property which marked the retreat of the German Army from the Somme.

The film certainly forms a most effective antidote to the insidious disease of fraternization, so easily caught by the young.

The Bishop of Lichfield, who is taking a personal interest in the educational needs of the Army of the Rhine, dropped in and remained an interested onlooker. Towards the end, His Grace had a short, simple talk with the men. In substance, he said that he was much amused to find that the ubiquitous "streng verboten," the old enemy of his pre-war wanderings in Germany, was now being applied by the British in a sense quite different from the original. They had seen vividly portrayed the wonderful heroism of their comrades in the Great War, and they were now in Germany to garner in the fruits of that heroism. There were two theories of life, the selfish one, that we should seek advancement regardless of the sufferings of others; the generous one, that we should all pull together for the common good. It was his ardent wish that they would all make the fullest use of the opportunities offered them, so that when the time came for them to go home (voice "the sooner the better"), they would more worthily take their places in the freer and happier England that was to be.

OUR ATLANTIC COUSINS.

LORD READING'S HOPE IN THE FUTURE.

Interviewed at Plymouth on his return from Washington, Lord Reading late Ambassador Extraordinary in U.S., declared that he came back from America more convinced than ever that the future of the world depends in the main on the relations between ourselves and the United States.

"I see no reason" he continued "from the British point of view for apprehension lest American competition should drive us out of trade which we held before the war.

I feel confident that the British Empire will continue to maintain its world position, and that there is room both for increased American and British activities. Irish agitation has been the main cause of anti-British feeling in America."

"America," said the Lord Chief Justice, "is very anxious to get back to pre-war conditions, and is doing its best to speed up the resumption of trade and industrial activities. Once peace terms are signed it will be easier both in America and at home to devote time and energy to getting back to trade; in England, let us hope, to increased productivity.

"We shall have to be prepared for greater effort. We must produce more than we did before the war in order to increase our wealth; and, of course, we must find markets for the products beyond home consumption."

Lord Reading, discussing the peace terms, said the Germans must have known perfectly well when they laid down their arms as vanquished people that they must submit to terms that a just victor would claim. The Germans can hardly expect to be received into the bosoms of our families.

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

THE OLD GANG.

The attitude of the Independent Socialists of Cologne with regard to the power of the new Republic and the danger which might arise from the members of the old Government is very clearly defined in a recent article in their paper, the Republik. The writer impresses upon his readers the fact that the power which came to the workmen and soldiers as a result of the Revolution is nullified by the undisturbed existence of members of the "old gang," such as Tirpitz, Ludendorff, Noske and "all the other forgers of the German White Book." As an example it mentions the incident when Beerfelde (who was the first to reveal the scandal and immense fraud committed against the German people by the Government) was prevented by Noske from lecturing on the subject of the Responsibility for the War. "Let us not deceive ourselves," says the writer. "The old rulers have still a firm hold, and General Sauberzweig, who put to death Miss Cavell, is leading the troops against the workmen on strike. They are the same Generals who, during the past four and a half years, forced us to wade in an ocean of blood. The same Press exists to-day which imposed upon us and deceived us throughout the war."

He oic little Belgium.

Stumpfer, the Editor-in-chief of the Vorwärts, the leading socialist paper of Germany, has returned from Versailles to unfold his tale of woe to the public. He exhorts the people to be brave and has the audacity to hope that the new Germany might show as brave an attitude as did Belgium against the overwhelming odds of 1914.

But Germany will never be able to portray such heroism; Belgium was maintaining her rights, and was able to stand bravely because she had been unjustly provoked by the German hordes which crossed her borders. Germany has not such a plea, and is merely afraid to take the consequences which she herself brought into being.

Unwelcome Guests.

Count Reventlow, writing to the Deutsche Tageszeitung, has given to us a new appellation, a considerably moderate one when compared with some of the epithets hurled at us by the German Press during the war. He says that a people which must endure for long an army of occupation is not altogether defenceless in making trouble for the unwelcome guests. He may speak the truth, but the majority of his compatriots quite rightly realize that such a policy is a foolish one and apt to rebound too swiftly and harshly upon the heads of creators—as surely it would if such an attitude were to be adopted.

"Under the influence of such an occupation," the Count writes, "the national spirit of our tortured people would be aroused and would give vent to new movements." Lack of opportunity is the sorest grievance of all failing aspirants, and in all probability, too, Germany will have every reason to lament on this account.

"I WAS A STRANGER"

THE NEW MASONIC LODGE.

"Yes, verily, I was a stranger in a strange land, and they took me in". These words were spoken seriously by a soldier who had many times "promenaded" Cologne in the hope of finding a "home" and genial companionship, but, as yet, without success. Numerous enquiries and certain signs were given; these efforts, however, were futile. There were others, too, in a similar frame of mind—that is, having pleasant memories of happy evenings in the afore-mentioned genial companionship, there existed a keen desire for the good times of the past in dear old Blighty.

Yes, there were many minds with a single thought—all searching, enquiring, and making mystic signs in the hope of recognition by a kindred spirit.

It seemed as though the fates were against them, until, at length a master-mind rose superior to the need, and the means of gaining the desired information being discovered in the opportune publication of that very useful medium The Cologne Post, one letter to the Editor solved the problem.

There in cold black type, headed by four cryptic letters, a sign known and honoured throughout the world brought hope to the strangers and sojourners. There at last was the desired information, and as a result many pilgrims wended their tortuous ways to that Mecca of hapiness and geniality where brother gripped the hand of brother in a spirit of kinship known in certain noble orders.

For the information of others searchers after a happy evening where conviviality combines with true philanthrophy, "The Captain Spanton" Lodge, R.A.O.B., G.L.C., is held at the Sergts. Mess, 52nd D.L.I., Riehl Barracks, every Thursday evening, at 7 p.m., and here, in almost less time than it takes to relate, many re-unions of brethren from home have taken place, and every brother is welcomed.

Wherever brother meets brother irrespective of military rank there comes the desire for further intercourse, and the writer can vouch for the fact that even in the trenches of France and Flanders a Lodge was formed "The Yellow Plume" (20th Hussars) and held when opportunity offered amidst the intervals of shelling to the enjoyment of its members and the furtherance of the noble objects of the Order—thus maintaining the link of friendship which has existed from time immemorial.

A line to B.Q.M.S. Aitchison, 52nd D.L.I., Riehl Barracks, will supply any necessary information.

FAIR CHANCE FOR ALL.

MR CLYNES SEES NO NEED FOR POVERTY.

"There is no need for poverty in a land so rich in industrial resources," declared Mr J. R. Clynes, M.P., at Nottingham in an address to the National Union of Workers.

"The working classes" he continued "will only obtain a better social order when they have the sense to secure it."

"My desire is to see the removal of degrading and brutalizing poverty, of which so much has been seen in this country for centuries.

"Why is it that as Labour men we take the view enunciated by Mr. Smillie at the Coal Commission? It is because as Britons we desire that the game of life should be played fairly, and that in the struggle for existence a fair chance should be afforded to all.

"The land and mineral rights bestowed in past times by monarchs and others on a favoured few were never legally theirs to give. I want to do the present owners no wrong. Many of them are of the finest type of English gentlemen. Against them personally I have little to urge—it is against the system which keeps others in a state of social servitude that I protest.

"I want to apply political authority and trade union unanimity to bring about these great economic alterations. The change must be acomplished by orderly, constitutional action—none other is necessary."

AUSTRIAN PLENIPOTENTIARIES AT PARIS.

WREATHED IN SMILES.

SERIOUS UNREST IN AFGHANISTAN.

LIGHT SENTENCES ON LIEBKNECHT MURDERERS.

THE BURDEN OF GERMAN MILITARISM.

CLEMENCEAU'S REPLY.

M. Clemenceau's reply to Count Brockdorff-Rantzau's note about International labour legislation was to inform him that the solution of such problems will be easier when industry is discharged from the burden of armaments imposed by German militarism.

AUSTRIAN DELEGATION AT PARIS.

SMILES AND COURTESIES.

The arrival of the Austrian delegates at St. Germain yesterday attracted a large assembly. French, British and Italian officers, and the Prefect of the Department awaited them on the platform.

When the train drew in many ladies were seen at the windows of the carriages.

Chancellor Renner stepped out and saluted, his spectacled face wreathed in smiles.

The prefect advanced to meet him and said:—"As representative of the Government in this Department and in their name I am appointed to receive and to welcome the delegation of Austrian plenipotentiaries. You will be treated here with the courtesy which is our French tradition."

The smiling faces of the Austrians made a more sympathetic impression than did their German colleagues.

LIEBKNECHT MURDER TRIAL.

LIGHT SENTENCES.

The verdict in the trial of the army officers accused of the murder of Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg was delivered yesterday.

Hussar Otto Runge was sentenced to two years imprisonment for an offence white on duty, also to two weeks detention and expulsion from the army for using false papers.

Oberleutnant Vogel receives two years and four months in prison and expulsion from the army for misuse of military authority and abstraction of a corpse.

Lieut. Capt. von Pflug-Hartung and the other officers charged were adjudged not guilty.

THE SCHLESWIG PLEBISCITE.

During the evacuation of German troops from Schleswig and the taking of the plebiscite it has been decided to entrust the task of maintaining order to personnel of the British Navy.

FIRST HIMALAYAN FLIGHT.

Simla. 4th May. Major H. A. Tweedie, R.A.F., has arrived at Simla from Umbalia in a Camel Scout. He circled over the station and successfully landed on the Annandale Gymkhana ground. This is the first aerial flight in the Himalayas.—Reuter.

INDIAN BANK ROBBERS SENTENCED.

Lahore, 7th May. All is quiet at Amritsar. In connection with the looting of the National Bank there thirty-one persons have been sentenced to imprisonment for seven years and two others to five years.—Reuter.

OWING TO AMERICA.

Washington.—Mr. Secretary Baker announces that a complete and comprehensive settlement has been reached respecting all claims between Great Britain and the United States arising out of military operations. Great Britain will pay the United States 35,000,000 dollars as the nett final adjustment. The American claims related largely to aviation expenditure and it is understood that Great Britain's share in the cost of production of Liberty engines amounted to several million dollars.—Reuter.

COLONIAL WAR EXPENDITURE.

Replying to Mr. Morton Griffiths in the House of Commons Mr. Amery stated that the War expenditure of Canada was approximately two hundred and fifty-five millions, Australia two hundred and ninety-one millions, New Zealand seventy-six millions, South Africa twenty-three millions and Newfoundland two millions.

FROM MESOPOTAMIA BY PLANE.

Lt. Col. Wilson, of the British staff in Mesopotamia, flying a D.H.9. biplane, has just reached England from Mosul in one week. He was able to do this by flying from Mosul to Cairo across the desert in one day, making three halts.

PREPARATIONS FOR ASSAULT ON PETROGRAD.

HELSINGFORS BASE.

Christiania.—A message from Helsingfors says that the common opinion is that action against Petrograd is being prepared with Helsingfors as a base. Preparations are being made for the reception of a considerable number of foreign troops. Twenty British warships are at Helsingfors and a French cruiser squadron at Hangoe, in Finland. — Reuter.

WILL BRITISH TROOPS PARTICIPATE?

In the House of Commons yesterday, Col Wedgwood D.S.O., (Co.L., Newcastle-under-Lyme) asked whether the attention of the Government had been drawn to the statement from Stockholm that the Entente were preparing naval and military operations against Petrograd based on Helsingfors; whether there was any basis for this report; and whether a British squadron has been ordered to Helsingfors and whether combined operations with Finland or any other counter-revolutionary authority are under discussion.

Mr. Bonar Law: The first and second parts of the question I believe are accurate but the third part is inaccurate.

Col. Wedgwood: Are we to understand that the British Government is contemplating naval and military operations against Petrograd in the teeth of the statement made by the Premier the other day?

Mr. Bonar Law: The fact is that a squadron of British ships is available, but no such agreement as is suggested has been made, and it must be obvious if any thing of the kind were contemplated it would be impossible to say anything about it. (Cheers.)

Col. Wedgwood: Do I understand Mr. Bonar Law to say there was a basis of truth in the report, that naval and military operations were being prepared?

Mr. Bonar Law: I meant precisely what I said. A British squadron is there and has been there for a long time to consider whatever emergencies arise.

Col. Wedgwood: May I take it that the British Government will not be committed to an attack on Petrograd, in co-operation with Finland and General Mannorheim, without this House being acquainted with such operations?

Mr. Bonar Law: I could not give such an understanding (Cheers), but I can say that no definite proposal of that kind is at present contemplated.

Reuter learns that the presence of the Allied warships at Helsingfors is due to an appeal from Finland for protection. Bolshevist vessels have been seen in the Baltic and it is feared they might attack the unprotected parts of the Finnish coast.

MARSHAL FOCH IN COLOGNE.

Marshal Foch, in the course of his tour of Germany, will arrive at Cologne today. It is expected that he will land between the Hohenzollern and Neue Bridges about 11 a.m. where he will be received by the Commander-in-Chief, whose guest he is to be.

The staff accompanying the famous French soldier will be entertained by the British General Headquarters, while the Naval officers will be the guests of H.M.M.L. Rhine Flotilla.

Adequate arrangements for the entertainment of our French visitors have been made and the theatres, cinemas and concerts will be visited.

On Saturday Marshal Foch will proceed to Düren where he will be welcomed by a Guard of Honour formed by the IV Corps.

AFGHANISTAN UNREST.

Peshawar, 8th May. According to numerous reports from Afghanistan matters are not going smoothly at Cabul. The recent inquiry into the murder of Habibullah Khan was unsatisfactory, because the real culprits are said to have escaped punishment.

There are distinct signs of reaction against the Amir. It is openly stated that in order to consolidate his position the Amir may not hesitate to cause trouble on the frontier with the purpose of distracting attention from his own domestic worries.—Reuter.

GOVERNMENT INSPECTOR FOUND SHOT.

The body of Lieut.-Colonel W.H. Webley Hope, Chief Inspector of firearms at Enfield Small Arms Factory, was discovered in his office yesterday. There was a gunshot wound in the breast and a portion of a gun was found in the office. It is presumed that it became accidentally discharged while he was examining it.

The Registrar General's returns for the March quarter show a decrease of 97,002 in the population compared with an increase of 24,303 for the March quarter of 1918.

SCANDALOUS WASTE OF MUNITION MONEY.

AUDITOR'S EXPOSURES.

The Auditor General's report on the expenditure of the Ministry of Munitions during the year ended 31st March 1918 is one long record of scandalous waste and profligate extravagance.

The astonishing expansion of the Ministry is shown by the following figures of expenditure:—

These are gross totals, and after deducting appropriations in aid the net expenditure in 1917-18 was £639,206,316.

Some of the principal items of expenditure in as follows.—

Aeronautical supplies	£71,816,689
Guns and small arms	37,779,483
Ammunition:—
Direct contract work	198,305,100
Shell and filling factories ..	59,500,834
Machinery and material ..	89,093,598
Transport Supplies:
Transport vehicles	36,812,096
Railway materials	13,741,155
Tanks	9,587,960
Explosives and propellants ..	72,059,410
Trench warfare supplies ..	22,870,473
Advances to contractors, &c. ..	13,396,623
Services for other Government Departments	19,772,572

COMPENSATIONS TO CONTRACTORS.

There is a long list of "compensations of contractors" in respect of contracts made in a hurry and cancelled on reflection. Here are a few examples:

Twenty twin Caudron aeroplane engines were ordered in December 1915. In the following November the work was stopped, "the machine being obsolete." The firm got £8,200 compensation.

Though no agreement was signed, a firm began to build a factory in which to make the Madsen machine gun. Then the Ministry changed its mind, and the firm got £5,000 "on account of erection and dismantling charges," though the building was begun by the company out of £40,000 advanced by the Ministry. They also got £1,069, representing "a profit of 10 per cent. on the expenditure of £5,589 on labour at the works and 2½ per cent. as purchasers' commission, and profit on cost of materials and plant taken back by the Ministry." In sanctioning this "compensation" the Treasury state that "having regard to the great appreciation of building costs my lords would have thought that the factory could have been disposed of without loss."

In November 1916 two contracts were given to one firm for cast-iron double shells. Three months later, "owing to change of requirements, the contracts were cancelled. The firm claimed £2,369 0s. 8d.; reduced officially to £1,555 14s. 4d.

A cancelled contract for 8,000 6in. shrapnel shells cost £6,000; another shrapnel shell contract cost £7,583, cancellations being necessary owing to the issue of a faulty specification, the company being in no way responsible for the failure; a third shell compensation, £4,864 this time, was for stopping a company working on 5in. howitzer shrapnel and turning them on to 4.7in. shrapnel, "which was urgently required."

A brass rod contract led to a claim for £15,000 compensation. This the Ministry reduced by £2,000 when they discovered that the firm had bought the rod at 1s. 2d. a lb. against the 1s. 4d. in the contract to the Ministry.

FREE METAL ISSUES.

"A contractor received during 1916 and 1917 4,089 tons of metal on free issue for orders on which only 2,590 tons were used: the balance of the material was retained by the firm, and recovery of the value (£150,000) has only recently been effected. A further sum of £75,000 has been charged to the firm for scrap material, while an outstanding debit of £100,000 for material issued on repayment has now been reduced to about £30,000. The records of the free issues section for this contractor were both incomplete and unsatisfactory."

CANTEEN LOSSES.

On sales at the canteens at national factories totalling £1,124,403 there was a net loss of £155,000. At the canteens at two factories at Leeds the total loss was £50,000 on sales totalling £92,000.

MANAGEMENT OF A FACTORY.

After mentioning other instances of a similar kind, the Auditor-General goes on to give particulars of an unsatisfactory arrangement for the management of a factory. It appears that the Ministry entered into an agreement for the erection and equipment of a factory for the manufacture of picric acid. The manager of this factory was to receive the sum of £2,000 as remuneration for his services in the construction of the works, and one tenth of a penny for each pound of picric acid produced, with a minimum of £2,000 for his services in managing and maintaining the plant. Production by the factory began in August, 1917, and two months later it appeared that the management was not good. Waste was going on, discipline was slack, and supervision inefficient.

It was considered that the defects complained of were due to the manager attending in the factory for two days a week only. There was no provision in the agreement, requiring full attendance, which he stated he was unable to give. In these circumstances it was held that the minimum remuneration of £2,000 for management was payable under the agreement, but the matter was compromised by the payment of £1,600. It thus appears that this sum was paid in respect of services rendered for four months for part time only. It is observed that the factory in question, the capital expenditure on which amounted to £167,000, was closed in March, 1918 after having been in operation for about eight months, and has since been used as a store only.

ARMY OF OFFICIALS.

To wind up his record of financial waste, the Auditor-General points out that the Ministry's accounting staff has increased from 4,700, costing £800,000 a year, in October 1918, to 5,000, at a cost of £926,000 a year, on April 1 last.

BRITISH TRADE IN GERMANY.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE IN COLOGNE.

It is five months since the parts of Germany in Allied occupation were thrown open to trade. The French and Belgians took immediate advantage of the opportunity, with the result that an immense volume of business has been transacted and very big orders have passed, cash in advance, between Germany and our gallant Allies.

Even the British occupied territory was well worked by French and Belgian travellers and it is estimated that they have supplied goods roughly to the value of eight hundred millions of francs up to the present.

About a month ago the first British traveller arrived in this territory from Manchester. The Economic Section of the British Military Government quickly acquainted him with the position and its possibilities and he returned to England to get a few friends together and get to business.

Meanwhile others arrived on the scene. At present we have the representatives of some seventy leading British houses in Cologne.

It was felt that some sort of official co-operation between the Military Government and the traders was necessary.

Mr. F. Bates, representing Messrs. Bates and Chappell, Ltd., of West Smithfield, London, suggested the formation of a Chamber of Commerce in Cologne as a way out of the difficulty.

The idea was taken up enthusiastically by Mr. Charles Knott, of Knott and Douglas, Importers and by Mr. Hastings Pembury, official delegate of the committee for the Relief of Belgium, and Mr. Knott called a meeting at the Dasch Hotel for the matter to be informally discussed.

The Chair was taken by Mr. Hastings Pembury, who in the course of a telling speech, drew attention to the position of affairs, reminding the meeting that he was the first Englishman to pay a business visit to the occupied territory. He gave a brief outline of the trouble he had had to find out, piece meal, the different formalities that business men had to comply with under present conditions. "Britons," said Mr. Hastings Pembury, "must stick together and make a co-operative effort." It was essential that some group of traders be immediately formed to represent adequately British commercial interests here, and to lend a helping hand to new-comers, and, although the meeting was quite informal, they could contemplate applying to the Military Governor for power to form a British Chamber of Commerce in Cologne at the earliest opportunity.

The meeting unanimously approved. It was proposed by the Chairman and seconded by Mr. S. Bracher, late British Vice-Consul in Marseilles, that Mr. A.J. Stockdale, Manager of Cox & Co. (France) Ltd. and Mr. Knott wait upon the Military Governor on Tuesday to apply for permission and assistance.

The delegation met with every encouragement from the Military Authorities and, on Tuesday evening, a fully representative meeting of British traders decided to form an Association to be duly incorporated in London under the name of "The British Chamber of Commerce, Cologne". A considerable sum was immediately subscribed to cover preliminary expenses and Messrs. Cox & Co. (France) Ltd. offered to guarantee any deficit on the first year's expenses.

An Executive Council was formed and the following officers were elected:

President: Mr A. J. Stockdale
Vice-Presidents: Mr Hastings Pembury, Mr Knott Honorary Treasurer: Mr Davis

Mr Knott consented to act as Honorary Secretary of the Chamber.

Amongst the houses represented at the meeting were:

Robert Outram, London; Fleming & Co., London; Edwin Woodhouse & Co., Bradford; S.D. Bates & Co., Manchester; The Greengate Worsted Co., Bradford, Messrs Cox & Co., (France) Ltd., Knott & Leckie, London; S.D. Bles & Co., Manchester; John Fulton & Co., Belfast; R.W. Taylor & Co., Milk Street, London; Lloyd Attree, Wood Street, London; The National Horseflesh Export Association Ltd., Lime St., London; Clifford Stead, Bradford; Frost & Son, London; Bates & Chappell, Ltd.; 4—5 West Smithfield London; Peek Bros & Winch Ltd., London; H. Berry Steege, Esq; C. E. Davidson Esq.; The Bengal Co., Bradford; John Stait Ltd., London; The Knott van Roosbroek Co. Ltd., London; H.J. Hay Esq., Owen Bates, Esq.; Nestles Milk, Ltd.; Anglo-Swiss Milk Co.; Falcon Aircraft Co.; Devine & Co., Regent Street; Wills & Co., Tobacco Manufacturers; W.C. Mallison of Manchester, and many others.

An information bureau will be opened in about a week in Cologne and a secretary will be in attendance every week-day from 10 to 1 and 3 to 5 to give assistance and advice to British traders.

An official from the Military Government (Economic Section) has kindly consented to be every day during the same hours at the offices of the Chamber and to place a quantity of specialised and valuable information at the disposal of the public.

Special thanks were voted to Mr. Stockdale and to Mr. Knott for the prompt and able manner in which the organisation of the preliminaries had been carried out.

A vote of thanks was also passed to Messrs Cox & Co. (France) Ltd. for generously guaranteeing any possible financial deficit at the end of the first year.

One toast, "The King," enthusiastically closed the first meeting of this officially recognised organisation which will certainly be a great boon to British firms doing business here.

DESPERATE SINN FEIN OUTRAGE.

CONSTABLE MURDERED.

Another atrocious murder has been committed by Sinn Feiners in Ireland. An escort consisting of four Royal Irish Constabulary were conducting a Sinn Fein prisoner to Cork gaol by the night train from Thurles. On arrival at Knocklong station, County Limerick, the compartment was entered by armed men, who shot one constable dead and seriously wounded another. Several shots were exchanged. It is stated that a third constable is missing. Prisoner and his rescuers got clear away, taking two rifles and revolvers.

ANTICIPATING THE NEXT WAR.

FIELD MARSHAL'S OPINION.

Among the distinctions being conferred on Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig is the Rectorship of St. Andrews University, to which he was installed yesterday afternoon.

In the course of his address Sir Douglas said that most people have an idea of the magnitude of the world war now drawing to a close. If, however, we wish to avoid a repitition of such catastrophes we must be prepared actively to prevent them and must know what course to pursue in order to attain our object. Although for a while they may lie dormant, the passions from which war springs are not yet caged in the heart of man.

Seeds of future conflict are to be found in every quarter of the globe and are only awaiting the right conditions, moral, political and economic, to leap once more into activity and cover the field, with harvests of armed men.

Among the more obvious of existing possibilities of strife Field Marshal Haig put in the first place the problem which newspapers and novelists called the "Yellow peril". The Chinese must eventually demand a place in European labour markets and India was beginning to turn toward social, industrial and political development. The solution Sir Douglas Haig would suggest was the giving to all races, however insignificant, British freedom and Justice, thereby in the course of years levelling them up to our own standards of life. The League of Nations could never absolve us from the Mission which is laid upon us as an Empire.

DOUBLE TRAGEDY IN SOUTH LONDON.

CHAMPION WRESTLER'S SUICIDE.

Yesterday morning a professional wrestler named Harold Channels jumped from an upper window of his house at Lambeth with his throat cut. His wife was afterwards found in the bedroom with a terrible wound in her throat. Both are dead. Channels it is stated, won the world's light-weight wrestling Championship in 1903 under his professional name of Retwyskow.

FRENCH AND THE SHELL SHORTAGE.

Lord French, continuing yesterday his narrative in the Daily Telegraph, says:

"On September 26 Sir Charles Haddon, Master-General of the Ordnance, arrived at my Headquarters to discuss the question of armament and ammunition. I took this opportunity to impress upon him how terribly deficient we were in heavy artillery as compared with the Germans, and urged as strongly as I possibly could that the manufacture of this class of ordnance, as well as an abundance of ammunition, should be put in hand at once.

"My official correspondence with the War Office on this vital subject dates back to this time, and continued right up to June 1915."

Lord French adds: "Mr. Lloyd George's work was done in face of a dead weight of senseless but powerful opposition, all of which he had to undermine and overcome. In later pages of this volume I shall refer again to the subject of deficiencies in armament and ammunition. I have mentioned it here because I am firmly convinced that, had my advice with regard to it been listened to and acted upon at the time, the war would have finished long before it did, and untold suffering would have been saved to the civilised world."

French describes the movements of the various Corps following the fall of Antwerp and the progress of the combined Franco-British advance into Belgium between the 11th and 15th October, referring particularly to the fine work of Allenby's Cavalry in the Hazebrouck-Merville region despite strong opposition.

Referring to a visit to Smith-Dorrien at Bethune on the 13th October French says he found him in one of those deep fits of depression which unfortunately visited him frequently. Smith-Dorrien complained that the second Corps had never got over the shock of Le Cateau and he was convinced that there was no great fighting spirit throughout the troops he commanded. French told him he greatly exaggerated the disabilities but acknowledges that Smith-Dorrien was confronted with a difficult task, as he was on a very extended front and the situation undoubtledy demanded skilful handling and great determination.

LONDON STOCK EXCHANGE.

Dealings on the London Stock Exchange yesterday were active and the general tone good. The increase of £845,000 sterling in sales of National War Bonds last week, together with large applications for industrial capital, is regarded as being very encouraging. Home Funds were firm. Indians also were firmer, following the action of the India Council in raising the exchange value of the rupee to eighteen pence owing to the rise in the price of silver. French Funds weakened on further depreciation of the franc and Chinese and Japanese dropped slightly owing to the political situation. Russias were dull. Oils were buoyant though profit taking caused a slight set-back in those descriptions which recently advanced rapidly. Land and Trading Companies shares were active and hardening, especially of the Myer Company. The buying of this security was said to be on behalf of American interests. Marconis advanced sharply on influential support. Industrials and Shippings were strong. Gold mining shares were in renewed demand, mostly at higher prices.

British Oil Companies in combination have subscribed two hundred thousand guineas for the purpose of endowing a chemical school at Cambridge.

Mr. J.H. Thomas, the elder and only surviving brother of the late Viscount Rhondda, died on Sunday. He and Viscount Rhondda were married to two sisters who were cousins of Sir Douglas Haig.

SCHLESWIG-HOLSTEIN.

There are about twenty years in the middle of the nineteenth century which have an extraordinary interest for the student of history. From 1848 till 1871 the face of Europe was continually changing, and with hardly an exception every nation had to pass through the throes of revolution. These were days when the mettle of princes and politicians was tried in the furnace of politics, and Louis Philippe, Mazzini, Metternich, Palmerston, and Bismarck flitted to and fro across a troubled stage. It is not an easy task even now to pass impartial judgment on the events of those intriguing times, and one is tempted to sum up the period in Disraeli's classic words of "meddle and muddle." But some attempt must be made to disentangle the perplexing story, and to-day we aim at reconstructing the tale of two duchies which though small in extent of territory brought upon themselves the armed forces of world powers—the duchies of Schleswig and Holstein.

These duchies form a somewhat narrow territory which separates Denmark from Germany. In the middle of the last century they had a considerable German population, though they were under Danish rule despite the fact that Holstein was a member of the Bund or confederation of German peoples. Both Holstein and Schleswig were hostile to the Danish Government for the reason that they were desirous of independence. When Frederick VII came to the throne of Denmark in 1848 he made an attempt to win over the duchies by a liberal policy, but they were encouraged by the revolutionary movement in Germany and demanded inclusion within the Bund and a joint constitution on the German model. Frederick treated these demands as rebellion and sent an army into Schleswig-Holstein. The Prussian king sent help to the Duke of Augustenburg who led the people against Frederick. At Malmö a truce was arranged by which Schleswig and Holstein were made subject to a common government of which half the members were to be nominated by Denmark and half by Prussia. In 1850 it was agreed by treaty that Schleswig was to submit to Danish rule and that Holstein, as a member of the German confederation, should retain a semi-independence. The integrity of Denmark was guaranteed by the Treaty of London, 1852, signed by England, Austria, France, Prussia, Russia, and Sweden; and succession to the monarchy was promised to Christian of Glücksburg whose daughter, Princess Alexandra, was in 1863 married to the Prince of Wales. In that year Denmark, believing that she had now the support of England, resisted the attempt of the German confederation to free Schleswig and Holstein from her rule. The latter duchy was speedily overrun, and the duke of Augustenburg was proclaimed king as Frederick VIII.

It was at this point that Prussia and Austria intervened as they felt that the settlement of Schleswig-Holstein concerned them vitally. Bismarck was Prussia's leading statesman, and the "Cartridge Prince," William I since 1861, was as wax in his hands. With only English protests to face, re-combined armies of Prussia and Austria invaded the duchies. Denmark did not defend Holstein, but made a vainly gallant defence of Schleswig. All was lost in a short time, and only the heroism of Düppel's fortress brought consolation to the Danes. Schleswig and Holstein were thus in 1864 ceded to Prussia and Austria; in 1866 they were in the sole possession of Prussia, for Bismarck soon turned on his ally military organization, a new needle-gun and insatiable ambition brought about Sadowa and the end of the "Three Week's War." The Peace of Prague laid it down that Austria should withdraw from the Bund and should renounce all claims on Schleswig-Holstein. In it there was a provision that northern Schleswig should be restored to Denmark if a plebiscite of its inhabitants wished the transference. Bismarck permitted no opportunity for such a plebiscite since he preferred "strategic security" before any honourable regard for the promises of diplomacy.

The draft Treaty of Peace has brought upon Bismarck's race the punishment of blood and iron statecraft.

PHOTOGRAPHY.

(IV.)

BY WILLIAM ROBERT PATTERSON F.R.G.S. ETC.

One of the most fascinating branches of photography is that which deals with stereo-work. There is a double advantage, for one has two cameras together.

You may take double pictures to be viewed through a stereoscope or you may, by placing the cap over either lens, produce a single photograph. If your lens is an anastigmat you may obtain negatives capable of enlargement up to almost any size. I have seen a good positive of under two inches square projected as a lantern slide upon a screen of over six feet square which produced full detail in every particular. I have also taken enlargements from my own plates of similar dimensions which have been almost equal in sharpness to large-size original pictures. I do not say that every photograph will prove so successful but if the plate or film is a good one and the exposure correct you may produce delightful enlargements from quite small negatives. Note, for instance, how clear the scenes appear in a cinematograph display; their positive size is roughly one inch by three quarters of a inch, yet they may be enlarged to such a degree as to be perfectly distinct to a large number of spectators.

The charm of stereoscopy lies in the effect of solidity which is produced; all objects stand out and are contrasted with each other. Two pictures are taken simultaneously as one views them with the right and left eyes. If you compare them you will find that, although the centres of both pictures give similar objects, the right hand one will present a larger scope on its right edge than the left picture; in the same way the left hand picture will give more on its left.

Now, in viewing any object, your eyes converge upon a point. If you are looking at a book only a foot from your face your eyes will turn inwards. Let any person take the book further away and your eyes focus themselves to suit the distance; the angle of vision made by both eyes, meeting at the object, becomes narrower. In looking at a star, the rays of light to each eye are almost parallel because the star is so far away. In any case, however far the object may be the eyes must converge upon a point, we have not the visionary power of inspecting two things at once. This is the secret of stereoscopy. Two lenses are cut and placed in such a manner that, in viewing two pictures, we see them as one, just as our eyes would view them; the lenses cause a convergence and each object takes a solid form.

I strongly advise you to purchase a "Stereo-apparat" if you can secure one; the advantages of such an apparatus are manifold.

There will be an art Exhibition at Bonn at the beginning of next month. The proceeds are to be presented to the Red Cross. I trust we British in Cologne will pay a visit to Bonn on the 6th, 7th, or 8th of June and lend what assistance we can to so worthy a cause. And can someone organize such a one here? I am willing to assist.

WHAT ALL THE WORLD KNOWS.

We reproduce a straightforward and illuminating article which appeared in Die Welt am Montag, reproduced in the Bergische Arbeiterstimme of 13th May. It is of especial interest to us because it appears that there are some sections of public opinion in Germany which realize the truth as to Germany's culpability and are not afraid of speaking out. We reprint the article entitled "Unending Hate" as follows:

HATRED WITHOUT END.

I was travelling to Thuringia a few days ago in a third-class compartment with soldiers. I was silent while they spoke. The drift of their conversation was as follows:

We have not gained anything by the revolution. Militarism is still alive. Noske is a prisoner in the hands of officers, just as the Government is in the toils of capitalism. We poor devils will continue to remain as we were. Unless things are altered we ought at least all to become poor devils together. Doubtless this will cause much bloodshed.

On my return, I got into a second-class carriage in which were wealthy middle-class manufacturers. They said "The Government is weak. They give orders to fire too late, and not often enough. Every Russian who gives himself airs ought to be proscribed. All Communists ought to be put against the wall, but Scheidemann does not venture to do this. Noske, who perhaps would like to do so, is not granted permission. Yes, things were better under Wilhelm II."

Disraeli, in his novel "Sybil" once described the two nations which are to be found within every people. The two nations within our people bear a mortal hatred to one another. They kill each other with pleasure. The fearful crimes committed at Halle against Colonel von Klüber, at Dresden against Neuring, the Minister of War on the one hand, the murder of Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg, of Joliches and Lojeviski, of the 32 sailors and many other defenceless people on the other hand, afford sufficiently sanguinary proofs of the mentality of the German people. The wholesale slaughter of the war has not had an instructive and deterrent effect, but has rather proved an incentive to sadism.

Our Peace negotiators have journeyed to France. The train proceeded slowly through the desert into which the most productive portion of France has been transformed by the war which was declared by us and conducted on our methods. Hate accompanied them, and Hate received them; by Hate the conditions of peace have been dictated. The German people is revolted against the demands which have been formulated. It does not understand the hate that the world feels for us. Have we not rather had more reason to hate our foes? That is the greatest crime with which I would reproach the Government, i.e. that they failed to enlighten our own people and to disperse the poisonous cloud gases with which the official lie apparatus has enveloped them during these last four years.

Everybody knows that Germany is alone guilty for the outbreak of the war; that we are responsible for the militarization of Europe, as we contributed to the breakdown of the attempt to establish disarmament and arbitration at the Hague Conference; that during the month of July, 1914, we rejected every international attempt at agreement; that by our approval of the Austrian ultimatum to Serbia we set the match to the powder; that we supported the declaration of war against France by means of fraudulent assertions, and that through the breach of neutrality towards Luxembourg and Belgium, we are branded as a people of unscrupulous morals.

Only the great majority of the German people are entirely ignorant of all this. They still believe in the fairy tale of the policy of encirclement, of the war imposed upon us, and of a Belgium which did not maintain its neutrality.

Everybody knows that Germany is guilty of the endless prolongation of the war; when in the Spring of 1915 an opportunity occurred of opening up negotiations via the Hague, our Foreign Office (naturally at the instigation of the Military party) brusquely rejected the attempt at mediation set on foot by the Dutchman, Dresselhuys; that by the mediation of President Wilson in 1916, Germany might have obtained a peace upon reasonable terms, but we preferred to promise Mexico a couple of American provinces and to initiate the unrestricted "U" boat warfare. During the winter of 1917, a serious attempt to bring about peace would have been possible (President Wilson's friends in Switzerland clearly indicated the way). The Supreme German Command, however, promised them ultimate victory by means of their Spring offensive. The peace of Brest Litowsk afforded a convincing proof to everybody what Germany's views were about peace; the unanimous conclusion which was drawn was that Germany only desired a dictated peace. Germany never had any honourable intention of keeping her promise made on the 4th August, 1914, to right the wrong committed against Belgium, but continued to make play with the red herring of "pledges in hand" and "real guarantees." It is however, a great majority of the German people alone who to-day are still of the belief that we were always ready for peace, whilst our opponents were filled with unbridled war lust.

Everybody knows that the manner in which the war was conducted by Germany was characterized by a peculiar ruthlessness, not to say barbarity. The reason for this is to be found in the fact, not only that the war was almost exclusively conducted on foreign soil, but also because we were superior to other nations in the technique of murderous instruments of warfare. The fact remains that owing to the sinking at sight of merchant ships and passenger vessels by our "U" boats, we systematized an especially exasperating form of warfare in contradiction with International law, and by the employment of poisonous gas and liquid fire, we also set an especially bad example. By our senseless aerial attacks upon undefended open towns in England, which were useless from the military point of view, we evoked a feeling of hatred far and wide amongst the masses of the English people. By the systematic transformation of the Somme area into a desert, we evoked one single cry of vengeance throughout the whole French people. By the systematic exploitation of the territory which we occupied and by the deportation of the population, with the flimsiest shadow of right, we brought down upon ourselves the name of robbers and slave dealers.

The greater majority of the German people still believe that we confined ourselves to indispensable military measures and faithfully observed international law, whilst the others were "Baralong murderers" and beasts in human guise.

Everybody knows that the German Propaganda carried on abroad exceeded in shamelessness everything hitherto conceived. Everybody knows that in America, whilst it was still neutral, a mis-use was made of our official representatives

OUR CANTEEN.

Life at Lechenich does not advance it appears. It is no longer a matter of going on and on; it is a succession of Wednesdays, for on these blessed Mercredis (or Mittwochs) comes the stuff to the Canteen. No schoolboy's birthday, no youth's allowance, was ever anticipated with such lively eagerness as attend's the approach of these recurring periods, awaited as they are through tobacco-less days and cigarette-less nights.

See, then, what a concourse of pilgrims appears, as the hand of the clock approaches the appointed hour of 10 a.m., each one with his face resolutely set towards his Mecca. As we were perfecting our mental list of necessities, cigarettes, chocolate, soap — yes — and we must remember the health salt which we forgot last week — and some brown polish and some black and a bit of "Soldier's Friend," etc. So musing, we came up to the Canteen.

I confess it always amuses me to see a grown man lining up for four bars of milk chocolate, and exciting themselves over the possibility of getting it. Not so long ago he classed it with Mellin's Food and Patent Barley, i.e., for infants. To such conditions have we come, the Canteen could lay in a stock of sugar candy and kali powders and be moderately sure of a sale. No one ever sees our Canteen without a queue in front of it, and on Wednesdays it grows to most immoderate proportions. Some fellows take their blankets there on Tuesday night or sleep on the steps. Our queue is so long on these days that those in rear are obliged to take occasional walks to the front to satisfy themselves they really are lined up in front of the Canteen and not the Cinema! Slowly we move forward nearer and nearer. Now we make our purchases — receive our change, and fight our way out. We sequestrate our goods about our person. Cigarettes, soap, chocolate, the queue close up. Donnerwetter! we have forgotten the health salts.

The other day coming across our Battalion Canteen in its new quarters, we fell to meditating upon the history of this old campaigning friend of ours. Like us, it has suffered and enjoyed the varying fortunes of war, it has known poor quarters and good. Now an ancient tent, now a barn, a limber, a cubby hole or a Nissen Hut. Following us in our weary Crusades, satisfying our palate with some slight delectables, supplying the fragrant weed, and even on a few scattered but momentous occasions contriving to provide the vintage, the pure, the old nut-brown.

But these are its prosperous days. No ancient tent could essay to contain it. It has spread itself as a green bay tree and blossomed into a magnificence of a two room concern. The very sign outside the door — a pelican rampant, on one leg, in which precarious position it has persevered for two years to our knowledge — revels in the new-found glory of blue and red. It has lost its old hang-dog rakish expression, and peers at you with a lively waggishness. Its halcyon days are here and it is profoundly conscious of the fact.

I remember the first time I made the acquaintance of the Battalion Canteen some two years ago. Being a "Rookey," and (of course) very ignorant, and wanting to test the buying power of every Cinque Franc I strolled in search of the Canteen. Having in the blindness of ignorance circumvented it some few times without recognition, I found it guarded by this same pelican, which blinked dully at me through an atmosphere of fog and murk. An old battered and leaky tent suffering at the same time from an excess of camouflage and ventilation and tenanted by a languid lance-corporal with no stock, and who seemed surprised to have been suspected of having any. How different now when we often have as many as two kinds of cigarettes alone, and sardines both in oil and tomatoes.

It used to surprise us in the days of in the great war, how many Canteens continued to have an existence in fable long after they ceased to have any existence in fact. Following minute instructions from traffic men and lorry drivers as to the position of the "Y.M.," you would arrive on the indicated site to find it had moved some seven or eight months ago. But the fable of its existence would still persist, and a mythical "Y.M." would continue to be cursed in trenchant language by disappointed wanderers until its ghost was finally laid. Or you would arrive, hot and dusty, say, at the R.E.'s Canteen, anticipated through four weary kilos, and be faced with the familiar notice: "No cigarrettes, no chocolate, no matches, no nothing."

Those days are now happily over and we can take our ease in the sweet serenity of meditation sustained by the influence of a well-filled briar or mellowed by the incluse of unlimited cigarettes.

for every form of corruption, together with the adoption of forcible measures. The inviolability of diplomatic intercourse was used by us in order to smuggle explosives and bacteria to neutral countries (e.g. Norway, Sweden and Switzerland) which were to be employed against our foes abroad. Also, that we attempted to incite Irish and other prisoners to high treason by means of the most infamous measures.

The greater part of the German people still speak in good faith about the propaganda of lies carried on by their enemies, of a campaign of bribery on the part of the British and American agents, of the murder of Casement, etc.

Only those who have any conception of the measure of the sins committed by our former rulers can understand the world-wide atmosphere of hatred by which we are surrounded. The greater part of the German people are as yet unaware of these things, and yet it must learn to know of them if it does not wish to accumulate hate upon hate. Thus, the world will remain what it was during the war—one single theatre of war. We need pacification at home as well as abroad. An indispensable preliminary for this, however, is that we Germans should understand each other at home and then other nations. Hatred is a bad counsellor. Force will always evoke fresh force. The world will be as far as ever from being delivered from its wounds by a Noske system as by a Tirpitz-Ludendorff system. First let us learn to understand other people, and then endeavour to come to an agreement with them. If we do not succeed in doing this, then we must needs despair of the future of humanity.

"YE MERRY MUFFINS"

HIGHLAND DIVISIONAL CONCERT PARTY'S EXCELLENT BILL-OF-FARE.

"Ye Merry Muffins", the Highland Divisional Concert Party, which has been entertaining large audiences at Duren during the past week take farewell of the place to-morrow and proceed to Cologne in pursuance ot their tour of the Rhine front. A treat is in store for future audiences at the "Muffins" concerts, and the troops in and around Duren would welcome a return visit. During this, their third week in Duren, they have appeared in "As you were" preceded by the usual programme of variety turns, musical and humorous.

The opening chorus from "The Gondoliers" is rendered in a way that would do credit to Savoy performers. Then Muffin Alex Factor a light comedian hailing from Edinburgh, leads the troupe in the chorus song, "All Aboard", an effort which evokes the enthusiastic applause of the audience.

A "DEMOB'D SKETCH".

"Day after day", a concerted piece, is a delightfully smart and amusing commentary on "demob", and equally well received is another military topical sketch "How he thought it would be, and how he found it", depicting the hopes and the disillusionment of an officer patient in a C.C.S. Muffin Coates shows the full range of his fine bass voice in "Round the Needles", and Muffin Rae the beautiful tone of the tenor in "Santa Fe", while Muffin Willson gives a rendering of "Tommy Lad" in the manner of an accomplished baritone singer.

Muffin Lonsdale was again prominent in several of the concerted numbers, singing and acting brilliantly. "Teddie" and "Davy" are exceedingly clever, and in their appearances this week they enhanced their reputations as female impersonators. Lieut Reg. C. Matthew, the leading Muffin, revels in his work. Either alone or accompanied on the stage he draws from the audience a continuous roll of laughter.

Perhaps the outstanding, and certainly the most amusing item was the concluding sketch in which the combined efforts of Muffins Matthews and Edgar Max sent the audience into fits. Muffin Max, whose make up and handling of the big drum and cymbals with comical effect was extremely funny is the well-known comedy artiste of the British Music Halls. The party concludes the first part of the programme with "Nuts in May" "Carry on the good work" and "Simple melody" three sparkling numbers which had been given and immensely enjoyed by the audiences at the earlier concerts.

MAGIC PILLS.

"As you were," unless in the final scene, is not a military sketch as the title implies. It is a wonderfully conceived comedy, brimful of fun, and the play withal contains a moral. From a present day scene the audience is transported by stages to the days of primitive man, the extraordinary feat of rolling back the time to the distant ages being effected by the taking of certain pills prescribed by "Dr. Quack." Muffin Matthews first as Lord Adolphus Snoogle, then Louis XIV, then Paris of Troy, is the chief performer in the sketch. His style is inimitable and his humour irrepressible. He is certainly a star artiste in the best sense of the term. Muffin Lonsdale has much to do as Sir Billiam Boost and he does his bit admirably. "Davy" as Lady Loost and "Teddy" as Ninon the maid, act in their best style, the latter scoring a great hit as the nurse in the convalescent ward scene. Muffin Factor, who efficiently carries out the work of stage manager, also appears in the caste in the role of "Dr. Quack" with much success. Among the other performers are Muffin Willson, Rae and Mathieson all of whom deserve credit for their work.

Muffin Runacre again leads the orchestra whose selections form a feature of the entertainment.

"A FINE LOT OF MEN."

2nd. BRIGADE INSPECTED BY DUKE OF CONNAUGHT AT HENNEF.

On Friday last the 2nd. Brigade of the Eastern Division was honoured by a visit from H.R.H., The Duke of Connaught, and it was the privilege of the 51st. Bedfords to find the Guard of Honour.

At about 4.15 p.m. the Duke arrived at Hennef, accompanied by the Corps Commander and staff, and after inspecting the billets and cookhouses of the battalion, proceeded to Brigade Headquarters at Allner.

The Guard of Honour, commanded by Major G. White, M.C., consisted of two Officers and one hundred other ranks, and was drawn up outside the Schloss.

The Duke was greeted with the Royal Salute, and then proceeded to inspect the Guard. He chatted genially with the Commander, and took a keen interest in the military service of Regtl. Sergt. Major Lawrence, and other Warrant Officers present. It transpired that the major portion of the R.S.M's. service had been with the Essex Regiment. The Duke instantly asked whether with the 44th. or the 56th. (Pompadours), and was told the 56th., showing how intimately acquainted he is with the history of our old Regiments.

Throughout the inspection, H.R.H. passed several complimentary remarks such as "A fine lot of men," and "They call them the Young Guards; they should be renamed the 'Young Grenadiers.'"

The inspection finished, the Guard marched away with swinging step to the exhilarating strains of the Regimental March Past — "The May Moon." The Duke then had tea with the Brigade Staff, and left Hennef shortly afterwards.

MOTOR-CYCLING SPEED CONTEST.

The Motor-Cycling Club opened its competitive programme with a speed-judging contest held over a course of 5½ miles, which had to be covered three times, the first circuit at 16½ miles per hour, the second at 18½ miles per hour, and the third at an optional speed, which had to be declared at the finish. The winner was M. L. Luiggi (4 h.p. B.S.A.), an Italian student, resident in England.

70 SIEGE BATTERY BOWLER IN TIP-TOP FORM.

The return match between 70 Siege and the 8th Field Ambulance (R.A.M.C.) at Effern on Wednesday resulted in an easy win for the first named who scored 88 for the loss of 6 wkts., against their opponents' full total of 29. Batting first the visitors could do little with the deliveries of Renyard and Sergt. Crook the first named capturing 7 wkts. for 14 runs and Sergt. Crook 3 for 12. The fielding of the battery was brilliant. Four of 70's wkts. were down for a paltry 19 but with Frost and Crook together runs came at a good pace, the first named's cutting being splendidly crisp and well timed. The pair added 35 before being separated and with 86 on the board stumps were drawn. Details: —

ARMY TROOPS SPORTS.

The Army Troops Athletic Sports to be held at the Pola Wiesen Sports Ground on the 23rd and 24th inst. are attracting a huge number of entries. The value of the prizes to be awarded is in the neighbourhood of 5,000 marks, so there should be some really good sport witnessed. The programme is excellently arranged. The first day's events include 100 yards, 440 yards, and one mile flat races, pillow fight, tug of war, putting the shot etc. During the second day's proceedings there will be 220 yards, 880 yards (officers) flat race, 120 hurdle and 440 yards obstacle races. An event of considerable importance will be the five miles cross country race, in which individual and team placings will count. The open events will include 100 and 440 yards and one mile races.

Craddock, Mrs. Armstrong, Mrs. O'Neill, and Mrs. Tuckey.

KEEN GAME AT KALK.

14th LABOUR COY v. 180th LABOUR COY.

A fine game in the Labour Group Knock-out Competition took place on Sunday, and resulted in a win for the 180th Coy, who will therefore meet the 5th Coy in the final next Thursday. The 14th Coy quickly got to work and scored an easy goal a few minutes after the start. They continued to press and after some scrambling work in front of the visitors' goal, scored again.

With two up against them, the 180th Coy began to get busy with some excellent football which led to a goal by Stevenson the centre forward. At half time the score stood 2—1 in the 14th Coys favour.

After the restart the 180th kept the pace up in spite of a slippery ground, and soon equalised by a splendid shot from Stevenson. The winning goal was also scored for the visitors by him, after several unsuccessful attempts from both wings.

The home team made desperate efforts for an equaliser, but could not break down the visitors' defence, and the final whistle came with the 180th Coy, winners of a keen game, by 3 goals to 2.

OXFORD v. GENTLEMEN OF ENGLAND.

PRICE TAKES SIX WICKETS FOR 82.

This match opened at Oxford on Tuesday in splendid weather the scores for the first innings being as follows:—

Gentlemen of England 169
Oxford University (for 9 wkts) . 118

The Gentlemen who were captained by C.H B. Marsham included six Oxford Blues. Crutchley and Bell put on 69 for the third wicket Crutchley giving a bright display, and hitting seven 4's in his 46.

Price, of Bishops Stortford, bowled well for Oxford taking six wickets for 82. He was supported by brilliant fielding. Bell caught, and bowled for 64, batted very steadily for two hours ten minutes for the first fifty runs.

On Wednesday, Price again was almost unplayable. He took eight wickets for 30 which made his total for the match fourteen for 112. Ward, Shrewsbury was responsible for a good batting performance, scoring 81 not out.

"AUSSIES" COMMENCE THEIR TOUR

The Australian Imperial Forces Cricket Team opened their tour on Wednesday when they played twelve men against Lionel Robinson's twelve on his private ground at Attleborough, Norfolk.

Mr. Robinsons team scored 147, five wickets falling to Dacker, the fast Australian bowler, for 34 runs.

The Australian score was 182 for nine, Collins, of New South Wales scoring 87.

LAWN TENNIS.

The Surrey Lawn Tennis Championships, to be held at Surbiton on the 19th inst., have attracted some notable entries including members of the Australian, South African and Canadian teams. The latter, which has been formed quite recently, includes Col. Mayes, who is acknowledged to be the second best man in Canada; Capt. E.D. Black the famous pre-war English player, and Col. Fowkes. The Englishmen include Ritchie, Roper, Barrett, C.P. Dixon, G.A. Thomas, A.D. Prebble and the Rumanian, Mishu.

Norman Brooks, who holds the singles cup, is expected to arrive from Australia to defend his title.

SCHOOLBOY TEAM'S WONDERFUL RECORD.

A wonderful record in school football has been achieved by the Central Park Eastham School team who have just completed the season's programme. Of 34 matches played, they won every one. The goals scored by the team were 359, against opponents 12. W. Williams, the English Schoolboy International scored 189 of these, while James and Gosling scored 68 and 36 respectively.

In addition to winning the London Schools championships and the Bethell Shield for the fourth consecutive season, the Essex Schools Championships has again fallen to their lot and for the third time they have annexed the White Cup.

LONDON TO BRIGHTON WALKING "STUNT."

CITY CLERKS' ALL-NIGHT STROLL.

There are various indications that Spring has again arrived in England, white and vanessa butterflies are once more on the wing, lilac, apple, and pear blooms add a charming picturesqueness to the landscape, straw hats are again in pleasing abundance. Perhaps the best proof, however, that another season has come round, lies in the report that the London and Brighton walking "stunts" have been revived.

Certain City clerks, feeling that inward bouyancy which the merryspringtime brings with it, indulged in a stroll on Saturday evening from the metropolis to the popular seaside resort. It was a delightfully free and easy affair, each man being allowed to choose his own pace. Refreshments were provided at the stopping places, the number of which, considering the nature of the weather, the inclusion of demobilised entrants and the demise of Dora, was not unduly large.

The following was the official time—table:

THAT WINNING SMILE.

"B." COY 51st BEDFORDS v. C. COY 52nd MANCHESTERS.

An interesting cricket match between the above teams took place on the former's ground at Hennef on Sunday, when in spite of the threatening weather, the home team had a fair number of supporters to cheer them on to their eventual victory. Electing to field first the 51st Bedfords dismissed their opponents for 46, although the slippery state of the ground made good fielding imposable.

Quite a feature of the game was the wicket-keeping of Lieut. Mason who took four wickets during the single innings. Opening the innings for the Bedfords Lieut. Mason and Pte. Cross soon put on 17 for the home team, at which score Lieut. Mason was caught out. The next two wickets fell very cheaply and the Bedfords supporters lost that ever present winning smile until Capt. Coward and Lieut. Thompson started to bat. These two officers quickly began to get runs and after a lively display of batting they decided to finish the match as it was beginning to rain, leaving the Bedfords winners by 6 wickets.

This was the Manchesters first game and with practice they should repay their hard working coach Lieut. White by turning out a good team.

Result:—
B. Coy 51st Bedfords 67 for 4 wickets;
C. Coy 52nd Manchesters 46.
Platoon Match:—
No. 5 v. No. 2; No. 5 39 runs; No. 2 43 runs.

"C" COY., 53rd GORDONS v. B. BTY., 245 BRIGADE, R.F.A.

In this football match at Elsdorf on Sunday the Gordons took up the running from the kick-off and gained two corners in quick succession. From the second the ball was headed through after 4 minutes play. The next item was a break away by the R.F.A. and a goal resulted, making the scores level. After some good combination by the Gordons the ball was put past but immediately after the Gordons took the lead. From a free kick the Gordons scored a third goal. Half-time: G.H. 3; R.F.A. 1.

The second half saw the Gordons attacking all the time and goals 4, 5, and 6 were added. There was no real excitement in the second half as the artillery were quite outplayed and hardly managed to cross the half way line at all.

Result: Gordon Hdrs. 6; R.F.A. 1.

Scorers for Gordons:-Moodie, (3) Lieut. Smith, Dow, Cpl. Scott.

C. Coy's Record.

SERVICES BOXING.

A FIRST ROUND GRUELLING FOR MIDDY IN TOURNAMENT.

Almost 100 competitors entered for the boxing championships tournament arranged by the Imperial Services Boxing Association, which was held this week in the Northampton Institute Clerkenwell. Teams were entered by the British Navy, Army Royal Air Force, Australian Imperial Forces, Canadian and New-Zealand Forces. At Wednesday night's session the Prince of Wales attended and handed over the prizes.

The Air Force figured strongly in the semi-finals in the feather-weights, light-weights, welter-weights and light-heavy-weights competitions for officers. In the section for other ranks they secured wins in the fly-weight and welter-weight contests.

STRIKING BOUTS.

The most striking bouts were those for feather weights in which 2nd Lieut. Hodgkinson, R.F.A., Cambridge, beat Lieut. Conder Banks, Navy; and the welter-weights in which Lieut. S.J. Mason, R.F.A., France, beat Midshipman Thornton. The latter was so severely punished that the bout was stopped in the first round.

In the competition for middleweights, Lieut. Bayley, Navy, beat Lieut. S. Kirkwood, Connaught Rangers. Both fought themselves to a standstill, and the bout was characterised by clean, hard hitting.

As regard other ranks the most notable events were those for bantams, wherein Digger Evens, Australia, beat Gunner Moore, Canada, after a game bout, the Canadian taking much punishment.

In the welters, Sergt. Swinnerton, Air Force, beat Jackson, South African Infantry on points, Jackson making such a plucky show that the referee awarded him a rosette. The Dominions Services were well represented in the spectatorate.

Wednesdays results were:—

Flyweights: (officers) Lieut. Wilson, South Wales Borderers beat Capt. Molet, Air Force.

Bantams: 2nd Lieut. Gentle, Somerset L. I. walk over.

Featherweight: 2nd Lieut. Hodgkinson, Air Force, beat Lieut. Natham, Welsh Fusiliers.

Lightweight: Capt. Smith, Air Force, beat Lieut. Reynolds, R. N.

Welter weight: Lieut. Schooles, Leinsters, beat Lieut. Mason, Air Force.

Middle weight:—Lieut. Bayley, R. N. beat 2nd Lieut. Mcintire Air Force.

Light heavy weight: Lieut. Holaran, R. N. beat Capt. Roberts, Air Force.

Heavy weight:—Capt. Coghill, Australians, beat Lieut. Lang, Indian Army.

OTHER RANKS.

Welter weight: Sergt. Swinnerton, Air Force, beat Pte. Housege, Field Artillery.

Middles:—Seaman Larby, R.N. beat Cpl. Garrett, Air Force.

Light Heavies: Rolph, Canada, beat Sergt. Instr. Lewis A.G.S.

Heavies: — Pte. Hardwick, Australians lost to Sergt. Clements, Canada.

Flyweight: Pte. Sellers, Australians, beat Sergt. Groves, Air Force.

Bantams:—Pte. Digger Evans, Australians beat Pte. Mylne, Marines.

Light weight: — Sig. Smith, R.N. beat Trooper Watson, Australians.

PRIVATE HUSSEY IN FORM.

51st BEDFORDS BOXING COMPETITION.

At Hennef on Saturday the above unit held their Boxing Competition which proved a great success. Entries were plentiful and produced some quite good sport, and the large numbers of spectators present showed plainly that interest in the noble art is not on the decline. The feature of the competition was the splendid work of Pte Hussey, "B" Coy, who though only quite young quickly proceeded to dispose of his older and in some cases, heavier opponents.

The afternoon's sport opened with the semi-final of the Feather-weights, in which Pte Moore, A Coy., met Pte Eaton, B. Coy., and Pte Steer, C Coy., met Pte Coyle "B" Coy. In the first bout Moore, after three good rounds fought at a rattling pace, got the decision chiefly through the constant use of a good straight left.

The next bout between Steer and Coyle produced one of the best fights of the day and the referee must have been perplexed when it came to picking the best man. The decision eventually went to "B" Coy man, who after his splendid show in the semi-finals was rather disappointing in the final when he lost in the second round to Pte Moore "A" Coy.

The light-weight competition provided quite good sport in which Ptes Welsh and Winter, both of "B" Coy fought their way into the final. This provided another very close bout in which Welsh won, but as his opponent had never before fought in a ring, the next meeting of these two men should be interesting.

The final of the Welter-weights was fought between two old opponents L Cpl Lewis and Pte Scope. This time Scope turned the tables, but not until the third round was nearly over did he get the verdict, when the L/Cpl, after a splendid fight in which he took a lot of punishment, gave in.

The competition for more experienced men concluded the afternoon's sport in which Pte Hussey "B" Coy showed his mettle by finishing off everyone of his opponents in the first round. The duties of referee were carried out very efficiently by Lieut Betts, assisted by Lieut Clark and Spicer as judges. The M.C. was R.S.M. Lawrence and the timekeeper, Capt Coward M.C.

OFFICERS v. SERGTS. 5th K.O.S.B.

This match was played on the Ritter Strasse ground Solingen on Sunday in showery weather. After about ten minutes play Lieut. Young scored a good goal. Lieut. Barrowcliff afterwards got possession and beat the Sergts.' goalkeeper with a hard shot. After the kick-off the officers again pressed and the ball went along the line to the left wing who passed to Lieut. Thompson who with a splendidly placed shot added the officers' third goal. The Sergts. rallied after this and after one two unlucky shots Sgt. Paul managed to beat Lieut. Payne. Half time:—Officers 3; Sergts. 1.

The officers kicked off and play was very even for about twenty minutes. Then the officers broke away and in a melee round the goal-mouth, where much good foot-work was shown (and felt) Lieut. Thompson scored number 4 for the officers. The Sergts. worked hard after this and were at last rewarded by another goal scored by S.M. Aitken. Result:—Officers 4 goals; Sergts. 2 goals.

LAND FOR SOLDIERS.

FEN DISTRICT ARRANGEMENTS.

The Isle of Ely County Council have purchased by private treaty the Grange Farm at Leverington, near Wisbech, for division into council holdings for returned soldiers. The farm comprises 223 acres of land, and the purchase price is £100 per acre.

This is believed to be the highest price yet paid by a local authority for soldiers' small holdings, but high as it is it scarcely represents the extraordinary value to which productive land in this favoured district has advanced. The selling owner, Mrs. Frank Mills, widow of a popular Wisbech brewer, could, it is stated, have obtained an additional £20 an acre at public auction but she preferred to sell at the lower price so that it may be applied to the purpose for which the county council have purchased it.

On Saturday a farm of 13 acres situated five miles from Wisbech realised at public auction £2,50, at the rate of more than £160 an acre. The drained alluvial land in these Fen districts is extraordinarily productive and very suitable for fruit growing, which lends itself to small holding cultivation.

The purchased land is to be divided into lots of three to five acres, from which it is believed a man with knowledge of Fen cultivation can make a good living. The small holders selected will all be local men who have taken their part in the war.

LAND SOLDIERS RECALLED.

Members of Parliament are being inundated with letters from farmers protesting against the War Office suddenly ordering the return of all men on agricultural leave from the Army. The number is approximately 10,000.

At a conference between members, Mr. Winston Churchill, and some officers on the War Office staff yesterday the War Secretary professed himself unable to agree to allowing the men to remain on the land owing to the general military situation. After discussion he consented to recall only 80 per cent, of the men, or 8,000 out of 10,000. Further efforts will be made to get him to alter his decision.

IMPERIAL GUARDS.

ENTHUSIASTIC RECEPTION.

The announcement in a recent issue of The Times up the probable formation of the Imperial Guards was received with enthusiasm.

"I think it is a very excellent idea," said Lord Morris, ex-Premier o. Newfoundland.

"It will appeal to all the Empire, and if it bears fruit, and I hope it will, the question might be considered as to whether the Crown Colonies and other places that contributed their quota, including India, should not be represented. The Imperial Guards would help in the great work of keeping the Empire knit together; they would be a symbol of unity."

"Just the thing that many of us have been wanting," said an Australian officer. "Everybody I have spoken to is very keen on the idea. Plenty of us have become whole-hearted soldiers, and are not anxious to return to civilian life. Some too have married here, and would be proud to settle down in the Mother-country as men of the Imperial Guards."

TRADING WITH THE ENEMY.

SOME RESTRICTIONS RELAXED.

The Treasury have issued a general licence authorizing all persons, firms, or companies in the United Kingdom to engage in any transaction which by the terms of the Proclamation of January 4, 1915, is considered a transaction with the enemy. At the same time, no transaction or business is authorized with or on behalf of a branch of an enemy firm or bank for the account of the head office or other office of a firm or bank in enemy territory unless it is situated in territory the resumption of trade with which is authorized. Accounts may be sent to persons and firms resident in enemy territory.

It must, however, be understood that the payment of money to enemies remains prohibited and statements of accounts sent under the general licence should be accompanied by notice that it will not be open to persons and firms in enemy territory to whom they are sent to dispose of funds or securities held for their account in this country at the date of the outbreak of the war.

BAND OF SWINDLERS.

WARNING TO TROOPS PROCEDING ON LEAVE.

The War Office warns officers and soldiers passing through London and elsewhere, on leave or otherwise, against an organized band of swindlers, posing as service men or guides, who defraud soldiers by passing off imitation notes, headed "Bank of Engraving," in "Place of England" for various amounts, usually five or ten pounds, under the pretence of requiring change.

Should any soldier be victimized in this manner he is advised at once to give the person committing the swindle into the custody of the civil police.

STATUS OF WORKING CLASS.

IMPROVEMENTS FOR TRANSPORT WORKERS.

The annual general council meeting of the National Transport Workers' Federation takes place at Dockers' Hall, Swansea, on June 5 and 6. The executive council are proposing that every means shall be used to maintain the monetary advance in wages gained by the affiliated unions during the war. In the event of any material reduction in the cost of living existing wages to be maintained to provide for improvement in the status of the working class. The same resolution instructs the executive to take immediate steps, together with the other two organizations of the triple alliance, to declare in favour of the conversion of all increases obtained during the war into actual wage rates.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

The Editor, in publishing letters from Correspondents, will use his own discretion and if necessary limit the publishing of correspondence on any subject whatever. It must be understood, however that he is not responsible for the views stated.

All communications for this column should be brief and to the point, and preference will be given to those which bear the writers' signatures for publication. No letter will be published unless accompanied by rank name, and unit of sender, which are needed for the purpose of reference.

Many letters of a perverse nature have reached the office, and the Editor wishes to point out that these only cause waste of time both to the writer and the Editor himself. Letters of this nature will not be published.

SIEGFRIED'S HORSE.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Recent mention in a leader in the Cologne Post of this noble animal provokes some interesting trains of thought. There is no doubt that in practice, at the Cologne Opera House, he is not a success. His physique is far from perfect, he stamps awkwardly about the stage, he has on at least one occasion neighed shrilly in the middle of Brunnhilde's singing, he walks off not by the exit appointed by the stage manager but where he thinks he will, and he is unresponsive to the hesitating blandishments of a heroine who is evidently not at ease with him and thankful when he has gone.

So much for gross fact; but even in theory the horse is a mistake. The most perfectly trained beast in the world, acting with the finish of a Sir Johnstone Forbes Robertson and giving the audience no qualm of anxiety as to what he would do next, would spoil the dramatic effect of the scenes in which he figured.

The trouble is that on the stage he is a freak. His appearance on the scene therefore assumes an importance out of all proportion to his dramatic interest. In real life it would be no more remarkable for Siegfried to take his horse on the hills than to take his hat; but on the stage the introduction of the horse is only possible by an ingenuity of the management which intrigues us, unless we are those terrifically musical people who sit with their eyes shut all through the performance. If there were a play in which a man took a horse into his bedroom or a church, or somewhere equally unusual, the effect would be less troubling, for the improbability of such a thing happening in real life is proportionate to the difficulty of getting a horse on to the stage. There is no harm in featuring horses in the film dramas in which they play such an important part, for we suppose that any fool can take a photograph of a horse in a field.

No; Siegfried's horse should be left to our imagination, as the producer of Faust at the Playhouse leaves the poodle to our imagination, without even making Herr Senden growl and bark behind the oven. Certainly the problem is a difficult one; the stage directions and properties in which Wagner took such a child sh delight — swans, ravens, Fafner, Europa's Bull, Valhalla burning and the rest of them — are enough to turn the hair of a producer grey, and are described so explicitly and with such insistence that it is not always possible to fall back on that precious resource of the modern theatre, the suggestive method.

Answers to Correspondents.

[The flow of correspondence, since the Cologne Post was instituted, has been enormous, and the Editor would like to point out that only a certain number of the innumerable questions can be answered in each issue. Should any enquirer find that his question has not yet been answered, he can have the assurance that it will receive attention in due course, and the answer will appear accordingly. Many questions have been received which could be answered much earlier by the Adjutant of the unit concerned, and all such cases which affect the unit commander must be taken to him and not sent here. — Ed.]

THE SOLDIER OF TO-DAY.

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

STILL AT WAR.

But not with Arms.

Ebert, President of the German Republic, recently made an interesting declaration to a representative of the Associated Press, in which he hinted that whatever he might say could be be taken as a moral declaration of war against the whole system of international politics. "The Germans have broken down the power of force and falsehood at home, but they did not do this to help the Allies to strengthen the very same creed, or to enable them to dictate any similar policy," says the President. Germany disarmed with her arms six months ago, when she began this new form of warfare, and, being prepared morally, she will now defend her aims against a world of enemies.

The Banner of Fourteen Points.

Germany will put up as a banner the fourteen points of Wilson, says Ebert, at the same time expressing the hope that the Americans will readily understand the true depth of meaning in this new "war."

Allied Distrust — its Cause and Effect.

"In other words through the treaty the Allies merely show the distrust they have of us, and their fear lest we should break our contract." Those are the words of Count Brockdorff-Rantzau, chief of the German delegates at Versailles, in commenting upon the Peace Terms to a Press representative, and by his careful analysis of the motives and reasons which induced the Allies to frame such severe clauses, he can safely claim to have arrived at the truth.

"How do you expect to overcome this distrust?" the Press representative asked. "By action," said the Count. "Its cause lies in the old Government which has been crushed out of existence, and as yet we have had no opportunity to portray that we are really sincere."

The chief of the delegation hopes that such might be proved by negotiations and until then, he says, Germany cannot expect the enemy to trust to any blind assurances which might be given with regard to the great alterations which have been made within the country.

"Not only by words," says the Count, "but by actions must we replace by a newer and better one the policy of a former Germany. But our efforts cannot be realised unless the enemy refrains from making impossible demands. I know that the new Germany can distinguish herself in international and diplomatic credibility; I know that she is willing to act sincerely and without shuffling: and this makes me all the more convinced that our enemies cannot possibly shut their eyes to facts."

A POPULAR PADRE.

RESUMES DUTIES AT EDINBURGH.

The Rev. J. Harry Miller late Chaplain to the Forces and well known to many of the troops in Cologne, has now resumed his work as Warden of the Pleasance Settlement, Edinburgh. For three and a half years Mr. Miller was with the British Exp. Force, starting his work in the Base Depôt at Etaples, and finishing up in Cologne.

It is interesting to note in a recent issue of the Edinburgh Evening News the account of an interview with the ex-Padre.

THE ARMY ON THE RHINE.

On the Rhine to-day there are two Scottish divisions—Highland and Lowland. They are doing garrison duty, and maintaining the steady discipline of the British soldier. "There is," said Mr. Miller, "some little fraternisation; but you must remember that in certain respects the German has become a cringing, servile creature. This has some effect. Besides, the German is, after all, a human being, and it is impossible to avoid some personal exchanges. The average soldier, however, keeps his distance, and regards the German somewhat contemptuously. The Church services are attended gladly and heartily by the men of Scottish regiments. After meetings, heartsome through and through, the officers and men throng round you, exchanging confidences. All want home. They are weary of the land of exile. How often one hears the question as to the possibilities of demobilization! Our soldiers are still mostly civilians in uniform. On a Sunday evening I have had attendances at services of 400 to 500 men. Remember that every possible counter attraction was in full swing—trips up the Rhine, theatres, sport, and so on."

NEW PROBLEMS.

"A great many of the men have breathed the atmosphere of the Continental Sunday and there is not a shadow of doubt in Mr. Miller's mind that we at home must recognise facts and face new problems, social and religious. "Do not let us be in a hurry," said the Warden of the Pleasance Settlement. "One of the first necessities is patience. Here I am listening to the opinions of many, with a view to shaping policy. The Church will require to ask itself whether it aims at taking charge of the whole life of the people, or of part of it. As for Sunday, our aim must be to make it a day of delight to the people—to give them of the best. I am convinced that on the Sunday mornings we must have more exposition of the Book. During the past twenty-five years there has been a want of teaching of the Bible, of displaying the glories of the Book."

GERMAN ATROCITIES.

Dom Columba Marmion, Abbé de Maredsous, near Namur, an intimate friend of Cardinal Mercier, recently described to a Daily Express representative some of the horrors of the German invasion of Belgium.

"When we heard, on August 23, 1914, that the Germans had crossed the Meuse," said Dom Marmion, "I and our community of about 150 monks decided to remain. Next day we were in the middle of four battles—Namur, Ermeton, Fosse, and Dinant.

"Soon afterwards 900 men and boys were shot down in cold blood at Dinant—for no reason, as all their arms had been given up a week before. I myself saw the wall against which they were placed, and the marks of the bullets on the stones.

"Two hundred men, women, and children fled from Dinant to the Premonstratensian Abbey at Liffe, a mile and a half from Dinant, and the abbot there described to me how all the monks were lined up against the wall with the 200 refugees.

"The latter were forced to walk through a doorway in the courtyard, and each one was shot down till there was a pile of 200 dead.

"Two of our monks, young Irishmen, told me that the Germans tied their hands, laid them on their backs, and whipped their faces till the blood spurted from the wound. One of the twenty-five priests of my abbey who were killed was shot as he was carrying the last sacrament to a poor woman."

WHEN THE GERMAN BLOCKADE WILL CEASE.

RESTRICTIONS REMOVED.

OPERATIONS ON NORTH WEST FRONTIER.

RUSSIAN FAITH IN GREAT BRITAIN.

WHEN THE BLOCKADE WILL CEASE.

PRESENT RELAXATIONS.

The Supreme Economic Council has authorized the publication of the following statement as to the present position of the blockade against Germany.

"Arrangements have been made to remove the blockade against Germany immediately and completely as soon as Germany has formally accepted the Treaty of Peace. In the meantime the following temporary relaxations have already been made for the duration of the Armistice.

"Import of foodstuffs into Germany is now free within limits of a monthly ration of 300,000 tons of cereals and 70,000 tons of fats. Foodstuffs within the ration may be exported to Germany without formality, from any country which is prepared to allow export to her. Fish imported from neutral countries contiguous to Germany does not count within the rations. Since March 25th, 1919, the quantity of foodstuffs shipped to Germany by Associated and Allied Governments has amounted to about 550,000 tons of which about 250,000 tons have been actually delivered. In effect Germany is now free to import all food for which she can pay.

"Exports of gold, silver, securities and war material are prohibited and other exports over land frontiers are free. As regards oversea exports the Allied Governments have retained certain rights of pre-emption over coal and dyestuffs and certain other commodities. Other articles can be exported freely to any country prepared to accept them.

"All black lists of firms and persons in neutral countries have been withdrawn and all disabilities attaching to trade and communications with such firms and persons have ceased to operate.

"Commercial correspondence with regard to export and import trade of the character indicated above is permitted subject to certain regulations which have been accepted by the German Government, and to enemy trading laws of belligerent countries. The area open to German fishing craft has been largely extented. A quantity of net, thread, etc., for the repair of nets has been allowed to proceed from Holland in accordance with the request of the German Government. There is a free list of articles which may now be exported without licence or other formality. In the case of other articles, except where control has been retained for domestic reasons, the rules as to the obtaining of licences and guarantees have already been largely relaxed.

"Export will be further freed from formalities if a general guarantee is given by the governments of neutral countries that they will prevent the re-export of such imported articles to Germany without the consent of the Associated Governments.

"Permission has been given for import of raw material urgently required for use in German local mines. Arrangements are being made for early shipment of these supplies, subject to the necessary finance being forthcoming. The principal difficulty with regard to import of raw material is financial.—Wireless.

(The remainder of the message was jammed out.)

CONSEQUENCES OF REFUSAL.

Plans to ensure the close blockade of Germany in case the German delegates should refuse to sign the Peace Treaty were considered by the Economic Council yesterday.—Wireless.

RUSSIAN ANTI-BOLSHEVIST EFFORT.

FAITH IN GREAT BRITAIN.

Ekaterinodar.—General Denikin has communicated to the British, French and American Missions a Memorandum signed by the military and civilian leaders of the Anti-Bolshevist movement in South Russia. This memorandum enumerates their aims in the struggle, included in which are the destruction of Bolshevist anarchy: the introduction of law and order: establishment of a powerful united and indivisible Russia: convocation of a people's assembly on the basis of universal suffrage: decentralisation of power: guarantees of full civil and religious liberty: immediate agrarian reforms and labour legislation.

More than ever do the volunteers and Cossacks pin their last hopes on Great Britain. Ataman, speaking at a Cossack assembly, said "Once Great Britain has decided to help us she will fulfil her obligations." Atamand emphatically repudiated any suggestion of approaching Germany for aid.—Reuter.

GOVERNMENT BY TELEGRAM.

Drawing attention to the fact that in January 987,807 Government telegrams were despatched by the Post Office, as compared with 43,635 in January 1914, Sir William Davison asked in the House of Commons what steps were taken to secure that only urgent messages were sent by telegram.

The Postmaster-General said that a scrutiny is made in the Post Office of Government telegrams, and those which appear to be irregular are reported to the Departments concerned.

Members are undecided as to whether the War Office or Admiralty is the greater offender.

GOVERNMENT INTENTIONS IN EGYPT.

MILNER'S MISSION.

The Government policy with regard to the situation in Egypt was the subject of a pronouncement in the House of Lords yesterday.

Lord Curzon said that there certainly had been an improvement in the situation in Egypt, though it could not be described as satisfactory. In the provinces order has been generally restored but in some towns, especially Cairo, there had been sporadic disturbances which had to be quelled by force.

The British Government had no intention whatever of ignoring the obligations which were incurred when the task of governing Egypt was placed on their shoulders. The Government would have been ready to hear Zaghul and his associates if they had not opened their proceedings by demanding our complete retirement from the country.

The Government now proposed to despatch a Mission over which Lord Milner has been invited to preside. The Mission would go with the full knowledge and approval of the High Commissioner of Egypt and would rely on his advice and assistance.

Meanwhile General Allenby was preparing a local inquiry into the causes of the recent disturbances.

In conclusion Lord Curzon said that the Government never intended to repress Egyptian sentiment. On the contrary it believed that the Egyptians should be given an ever increasing share in the government of their country.

DEALING WITH THE AFGHAN TROUBLE.

FIRST DIVISION ATTACK.

Official. The India Office has received the following telegram:—On the 11th May, at Landi Kotal, a portion of the First Division attacked the Afghans, whose main strength was about Khargali. We occupied the village and the neighbouring heights, covering the Bagh Yangi springs. Aeroplanes report that a number of the enemy are retiring towards Dakka. Our captures include two guns and three teams of horses. Casualties reported slight.

The casualties reported up to and including 10th May were three Indian other ranks killed, two British and fourteen Indian other ranks wounded.

KOLTCHAK'S PROGRESS IN RUSSIA.

Reuter learns that according to a telegram frm Omsk dated 11th May Siberian troops on the Sarapul-Kazan railway have reached the river Viatka and captured the station at Viatskiya-Poliaty, a hundred miles East of Kazan, taking prisoners, machine guns and material. The Government troops are advancing on Kazan directly from the East and also from the South-east, where they are only sixty miles from the town.

WOOLWICH APPREHENSIVE.

The Woolwich Chamber of Commerce has petitioned the Government to keep the number of employes at the Royal Arsenal up to 20,000 and to provide work of a commercial character, if need be, to keep this number engaged.

The reason for the request is that Woolwich, so far, has only been prosperous in war time.

In the lull which followed the activities of the South African war Woolwich shopkeepers and tradespeople experienced a long period of acute distress, and it is feared that similar conditions will prevail now if the extra population brought into the district by the war is allowed to melt away again.

During the war the number of the Arsenal employees increased from 11,000 to a maximum of 74,000.

ETON'S GENERALS.

An invitation has been issued on behalf of the College and School of Eton by the Provost, Dr. M. R. James; the Vice-Provost, Mr. F. H. Rawlinson; the headmaster, Dr. C. A. Alington; and the lower master, Mr. A. B. Ramsay, to the Old Etonian Generals of the substantive rank of major-general and upwards, twenty-seven in number, who have served beyond seas to visit Eton on Tuesday next to meet the school and receive its thanks for the services they have rendered to the Empire in the war. The invitation has already been accepted by Generals Plumer, Rawlinson, Byng, and Cavan. The meeting with the school will take place in the school yard at one o'clock. The guests will be entertained to luncheon in the college hall by the Provost and Fellows, and afterwards there will be a parade of the Officers Training Corps.

Money wasted on the production of a gas before the Army in France had decided whether they should use and then decided against it amounted to 250,000 pounds.

PRIVATE SUES COMMANDING OFFICER.

CIVIL v. MILITARY LAW.

In the King's Bench Division Mr. Justice McCardie sat to hear the legal arguments of counsel, concerning the question of civil jurisdiction in a matter which concerned military discipline. The action was for alleged false imprisonment, malicious prosecution and slander, plaintiff being Mr. Christopher Henry Heddon, solicitor, of Ripon and Harrogate, who was formerly a private in the Royal Army Service Corps. Defendant was Major G. C. Evans. It was stated by counsel for the defence at a former hearing that the action for slander "had now gone." The words complained of were. "I knew you were a rogue. Now I know you are a damned fool. Get out." This, plaintiff alleged, had relation to his profession as a solicitor. "Will you never tell the truth?" was another statement complained of.

By the defence filed, defendant admitted the arrests, which he claimed arose out of the administration of military discipline. He denied that the statements complained of were in relation to plaintiff's professional conduct, and pleaded that they were spoken without malice and were privileged. Defendant further claimed alternatively that the arrests were ordered by the General Officer Commanding-in-Chief.

Plaintiff alleged that when he complained of Second Lieutenant Haydon habitually using language unbecoming an officer and a gentleman and of systematically persecuting him, he was arrested and ordered fourteen day's C.B. for making a frivolous complaint to his commanding officer and for conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline. He had demanded to be tried by court-martial, and after refusing defendant's request to withdraw his appeal to Lieut.-General Sir John Maxwell, in command of the Northern District, the charge was altered to making a false accusation against an officer. On Nov. 25 last, after sending a letter to the Treasury Solicitor making charges against Second Lieutenant Haydon, he was put under close arrest for eighteen days. A courtmartial to try plaintiff had been adjourned pending the trial of the present action, but he obtained his discharge from the Army on Jan. 24 last. In cross-examination, he admitted he had taken "French leave" six times in order to see his wife. He maintained that defendant was actuated by malice towards him, but this was denied.

THE SOUL OF THE ARMY.

Mr. Tindal Atkinson said on the ground of public policy actions of that kind, unless they comprised real substantial damage affecting the liberty of the subject, were to be deprecated. It was obvious, unless such grounds existed, that the bringing of an action which affected the discipline of the Army the relations between privates and officers, the calling in aid of civil jurisdiction for dealing with questions of that kind was of evil result respecting the discipline which should exist in the Army. Discipline was the soul of the Army. The action had no substantial merits, was counsel's submission. Its origin was spite. Ill-feeling had animated plaintiff from start to finish respecting Lieutenant Haydon. It was for the purpose of getting Lieutenant Haydon into difficulties that plaintiff was induced to write his letter of July 22 and to make the subsequent charge of Nov. 16 with regard to Lieutenant Haydon's relations with another member of the corps—a matter which did not affect in the slightest degree the question that had to be discussed between plaintiff and defendant. Counsel submitted that there was no justification in law for the action so far as concerned the fourteen days' confinement to barracks which defendant passed on plaintiff.

TAKING CIVIL ACTION.

The latter's main desire from the start had been to get out of the Army. His whole conduct had been to make himself so uncomfortable to his superiors that they would be only too glad to get rid of him. In other words, the action was not founded on any real grievance against a superior officer. Several cases were quoted by Mr. Atkinson in support of his contention that such actions were to be deprecated, and that no undue aid should be given to a person to ventilate a grievance in a civil court on matters that were purely of military discipline. Plaintiff's conduct in serving the writ was calculated to bring his officer into disrepute. Any man might say to his comrades, "I have served the commanding officer with a writ." That was a matter which might properly be looked upon by the superior officer as conduct "prejudicial to good order and discipline." If the cases cited were well-founded, Mr. Atkinson submitted that it was not a matter for his lordship to decide. The military officer had to decide a question of discipline, and whether the offence was one which he could try.

BONDS OF DISCIPLINE.

Mr. Justice McCardie: Taking the broad passage of the judgment of Chief Baron Kelly—for example, if an officer, contrary to the express direction of the Army Act, does to a soldier that which is prohibited. For instance, suppose he directs a soldier to be hung up or suspended in the air. Supposing, he said, "I did it because I thought military discipline justified it" — would that be covered by the dictum of Chief Baron Kelly?

Mr. Atkinson: I submit it is not a case of excessive jurisdiction that would give cause to an action. It is covered by redress. A military mistake is capable of being corrected.

Mr. Justice McCardie: How would you do that when the punishment has been inflicted?

Mr. Atkinson: The answer is that it is a difficulty which the soldier ought to have seen at the time he entered the Army. If a man receives punishment before he can have his complaint received by the proper authorities, then that is a fault in the code, and one of those possibilities which he must encounter.

Mr. Justice McCardie said according to the dictum cited when a man went into military service in respect of all military matters he must be bound by the military law alone.

Mr. Atkinson: Yes. That is unassailable. No action would lie.

Mr. Justice McCardie: That must be your point. As the House of Lords says, it is a constitutional question of the utmost gravity.

Mr. Atkinson said the sole remedy for improper imprisonment was to apply the section of the Army Act provided for the remedy of complaints which a private had to make against an officer. Supposing his lordship decided against defendant, to morrow there might be dozens and dozens of cases against different commanding officers founded upon alleged infractions on the strict interpretation of sections in the Army Act. When the facts were whittled down, it would be found that the injury plaintiff had sustained was infinitesimal. The true importance of the case was the effect of allowing these actions to be tried in a civil court, the immediate loosening of the bonds of discipline upon which the Army and the safety of the country depended.

MILITARY EXPEDIENCY.

Mr. Justice McCardie said he appreciated the importance of it. Beyond the question of military expediency was a thing that was fundamental to the rights of every man in this country, viz., that he ought not to be deprived of his liberty and his physical well-being save in so far as the law justified it That, surely, was the overriding rule. He could not understand how the question of expediency could affect the fundamental principle.

Subsequently his lordship remarked that if the dictum of Chief Baron Kelly was correct, no habeas corpus or writ of certiorari would lie, and a man might be wrongfully kept in prison say for four or five years without opportunity of redress.

Mr. Atkinson replied that a court of nine Exchequer judges had so decided.

Mr. Justice McCardie doubted the authority for saying that habeas corpus would not lie in such a case.

Mr. Atkinson: The answer is that a man on joining the Army surrenders his civilian rights, and it is impossible that there could be consent in the circumstances to a conflict of military and civil law, as would result if a person could avail himself of both his rights under military law and the civil courts.

TWO LEGAL CODES.

Mr. Atkinson submitted that as the law stood it was clear that the civil court would not intervene where military law and discipline were concerned, and where a military remedy was given.

Mr. Justice McCardie: When do you say a soldier loses the remedy of habeas corpus?

Mr. Atkinson said the statute had in effect so provided. The Army Act had limited it so far as soldiers were concerned. The effect of Section 43 of the Army Act was a statutory enactment which limited in law the right of jurisdiction by the King's Bench Division to release a man by habeas corpus.

Mr. Justice McCardie: Parliament having enacted a statutory code of military law, the judges of the country are not at any time to proffer their views as to the true effect of the code! That cannot be sound.

Mr. Atkinson said Mr. Justice Wills had held that the court was not the proper authority to deal with military offences; it was for the military to do so.

Mr. Justice McCardie asked who was to decide the constitutional measure of the rights given to the military authorities by the Army Act? If not the courts of law, it would mean that the military authorities were themselves to interpret the statutes.

Mr. Atkinson said it was not so extraordinary as it appeared. There was provided a code distinct from that of the civil code. Parliament had recognised that, and in case after case it had been held that the civil courts had no jurisdiction to deal with matters affecting military law.

Dealing with the facts of the case, counsel said that as plaintiff had taken his remedy under Section 43 of the Army Act, and the matter had been investigated by the military authorities, no court would entertain his claim for damages after he had chosen the remedy provided under the Army Act.

Mr. Justice McCardie said he assumed that one who got a sentence of fourteen day' "C.B." could not be said to wear the white flower of a blameless life. (Laughter.)

Mr. Atkinson said "C.B." did not mean false imprisonment. A commanding officer could confine a whole regiment to barracks because of some outside disturbance, or for one hundred and one reasons. Could all those soldiers bring an action against him for false imprisonment? An action for false imprisonment could not be brought against a schoolmaster who detained a naughty boy in school.

Mr. Justice McCardie: If that were so there would be a good many writs issued by the discontented schoolboy inhabitants of this country. (Laughter.)

Mr. Atkinson had not concluded his arguments when the Court adjourned.

COMPENSATION FOR EXPLOSIONS.

In his report on the Ministry of Munitions, the Auditor-General refers to the liability of the Ministry for damage by explosion, and states that the payments connected with the explosion at Silvertown amounted at December 31 last to £1,800,000 but further very large claims were still awaiting settlement. Explosions at two other factories involved considerable expenditure, amounting on the same date, in one instance, to £185,000, and in the other to £232,000, with further claims still outstanding to a total for the two factories of some £72,000. A scheme to levy £500,000 upon contractors in return for relief from liability failed, for various reasons to produce more than £170,000.

"WANT TO SERVE THE KING, MY LAD?"

In the House of Commons Mr. Winston Churchill indicated further measures which will be taken to encourage voluntary enlistments. He said that opportunities will be afforded to units in the Army of the Rhine to supply officers and N.C.O.'s as recruiting agents, who could describe the conditions of service out here.

The statement that the man Channels, who jumped from a window after cutting his throat, was Relwyskow, the champion wrestler, is incorrect.

MARSHAL FOCH'S VISIT TO COLOGNE.

HAIL! TO THE VICTOR.

Marshal Foch, in the course of his tour in Germany, yesterday received a quiet but thoroughly cordial welcome to Cologne. Escorted by the Naval Flotilla, he landed between the Hohenzollern and Neue bridges punctually according to time-table, and was received by the Commander in Chief, General Sir William Robertson.

Shortly after ten o'clock large numbers of soldiers and civilians commenced to assemble at the appointed landing place. Exposed to scorching sunshine they awaited, with patient expectancy, for an opportunity to catch a glimpse of the great man whose wonderfully conceived blows at the enemy resulted in the ultimate victory for the Allies.

The first indication of the approach of Cologne's distinguished visitor was the distant rumbling of gun fire, indicative of the salutes that were accorded him en route as he proceeded down the Rhine. This was the signal for dense re-inforcements among the spectators, some of whom resorted to weird and wordenful devices in their efforts to secure an uniterrupted view of the proceedings. Officers and other ranks, and ladies of the Q.M.A.A.C. and Y.M.C.A. vied with each other in climbing to dizzy and perilous pedestals, armed with cameras. One unfortunate sergeant produced from somewhere a very high stool, of the camp type, upon which, by dint of prodigious patience he contrived to fix his camera as well as his own person. Subsequently, unhappily, at the critical moment the whole contraption collapsed, damaged beyond possibility of immediate repair.

AEROPLANE ESCORT.

As time went on, the convoy of aeroplanes that accompanied the flotilla came into view and in a few minutes a score or more machines performed a variety of evolutions over the heads of the waiting crowd. They "followed the leader" in single file; they circled round gracefully in a dozen or more different formations and once or twice, some of them, their planes sparkling in the brilliant sunlight, were responsible for movements suspiciously like "stunts."

At a few minutes to eleven, the leading escort, in the form of three small naval boats, gaily beflagged, made their appearance round the river bend. They came bustling down stream, followed at a little distance by a large paddle steamer flying the British White Ensign (at the mast head) the Stars and Stripes and the Tricolour. As the steamer circled round before landing, Marshal Foch, his face wreathed in smiles, was revealed, with his staff, standing on the deck.

The Guard of Honour, provided by the 9th Battalion, the Durham Light Infantry, slopped arms, the band prepared itself for action and the crowd got ready to cheer. Meanwhile the German civilians, presumably thinking to be on the safe side in the matter of courtesy, defied the intense heat and stood bareheaded.

As Marshal Foch stepped ashore, the band played the French National Anthem, the Frenchmen on board the steamer reciprocating the compliment with that of the British.

The Guard of Honour was inspected and the party motored from the embankment to the accompaniment of ringing cheers.

During the afternoon the French and British ratings were the guests of the British Empire Leave Club, who arranged an interesting tour of the town and its environs, utilising five motor char-a-bancs for the purpose. In the evening dinner was served at the newly opened club, followed by an enjoyable concert. In addition, invitations were extended to the men to visit any theatre or picture palace.

A number of the officers were guests of the Rhine Patrol Flotilla.

FATAL AEROPLANE CRASH AT COLOGNE.

The funeral took place yesterday at Südfriedhof cemetery, with full military honours, of an R.A.F. pilot and his observer whose deaths resulted from an aeroplane crash near Cologne on Wednesday. The Rev. Capt. P. Wilson officiated.

The pilot, Lt. S. Gibbs, who had not long been married, was flying a machine with Sgt. Page as observer, when it devoloped a spin and crashed from a height of five hundred feet.

When assistance arrived the Sergeant was found to be dead and Lieut. Gibbs was so badly injured that he died within a very short time of his admission to the 36th C.C.S.

Both the pilot and observer were extremely popular with members of the R.A.F. and had seen much service in the war. Their deaths will be greatly regretted by all who knew them.

"SOUTHWARK'S OWN" HOME.

The people of Southwark gave a rousing welcome to the cadre strength of the 124th Bn. the London Regiment (T.F.) which Arrived at London Bridge yesterday after being on service with the 47th Division since the commencement of the war. In view of the fact that the drum and fife band of the Southwark Branch of the Discharged Soldiers' and Sailors' Federation is mainly composed of ex-members of the returning regiment, they were given permission to play their old comrades home to their depôt, where they were received by the Mayor of Southwark. On its arrival at London Bridge, at about 12.15 p.m., the "Queen's" did not go direct to the depôt, but took the circular route by the Borough, Newington Causeway, Walworth-road, Manor-place, Penton-place, Kennington Park-road, and New-street, to the depôt, so that everyone residing in the locality was able to join in the welcome. The Mayor and Councillors of Southwark entertained the cadre to luncheon.

POLAND.

The thirteenth of President Wilson's Fourteen Points proclaims as a condition of peace "an independent Polish State," and the draft Treaty of Peace now in the hands of the Germans has amply fulfilled the condition. Soon a new kingdom of Poland will be marked on the map of Europe and an ancient tradition will be restored to Christendom. Her boundaries are not yet fully determined. We know that Germany has been ordered to give up Posen, a considerable part of West Prussia (including the old Polish sea-port of Danzig for which an intricate arrangement is made) and the greater part of Polish Silesia. We do not know what the new Poland will gain from territories that were formerly in the possession of Russia and Austria. In Austrian Silesia there are many Poles who still retain sympathy with the national ideals of their fathers, although they live in a land which has had no Polish ruler for several centuries. Silesia was wrenched by Frederick the Great from Maria Theresa of Austria in the middle of the eighteenth century, and his conquest was confirmed by the Treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle. The Poles of Silesia, Prussian and Austrian, have claimed to be restored to the new kingdom of Poland, and if their claim is allowed, six centuries of history will be undone. But the Czechs have also their demands, and when we think of the ancient Kingdom of Bohemia we can foresee difficulties in a reconciliation of the aspirations of Czech and Pole. Teschen may continue to puzzle the British House of Commons.

The time was when Poland was only inferior to Russia in extent of territory, and yet no country in Europe has had a like story of vexation, persecution, and dismembernent. When Frederik the Great was on the throne of Prussia, the time had long passed when Poland could strike terror into the hearts of its German neighbours. Yet it was the problem of Europe. Its government was nominally a monarchy but really a republic. Civil disorder and even anarchy had spelt its ruin as a strong nation. Between the nobles who held the monopoly of power and the populace who were little more than serfs there was no middle class which could preserve a salutary influence. The Polish Constitution was so intricate that law and order were not easily attainable. Ecclesiastical dissensions made matters worse, for from the end of the sixteenth century Poland was the northern centre of Catholic reaction, and orthodoxy was preserved by persecution. Frederick the Great, a man who was not at his best in his religious pose, adopted the rôle of Protestant champion and prosecuted it all the more heartily since his rival, Saxony, was fast assuming a proprietary interest in the Polish crown. He was, also, statesman enough to see the perilous position of East Prussia which was separated from Brandenburg by Polish Prussia on the western side of the Vistula. His task was to link together his territories at the expense of Poland and to do so in a fashion that would avoid the alarm of Europe.

Poland had few friends, and many regarded her as the firebrand of Europe. Forty years before the times of which we speak Sir Robert Walpole in reference to the Polish Succession War made it his boast that "there are fifty-thousand men slain this year in Europe and not one Englishman." The conscience of Europe was not easily stirred by the plight of Poland, and sovereigns of the type of Frederick the Great were not hindered in their policy of spoilation. It is true that Maria Theresa protested her unwillingness "to lose reputation before God and man" by consenting to the partition of Poland, but her son Joseph and her minister Kaunitz were less timid of their reputations. In 1772 Prussia, Austria and Russia perpetrated the First Partition of Poland. Russia took Polish Livonia and part of Lithuania; Austria obtained almost the whole of Red Russia, the southern part of Little Poland, and the country of Zips, which was incorporated in Hungary; whilst Prussia annexed the northern part of Great Poland and, with the exception of Danzig and Thorn, the whole of the coveted Polish Prussia. Frederick the Great was, therefore, in proud possession and control of the Vistula and added to his territories a land which gave him almost a million subjects. The second partition of unhappy Poland was made in 1793 when Russia and Prussia returned to a congenial task. Russia gained Eastern Poland, and Prussia rounded off its conquests by the appropriation of Danzig, Thorn, Kalisch and Gnesen. Two years later

Prussia and Russia returned to the work of spoilation and were joined by Austria. The Third Partition was made. Austria received Cracow and the rest of Galicia; Russia seized the land between Galicia and the lower Dvina; and Prussia took Warsaw in addition to the land between the Boug and the Nieman.

Napoleon also had a part to play in Polish history. He entered Warsaw in the end of 1803, and Danzig surrendered to one of his generals in 1807. Polish indepedence was not permitted, but Prussian Poland was included in the Grand-Duchy of Warsaw which Bonaparte set up, and to it was added most of Austrian Poland. In 1815 the Congress of Vienna, despite a pious declaration of Great-Britain in favour of an independent Polish Kingdom, gave to Russia the most of the Grand-Duchy, to Austria the province of Galicia although Cracow was made an independent power, and to Prussia its share in the first two Polish partitions as well as the province of Posen and Thorn. The Poles were promised autonomous institutions, but they were doomed to disappointment. The revolts of 1830 and 1863 only made Russian dominance more oppresive. It is to the credit of Austria that her rule in Galicia, even in face of her destruction of the Cracow republic in 1846, has been so mild that it has contrasted favourably with that of Russia and Prussia.

Poland begins this year a new and brighter era of independence

ANIMAL DEMOBILIZATION.

Much has been heard of late, about the all-important subject of demobilization, but I wonder how many of the multitude have ever thought for a moment about the task of demobilizing our animals. Comparatively few know of what has been taking place in Cologne during the last two months, or of what a collossal work it has been to collect, sort out, and finally dispose of the many thousands of horses and mules which have, during the war, faithfully played their part and contributed so handsomely towards its victorious termination. Many people in their ignorance are wont to think and say that the automobile has been our one salvation as regards transport, but those who ponder a moment will realize that this is a fallacy. We have won all our wars in the past solely with the aid of horse transport, and doubtless could have done so again, but that did not justify us in excluding the use of motor power in this the greatest of all wars. In no previous campaign there never has been such a huge number of horses engaged, for in the British Armies alone there were 750,000, to say nothing of the additional numbers of allied animals. Every one of these had to be individually examined by the officers of the R.A.V.C. and classified according to age and soundness into A, B, C, and D classes, the letter being clipped out on the near side of the back with scissors. Following this, the Remount officers made another classification in the light of general build or conformation, vice and usefulness from an Army point of view; always of course bearing in mind the veterinary classification. The letters X, Y or Z were thus clipped out on the off-side of the back, so that by the time orders were issued for the departure of surplus animals, C.O.'s of units knew exactly what were to be sent. It was no uncommon occurrence however for an animal to be reclassified either by Remount or Veterinary officers, or both, and sometimes surreptitiously by C.O.'s, and consequently some horses passed through our hands with all kinds of letters on them. Thus an amusing incident was overheard in the Animal Collecting Camp one day, as follows:

A horse with B C on the near side, and X Z on the off, was being examined finally by the V. O.

Inquisitive Subaltern:—"What does B.C. mean?"

Facetious Ditto (looking in horse's mouth:) "Before Christ, I should think."

The 2nd Army Animal Collecting Camp at Deutz is now collecting the last remnants of surplus animals, having been busy at it for roughly two and-a-half months working all the while at high pressure, for between 4,000 and 5,000 animals passed through the depot each week. At a rough estimate, some 50,000 horses and mules must have been handled at the camp during this period, and all credit is due to the very able and popular O.C., Major Godley, R.F.A.

Many were the intricacies of running a depot such as this, for the working staff was never the same from day to day. A hundred would arrive, sometimes in the middle of the night knowing nothing about themselves, where they had come from, or what they were to do. They had to be fed, housed, and paid, and often demobilized all within thirty-six hours. Two or three trains had to be loaded and unloaded daily, and rigorous precautions taken against the escape of mules which so often occurs even when handled by experienced men, let alone by infantry men who knew absolutely nothing, and cared perhaps less. The infantry Tommy is scared to death of a mule; he fears it more than a shell, and my heart has gone out often to the poor "train conducting officer" with such a crew.

Often in the midst of a turmoil of horses going in all directions in the camp, several officers have arrived on the scene, from Generals downwards — most professing an old-standing friendship with the O.C., followed naively by the gentle reminder that if there are any nice riding horses about, they would be eternally grateful, and so on. Others would rush in like a gust of wind, demanding to know where such-and-such a horse has gone; others will ask what they are to do as they have lost all their head collars. Some want a mule changed for a horse, some have lost horses, and others have got too many; and yet so far I have not observed either Major Godley or his adjutant with a single grey hair.

The camp was divided into two parts, one for X horses and the other for Z's. All Z animals being destined for sale in France or Belgium, had to undergo a careful Veterinary examination before entraining, for the final elimination of all contagious disease such as glanders, stranglers, ophtalmia, epizootic, lymphangitis, ulcerative cellulitis, skin diseases, etc. In addition, all wounded and sick animals unfit to travel were sent to Veterinary Hospital. Many horses were reclassified and returned to their units, and a small percentage were selected daily for destruction. Thus nothing was left undone and no animal escaped attention. Horses for destruction are sold to the German abattoirs for human consumption at a flat rate of 700 marks a piece, and are destroyed humanely under English Veterinary supervision.

The whole undertaking has been carried out with extra ordinary smoothness and efficiency, and in penning these few lines, I feel that the uninitiated will have had an opportunity of learning what happened eventually to his equine pal.

THE THREE LETTERS.

David Hunter, literary free-lance, was not the starving occupant of a garret. Nor were his clothes particularly shabby. But the ugly fact remained that his total assets were a few coppers, plus the letters of the evening mail.

Somewhat despondently he selected one of these, and opened it. His face brightened, however, as he disclosed its contents. Behold, there was a cheque for a whole guinea, and a letter from the editor of the Up-to-date, accepting a recent contribution.

"Praise God from whom all mercies flow," murmured the grateful free-lance, and with a smile he pocketed this sudden influx to his capital.

But the second letter was not so congenial. His brow puckered as he read it, and the smile left his face. It was an appeal from his old school, and one that was not lightly to be disregarded. Subscriptions were invited, in a simple and courteous letter, for the purpose of commemorating the supreme sacrifice that many Old Boys had made during the war, by instituting scholarships for the sons of the fallen. The concluding sentence of the appeal especially touched him:—

"With perfect confidence we appeal to you, in the name of your fallen comrades, worthily to do your part in erecting this living memorial to the heroic dead."

How he longed to send a cheque to swell this deserving fund! He took out the remittance he had just received, and fingered it contemplatively. But the recollection of his lack of other financial resources loomed up in his mind like an ugly nightmare, and once more (but this time reluctantly) he returned the cheque to his pocket.

As if to dismiss the matter from his mind, he tore open the third envelope. This letter proved to be from an intimate friend of his school-days. Yet though it was full of gossip, and recollections of boyhood, the following extract alone riveted his attention.

"You remember "Whacker" Davis who skippered us at Lords' in 1908? He was killed after he had, single-handed, rushed three enemy machine-guns. He has been posthumously awarded the Cross, but that doesn't help his widow much, whose sole income now is a meagre pension. He's left a son, too, a fine little chap. It's rough on those left behind."

So poor old "Whacker" was dead, and his son, probably a living image of his father, with curly hair, resolute chin, and honest, fearless eyes, was left without means to fit him to take an honourable station in life, as was his right. His forbears had all served with distinction in the Army, or the Civil Service. But what chance had this boy to obtain a public-school education, which could mould him in the glorious cast it had fashioned those before him?

Hunter came to a sudden decision. "Perhaps a little self-sacrifice on my part can help to give it him," thought he. "Providence gave me this guinea so that I can do my share in aiding the sons of my fallen friends. So with my whole heart I'll give it."

Thus was Hunter's humble quota sent to the memorial fund of his old school, and the recording angel made yet an entry on the credit side of the poor journalist's account.

A REPLY TO "AN OPEN LETTER TO THE CHAPLAIN."

The recent article which appeared in our columns under the title of "An Open Letter to the Padre," has called forth several replies, one of which, from a representative of the Roman Catholic faith, we give below. In to-morrow's issue we hope to give a reply from a correspondent representative of the Church of England.

Dear W.E.S. — Thanks for your "open letter" of the 8th. I presume you await a reply, but admitting, as you do, the existence of different denominations, you will understand that I reply merely on behalf of my own people, the Catholics, or the R.C.'s as we are called in the Army.

You say, that you wonder if we understand you. Yes, we do understand you, all of you, the good that is in the worst of you and the bad that is in the best. We know the world, we understand human nature, and so we feel for you all in your difficulties and temptations. But many of you do not understand us and so may possibly come to wrong conclusions about our work. Perhaps out of mere curiosity you will ask some of your R.C. pals whether they find help and consolation in the Mass, the sacraments and in our ministrations generally. They will answer you, in your own words, that the Catholic Religion makes men better and happier.

You hold that the Church has failed to grapple with the problems brought about by the war. It is a pity you did not specify some particular problem and that you did not state whether you meant the Church as we understand it, or religious bodies in general. I should like to have a specific case to answer specifically. I can now only refer to the fallacy underlying this, as so many another, general accusation. If the world, or any section of it, does not follow the Church's guidance, it is illogical to blame the Church for the calamities which ensue.

You speak of the happy day when you will get your "ticket" and Church Parades will be "Napoo". Well (will you believe it?) we are not enamoured of Church Parades. All we want is that every individual Catholic be afforded full facilities for coming to Mass and the Sacraments. We know that our men come when they can. You think we are "not a bad sort," danke schön—I presume the compliment is applied to C.F.'s in general.

"Do your job," you add. Well, we are, as a class, rather optimistic; we claim that we have done, and are still doing, our particular job. We came to minister to R.C.'s. We have been with them in the line, we have given them the sacraments before the attack, and Catholics (and many non-Catholics, too) know what that means for our people. We have knelt by so many of our poor lads and have helped them to die a holy, happy death. We have sent many of the survivors home with their faith enlivened and their fidelity to the Church ensured. Incidentally we have received many new members who have come to us and we have rid a still larger number of their pre-war prejudices. And to our men who are still out here we continue to minister, giving them that practical, living, religious aid of which you speak. They "are not fools," you say; of course they are not. That is precisely why they have realized what a source of strength their religion may be in time of stress. From their own experience in the line and from their observation of Catholic life in France, in Belgium and in the Rhineland they have gained a fuller appreciation of the truth, the beauty, the unity and the catholicity of their Church.

THE HAT TRICK — REVISED VERSION.

LEAVE CLUB WHIST DRIVE.

The first of a series of weekly whist drives organised by Miss Bourne (Controller of the entertainments section of the British Empire Leave Club) was held in the reading-room of the club on Thursday evening. It proved an unqualified success, the spacious room being well filled with enthusiasts of the popular game. The drive was entirely full and six very suitable prizes were presented to the successful competitors by Mrs. Bourne. Two very handsome cigarette cases were awarded to the highest scores (Lady and Gent), whilst the seconds comprised those very useful articles—razor strops. The first Lady's was won by H. F. Norfolk with a score of 155 and the first Gent's by H. P. Smith, his aggregate being 157. Finbourne secured the 2nd Lady's with 147, and Ashworth the 2nd Gent's with a total of 145. Harvey with 110 gained one of the "boobies," and the player who tied with him and cut for the prize will receive it if he calls on Miss Bourne at the Leave Club.

When about to make for home the M.C. discovered that one of the players had purloined his hat, probably as a memento of the occasion.

THE "TIGER PIPS" CONCERT PARTY

ENJOYABLE ENTERTAINMENT AT WALBERBERG.

The 11th Battalion the Leicestershire Regiment (Pioneers) troupe gave a most delightful concert at Walberberg on Wednesday last.

The opening chorus "The Entertainment Stores" very quickly proved to the audience that a most enjoyable evening was in store. Pte. Senior in such songs as "Alabam" and "My Devon Girl" quickly captivated his audience. Cpl. Hammond, the "lady" of the troupe appeared resplendent in a new costume and charmed everyone with her singing and winsome manner. In the song "Dance with me," in which she was most ably assisted by Lce. Cpl. Benjamin, she was, to use slang, "absolutely top-hole" and the audience would not refrain from applause until an encore had been given.

Sgt. Higgott in his own inimitable style delighted everyone with his songs "The Dark Town Strutters Ball" and "Everyone loves their little old Home."

The two comedians Ptes. Whitbread and Whitehead were screamingly funny and kept the audience convulsed with laughter during the whole time they occupied the boards. To hear Whitbread singing "The Old Dun Cow" and Whitehead singing "Bully Beef and Biscuits" and "When I get my Civvies on Again" was a greater tonic than six months "No duty" and one fully realises why the M.O. of the "Tiger Pips" Unit has so little to do.

Lce. Cpl. Benjamin sang "Californian Girl" and "Some Sunday Morning" splendidly and Pte. Abbott was "it" in his rendering of "The Fact is" and "My Little Girl."

One must not forget either, the masterful way in which Pte. Butterworth carried out his duties as pianist, his excellent playing being quite in accordance with the standard which the "Pips" have attained.

The concert, one of the most up-to-date yet witnessed on the Rhine, concluded with a delightful sketch entitled "Hands Up" in which Pte. Whitbread simply had the house rocking at his absurdities.

VALUE OE THE MULE.

AVERAGE PRICE EXCEEDS £22 AT ARMY SALES.

The following is the official return of sales in the United Kingdom effected by the Army Remounts Department in the course of a week:—

	Nos.	Amounts realized.			Average.
		£	s.	d.	£	s.	d.
Riding horses .	285	8,566	19	0	31	2	2
Light draught .	49	2,656	12	0	54	4	3
Heavy draught.	29	2,965	4	0	102	4	11
Mules	12	396	18	0	33	1	6

These figures are regarded as very satisfactory, particularly for the heavy draught animals.

The total number of animals sold since the Armistice, up to the 7th May is 91,819, and the total price £3,176,304 15s. 10d., giving an average of £37 17s. 2d.

Two thousand eight hundred and five mules have been sold for £62,210, making an average of £22 3s. 6d. This includes 520 mules sold to Lisbon for £18,200, or £35 per head. This figure shows show much more highly valued are mules outside this country, where there is a strong prejudice against them, despite overwhelming testimony to their good qualities from those who have had long experience of them. The average price for mules purchased in the United States of America was nearly £40, but the purchases included some very fine heavy draught animals, whereas those recently shipped to Portugal were only light draughts.

SPORTS AT ELSIG.

16th ARMY AUXILIARY (HORSE) COY. R.A.S.C.

The sports of this unit took place at Elsig on Wednesday in ideal weather when the following were the winners of the various events which were keenly contested:—

Denny; Boat Race:— No. 1 Section; Throwing Cricket Ball:— Dr. Denton; High Jump:— Dr. Sdlr. Denny; Wrestling on Horseback:— No. 1 Section; Tug of War:— No. 1 Section.

In the afternoon a Cricket match betwen Headquarters and No. 1 Section and No. 2 and 3 Sections resulted in a draw, each side scoring 22 runs.

In the evening members of the Company ably assisted by a detachment from 51st Leicesters provided an excellent musical entertainment.

A BOWLER'S DAY.

CAPT. BOND'S XI BEATEN AT LAST.

On Wednesday the 2/4th Duke of Wellington's, Bn. H.Q. Coy Team played, the return Match with Capt. Bond's XI on the Battn. H.Q. ground at Herrig. Capt. Bond's XI won the toss and elected to bat first on an ideal wicket. Corpl. Albone had very bad luck in being caught out (the second chance he gave) for 2. None of the others could stand against the bowling of Hartley and Feather, except Grant who carried his bat out for 6. In two overs the former took four wickets for 3 runs and the latter 3 wickets for 4 runs.

H.Q. Team went in to bat about 15.30 hours. They also batted poorly. Bond and North being very formidable with the "Leather."

About 16.00 hours after slow scoring H.Q. topped their opponent score with a smart cut through slip by Sgt. Copeland. They then retired beating the Erp eleven by four wickets. This is the first defeat for Capt. Bond's Eleven.

MUNICIPAL FOOTBALL TEAM.

WILL CHESTERFIELD'S EXAMPLE BE LARGELY FOLLOWED?

Chesterfield, which has set an example by running a municipal professional football team, is evidently fully aware of the national value of sport (says "Sporting Life."). The Chairman of the Municipal Sports Committee (Mr. J. E. Clayton) believes this town's example will be largely followed all over the country. Football has loomed large in their programme at present, but they intend to take up tennis and other forms of sport, and also physical drill for the school children. In the Queen's Park annexe, Chesterfield claims to be providing one of the finest sports grounds in England.

51st SOUTH WALES BORDERERS' TEN GOALS.

The 51st South Wales Borderers continued their run of successes on Wednesday evening when they easily defeated the Brigade H.Q. at Munstereifel, the score running into double figures. Although only 3 goals were scored in the first half, before the final whistle blew the total had reached 10. The goal-scorers were:—Dyer (4); Roberts (3); Holines (2); and Reynolds.

RUGBY IN TROPICAL WEATHER.

6th WELSH v. 53rd S.W.B.

The first meeting between these two Welsh sides took place at Sechten on Monday in tropical weather. Both sides had absentees.

One or two movements by the 6th Welsh gave glimpses of what they really could do. The Borderers' line was crossed no less than eight times, but not one of the tries was converted. The scorers were:—Lieut. Grant, 2 tries; Lieut. D. Morgan, 1 try; Capt. Palmer 1 try; Sgt.-Major Lloyd, 2 tries; Pte. Allan, 1 try; Pte. Davies, 1 try.

Final Score:—6th Welsh 8 tries; 53rd S.W.B. nil.

FOOTBALL LEAGUE.

26th and 31st ARMY BRIGADES.

58 v. 514 SIEGE BATTERY R.G.A.

This match was played at Mariaweiler in hot weather on Tuesday evening. The game opened briskly, slightly in favour of 514, whose forwards worked together in good style. Eventually 58 settled down and by speedy runs of their wing men gave their opponents' defence a busy time: Hodges in goal had some difficult shots to stop which he accomplished in a masterly manner.

The chief feature of the second half was the fine wing play of "Tich" Hurst at outside left who had a burly half to tackle, but generally came off best. He forced a corner which was excellently placed, Stanton shooting a good goal with only ten minutes to go.

Result:—

514 Siege Battery 1 goal; 58 Siege Battery nil.

"B" COY 16th H.L.I. v 64th R.E.

The above match took place at Solingen on Monday when the former again proved themselves to be the better team.

A good game resulted 3—1 and the result was never doubtful, "B" Coy having played exceptionally well throughout.

The winners are due to play "C" Coy 9th M.G.C. on Thursday.

GUNNERS REFUSE "A NUMBER NINE."

68th BRIGADE R.G.A. 6. V 139 FIELD AMB. O.

This match was played at MULHEIM on Monday. The Ambulance, evidently keen on administering a pill to the Gunners, opened in brisk style but the Heavy Gunners stood firm. Subsequently the visitors' goalkeeper saved twice in quick succession when a downfall looked certain. BENNIE executed a clever run on the left, ending with a good pass and LEIGH meeting the ball had the opposing custodian guessing with a fierce drive. Having once "drawn blood" the gunners could not be resisted and by good football LEIGH added 3 goals and Lieut. LLOYD 1 before the interval, the goalkeeper having no chance on either occasion. Interval:—

R.G.A. . . . 5; R.A.M.C. . . . 0.

The second half was much more even and only one goal by LEIGH was scored, the visiting goalie being palpably surprised by a long drive. Throughout the game the R.A.M.C. worked hard and they are to be complimented upon the football shown considering the size of their unit. Shooting was the chief cause of their downfall. SPENCE and TIGHE newcomers at back both played good football and will be heard of again.

68th Brigade R.G.A. Team:—

Lieut J. H. BROWN; Bomb. SPENCE & Corpl. TIGHE; Bomb. RAINBOW, Bomb. BUSH, Gnr WARBICK; Pte DUNCAN, Pte LOWE, Bomb. LEIGH, Lieut. LLOYD & Gnr BENNIE.

D. COY SOUTH STAFFS v. "A" BATTERY R.F.A.

These two teams met in an interesting match on Sunday on the Battery's Ground at Hoske. Receiving a pass from his centre half, the Gunners' centre-forward made tracks for goal, and profiting by a slip on the part of the visitors backs opened the scoring. The game was now vigorously contested and had the "Dons" forwards accepted their chances, the score at the interval would not have read:—

A Battery 1 goal; D Coy nil.

On resuming "Don" Coy made desperate efforts to score but were opposed by a sturdy defence. Give and take play followed, the rival defences being on top. Butterworth, the "Dons" left winger, was responsible for many fine centres, but the inside forwards did not take the chances presented them. The Staffs now monopolized the play, and the right wing were set going, and Smart equalized the scores. The final score of 1 goal each was a fair indication of the play.

"VICTORY" GOLF TOURNAMENT.

The committee of the Professional Golfers' Association met this week when the draw was made for the Southern Section "Victory" Tournament. It will be played, under stroke conditions over 36 holes, at Walton Heath on Wednesday next, and has attracted an entry of no fewer than 110. The field includes Vardon, Braid, Taylor, Herd, Duncan, Ray, Sherlock—indeed, practically every player of any note. In order to avoid congestion the first 28 couples will play on the old course, and the last 27 on the new course in the morning, and this plan will be reversed for the afternoon round. A commencement will be made at 9.45 a.m., and if a full day's high-class golf is desired it will be necessary to catch a train at London Bridge at 7.50 a. m. The Walton Heath club will cater for visitors to the best of their accommodation.

52nd WELSH REGT v. No 2 FIELD AMBULANCE.

Played on Tuesday at Langsdorf.

The "medicals" had most of the play in the first half, Tonkinson playing a fine defence game for them, and at centre forward Grundy the ex-Northern Nomad led the line in fine style. Barr scored the first goal after 20 minutes play, and then Howarth placed a corner kick to perfection for Burell to head through. One minute from half time Grundy got possession of the ball in midfield and beating the defence, scored the "medicals" third goal with a lovely ground shot.

In the second half the Battalion had most of the game, but Tonkinson repeatedly sent them back empty handed. After 25 minutes one of his clearances had the misfortune to rebound off Sergt. Wagstaff through the ambulance goal. Not to be daunted the "medicos" then carried the play into the infantrymen's half, where Howarth placed across a centre which enabled Grundy to add another goal. The final whistle came with the score:—

No 2 Field Ambulance 4 goals; 52nd Batt. Welsh Regt. 1 goal.

SPORTIVE STARS AND STRIPES AT HILGEN.

Yesterday's post brought us an unsigned report of a football match at Hilgen between officers and sergeants, the anonymous sender of which rightly-asserts that whiskey — generally speaking — is not good for training. Judging by the report we are inclined to think that it is equally ungood for writing! The following is his account of the game:—

NOVICES AT PLAY.

"Well when I say novices, it really, was officers v. sergts: and some effort at that, what with little practice and a slippery ball, the supporters on the line had their full share of amusement. Sgt. — — in his American outfit was quite dangerous and cheered on with cries of "take off those shirts" he on several occasions came within 20 yds. of the goal, one of the best goals was when the officer's goalkeeper threw the ball on to the head of the opposing inside right, who accidently put it through, the whistle finally blew mid sighs of relief and several left the ground, realizing tha whiskey was not good for training.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

Saturday, May 17, 1919.

Surface wind between East and South-East, 5—10 m.p.h. Mainly fair with morning mist and perhaps daytime cloud. Warm. Visibility fair or good.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

A Popular Boxing Promoter.

Persistent reports have it that Mr. C. B. Cochran, the well known theatrical producer and boxing promoter is likely to strike out in a new direction. A business proposition has come before him which, if he accepts, will probably mean that he will have to relinquish his associations with theatricals and boxing. There are few, indeed, who have had anything to do with ringcraft, who do not know Mr. Cochran for his geniality, his enterprise as a "showman," and his extraordinary energy. If his venture into an unbeaten path (as far as his activities are concerned, at all events) should be taken, his departure from the boxing world will be very much regretted by a large number of sportsmen.

Echo of the Thorpe-McCarthy Match.

An interesting letter has reached me from Driver McCarthy who, since his recent wrestling match with S.S.M. Thorpe, has been demobilized. Why my correspondent should write in the strain he has adopted, it is difficult to understand for, surely, no one ever suggested that the match referred to was anything but clean and sportsmanlike.

However, the letter, coming from so "infant" a civilian is interesting. Writing from a London address, McCarthy says:—

"I have recently had The Cologne Post sent home to me containing the account of my match with S.S.M. Thorpe of the 28th Field Ambulance. I am writing to you for I feel that you would like to know that my match with S.S.M. Thorpe was one of the best and cleanest matches I have ever had. We agreed to wrestle for the Championship of the Rhine Army of Occupation and I should like to mention that I have never experienced a finer grapple in all my mat experience. He is a real sport and all who meet him in a match will find him the same. I only wish I had had the time for a return match before leaving for "Blighty," here to be "demob'd". Perhaps when he comes this side again he will give me the chance of another go with him. I am doing my best to fix up a couple of matches at home here now. I hope I shall find all my other matches as fair and as sporty as that with the S.S.M. I wish him all the best of luck and health and hope he will always be ready to defend the title, that he won throught our match, for I challenged anyone in the Army of Occupation and he took me on and met me in a match at Burscheid." Sergt. Major Thorpe will no doubt blush at these nice remarks and I think he will join me in wishing Mc Carthy "all the best."

THE RAMBLER.

IN AID OF SERVICE CHARITIES.

ROYAL NAVAL, MILITARY AND AIR FORCE TOURNAMENT.

A special effort is being made this year to raise a large sum for the Service Charities by means of the Tournament which opens at Olympia on 26th June. The funds of all the institutions which benefit by the profits taken at the Tournament are greatly in need of assistance. There are many orphans to be educated and given a start in life, and no sum however great which the public may contribute by attending the Tournament will be too much for future needs. A large honorary staff is at work under the chairmanship of Major General G.P.T. Feilding, G.O.C. London District, and it is pledged to break all records this year on behalf of the special needs of the charities.

At the Tournament, skill-at-arms is encouraged by the presence of champions who have fought their way through to Olympia in their own Command competitions. With so many skilled sportsmen of all sorts now in the services, the competitions will be unusually attractive. These men have come forward almost in a body to help. The full programme this year will be given by:

(a) The Royal Navy.
(b) The Army.
(c) The Royal Air Force,
(d) The Royal Marines.
(e) The Territorial Force, Volunteer Force and Cadets.
(f) Schools and Institutions.
(g) Our Allies.

Well-known Officers and men from the different theatres of war are home or coming home to join in the big effort of this Peace year Tournament, and the new ideas which they bring should make the programme the most varied of its kind ever given. New Corps to take part include the Tank Corps, Machine Gun Corps, and the new branches of the old services. The men of H.M.S. Victory, Wildfire and Vivid, and the boys of Greenwich School will be included, as well as the boys from the Military School at Dunblane. A number of distinguished war visitors, including famous Allied commanders, will attend.

COLOGNE BATHING FATALITY.

At Südfriedhof cemetery yesterday, the funeral took place, with full military honours, of Private L. R. Moon, of the 51st Northumberland Fusiliers, who was drowned at Cologne Swimming Baths on Tuesday.

The deceased, who was a popular sportsman in his battalion, followed a hot bath with a plunge into the swimming bath and a few minutes later was found under the water. Artificial respiration was unsuccessful.

A large number of his comrades attended the funeral, the band of the 52nd Northumberland Fusiliers accompanying the sad procession.

"THE MOLLUSC" ON TOUR.

A few of the incidents in "The Mollusc," a clever play, admirably acted by the Rhine Army Amateur Dramatic Company.

ENGLISH LADIES IN FRANCE.

The second party of ladies who have accepted the invitation of the Mayor of Lille, sent through Sir Harry Brittain, M.P., left Victoria at 8.50 on Thursday morning. As before, the arrangements were carried out by the Overseas Club. Lady Greenwood is president, and the party includes Dr. Flora Murray and Dr. Garrett Anderson, of the Endell-street Military Hospital, Mrs. Kimmins, of the Chailey Heritage Craft Schools, Mrs. Arkwright (Mothers Union) Miss Cameron-Swan (Lady Superintendent, Woolwich Arsenal), Mrs. Gibson, O.B.E. (Surgical Supplies, Needlework Guild), Miss Fiskin (Australia) and Mrs. Ardens (Lancashire Cotton Industry), while other ladies well known as lecturers or writers are Mrs. Baliance, Miss Everett Green, Mrs. Baynes, Mrs. Golding Bright, Miss Hutton, Mrs. Phillpots, and Miss G. Lockey. Lille will be the headquarters for six days, and visits will be paid to the devastated areas of France and to wrecked factories.

GERMAN FACTORIES.

INSPECTION BY BRITISH BUSINESS MEN.

English manufacturers will have an opportunity of inspecting German factory methods in the occupied districts. Mr. L. A. Paish, of the Department of Oversea Trade, has been to Cologne to arrange with the military authorities for a series of visits to be paid to factories by representatives of our own dye, iron, and similar industries. The German manufacturers will furnish every facility, and is it thought that a mutual interchange of views may be useful.

WOMEN FOR THE COLONIES.

It is understood that the Government Overseas Settlement Committee will shortly despatch six women commissioners to investigate conditions in the Colonies. Two of these ladies will visit Canada, two Australia, and the remaining two New Zealand. Their mission will be to inquire into the openings likely to occur for women workers, particularly land workers, with a view to the settlement in the Dominions of British women workers, who desire to emigrate. Preference will be given to women with some kind of war service. Among those selected as Commissioners are Miss Gladys Pott and Miss Watkin two ladies prominently connected with the women's branch of the Food Production Department, which organised the Women's Land Army.

THE VICTORIA CROSS ALLOWANCES MAY BE INCREASED.

The question of increasing the payments to holders of the Victoria Cross—£10 a year in ordinary cases and £50 when the holder is totally disabled—is to be considered during the forthcoming general revision of terms and conditions of service. Mr. H. W. Forster, Financial Secretary to the War Office, stated in the House of Commons that officers who rose from the ranks and gained the Cross as officers must abide by the rules applying to officers.

"Are not many officers now very poor men?" asked Colonel Wilfrid Ashley.

"I hope we shall deal with that in the review of their pay," replied Mr. Forster.

NEW MILITARY SECRETARY.

Mr. Churchill has appointed Lieut.-General Sir Philip W. Chetwode, Bt., D.S.O., to be military secretary to the Secretary of State for War and secretary of the Selection Board in succession to Lieut.-General Sir Francis J. Davies, who will take up the appointment of G.O.C., Scottish Command, on June 7. Sir Philip served in the capacity of military secretary to Viscount (then Sir John) French for two years. He took over the command of East Force at Deir el Belan, Palestine, after Sir Charles Dobell's two abortive attempts to reduce Gaza in 1917. Before that he had served with distinction in France

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

LIEBKNECHT'S VERDICT.

There is something more than mere sensationalism in the murder and recent trial of the murderers of Liebknecht and Luxemburg. One might even say there is a certain political value or significance underlying this horrible tragedy, the realization of which is not yet fully manifest. Such tragedies, especially when representatives of more than one country are involved, have proved often serious, as in the case of the Sarajevo outrage in 1914, the results of which were revealed at bitter cost.

The same danger exhibits itself amongst the various parties of a state, though perhaps in a milder degree; and at present it would be impossible to calculate the real effect which will present itself ultimately, when all the sensationalism of the drama has passed into oblivion.

Liebknecht, it will be remembered, was a member of the Reichstag, and throughout the war he distinguished himself by his "anti-German" attitude in condemning his own Government and people. Henri Barbusse in his admirable book Le Feu (English translation entitled Under Fire) acclaims Liebknecht as being the greatest hero of the war, in that he attempted to fight against the callousness of his own authorities. But his efforts merely resulted in imprisonment, and he remained thus until the Revolution of last year.

When released, Liebknecht became leader of the Independent Socialists, but on account of his sympathy with the Spartacists, he soon was compelled to live again the quiet life within prison-walls. Rosa Luxembourg who had been helping him in the Spartacist developments, was also imprisoned.

Then came the awful tragedy which happened whilst the two were being escorted from one prison to another, the account of which has been given in earlier issues.

The sentences were indeed light, and much comment can be expected from all parties.

Die Freiheit, the organ of the Independent Socialists, implies that the verdict merely shows that German barbarity is to-day just the same as before the revolution, and that the power of the militarists is as strong as ever. It also points out the influence such a verdict might possibly have with the Entente countries at the present time, when they notice that such crimes remain "unpunished."

The Rheinische Zeitung, the organ of the Majority Socialists, gives a lengthy comment on the verdict and, as the two assassinated were of a rival organization, it is interesting to note the remarks.

"It is unconceivable to the outsider that Liebknecht and Luxembourg should have been delivered almost defenceless to a rough band of men who had only a military education. Though we have fought hard against the Spartacists, we know only too well that these two had no thoughts whatever of committing vile crimes. They will remain in history however, as martyrs and their martyrdom will be the still more heroic because, by the senseless deeds of Runge, Vogel and others, they lost all opportunity to justify themselves before the judges.

The Editor, in publishing letters from Correspondents, will use his own discretion, and if necessary limit the publishing of correspondence on any subject whatever. It must be understood, however that he is not responsible for the views stated.

All communications for this column should be brief and to the point, and preference will be given to those which bear the writers' signatures for publication. No letter will be published unless accompanied by rank name, and unit of sender, which are needed for the purpose of reference.

Many letters of a perverse nature have reached the office, and the Editor wishes to point out that these only cause waste of time both to the writer and the Editor himself. Letters of this nature will not be published.

"ON SHRUGGING SHOULDERS."

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

There are many points in O.W.'s article in Wednesday's issue, with which I disagree.

Firstly, he characterises the French as having "mastered and developed above all others, the science of living and extracting the most conscious enjoyment out of life." Yet during the four years of war in which we were most intimately intermingled with our Allies, the generally accepted opinion as regards the effect produced by one nation on another through such close association is that our own bright and cheerful outlook on life, even in the face of death, did much to inspire our Allies with courage and endurance. Now, when the shrug of the shoulders is not so much needed, O.W. points to the French as being the inspirer, and exhorts us to become the inspired.

As regards the words of the Town Major which he quoted as representative of a big shrug of the shoulders and which he considers to be "one of the wisest things he ever saw," namely "To-day is the to-morrow that we worried about yesterday, but it didn't happen," surely he will agree that a bigger shrug of the shoulders is depicted by these words. "To-day is the to-morrow which we refused to worry about yesterday, so likewise will we refuse to worry over the morrow."

Yet though I partly agree with him on meeting all trouble with a shrug, I would remind him of the impossibility of annihilating worry, since if one and all refuse to worry over the problems of life, what will become of progress? But perhaps he thinks that by merely shrugging the shoulders, all problems will solve themselves automatically. F.A.P.

Answers to Correspondents.

[The flow of correspondence, since the Cologne Post was instituted, has been enormous, and the Editor would like to point out that only a certain number of the innumerable questions can be answered in each issue. Should any inquirer find that his question has not yet been answered, he can have the assurance that it will receive attention in due course, and the answer will appear accordingly. Many questions have been received which could be answered much easier by the Adjutant of the unit concerned, and all such cases which affect the unit commander must be taken to him and not sent here. — Ed.]

WARNING TO SOLDIERS

Soldiers passing through London and elsewhere on leave or otherwise, are specially warned against unscrupulous persons posing as Service men or Guides, who swindle soldiers by passing off imitation Bank notes, headed "BANK OF ENGRAVING" in place of "BANK OF ENGLAND", for various amounts of £5 or £10, under the pretence of requiring change etc.

Should any soldier be victimised in this manner, he should at once give the person into the custody of the Civil Police.

NORTH WEST FRONTIER TROUBLE.

PETROGRAD DOOMED.

DATE OF PEACE CELEBRATIONS.

FURTHER STRIKE IN EGYPT.

AFGHANISTAN TROUBLE FIZZLING OUT.

IMPORTANT SUCCESS.

Reuter understands that British troops occupied Dakka Fort in Afghanistan on Tuesday last. This is a most important operation and is regarded as a serious blow to the Afghans. It has definitely stopped any menace to Lundi Kotal and from a military point of view may be regarded as showing that the movement will fizzle out.

ANOTHER EGYTIAN STRIKE.

Port Said, 15th May.— All municipal workers have struck. No disorders have occurred and Suez Canal traffic is unaffected owing to the measures taken to provide ships with sufficient coal to reach the nearest port.— Reuter

RUSSIAN GENERALS MURDERED.

A telegram from Helsingfors states that in the course of some excavations at Mountain Maschuk, in Caucasia, the corpses were found of 115 officers. Amongst them were the bodies of Generals Russky and Radko Dimitrieff. There was evidence that all of them had been murdered by the Bolsheviks, and their bodies terribly mutilated.—Reuter.

FALL OF PETROGRAD IMMINENT.

Copenhagen. The Natonal Tidende learns from a reliable source that General Maunheim, commanding Finnish troops, has reached Bjeboostrov, a few miles from Petrograd, and expects shortly to take the city. The Bolshevist authorities have fled.

THREE HUNDRED SHIPS FOR ARCHANGEL.

Copenhagen.— A telegram from Bergen states that three hundred British vessels recently passed that port on their way to Archangel. They were loaded with provisions and war material. The fleet mostly consisted of thousand-ton flat bottomed vessels. These will be used for river service in North Russia.—Reuter.

WAR MEMORIAL SCROLLS.

Mr. Guest, in the course of a parliamentary debate, stated that 20,000 War Memorial scrolls have actually been inscribed and will shortly be despatched. The factory for the manufacture of plaques will probably not be ready for two months. It has therefore been impossible to issue plaques to relatives, though the preparations are well advanced.

DATE OF PEACE CELEBRATIONS.

According to the Times it has been decided to hold national Peace celebrations on the 3rd, 4th and 5th August, if peace is signed by that date.

The North Lambeth peace celebrations committees immediately passed a resolution, which has been forwarded to the Prime Minister, expressing consternation at the proposal to hold the Peace celebrations on these days, as all the schools will be closed and many people will be absent from London.

SMALLPOX AT CROYDON.

Seven cases of smallpox have been notified at Croydon. The infection is supposed to have been brought by a soldier from the East.

THE EMPIRE UNITED IN PEACE AS IN WAR.

OUR IMPERATIVE DUTY.

Presiding at a luncheon in honour of Sir Robert Borden, prior to his return to Canada, Mr. Bonar Law said that, however, much we might hope from the League of Nations, it was vital that not only every statesman, but the whole people throughout the Empire should realise that as the Empire had been one throughout the war it must be one in the years to come.

Sir Robert Borden in the course of his reply, said the wonder was not that the Peace terms were agreed upon with reluctance by one and another of the nations but that there was in the end an absolutely unanimous adoption of the Treaty as presented to the German plenipotentiaries. It was our imperative duty, he said, to make our Empire an inspiring example to the greater League of Nations now happily organised.

KOLTCHAK'S FORCES NEARING MOSCOW.

NAVAL GUNS AT ARCHANGEL.

Admiral Koltchak, the leader of the anti-Bolshevist Siberian Army, has telegraphed to Mr. Churchill:

"I wish to convey to your Excellency my profound appreciation of the assistance which is being rendered by Great Britain to Russia in her national efforts, and am sincerely touched by the friendly message delivered to me on behalf on the British War Office. While marching courageously towards Moscow the Siberian troops are animated only by the desire of liberating the country, bringing her back to the place she is justified to occupy, and enabling the people of Russia to express freely their national will.—Admiral Koltchak."

"In the River Dvina region (Archangel front), in the direction of Onega-Shenkursk, an artillery duel with the ships of the enemy's flotilla is taking place," says the Moscow wireless.

"In the direction of Murmansk there is fighting among outposts 27 miles west of the railway. In the direction of Olonets (110 miles north-east of Petrograd) our troops retreated 7 miles to the east of Olonets."

The Bolsheviks also claim to have attacked successfully in the southern sector of the Dniester. "At the first attack of the Red troops the ranks of the Rumanians and White Guards wavered. Our troops, crossing the Dniester, broke into the Rumanian front to a depth of 7 miles and occupied Cheoruch."

MONEY LINED CLOTHING.

Colonel Balakhovitch, commander of the anti-Bolshevist Russian troops in Esthonia, states that the Soviet Commissaries when pursued by rebellious soldiers with bayonets shouted. "Don't thrust, you will destroy bank-notes." It was found that the commissaries had their clothes entirely lined with £100 and £25 bank-notes.

Colonel Balakhovitch gives a graphic account of the atrocious torture inflicted by Chinese gaolers on the inmates of Russian prisons. This principally takes the form of causing drops of icy water to fall from a great height on to the heads of their victims.—Reuter.

TROOPS FOR NORTH RUSSIA.

Stirring scenes were witnessed early yesterday morning at the Royal Albert Docks when the transport Menominee was being got ready to depart later in the day for Northern Russia with troops of the Russian Relief Force on board. A number of the men, mainly artillery, had arrived overnight, and yesterday morning another trainload put in an appearance shortly before eight. The artillerymen had evidently come some distance, but they were in splendid spirits. The majority of them wore the 1914 or 1914-15 ribbon, and they were evidently a picked crowd. They had apparently seen fighting upon more than one front, and on one of the carriages of the train was written. "We are Allenby's boys from Jerusalem." As is usual with the British soldier when going on active service, they had some facetious remarks to make concerning those who stay at home, and the inscriptions upon the carriages were generally most amusing. One of them read, "Good-bye, blighty; get settled by the time we return," an obvious reference to the Paris negotiations. Another inscription was. "The last will and testament of — Battery. We leave the whole Government to 'John Bull.'" Still another ran, "We are the boys that gave the Germans hell, and we are going to give the Bolsheviks the same," and a further inscription was, "Four years of war; still going strong."

As the men paraded after detraining many of them were carrying Union Jacks, and they wore flowers and pieces of fern in their caps—favours from those at home. The band of the Royal Artillery from Woolwich played as they marched up the gangway, and the men cheered lustily as they boarded the troopship. As well as artillerymen, there were on board a considerable number of R.A.S.C. and also a large complement of naval ratings who were going out to join their ships in the North.

ENFIELD ACCIDENT INQUIRY.

An inquest was held yesterday morning on Lt. Col. Webley Hope, who was found shot in his office at the Royal Small Arms factory at Enfield.

Lt. Col. Robinson, director of Small Arms Inspection, produced the rifle action which caused the fatality and explained that it was not intended to be fired, being simply "thrown together" for demonstration and experiments. There was no doubt that something caught in the mechanism of the rifle, causing it to explode.

A verdict of accidental death was returned.

SWEDISH AIRMAN KILLED.

The well-known Swedish airman Dr. Enoch Thulin, director of the Enoch Thulin Aeroplane factory, crashed at Landskrona yesterday and was killed.—Reuter.

H.M. the King has appointed Admiral Sir George Callaghan to be Bath King of Arms.

FRENCH'S WAR LORD BOOK.

MORE QUESTIONS ASKED.

In the House of Commons Sir D. Maclean (L., Peebles and Southern) asked whether the Government would give an opportunity for the discussion of the motion standing on the Order Paper in his name relating to the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

Mr. Bonar Law: No, sir. So far as the Government are concerned we do not think such a discussion would be desirable, and in the ordinary course we should not give facilities for it; but if my right hon. friend in his capacity as Leader of the Opposition—(cries of "No," and laughter)—asks for an opportunity to move a vote of censure we shall find time for it.

Sir D. Maclean: In view of the fact that I have no intention whatever to move such a motion as a vote of censure but only wish to clear a constitutional point, does the right hon. gentleman not think it is an undue limitation of free debate to impose such a condition?

Mr. Bonar Law: No, sir; I do not, and I hope the House will agree with me. Special safeguards which exist in our rules to prevent such a discussion are there for the purpose of preventing people in a position of great responsibility from being criticised. I therefore cannot agree to it.

It is understood that by Wednesday next Mr Bonar Law will be in a position to reply on behalf of the Government to the various questions raised by the publication of Field Marshal French's articles.

EMPIRE AT STAKE.

Before dealing with the first battle of Ypres, Field Marshal French, continuing his narrative in the Daily Telegraph, takes a survey of the issues involved at that time. He asks: "What were the points at issue in this grave crisis in the history of the world? What were the stakes for which we were playing? Let us suppose that from October, 1914, up to the end of the war, the German right flank had been established at Dieppe, instead of at Nieuport. How, then, would it have fared with the British Empire?

"Discussing the question of the Channel Tunnel at a meeting of the Council of Imperial Defence in May, 1914, I suggested the possibility of submarines being despatched in sections by rail to certain ports and there assembled. The expert reply was that this would be quite impracticable. How has the experience of the war borne out this dictum? It is as certain as anything can be that, in the circumstances I have supposed, the Channel ports would soon have been full to overflowing with these craft, which, with such bases of operations, would have rendered the Channel a veritable mare clausum, so far as any attempt by our Navy to prevent invasion was concerned. If, then, Napoleon entertained high hopes of success when he concentrated an army at Boulogne in 1805 for the invasion of this country, surely the Germans, in such circumstances as I have described, would have regarded such an enterprise with still greater confidence. And they would have been justified in so doing.

"Then, as to aircraft. An examination of the map will show that London would be within about half the aircraft range of the German aerodromes as they existed if these latter were moved to Calais and its neighbourhood. Let those who have had experience of the full effect of air raids on London during the war judge what this might have meant.

"I think it is reasonable to deduce from this argument that the stakes for which we were playing at the great Battle of Ypres were nothing less than the safety, indeed, the very existence, of the British Empire."

ASQUITH'S THIRD NEWCASTLE SPEECH.

FRENCH AND KITCHENER.

Mr Asquith speaking at Newcastle, referred with reluctance he explained, to Lord French's book "1914." He said that Field Marshal French had taken an unusual and unfortunate course. It was impossible to reconcile some of his statements with Mr. Asquith's recollection of facts or with contemporary documents. It was wholly untrue to suggest that Lord Kitchener or the Home Government ever contemplated or attempted gratuitous interference with the commander in the field, and the friends of Lord Kitchener might await the process of disclosure with serenity.

Subsequently Mr. Asquith declared that the House of Commons is no longer representative of the people, but a real opposition is coming into being with every by-election and promised to add to its ranks. The coalition form of Government is unsuitable, he said, for the constructive tasks of peace, and it would be a mistake for young Liberals to combine with the Labourites.

COERCING THE GOVERNMENT.

The Parliamentary Committee of the Trade Congress yesterday considered the request submitted to it on the 16th April as a matter of urgency by the Triple Alliance of Miners, Railwaymen and Transport workers.

This was for a National Trade Union Congress to be called to consider the proposal for a national strike in order to compel the Government to withdraw British troops from Russia, to abolish conscription and to release conscientious objectors.

The Committee decided to defer consideration of the request until they had seen Mr. Lloyd George or Mr. Bonar Law. The effect of this is that the proposal is thus practically shelved.

TRADE UNIONISTS REFUSE SHIPYARDS.

The Federation of Shipbuilding and Engineering Trade Unions meeting at Cardiff, has rejected the Government offer to hand over the Beachley and Chepstow shipbuilding yards to be run under the joint management of capital and labour. Mr. A. Wilkie M.P. (Lab., Dundee) said that if the Government made a practical proposition they would consider it.

LONDON'S WELCOME TO LONDON MEN.

LONDON SCOTTISH.

London is at last having the opportunity of welcoming its very own men who fought in the war. Apart from the City of London Regiment of Regulars — the Fusiliers — the London Regiment is composed of Territorials, whose record in all theatres of war stands second to none. The 47th, 48th, 56th and 60th Divisions were all Londoners, and although triumphal marches are becoming quite a familiar feature of London life, it is safe to assert that the warmest welcome of all will be accorded to London's own men when they are once more home.

Yesterday the 1st Battalion of the London Scottish, or rather the few that are left of that famous corps which fought so gallantly in France, notably in the first battle of Messines, reached home. At 3.30 in the afternoon the cadre of the regiment, which includes three officers and two men of other ranks who went with it to France in 1914, arrived at Charing-cross. Headed by the pipe band of the regiment, the men marched via Trafalgar-square, Waterloo-place, Piccadilly, Hyde Park-corner, and Grosvenor-place to the headquarters in Buckingham-gate, where a civic reception by the Mayor and Council of Westminster awaited them.

In the course of a telegram from Dublin, Field Marshal French said "I shall never forget the splendid service they rendered at the first battle of Ypres."

Over ten thousand men served with the London Scottish during the war. The casualties of the regiment totalled 4,800 of which 1380 were killed and only 115 taken prisoner.

MURDER OF A W.A.A.C.

COY. SGT.-MAJOR CHARGED.

Company Sergeant-Major Montague Cecil Hepburn, aged 30, who was arrested at Haynes Park Camp, was brought before Mr Creasy, at the Bedford County Police station, yesterday, and charged with the murder of Ellen Roult on May 9.

Asked whether he had any objection to a remand, accused said: "I can say, sir, that I am innocent—quite innocent, sir. A mistake has been made. I would like to ask questions."

The Clerk (Mr Williams) told Hepburn that he could not ask questions at that stage.

Accused: I should like to have an officer here.

Mr Williams replied that every facility would be given to the accused for legal assistance.

Hepburn was then remanded for a week. He is a well-built young man, and was wearing the Mons ribbon and three chevrons. He belonged to the Royal Engineers' camp at Haynes Park.

The funeral of Miss Roult took place yesterday afternoon at Haynes Churchyard, which adjoins the camp grounds. All the officers and men now serving in the camp attended. The body was conveyed on a gun carriage and military honours were accorded.

SUCCESSFUL BLIND FARMERS.

Remarkable results are being obtained at the training farm at King's Langley belonging to the St Dunstan's Home for blind soldiers, where instruction is given by blind tutors. So wonderful is the training and development of the other senses that the pupils rear not only fowls but pigs and other small stock. They learn to recognise at once the strain of any fowl they catch and can distinguish between brown and white Leghorns. More than one hundred and thirty men have passed through the theoretical and practical courses at home and on the farm. Their wives also receive simultaneous training on a Kentish farm.

HOPE FOR GASSED MEN.

The British Medical Journal says that there is increased reason for thinking that only a very small percentage of surviving gas casualties will suffer permanently. There is no accumulation of evidence to indicate that gassing set up predisposition of disease other than tuberculous and in such cases the disease is probably rekindled rather than caused by gas.

LAND FOR CANADIAN SOLDIERS.

Ottawa. 12th May. In the Dominion House of Commons yesterday Mr. Meighan, Minister of the Interior, presented a comprehensive Bill dealing with land settlement for soldiers. This Bill empowers the creation of a Soldiers Settlement Board to acquire privately owned lands, by expropriation where necessary. The Board is empowered to issue soldiers free grants of over one hundred and sixty acres and to make advances not exceeding 7,500 dollars, repayable in annual instalments, with five per cent interest.—Reuter.

IRISHMAN REFUSES TO SING WAGNER.

Thomas Burke, a young Lancashire Irishman, leapt into fame when he made his debut as a tenor at Covent Garden on Monday night. The re-opening of the opera season proved one of the most brilliant society functions since the war.

Burke appeared with Melba in La Boneme. Interviewed yesterday he said he preferred Italian opera and would never sing Wagner.

FLYING THE ATLANTIC OCEAN.

AMERICANS START.

Trepassy, Newfoundland. 15th May. The American seaplanes N.C.1 and N.C.3 started between five and six this evening ostensibly to the trans-Atlantic flight but returned an hour later and after cruising off the harbour began discharging excess fuel. It was believed that they intended starting later in the evening but it was eventually announced that the flight was abandoned for that night.

The American dirigible C.5 arrived at St. Johns after a twenty-six hours non-stop flight from Long Island. It subsequently broke its moorings and drifted seawards with nobody aboard. An American destroyer started with orders to bring it down by gun fire if it could be located.

St. Johns. 16th May. The destroyer Edwards secured the airship C.5 at midnight and is now on the way back with the machine, which is only slightly damaged, in tow.—Reuter.

Trepassy 16th May. Three American seaplanes have successfully started for the Azores.—Reuter.

St. John's. The American seaplanes, after a four hours test, rose in triangular formation, N.C. 3 leading, and headed Eastwards at 6 miles an hours. They passed Cape Race at 8 o'clock, this being the last landfall until the Azores.— Reuter.

Washington. The official times of the start from Trepassy were:—N.C. 3, 6. 6 p.m.; N.C. 4, 6.7 p.m.; N.C. 1, 6 9 p.m. (American time). The Navy Department announced that N.C. 4 returned to Trepassy after flying seventy-seven minutes but the officials are of opinion that the despatch reporting the return of N.C.4 has been garbled in transmission. The weather report of the British Air Ministry indicates that conditions on the Azores route are favourable but that flying is impossible on the British route to Ireland.—Reuter.

NO CANADIAN TOUR.

Reuter learns that owing to the unexpected speeding-up of the transport arrangements for returning Canadian troops, the proposed tour of Leeds, Newcastle, Edinburgh, Glasgow and Manchester has had to be cancelled.

An extraordinary accident happened at Merheim recently whereby two horses were killed by an electric current conveyed by a live wire which by some mischance had become detached from its proper position.

Lieut. F. A. Giles, R.A.F., officer in charge of 11th Wing Horse Stables was proceeding with an orderly, named Sidders, from Merheim to Bickendorf. Passing behind a hangar the leading horse trod on the wire, gave a convulsive leap and fell dead, Lieut. Giles being heavily thrown.

The second horse as soon as it reached the same spot did the same thing but fell unconscious on the wire and received a second and fatal shock.

WELSH DOCK STRIKE ENDED.

At a late hour on Friday night a young woman about eighten years of age named Gladys May Lupton, was murdered in the street at Yarmouth. An ex-soldier said to belong to Liverpool but who has been working at Yarmouth has been detained by the police.

It is alleged that some remarks passed between the girl and the man near the South station of the Town and the man is alleged to have cut the young woman's throat. She died a few minutes later in the arms of a policeman.

TCHECHO-SLOVAKIA.

The new map of eastern Europe will be extraordinarily interesting. We await with expectancy the territorial alterations which the Allies will make in the countries of Austria, Bulgaria, and Turkey. Already we know that four new nations will come into being — Jugo-Slavia, Tchecho-Slovakia, and Poland. The past fortunes of the last-named power have been discussed, but it is unwise to venture into the realm of prophecy regarding the fate of the others, a fate which at this moment is being determined by the Peace Conference. We do not care to step into a domain where even plenipotentiaries should fear to tread. But it is possible and perhaps useful to speak of by-gone days in Bohemia which is to be the centre of the Tchecho-Slovak kingdom. One can do so with some circumspect heed to the difficulties which surround a country hoary of tradition and pregnant with romance.

As far back as the tenth century Bohemia was a country which loomed largely in Europe, and for many years its history was a record of insistent struggle between Bohemian and Pole. The year 1347 was notable, for not only was the University of Prague then founded but a Bohemian king, Charles IV of Luxemburg, gained the crown of the Holy Roman Empire and began a dynasty which lasted for almost a century. It was his son, the Emperor Sigismund, who strutted about with his scarlet cloak and vainglorious gestures at the Council of Constance. Carlyle immortalized the Luxemburg emperor, for he had a ready eye for picturesque history. England had its link with Bohemia in the fourteenth century, for the wife of Richard II was Anne of Bohemia, the friend of the Lollards, those followers of Wyclif who were soon to grieve over the untoward fate of John Huss. The Emperor Charles IV was the author of the Golden-Bull which settled for centuries the mode of election to the imperial crown, and his statecraft aimed at a union of Germany under the aegis of his dynasty. But that task was accomplished by the Habsburgs in after years. In the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries there were two parties in Bohemia, a Tcheck and a German party. The latter gained the upper hand in 1526 when the Archduke Ferdinand of Austria was elected king of Hungary and in the following year—the year of the sack of Rome—was chosen as king of Bohemia. In this way Bohemia became part of the Habsburg dominions, and the opposition of Zapolya merely incited the growth of a national sentiment in Germany.

In the beginning of the seventeenth century there was an ill-starred revolt in Bohemia against the Habsburg yoke, and this was the direct cause of the Thirty Years' war. King James I of England could not avert by his tortuous foreign policy the fate which overtook his daughter, Elizabeth, and her unfortunate husband, Frederick the Elector Palatine of the Rhine, who had a brief moment of power on the troubled throne of Bohemia. The Peace of Westphalia which ended the war, left the national party of Tchechs more than ever in thraldom. Yet they never left their consciousness of separate nationality. In the adverse times of the eighteenth century and until the middle of the nineteenth century they lived in undying hope. The revolutionary days of 1848 prompted them to demand from Vienna the restoration of the ancient Bohemian kingdom, including Austrian Silesia, but the demand was made in vain. A like fate was meted to the claims of Bohemia in 1868—69.

Austrian rule in Bohemia has been more severe than that in Galicia, but its severity has strengthened the Tchech aspirations. Now the time is ripe for a generous treatment of a long-persecuted people. No one desires that Bohemia shall have the wide boundaries that she held in ancient days, for these would seriously restrict the territories of other peoples who look to the Allies for emancipation, but all desire that she shall be so restored that an era of prosperity will be assured. Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, who was last week installed as Lord Rector of St. Andrews University, has opportunely reminded us in his speech that the great mission of our Empire is to inspire "in all races, however insignificent, what we proudly regarded as British freedom and justice."

Eastern Europe awaits the fulfilment of that mission.

Slavery is not a political institution at all, but an inherent, natural, and eternal inheritance of a large portion of the human race—to whom the more you give of their own free will, the more slaves they will make themselves.—Ruskin, Munera Pulveris.

MODERN SOCIAL LIFE.

FAITH'S DELEMMA AND AFFIRMATION.

"Britain must be made a place fit for heroes to live in" has become the popular catch-phrase of preachers and politicians, but it does express the intense dissatisfaction felt with the condition of social life as realized at present. Those who profess the Christian faith, with its glowing promises of widespread good for the world, have reason to be profoundly distressed. The pain and discord of society may well disturb their happiness, and break up the private enjoyment of their religious peace. They cannot understand the necessity for so much of the misery they see, nor escape the sense of responsibility for its continuance. The fact that the responsibility is not one which can be laid directly at the door of individual evil-doers, but one which seems to adhere in some subtle way to our society as an organism is no relief, but rather an addition to a Christian's perplexity. It seems to throw the responsibility for a crushing trouble either upon God for having made society so that it cannot work out justly or mercifully for its members, or else upon a great body of capable and self-respecting people calling themselves Christians who have so much to do in one way and another with the adjustments which make it what it is. In either case men suffer in ways which seem to contradict the promise of life which Christianity holds out. Such is faiths' dilemma, as some one has expressed it.

To some, Christianity has failed to fulfil its glowing promises and for that reason many have fallen into unbelief. The ghastly upheaval caused by a world-wide war has focussed attention and thought upon life's contradictions. After nearly two thousand years of applied Christianity, the sceptic and the cynic seem still to have fair ground for challenging the claims put forward by Christians. What then is the faith which Christians can still set over against these expressions of wrong and failure? What is faiths' answering affirmations? Have we a better hope for the future and if so, how is it supported and assured? Has it any firmer foundation than our own desire for better things, our own shame in failure, passion against wrong, goodwill in endeavour, resolution or amendment?

If it depends upon these things we confess that we are still without hope. There is too much against us. Unless God has a better purpose we have no hope in our own. We believe that He has, and that we read it in the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. We believe that Jesus has brought the life of God into our life so surely that whatever belongs to it can be redeemed. Our sense of His Lordship over life admits of no limit of sphere or operation. Anything human, can be purified redeemed, glorified. Conduct in any department of life may be truly Christian. Whatever the evil which possesses our civilisation at present, its reign is not final. We have this audacity because we have an amazed sense of His power and of His love. We believe that our economic relations are destined, along with all others, to be transformed. We look for some recognizable expression of His presence in this as in every other sphere of life. Otherwise the Christian character would seem to have grown to a certain development and then failed, finding spheres in which humility meekness and disinterested love are found impracticable.

And thus the reign of God is arbitrarily circumscribed or interdicted. We believe that the great doctrines of our Faith — the doctrine of God the Father Almighty, the doctrine of the Incarnation and Atonement of our Lord Jesus Christ, the doctrine of the gift of the Holy Spirit to guide — have their meaning for the life of cities and nations, and business corporations; and that in these great collective expressions of human personality there are untold possibilities of deep religious experience, and of joyful human friendship. We hope that they give us the possibility of a social order which, on the whole, and apart from its perversion by men of distinctly evil purpose, reflects the goodness of God.

To surrender that hope would seem to us to be to surrender the gate of our city of belief. If our religion may not be relied upon to bear the strain of real life in its social activities it is half discredited at the very outset Our mental pre-occupation to-day is mainly social, and we test everything at the outset by the canon of its social effectiveness. By a law of our mental make-up we measure by that standard. What is true of individuals is true also of classes and of nations. Take Europe as a whole, and labour is found in aloofness from the Christian Church on this very score. Multitudes who are engaged in commerce are growing sceptical for the same cause. And it is on this showing that the awakening nations of the East will pass their first broad judgment upon the meaning of Christianity. What does it mean for a nation? they ask. And though the whole of the meaning of Christianity cannot be displayed on that canvass, the test is not to be declined. "By their fruits ye shall know them," said Jesus.

Mr. Chesterton was inspired when he wrote "Christianity has not been tried and found wanting, it has been found difficult and not tried."

WRITTEN BESIDE A FRIEND'S GRAVE IN FRANCE, 1918.

Think not that here ye have some common clay;
He whose frail body in this earth doth lie
Has died for England when his life's young day
Basked in the sunshine of an azure sky.

He was of noble mien and simple grace;
His voice like silver music charmed the ear;
Now he rests silent in this foreign place,
With no one nigh to shed a loving tear.

Yes, his body lies — and sleeps one more son of England 'neath the kindly soil of France,
One more shrine in the heart of some Briton,
Growing more hallowed as the years advance.

But he and they who share his lowly lot —
On Flanders' marshes or on Eastern shore —
For us a golden heritage have bought,
And live in spirit now and evermore.

A REPLY TO "AN OPEN LETTER TO THE CHAPLAIN."

As you have been good enough to print in two separate editions "An Open Letter to the Chaplain", I feel I should like to ask for a brief space in your paper to thank you for having done this, and to make one or two observations on the excellent suggestions and criticisms which the letter contains.

In the first place it is delightful to hear a layman's candid opinions, especially when they are not just mere "crabbing," but an attempt at making sound suggestions. The more of this the better both for the Church and the Padre. The latter likes it, even to the downright, straightforward, blunt criticism of a messmate: "Well Padre, you preached a damned bad sermon this morning."

The subjects mentioned in the letter are all sound ones, such as men are thinking about, the kind of subjects laymen and clergy should talk over together, viz:

I. Do the clergy understand the ordinary man? If not, why not?

II. The beauty of Nature speaks of God. Why are the clergy not better interpreters of it, after the manner of the Greatest Teacher?

III. The truth of the Universe.

IV. The religion of the "Man who went about doing good," for men want a practical living faith.

V. Why is there so much narrow-mindedness in the Churches? Is not this spirit the negation of Christianity?

VI. True religion hasn't failed. Many of its professors have.

VII. The life beyond.

VIII. The Padre's present opportunity.

We Padres will do well to think over the above questions and suggestions, and learn from them where and how we can most help our brother men when speaking to them "from the pulpit."

Now I would like to ask everyone to help us. Just because we are Padres we do not necessarily care to "talk religion," or "carry it on our sleeve," any more than the ordinary Britisher. It wouldn't help matters if we did. Many of us believe that trying to live out Christianity is better than talking too much about it. We have to talk "from the pulpit," and I agree with all my heart we ought then to give our very best from our own experience of a practical living faith which will help men to be better men, and above all avoid mere abstractions and mere "theological talk."

Everyone, however, should remember that the sermon is only a small part of the Service. It helps the Padre immensely to see his friends and pals in the pews, who have come to church not to hear him but for the great purpose of worshipping God together. This main purpose of a Service is too often in these days forgotten. We want to get back to it, for the remembrance of this ordinary day on a Sunday will, I think, more than anything else bring home to us the value of a living practical faith, and will encourage the Padre to take infinite pains to learn it himself and help others to understand it.

SWIMMING.

A PLEA FOR ITS VALUE.

This branch of sport has received little attention in this paper and not the amount it deserves. In fact the army itself does little to encourage it, although the lack of accomodation for this sport is a good excuse. Through this, many pre-war swimming champions have gone stale, but now that more peaceable conditions have arrived there is no reason why this subject should not be brought to the fore. As a sport and pastime it beats the remainder. It is the cleanest, and, exercising every muscle of the body, the healthiest sport.

The Rhine has too strong a current to make it suitable for swimming, especially learners. As to the baths at Cologne, I have read about them, but they are only useful to the troops in the immediate vicinity. However, I have noticed many suitable places, for example, just west of Liblar, where there is a stream running alongside a short cut to the railway station. This runs through about three settling ponds thus clearing the water of mud. To make a swimming pond by excavating the earth and lining the sides and bottom with concrete is not a difficult matter. A channel connecting it with the stream water after coming through the settling ponds and one at the other end of the bath allowing the overflow to go back into the stream, would provide clean water. I am not stationed about Liblar so hold no brief for that vicinity. This just gives an example of what may be done by the regiments stationed in a district through which a stream runs. In flat country where suitable streams are not numerous, a concrete lined pool could be filled with the aid of an hosepipe connected with the water at the nearest farm or house.

Perhaps these ideas may seem fantastic and a little far fetched to some readers but they are such as to provide an incentive to persons interested in this art. The above suggestions, however, have been put into practice extensively, not much I am sorry to say, in England, but in North America. You may find numerous cases of young boys making their own swimming pool on the spare land in the rear of their homes.

For a little outlay of money and the same amount of trouble, a battalion could procure the means of recreation, which in the original programme of the daily work of the Rhine was to from the greater part, and a valuable method of Physical Training.

OR UNCLE ARTHUR'S LETTER BOX.

PART VII.

All questions by correspondents answered with promptitude, special attention being paid to those concerning demobilization.

COOK.—Q. What is the best way to serve up ration cheese?

A. Take a headcollar and neckchain in the right hand and a piece of toast in the left. Place the toast in the centre of the ration dump and hide. When the cheese approaches the toast to rest, step quickly up behind and fasten on the headcollar. After summoning assistance lead it to the cookhouse and slaughter it in the usual way.

LOVER.—Q. Is it right for a girl to sit on a man's knee?

A. Your girl and your knee, yes. Some one else's girl and your knee, yes. Your girl and some one else's knee, certainly not.

BATMAN.—Q. How does one keep the moth from a hairbrush?

A. Organize a drive and beat them all into the open where they can be shot down at leisure by means of carefully camouflaged machine guns. To destroy the eggs, subject them to a temperature of 100 deg. Centigrade; or 120 deg. if required hard boiled.

CURIOUS.—Q. What is a 'flapper'?

A. A kind of human spanner — turns the heads of all the nuts!

"THE ODDITIES."

PITHY SONG ON "THE COLOGNE POST."

"The Oddities," the concert party of the 15th West Yorkshires are up-to-date if only on account of their inclusion of a concerted item, "The Cologne Post" in the programme submitted on Friday, at Bickendorf. The song, rendered by Lieut. W.P. Robinson, tells in pithy verse, of the trials and difficulties of producing this journal. As a whole, the entertainment provided by "The Oddities" is enjoyable and full of fun, and on Friday the artistes succeeded in keeping the large audience very well amused.

The programme opened with a selection by the Battalion band, which was thoroughly enjoyed and the opening chorus, which followed, was a tuneful introduction of the troupe. In "The Company Sergeant Major" Pte. J. Binns gave evidence of the possession of a well modulated baritone voice of excellence but in a later number, "Warrior Bold" his breathing was somewhat faulty. Nobody minded this, however, in view of the power and quality of his voice. Pte E.M. Barker infused plenty of spirit and brightness into the "rags" he submitted, while "Piccaninnies Paradise" an agreeable little song was well rendered by Corpl. J. Whitely and party.

"Priceless Percy" is one of the weakest songs of its class that the writer has heard, and it is surprising that such a number should have been included in an otherwise well selected programme. Pte. J.E. Fieldhouse did his best to make the thing go, but his lively treatment might have been better bestowed upon a song that had some merit of its own. Sergt. Francis, the heavy comedian of the party, was full of wit and humour and he was particularly successful in a crosstalk show with C.Q.M.S. Wellington. These two did the rather threadbare act, the dude and the dustman, in a manner much above the average.

A burlesque rehearsal of an amateur choral society was distinctly funny. Lieut. W. E. Robinson, conducting the performance, displayed a distinct sense of the ludicrous, although the item is capable of a good deal of development. "Fifi," the "Girl" of the show submitted a couple of pretty numbers with due shyness and an agreeable voice. "Her" frock and general stage presence were charming, and in every way captivating, but surely the possession of ruby red lips are the thing for a pretty girl, instead of what appeared from the audience to be those of dark brown. At all events, the poets tell us that this is so. The concerted items, were all excellently worked and in the success of these particularly, as well as in the accompaniments, the pianist, Pte. Dowson, assisted by Pte. Ingham and Sergt. Dellow (violinist) assisted to no small degree.

The whole entertainment suffered rather from an excess of military allusion and purely local humour, the humour of which was lost frequently on a large percentage of the audience. Otherwise the efforts of "The Oddities" are much above the ordinary average.

MILITARY BAND CONCERT AT WAHN.

The military Band of the 1st Eastern Infantry Brigade gave another excellent concert last Thursday evening at Wahn. This band, which consists of 60 expert instrumentalists will surely make its name famous in the British Rhine Army, judging by the performance on Thursday. Each item was perfect, and Lieut. H. B. Lewis, the conductor, is to be complimented for having trained the band to such a high degree of excellence in a very short time.

The overture to "Faust" was, perhaps, the finest item of the concert. It was a real lesson in tone quality and interpretation and one could not have wished for a better rendering of the euphonium solos than of that by Sgt. Snepperd, whose playing is really masterful. Sgt. Barnam was responsible for the solo-clarinet work, and for brilliant technique, it would, indeed, be difficult to surpass his playing. Another first class soloist is Pte Tysoe, whose cornet-solos brought forth prolonged applause from the large audience. A popular selection from musical comedy finished a brilliant and most successful performance.

The band is to make its first appearance in Cologne on the 8th of June, when a record attendance should be the result.

INTERESTING GOLF "TOURNEY".

The first important golfing event of a professional nature since the start of the war was the Southern professional Victory Tournament at Walton Heath this week. Curiosity was manifested as to whether the old and practised hands who had braved many a critical "gallery" or younger and less celebrated players would come out of the ordeal better. The latter, as a whole, did not show to advantage.

Appended are a few of the leading scores: J. Braid (Walton Heath) 79+76=155. A. G. Kirby (Ashford Manor), 80+76=156. J. White (Sunningdale), 85+78=163. H. Vardon (South Herts), 83+81=164. E. Ray (Oxhey), 83+81=164. G. Duncan (Hanger Hill), 8 +82=165.

INTERNATIONAL FOURSOME SUGGESTED.

Mr. George Duncan is anxious to arrange an international foursome competition between England and Scotland. He suggests that Duncan and Herd should oppose Vardon and Taylor.

The suggestion is evoking much interest in view of Taylor's recent statement that "Scottish golf is no good."

Final Inter-Company Football Match.

The great event of the day was the football final between the 5th Labour Coy and the 180th Labour Coy., which took place after the conclusion of the races. The 5th Coy. kicked off, and for some time pressed hard. The defence of their opponents being very unsteady, their goal had some narrow escapes from a succession of corner kicks.

The 180th Coy. forward line, however, showed excellent form, their combination being remarkable.

At half time neither team had registered a score, and the result was still very much in doubt, as the sides were so well balanced.

In the second half play continued very fast and the ball travelled rapidly from one goal to the other.

For the 5th Coy. Lieut. Wilkinson defended in his usual cool manner. His clean saves and strong kicking were of immense service to his side. The 180th goalkeeper was also in great form and distinguished himself particularly when a penalty was awarded against his side. Three shots in rapid succession he repulsed.

The result still hung in the balance until 10 minutes from time, when Stevenson, the centre, dribbled the ball through for the 180th Coy, following some excellent forward play. This was the only score.

The teams were as follows:

5th Labour Coy:— Lieut. Wilkinson; Ptes. Donochie and Cooney: Ewen, Leonard, and Foster; Sergt, Grant, Pte. Clark, Cpl. Swan, Pte. Charless and Brady.

180th Labour Coy.:— Harries; Gatti and Botto; Hyde, Crabtree and Petterson; Mc Gill, Turner, Stevenson, Walker and Slater.

A most enjoyable afternoon was concluded by the distribution of prizes by the 31st Labour Group Commander (Lieut.-Col. Davenport D.S.O.).

The band of the 5th Labour Coy. enlivened the proceedings most successfully with their pipes and drums.

CAVALRY TOO STRONG FOR ARTILLERY.

LIEUT. DART'S PERFECT DAY.

The Cavalry Division Headquarters paid a visit yesterday to Poll where they met the 190th Brigade R.F.A., "D" Battery, and the game was a most pleasant one. The Headquarters batted first and compiled the useful score of just a century. Spr. Dearnley was top scorer making 21 by sound batting. Going in eighth Lieut. Dart hit out merrily, carrying out his bat for 20, only five of these being singles.

On going in to tackle this score the R.F.A. found the bowling of Lieut. Dart and Spr. Bennett too hot for their liking. Sergt. Everett however was just about getting used to it, when he was bowled by a yorker. After his dismissal, a procession started, six wickets falling while the score was at 20. Only three more were added, so the total score was 23, the Cavalry Headquaters running out winners by 77 runs Lieut. Dart took 6 wickets for 8 runs, so with making 20 runs not out as well, he did a good day's work. Bennett's three wickets only cost him 11 runs. The scores were as follow:— Headquarters:

The Panther (Marsh) 13—8.

WILDE'S LATEST VICTIM.

MANSFIELD FIGHTS PLUCKILY BUT IS KNOCKED OUT.

At the Holborn Stadium on Friday, Jimmy Wilde knocked out Alf Mansfield in the thirteenth round.

Mansfield fought pluckily and showed clever headwork but there was never any doubt as to the ultimate winner. Wilde had the better of matters throughout, notwithstanding Mansfield's fourteen pounds advantage.

In the second round Wilde got home a straight right, flooring his opponent who remained down for a count of nine. In the third round Mansfield made a huge effort from the outset but Wilde kept free from trouble and scored steadily.

Mansfield was practically finished in the eighth round from the continuous volley of lefts and rights about the head and body. In the ninth, he made another great effort and in the tenth, putting forth all the strength and skill of which he was capable, he kept Wilde busy defending himself.

Mansfield, who, by this time, wore a very battered appearance was floored several times and in the thirteenth round, his seconds wisely refused to allow him to rise.

The fight was a great one from an endurance point of view even if the skill was all on one side.

RHINE ARMY 10 St. 7 Lbs WRESTLING CHAMPION MATCH AT UNTERBURG.

In the presence of Lieut.-Col. H. T. Dobbin, D.S.O. and officers of the 51st. Devon Regt. and a large assemblage of spectators, a wrestling match match of 3 bouts of 15 minutes duration each took place in the Cinema Hall, Unterburg on Wednesday between Lieut. Hayes, 51st. Devon Regt., runner up for the English Championship in 1911, winner of the 10st. 7 lbs. open Amateur Competition 1912, and representative of Gt. Britain in the Olympic games at Stockholm in 1912, and Staff Sergt.-Major Thorpe, R.A.M.C., a well known wrestler of Birmingham, wrestling partner with Eucatini; and 10st. 7 lbs. champion of the Rhine Army.

Both contestants appeared very fit and punctually at 5.30 p.m. took the mat. Lieut. Hayes in 40 seconds obtained the first fall, which came as a surprise to the supporters of the Champion of the Rhine Army, and in the second bout Lieut. Hayes secured the second fall in 2 minutes 25 sec, and was adjudged the winner. He thus becomes the holder of the title to 10st. 7 lbs. champion of the Army of the Rhine, and is open to defend his title. The winner was presented with a silver cup.

Pte. Startin R.A.M.C. officiated as Referee, Lieuts. Langley and Spencer were Judges, while R.S.M. Chadwick was timekeeper. Capt. and Q. M. Clarke acted as M.C.

The band of the Regt. was in attendance and played selections during the evening.

LAWN TENNIS.

Oxford beat Surrey County at Oxford on Friday by 5 matches to 3.

52nd DEVONS v. 2nd BRIGADE H.Q.

The above match took place on the Devons ground in weather scarcely adapted for football. The Brigade were the first to score, their outside left ending a good run by placing an accurate centre which the inside right put to account. The Devons with one goal down made an effort to equalise and were rewarded by Buckingham scoring from a few yards out.

The second half was a struggle for the deciding goal, which came a few minutes from the end. The Brigade's right back handled the ball inside the penalty area and Shanley was entrusted with the kick. He placed the ball high in the net, thus giving the Devons the lead which was maintained until the final blow of the whistle.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

What Will Win the Derby?

Those well informed people who, in various newspapers, foretell what horse will win a particular race long before the event has been decided, are already busy forecasting the result of the Derby. If by some lucky chance, the prediction of one of these individuals at any time proves to be correct, "I told you so" is repeated in subsequent issues with a frequency that becomes boring. And, mind you, should none of the many alternative horses, usually given, be in the running, not the slightest dismay is shown, but the most wonderful explanations for the animals' failure is extended. Not to be behindhand in any matter of sporting interest I have decided to indicate the probable winner of the Derby after the manner that seems to be the most popular. The Panther is strongly fancied and should win provided he can concede his heavy penalty to Grand Parade. Paper Money may be the danger to these two and it would not be surprising to find Lord Basil carrying Taylor's colours first past the post. Buchan must come into the picture, but if the race is to go to an outsider, Mc Kinley and Roker might get there. As an each way investment, I would recommend He.

So now you know what is going to pull off the Derby, go in and win!.

OPTIMISTS I HAVE MET.

"Six Tickets for to-night's Opera please."

The Spice of Life.

When are we going to have a change from the pierrot style of intertainment? Throughout the whole war we had nothing but this class of show, and now, in more peaceful times, we are being issued with larger chunks of it than never. The other evening, I dropped in to see "The Oddities" — one of the latest recruits in the army of concert parties — give a performance at Bickendorf. I hoped, in my heart, that there would be a little novelty in the fare provided, but my hopes dropped to zero with a sickenning thud, when there appeared on the platform a troup of men garbed in the same old white suits decorated with the familiar black pom — poms, accompanied, at a later stage, by the same female impersonator. Never let it be said that "The Oddities" do not provide a thoroughly enjoyable entertainment. They do; but what I would like to know is, why some enterprising little band of entertainers does not try the unbeaten track. Fresh troupes spring up with mushroom-like rapidity, but I have yet to find one among them that does not place before us the same old popular, so called "goey" songs, the old funny man who is only too frequently far from humorous) and the inevitable "girl" who sometimes is, and sometimes is not, adorably feminine.

THE RAMBLER.

"AUSSIES" DRAWN CRICKET MATCH.

Mr Lionel Robinson's team declared their innings closed on Friday night with their total standing at 332 for 8 wickets, leaving the Australians 283 to get to win in three and three-quarter hours.

The Australians ran up a total of 274 for 9 wickets, J. Taylor scoring 66.

The match ended in a draw.

In the first innings the Australians scored 227, Collins amassing a total of 87, and Lampard 35. In Mr Robinson's team's second innings Hardinge was run out for 72, and Haugh carried his bat for 87. The South African Pegler for Robinson's side took five wickets for 54.

GERMAN CYCLE RACES.

There should be some exciting on the Cologne track Riehlerstr. to day, when a number of cycle events will be decided. The chief event in a series of paced and unpaced races will be the Grand Prix of May, which will be competed in three phases. There is no doubt many English cycling enthusiasts will fine much in the proceedings to criticie.

Winchester having scored 269 for three wickets at Winchester on Friday declared their innings closed. Their opponents New College, Oxford ran up a total of 151.

HEALTHY RECREATION FOR SUNDAY.

RECREATION v. VICE.

"The worst features of the 'Continental Sunday' —gambling, drunkenness, and other vices—are here now." This statement is made by the Sunday Games Association, who believe that the best way to prevent the growth of these vices is to encourage healthy games on Sunday afternoons and evenings.

The association, who claim to have met with a very large amount of support, say that the opposition "is based on very narrow religious beliefs or mistaken views of the objects and aims of the association. It is certain that if ministers of religion and other church leaders hold aloof or oppose the movement they will make it very difficult to establish the desirable features of the 'Continental Sunday,' and will really be aiding in the spread of the evils they condemn."

The rules of the association provide that no games shall be played before 1 p.m. on Sundays, that no betting or gambling be permitted, that no payment be made for playing in any game, and that no charge be made for admission to any enclosure.

GEN. PLUMER ON DISCIPLINE.

On Wednesday, General Sir Herbert Plumer, late Commander of the 2nd Army in the Rhineland, received the freedom of York. It will be remembered that he was Commander-in-Chief of the Northern Command for the three years preceding war, and it was from York that he went out to France.

In thanking the citizens of York for the honour conferred on him, General Plumer spoke in high terms of Yorkshire soldiers, and said the county had contributed a magnificent quota to the British Army, which wore down the power of the Germans and placed us in a position to act as guardians of their beloved Rhine. When the history of the campaign came to be written and reviewed calmly, the one great factor outstanding above all others would be the development of the Army from what it was before the war to what it was when the war finished. That was achieved by the unity of purpose the whole nation manifested at the outset and maintained until the end. It was made possible by a spirit of discipline based on mutual confidence between leaders and men, confidence that the leaders would not call on the men to incur dangers which they would not incur themselves. We were opposed by another kind of discipline based not on mutual confidence between leaders and men, but discipline maintained and supported by force. He was confident that the United Kingdom would do everything possible to lighten the lot and ease the burdens of the men incapacitated from work. If we could ask those who had fallen how we could repay them for their great sacrifices, he felt sure their answer would be: "All we ask you to do is to carry on as citizens the principles we fought and died for." The thing that mattered was what service we could do to uphold the honour and integrity of the British Empire.

WOLFFE GOES INTO TRAINING.

ANOTHER ATTEMPT TO SWIM THE CHANNEL.

Another attempt is to be made to swim the Channel. Jabez Wolffe will try again for the twenty-first time in July next. On this occasion he proposes to make a start from a new spot.

"I consider the starting point should be from Dungeness," he told a representative of the Evening Standard.

"I am practising daily at Brighton," he continued. "During June I shall swim five miles, walk five miles, cycle five miles, and row five miles daily. This will be my training."

"JAZZ" INVENTOR DEAD.

New York's negro population turned out en masse on Wednesday to pay a last tribute to Lieutenant Jim Europe, the murdered band leader of the City's black regiment, known as the "Hell Fighters". Lieutenant Jim Europe is the man who made jazz music famous the world over.

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

THE QUESTION OF THE TYROL

Germany and Austria are at lagger-heads with regard to the Peace Terms. The former has given her plain, blunt denunciation of the Treaty and is now a little afraid lest the latter should accept the terms and nullify completely any possibility of a reconciliation or alteration in the terms.

Austria, as a nation, has suffered far more than Germany, and there is little doubt that she will sign the Treaty much more readily than will her greater ally. It behoves the Germans, therefore, to exert all possible pressure to keep Austria in the background, and if possible, to persuade her to refuse.

The question of the Tyrol provides a common grief for both countries.

"Austria and Tyrol," says the Frankfurter Zeitung, "has been German for long centuries, and is occupied by a population passionately German in sentiment. Not merely Austria, but the great heart of the German nation beats in unison with these Tirolese, and never, never must Austria consent to abandon them."

The Arbeiter Zeitung, an Austrian Socialist paper on the same subject states: "Unless the Peace is to be a mere mockery of the Fourteen Points, the Allies cannot contest our claim to German Bohemia and Moravia. If the right of the peoples to self-determination is not to be a lie and a sham, the German South Tyrol, that primeval and flourishing German land, must remain with Austria. And we must have complete freedom to join with Germany, to which we belong. We shall go to Paris, armed with justice. Our right cannot be disputed, but will it prevail against might? Justice is a feeble weapon with which to face the unbridled imperialism that dominates Paris."

Germany's decrease in population.

In a recent article in the Niedersächsische Wochenschrift, Dr. Fritz Burgdorfer, makes an interesting calculation on the estimated decrease in the population of Germany caused by the war. He bases his facts on those of Bavaria already to hand, and he assumes that had not the war intervened, 800,000 couples would have married, with the result of an addition of 400,000 more children for the Fatherland. In addition to this, he says, there are the deaths and the probable deficiency in births which one might expect as a result of the war, making a total of no less than 6,000,000.

29th DIVISION.

DIVISIONAL DINNER IN LONDON.

With reference to the decisions made by a General Meeting of the 29th Division held at Sand Berg, Gladbach, on the 12th March, 1919, the Piccadilly Hotel, London, has been selected as a meeting place for Officers of the 29th Division.

A special visitors book will be kept at the Bureau at the hotel, in which any officers staying in London may insert their names and address.

A register will also be kept of the permanent addresses of all officers of the 29th Division, and may be inspected at any time.

Subscriptions to join the 29th Division Officers Club as outlined above, is 5/- per Officer for life membership, and should be made to Messrs. Cox & Co., payable to 29th Division Officers Fund.

All correspondence should be addressed to Capt. S. Spero, Hon. Sec., 29th Division Officers Bureau, Piccadilly Hotel, London W.

A 29th Divisional Dinner will be held on the 16th June, 1919, at the above hotel. Price of tickets including wine, £2. 12. 6, to be paid at the door. Officers desirous of attending, should notify the Manager of the hotel if possible, not later than the 5th June, 1919, as accommodation is limited.

SUBSCRIBING UNITS PLEASE NOTE.

TEN PER CENT DISCOUNT — NO RETURNS.

Commencing with the issue of Tuesday May 27th the terms of subscription for units subscribing to The Cologne Post will be amended as follows:

Every account with a unit of the British Army of the Rhine will be subject to a discount of ten per cent which should be deducted when payments are forwarded.

"Returns" will no longer be accepted. A number of the parcels returned hitherto have been sent to this office with no identity mark at all. Consequently we know not from whence they came, nor to whom the credit should be given for them. In any case "Returns" mean many complications and much extra work on all concerned, the sender, the postal service and ourselves. With the small staff working on The Cologne Post we are unable to cope with the extra labour involved. A little care exercised in ordering the paper would soon obviate the necessity for "returns," and would leave the ten per cent as clear profit to the P.R.I. or similar fund.

Should the number previously ordered be too small, or too great, a ——— reaching this office before 14.00 hours any day will rectify the matter for the next day's edition.

In some cases returns have been necessary because, owing to faults on the part of the transporting agency, parcels have not arrived to time—sometimes even not to date. Such accidents, unfortunately, are bound to occur occasionally and in these cases the addressee should inform us immediately by D.R.L.S., telegram, or telephone of the delayed arrival, so that we may enquire into the matter and put it right for the next day. In these circumstances we will take the parcel back and credit the unit with the amount due for it. Such parcels should be returned intact with our original label not defaced unnecessarily and should be addressed to Editor, The Cologne Post A.P.O., S. 40.

There is another matter to which we would again draw attention, viz., that of legibility. Letters, etc., come to this office bearing signatures which are practically undecipherable. We do not ask for a change of ordinary signature but we would suggest that much time and trouble might be obviated if a key — printed in block letters — were invariably attached, no matter what the nature of the communication.

Nottingham Corporation decided yesterday to make arrangements in conjunction with the Chamber of Commerce for holding in the spring of next year an exhibition illustrative of the chief manufactures of the city. It is hoped to attract many visitors from home and foreign countries.

THE COLONEL CONSTABLE.

BRILLIANT ARMY RECORD.

Various explanations are given at Cardiff regarding the return of Lieut.-Col. Arthur Ritchings to his former duties as a police constable.

This six-times wounded hero, who rose from the ranks by sheer merit and gallantry, has been taken off the streets to the drill room, where he is now engaged in the responsible duties of training raw recruits in the correct step and proper bearing of policemen.

It is stated in an authoritative quarter that Lieut.-Col. Ritchings "recognised, as every right-thinking man would, that he had a moral obligation to return to the Cardiff police force for the reason that the ratepayers had been contributing during his absence to the support of his dependants at home."

The Lord Mayor (Mr. A. C. Kirk), asked whether it was not intended to appoint the officer to a higher position, said: "I think I may say that the whole of the members of the Watch Committee are quite sympathetic with this idea, and I have no doubt that when opportunity occurs he will be given a chance such as he deserves."

Lieut.-Col. Ritchings refuses to say anything on the matter, and he is equally reticent on his war services. Lieut.-Col. Ritchings gained all his promotion on the field. He has the Mons Star, the French War Cross, the M.C., is a Chevalier of the Legion of Honour, and was mentioned in despatches four times. In an engagement on March 21 last year, when he was commanding the 8th Gloucesters, his battalion won 1 V.C., 1 D.S.O., 4 M.C.s, 6 D.C.M.s and 19 M.M.s. The brilliance of the achievement is illustrated by the decorations won.

Lieut.-Col. Ritchings has a wife, 3 children, and a mother dependent on him.

TELEPHONY FROM AEROPLANES

Two Royal Air Force officers flying over Central London last evening spoke through wireless telephones to members of the Institution of Electrical Engineers assembled at a lecture given by Major Erskine-Murray, R.A.F., on "Wireless in the Royal Air Force."

The strident voice of one of the airmen was heard coming from a trumpet-shaped instrument on the bench before the lecturer. To the intense delight of the members, he described his flight at a height of nearly 3,000 feet. The conversation between the lecturer and aircraft ended only when the pilot, after humming a tune, announced that he was "getting fed up." He stayed in the air to listen to and acknowledge a round of applause from the members.

"OUR GREAT MORAL TASK."

LECTURE AT THE BRITISH EMPIRE LEAVE CLUB.

There was an encouraging attendance at the British Empire Leave Club, Cologne, on Friday evening to hear the lecture by Major Bles (Town Major of Cologne), entitled "The War and its Ending." It was appropriate that the lecture should have coincided with the visit to the city of Marshal Foch, as, repeatedly throughout his remarks, the lecturer referred to the great allied leader's strategy, which finally compelled the Germans to sue for the Armistice last November.

Aided by excellent maps, Major Bles sketched the course of the war from its opening right down to the suspension of hostilities, which found the French at Sedan a place ever memorable in their history, and the British at Mons, where Lord French's "contemptible little Army" first came to grips with the enemy. The conduct of a great campaign, the strategy of a great war was, said Major Bles, like some huge picture puzzle; and when he had dealt in his masterful manner with the various "shows" of 1915, 1916 and 1917, it was quite clear to every one that each had its proper place in Allied strategy and went to the making up of a complete and easily understood picture. "The whole war, "he said," was nothing but a great siege from the moment the gate to the sea was closed to the Germans in 1914."

At the close, Major Bles reminded his audience that the Army of Occupation had a great moral task to fulfil. They would be tempted to pity the women and children and old people who had now to suffer for the crimes of their country's leaders, but we must not forget the infinitely greater sufferings both physical and moral, undergone by the French, Belgian and Serbian women and children during four and a half years of worse than hell, through no fault of theirs and no fault of their country. We would ever fall to these temptations if the awful hand of war with its murder, misery cruelty, hunger, and destruction had fallen on our own England instead of on France and Belgium. For the sake of our Allies (stouter allies no nation ever had) he asked them to "play the game;" friendliness with the enemy was impossible until he had expiated his crimes and given proof of real repentance. We were the heirs (let us never forget it) of those hundreds of thousands of gallant British and French soldiers who had laid down their lives so that our mothers, sisters and wives might escape the fate of the poor women who remained in the invaded territories. When they felt tempted, let them read about the war, about the individual acts of courage and endurance, remembering that

"No scribe's wit no spirit's imagining
Can ever feel the things that we have felt,
Or deal the blows that stoutly we have dealt,
Or laugh with us, or weep our tears, or sing
Our battle songs, or kneel as we have knelt
With that high hope that makes each man a King."

(applause.)

A note of thanks to the lecturer was moved by Rev. Father Leach, C.F., who declared that those like himself who had from time to time criticised our strategy in the past, must be silent in the face of the very convincing arguments put forward by Major Bles. "I don't suppose you young men will have any fighting to do," said Father Leach, "but remember that you are here to-night in comfort because of the sacrifices of hundreds of thousands of your comrades who did what it was thought was not in the power of man to do. I have had nearly five years with our boys on the battlefield and those who were there like myself cannot forget." He did not wish them to be uncharitable, and he knew that no British soldier could be other than chivalrous, but when they were tempted to go beyond the bounds of ordinary courtesy let them "remember Belgium." We were the representatives of the British Empire on German soil today, and our general behaviour must be so regulated that no one could point his finger at us and say that we are otherwise than worthy of the very best traditions of our great Empire (loud applause).

A capital concert followed.

Sir Reginald Brade has greatly benefited by his rest and expects to resume his duties at the War Office in about a month.

DISCORD AMONG THE GERMAN DELEGATES.

ALLIES OCCUPY SMYRNA.

IN CASE GERMANY WILL NOT SIGN.

FINLAND PLOT AGAINST THE BRITISH.

DISCORD AMONG THE GERMAN DELEGATES.

"TWO TIGERS AGAINST US".

The state of affairs among the German delegates seems to be altered. The delegation seems to be divided into two parties: for and against signature of the Peace Treaty. Count Brockdorff-Rantzau would belong to the party advocating the signature of the Peace Conditions as they are. He takes his meals alone instead of with the others.

A councillor of Legation said to-day to more than one person:

"One is afraid that we will not sign the Peace, but there is nothing to fear."

"We shall sign in spite of all, because the German people is hungry for peace and we would be torn to pieces if we went back to Berlin without having signed. Unfortunately we have two tigers against us, Lloyd George and Clemenceau."

"The main question for us is that of commercial outlets without which we can neither live nor fulfil the conditions of the Treaty"—Havas

RANTZAU WILL SIGN.

According to Reuter's correspondent at Versailles, wiring yesterday, a secretary closely connected with Count Rantzau made the following statement to a prominent personage in reply to the question whether the Peace would be signed:

You have dug your knee into the pit of our stomach and your thumbs into our eyes; how can we help signing under those conditions; The mere fact that Count Rantzau has waited twenty-four hours for the translation of the peace terms, not wishing to go by the French text, and that he has examined all the details, shows that he has determined to sign.

RANTZAU GOES TO SPA.

Versailles. 17th May.—Count Brockdorff-Rantzau left Versailles on Saturday for Spa, where he met technical experts from Berlin. He returned to Versailles on Monday evening. — Wireless.

The conversation between Count Brockdorff-Rantzau and Minister of Finances Dernburg at Spa was arranged in order that Rantzau might keep in touch with the Berlin Government. A journey to Berlin would take too long in view of the nearness of the date for delivery of the German counter-proposals.

SCHEIDEMANN'S SINCERITY.

A leading English socialist weekly, the New Statesman, says "If anything could justify the terms of the Treaty it would doubtless be Scheidemann's comments on them, for he has no right to his protests. They ring false. More, probably, than any other man in Germany he was responsible, not indeed for the outbreak of war but for its continuance in its later stages. So far as political principles are concerned he has shown himself a tarceur. From 1916 on to 1918 he consistently trimmed his principles to the military situation in a manner which even in Germany was astonishing and in any other country would have been inconceivable. His lack of sincerity is a byword. He made no effective protest against the Peace of Bucharest. It is impossible on his record to doupt that if Germany had won the war and had sought to impose such terms or worse upon the Allies he would have been foremost in defence of them. His speech to the German National Assembly, with its elaborated eloquence, its melodramatic phrasing and its air of unctuous rectitude leaves Allied public opinion cold. Indeed it influences it, more perhaps than anything else could have done, in favour of the terms as they stand. Force, it has been shown, over and over again, is the only thing that a Scheidemann understands."

OCCUPATION OF SMYRNA.

Salonika. 16th May. Allied forces have landed at Smyrna. The forts have been occupied by French troops. Greek soldiers have established themselves in the principal parts of the town, while British and Italian contingents are in the suburbs.

The troops were enthusiastically received by the population.

Colonel Zafirion, chief of the landing troops, made the following proclamation:

"By order of my Government I bring to your knowledge that with the help of the Allies I proceed to the military occupation of Smyrna and its neighbourhood. This occupation has as its object the security of the population. It does not anticipate the decisions of the Peace Conference on the fate of a country united since a thousand years with Greece. The political and religious authorities may continue their work as in the past, under the protection of the Hellenic army, which will give them help and receive them well. I advise the inhabitants to continue their work quietly, without distinction of race or religion, waiting with confidence for the decision of the conference about the future of their beautiful country."—Havas.

IN CASE GERMANY WILL NOT SIGN.

TAKING PRECAUTIONS.

The Allies are taking precautionary measures to deal with the eventuality of refusal by Germany to sign the Peace Treaty. It is stated in Paris that the document must be signed by the end of the first week in June but no official intimation has been given of the exact period the Germans will be allowed in which to make up their minds. Meanwhile the fortnight which M. Clemenceau notified to the Germans for the production of their remarks on the Treaty expires tomorrow.

In addition to the necessary military measures decided upon by the Allies in the event of Germany not signing the Treaty, the economic steps have now been settled. These will have the effect of reimposing the blockade in its most complete form.

PETROGRAD BOLSHEVISTS NERVOUS.

Helsingfors. 17th May.—A report issued by the Petrograd Bolshevist organization at the beginning of May discloses great nervous fear of a possible attack. All workmen and peasants fit for military service are being called up and all property necessary for defence of the city has been requisitioned, counter-revolutionary elements being rendered harmless by the defence committee, appointed with unlimited powers for this purpose. Those evading military service will be punished by death. Everyone from eighteen to forty years of age who has gone through military training will be mobilized.

Reports regarding the operations around Olonetz are conflicting. On the one hand it is stated that the White Guards have withdrawn to Tulos, while on the other hand it is claimed that they have retaken Olonetz. Spanish influenza is reported to be raging increasingly at Petrograd and Moscow. Two hundred new cases occur daily.—Reuter.

FINNISH PLOT AGAINST BRITISH.

Stockholm. 17th May.—It is reported here that the plot against the British by Finnish Red Legions in Murmansk has been completely revealed. It has been proved that Karelians are involved in the plot, the object of which was to blow up bridges and murder officers. Some of the Finnish leaders have fled, while others have been arrested.—Reuter.

BRITISH AEROPLANE CRASHES IN ITALY.

TWO OFFICERS KILLED.

Rome. 17th May.—Two British Aeroplanes en route to Egypt landed at Centocelle Aerodrome, near Rome. One machine overturned on landing, killing one of the occupants and injuring four others.

Later particulars state that the two machines arrived at 6.30 in the evening from Marseilles, after a short halt at Pisa.

One alighted safely, but the second, after coming to earth, tried to rise again, apparently to avoid collision with the first machine but swerved into an adjacent gorge, where it struck a large tree. Two of the occupants threw themselves out. Italian officers immediately rushed to the spot to render assistance, where Colonel Edward Lawrence, although one of his arms was fractured, was actively assisting the work of relief.

Lieut. Prince was already dead, while Lieut. Spratt was promptly conveyed to hospital, where he subsequently died.—Reuter.

OFFICERS AND STAFF, COLLEGE.

In reply to a question by Major Waring, Captain Guest states in the Parliamentary papers: "The officers recently nominated to the Staff College were selected either because they had done brilliant service on the Staff or had distinguished themselves as commanders. The same principle of selection will be adhered to as regards future nominations. The regulations compelling Staff officers to perform periods of regimental duty between periods of Staff employment has been, and will be adhered to as far as circumstances permit."

TO BRING CAPTAIN FRYATT'S BODY HOME.

At a mass meeting of Barry seamen held yesterday a resolution was passed urging the King and the Government to take immediate steps to have the body of their late comrade, Captain Fryatt, removed from Belgium to this country for interment.

They ask for this to be done as a tribute to that hero and to the 17,000 British seamen at present resting in the deep whose glorious services in the mercantile marine deserve the highest honours the country can bestow.

PRIVATE AND COMMANDING OFFICER.

CIVILIAN RIGHTS.

Further argument took place on the legal points raised in the action brought by Mr. C.H. Heddon, solicitor, of Ripon and Harrogate, formerly a private in the Royal Army Service Corps, to recover damages from his former commanding officer, Major G.C. Evans, for alleged slander, malicious prosecution, and false imprisonment. Plaintiff's case was that because he complained of Second Lieutenant Haydon habitually using language unbecoming an officer and a gentleman and of systematically persecuting him, he was arrested and ordered fourteen days' confinement to barracks for making a frivolous complaint to his commanding officer and for conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline. In his cross-examination he admitted having taken "French leave" six times in order to see his wife.

Denying the allegations, defendant submitted through his counsel that the plaintiff, being subject to military law, could not come to the civil courts for redress. The arrest was ordered in the interests of military discipline, and was directed by the general officer commanding.

Mr. Tindal Atkinson, resuming his argument for the defendant, contended that fourteen days' "C.B." did not amount to false imprisonment.

His Lordship: False imprisonment is depriving a man of the liberty of movement which he is in law entitled to. If he is not entitled to liberty of movement, save by the express discretion of another person, and that other person omits to exercise a discretion, can it be said that a case of false imprisonment arises?

Mr. Atkinson answered affirmatively. The point illustrated the difference in the position of a man in the army and of a civilian.

His lordship said the case seemed to be raising every point that could be imagined both in military and civil law.

Mr. Atkinson said from the moment a man enlisted he was under the absolute orders of his superior officers both as to his liberty of action and his conduct generally. A commanding officer could, at his discretion, direct the confinement to barracks of a single man or of a whole battalion if he thought it was necessary.

His lordship: Do you concede that close arrest might amount to false imprisonment?

Mr. Atkinson said it might. A soldier's right of appeal to his general officer was only granted in 1873.

Mr. Coddington, junior counsel for the plaintiff, interposed that methods of redress in cases of alleged wrong were provided in the reign of Charles II., in 1672.

His lordship said according to that we found the true days of freedom in the days of Charles II. this method of redress for the private soldier was before the Bills of Rights was passed (1688).

Mr. Atkinson commented on the fact that the plaintiff had taken leave without permission at week-ends.

"FRENCH LEAVE."

His Lordship observed that Mr. Atkinson had not used the words "French leave" on this occasion. Since counsel referred to "French leave" at the previous hearing he had looked into the origin of the expression, and had found that it did not arise out of the former great wars at all consequent upon the escape of French prisoners. It arose in the early part of the eighteenth century in the salons of France. Certain guests, not aware of the higher acts of courtesy, were in the habit of leaving without saying "Good-bye" to the host or hostess, and it became a practice. Unfortunately that practice was adopted in certain English society about the same time, and therefore it was said that if a man left without saying "Good-bye" to his host the took "French leave."

Mr. Watson, for the plaintiff, said his client did not, by giving up his civil rights, contract to become a slave. If the loss of civil rights was to be said to be based on a contract, how did the contract affect the conscript—was he to retain all the rights of a civilian, whereas the man who voluntarily enlisted was to be at the mercy of his superior officers? Such a state of things was impossible. By enlisting, a man became subject to military law and regulations, but he retained his civil rights in respect of military illegalities and excesses, or obuses of military jurisdiction. The mere fact that an officer acted within his powers was no defence if what he did was done maliciously and in abuse of his authority. Any acts done outside the jurisdiction were actionable.

After hearing arguments of counsel on legal points, his Lordship reserved judgment, saying the case was of very considerable importance.

DEPTH CHARGE EXPLODES IN AN OFFICE.

THREE NAVAL OFFICERS KILLED.

As the result of an explosion at Vickers' naval construction works at Barrow, three naval officers were killed. These were Lieutenant T. Webley, of Portsmouth; Lieutenant S.J. Babbage, Devonport; and Engineer-Lieutenant J.D. Davidson, Barrow, engineer on the Lady Moyra. The explosion occurred in the Admiralty superintendent's office. The officers were at work in the office when suddenly there was an explosion and the building was wrecked. Lieutenant Webley and Lieutenant Babbage were killed instantly. Lieutenant Davidson's injuries were seen to be very serious. He was taken to the hospital, where he died. Others injured were Petty-Officer Mark Lemon and a Barrow boy named Alfred Heaton, who are now in hospital.

No official statement has been issued, but it is stated that the officers were examining the workings of a depth charge when it exploded.

At the inquest evidence of identification was given, and the coroner adjourned the inquiry for the presence of the inspector of explosives.

A brother of Lieutenant Davidson told the coroner he might be back in West Africa by then. He had a duty to perform to his brother, and he wanted to know why a live shell or depth charge had been in the office where his brother went to get his letters.

The coroner said that would be gone into at the adjourned inquest.

FIELD MARSHALL FRENCH AND "1914".

MORE QUESTIONS.

Captain Ormsby-Gore has given notice of further questions on the subject of Viscount French's book, which he proposes to address to the Secretary for War. He will ask whether, with a view to laying at rest doubts which have been expressed in the public Press as to the conduct of the late Field Marshal Lord Kitchener in France during the operations which preceded the victory of the Marne in 1914, the Secretary for War will arrange to lay upon the table of the House of Commons copies of the instructions given by the then Government to Lord Kitchener when they sent him to Paris to see Field Marshal Lord French, together with a copy of the letter written by Lord French after the meeting of the two Field-Marshals in Paris.

Whether, in the opinion of the legal advisers of the Army Council, the articles recently published in The Daily Telegraph dealing with military operations in 1914 contain information and statements the publication of which constitutes an offence against the Official Secrets Act or the Army Act, or both; and, if so, whether legal proceedings will be taken against the proprietors and publishers.

Whether the articles recently published in The Daily Telegraph on the conduct of the war in 1914 contain statements at variance with the official despatch of Lord French on those operations, more especially in regard to the conduct of General Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien; whether Lord French's official despatch was in any way altered by the War Office before publication; and whether the Army Council will now give permission to General Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien to publish a reply to such charges now made against him as were not made in the official despatch referred to above.

ONE THIN LINE.

In the latest instalment of his book Field Marshal French deals with the second phase of the first battle of Ypres, 27th to 31st October 1914, days which he describes as "more momentous and fateful than any others which I directed during my period of service as Commander-in-Chief in the field. October 31 and November 1 will remain for ever memorable in the history of our country, for, during those two days, no more than one thin and straggling line of tired-out British soldiers stood between the Empire and its practical ruin as an independent first-class Power. I still look back in wonder on that thin line of defence, stretched, out of sheer necessity, far beyond its natural and normal power for defence. Right, centre, and left our men were tried and pressed as troops were never tried and pressed before."

"For four or five days this line was being still further reduced in strength by the successful efforts of our troops to stem the tide of the enemy's advance, whilst on their side the Germans were being gradually reinforced to a strength which, by the 30th, reached about double our numbers."

There is, indeed, little distinction to be made between the troops who fought so bravely all along the line. All were doggedly tenacious; all were superhumanly brave. The fullest measure of mutual support was assured by the complete understanding and perfect loyalty which existed amongst leaders of all ranks, combined with the alertness shown by all commanders in filling up gaps in the line without delay, and in using the troops at their disposal with the utmost economy. All said and done, however, the main element of success was to be found in the devoted bravery and the stern, unyielding determination to do or die, displayed by the rank and file of the contemptible little army and its reinforcements.

CRUSHED TO DEATH BY TANKS.

Whilst on duty in the hospital grounds at Bovington Camp, Dorset, Pte. Horace Clulee, 19th Bn. Tank Corps, was crushed to death between two tanks.

Lieut. Gordon Chatthey, the officer moving one of the tanks, stated at the inquest that while it was at some distance he signalled to the driver to swing to the left in order to avoid a stationary tank. The moving tank failed to answer to the helm immediately and Clulee, who was standing in front of the stationary tank was pinned between the two. The formation of the ground was the only explanation of the mishap.

A verdict of accidental death was returned.

A LADY-LIKE RAG.

At the Tower Bridge Police Court on Saturday six probationary nurses of Bermondsey Infirmary were charged with assaulting another probationer. They offered a sincere apology in court but plaintiff refused to accept it.

She said that when she was in bed the defendants entered her room and carried her off to the bath-room, where they held her under tepid water by her head and feet, afterwards pouring a jugful of cold water over her head. When they left her she had to go to her room for a towel attired only in a vest. She denies that she talked to patients about other nurses.

A representative of the Guardians hoped complainant would accept the apology as defendants would be dismissed if convicted.

Plaintiff again refused.

One summons was dismissed and the others adjourned.

IRISH INFIRMARY RAID.

A raid was made at Cork Infirmary on Saturday and a prisoner patient named Hegarty taken away by his friends. The doctor objected to the visitors. He was shown a revolver and told that it was their "authority" to visit the infirmary.

Sir Beauvoir Delisle has been appointed to the Western Command.

Sentries at Dorchester Camp shot dead a German prisoner who was trying to escape on Friday night. Wirecutters were found in his possession.

FIRST OVER THE ATLANTIC OCEAN.

AMERICA DOES THE TRICK.

New York. Saturday.—The American seaplane N.C.4 arrived at Horta (Azores) at 1.25 this afternoon. (Greenwich time.) The flight from Trepassy occupied fifteen hours thirteen minutes.—Reuter.

Washington. 18th May. According to a telegram from Horta, Azores, Commander Read of N.C.4 says his machine flew at an average speed of ninety miles per hour, completing the journey in seven hundred and ninety-eight minutes. The American seaplanes flew close together for a considerable time after leaving Trepassy but eventually N.C.4 drew away. During the early part of the flight they were favoured by moonlight and the weather was good until within two hundred miles of Corvo Island, when the machines encountered fog. N.C.4 was in perfect condition and there was no mishap or untoward occurrence. Most of the flight was made at an altitude of two thousand feet until mist compelled the seaplane to descend.

Mr. Franklin Roosevelt, acting secretary of the American Navy, sent by wireless a message congratulating Commander Read on having successfully achieved the first non-stop flight from America to the Azores.

DETAILS OF THE CROSSING.

From numerous wireless messages picked up in mid-Atlantic it appears that Commander Read led almost throughout the flight. He was actually the first to leave Trepassy Bay but descended again in order to allow Commander Towers, in N.C.3, to have the honour of actually starting the flight. Just before sighting the Azores N.C.4 led by thirty minutes and in consequence of this narrow margin it is now believed that Commander Read just managed to slip through to his moorings at Horta Harbour before fog rolled down, barring the progress of his companions. As already reported the crew and commander of N.C.1 have been rescued but there is still no news regarding N.C.3.

A message just received from St. John's Newfoundland, dated 18th May says that the Sopwith and Martynside machines will both fly this afternoon but no further details are yet to hand.—Reuter.

Washington. The destroyer Harding reports that it established wireless communication with N.C.1 at 4.27 in the afternoon, (Washington time). The seaplane is fogbound to the South East of Flores Island in the Azores.

The Harding is speeding to the rescue.

Nothing has been heard from N.C.4.—Reuter.

FOG BOUND AT THE AZORES.

Washington. A despatch from Admiral Jackson at Pontadelgada reports unfavourable weather in the vicinity of the Azores. He says the flight of N.C. 4 will not be continued to-day. Ten destroyers are scouring the fog-covered seas for the missing N.C. 3. It is reported that N.C. 3 discarded the wireless apparatus before leaving Trepassy in order to lighten its load. Lloyd's station at Horta reports that the steamer Ionia has brought in the crew of N.C. 1 which sank twenty miles off Flores Island in the Azores.—Reuter.

HAWKER JUMPS OFF FOR ENGLAND.

RAYNHAM CRASHED.

St. John's. 18th May.— The Sopwith machine, piloted by Hawker, started on the trans-Atlantic flight at 5.51 this evening. (Greenwich time.) Hawker dropped the wheels of his machine just before leaving land, and they fell near Raynham's camp. This caused Raynham to endeavour to rise. With its heavy load on rough ground his machine failed to get the necessary lift and struck a hummock, with the result that the axle snapped. Raynham and his navigator Morgan, streaming with blood, were lifted from the badly smashed machine. Raynham collapsed but recovered and Morgan was badly shaken. Neither of them is seriously injured. Raynham has cabled to the owners that it will probably be impossible to repair the damage, which was due to the axle buckling, owing to the heavy load and fuel.

The Marine look-out station on the hills above St. John's reports at 6.15 that the Sopwith is out of sight. It was flying South East, for Ireland. Its altitude was eight thousand feet and it was making eighty miles an hour.

St. John's.— A great crowd witnessed the departure of Hawker from Mount Pearl, six miles west of the City. Thousands were assembled on and about the Martinsyde grounds. The weather appeared most favourable, being cold, clear, sunny and cloudless. Hawker made a most satisfactory beginning. He first flew eastwards over the city, past the Quidividi ground and signalled "Farewell" to Raynham, then, flying at an altitude of two thousand feet, he crossed the encircling hills and flew out over the Atlantic.—Reuter.

CANADIAN CHAPLAIN ATTACKED.

The Rev. Conscirat, Catholic Chaplain to the Canadian Forces at Seaford, was attacked in the dark and struck down by a blow on the jaw. His bag, containing a hundred pounds, proceeds of the canteen, was seized by an accomplice and the men made off. No arrests have been effected.

BURGLARY AT A LIGHTHOUSE.

A dozen masked men entered Minehead Lighthouse, County Waterford, a few nights ago. Some pointed revolvers at the lightkeeper and his son while others searched the lighthouse for arms. All they succeeded in finding was a few old and useless pieces.

Two Germans, who escaped from a camp at Southampton were found on a Danish timber vessel at Grimsby on Saturday dressed in British and Colonial uniforms. They had travelled from Southampton on a goods train.

THE TWO NATIONS.

In a recent article on the war entitled "What all the world knows," mention was made of a novel by Lord Beaconsfield entitled "Sybil—or the Two Nations." This was perhaps Disraeli's most serious contribution to the study of social economics. In it he portrayed the terrible social evils which had resulted from the long strain and effort of the 21-year struggle against revolutionary France and Napoleon. "Two Nations," he declared "co-exist within the bosom of a people, completely ignorant of one another's ways of life and method of thinking."

What Disraeli had in mind, of course, were the wealthy manufacturers who had grown rich owing to the discovery of iron in proximity to the coal fields of the North and the town artisans who were living in the towns created by this new wealth under conditions of squalor and degradation unknown before in our history. But the title "The Two Nations" applies with perhaps equal force, though in a different manner, to Germany. For Germany is, or rather was, essentially a people divided into two nations, each with a totally different conception of life and of the functions of the State. And it is most essential for us British to grasp this fundamental distinction. For without a knowledge of this great dividing line amongst the German people, we are apt to miss the key to the solution of many knotty problems, and the real character of this people.

Without going too far back into the history of the rise to predominance of Prussia in Germany, suffice it to say that this nation, which has shone in the arts of war alone and has never contributed one single idea or invention to the common civilization or "Kultur" of humanity, gradually imposed upon a disunited Germany the blessings of orderly Government and material prosperity. To term Prussia a nation would be a terminological inexactitude — rather was it a system — a method of government which owed its origin to the warlike expansion of the Order of the Teutonic Knights, whose grand master became successively Elector of Brandenburg and King of Prussia. From 1675 onwards, when the Great Elector won the battle of Fehrbellin against the Swedes to Sedan in 1871, Prussia has undeviatingly pursued her traditional policy of mingled force and craft, until her frontiers comprised the greater part of a Germany whose history and method of life differed widely from the hardy race which owes its origin to the Mark of Brandenburg and the Duchy of East Prussia.

This is the origin, then, of what we term "Prussian Militarism," and we must study closely its methods of Government and its spirit of administration, if we would understand aright the welter of confusion in which Germany, bereft of the strong hand of its Prussian overlords and masters, now lies.

The French have styled the Germans Une nation moutonnière a race of sheep-like proclivities, ready to follow any line of direction given them by their rulers. Far happier has been the political development of England. From the thirteenth century onwards our kings have been willing to share the government of the country with those elected representatives of the people who, by a gradual progression have grown from being the members of a mediaeval Parliament of Estates to the democratic representatives of a world-wide empire. Political capacity and a genius for local administration have been the key-stone of our English race. Far otherwise has it been with Germany, and so there has gradually grown up a warrior caste, sprung from a warlike race, which has dominated Germany in every domain of life. This conquering caste, accustomed to dominate and to "swank," has now been cast down and humbled to the dust. The German, accustomed to bow to authority, is now without a master. Far ahead of us in most branches of scientific and industrial enterprise, in matters political he was a mere child. He blindly swallowed the precise quantity of political news with which the Government thought fit to dose him.

His Prussian masters kept him in complete ignorance of all these things, and this undernation it is which we must convince, first that such atrocities have taken place and next that he must make reparation for them. But this does not altogether excuse him; for if, in the fervour of jingoism Germany, was swept off her feet by a calculated policy of lies and specious arguments, yet the average German citizen must bear some measure of blame for the acts which he condoned, if he did not condemn. He was, as it were, hypnotised into a compliance which he half approved. Though some excuse may be found for him in the fact that the late German Government pursued its traditional policy of force and fraud, yet the people, as has been said, gets the Government it deserves.

War psychosis and the feeling of restlessness and jealousy impelled the German people to view with complacency the various infamous measures of its Government. It has been said that the Social Democrats would, even without the war, have brought about the end of the old régime. But in view of the compliance of the people, and the half-hearted protests against the annexation of Belgium, etc. we may well doubt whether this submissive under-nation would ever have adopted any effective measures against the dominant caste. "Yes — we are paying the penalty now—" a sensible German remarked recently. "We bowed ourselves down before these military and bureaucratic lords of ours. We never questioned their decrees nor the justness of their policy, and now we have to accept responsibility for the misdeeds they committed." This leads us on to a further point, viz:— how far is the average German responsible for the misdeeds of his late Government? — but this must be reserved for another article.

"EIGHT HEARTS."

We were playing Bridge. The score was one game all.

Henry made the cards and passed them to me to cut. Cuthbert dealt them in his inimitable style. Cuthbert possesses both grace and speed in dealing. But he is somewhat inaccurate. On this occasion he gave me fourteen cards, which is wrong. So he dealt again. "It's these darn German cards," he complained, "I can never deal with them."

James sat on the dealer's right. He was my partner. He spends most of his time filling and polishing his pipe and borrowing matches. A good fellow, James, perhaps a trifle abstracted, but a good fellow. Cuthbert is young and somewhat futile.

Cuthbert said "One spade."

I said "Two Hearts."

Henry said "Two clubs," but we overlooked his error. James growled "No." He was loading up heavily.

Cuthbert went two spades and I three hearts. Henry said "No" despairingly, and whistled a tune or what was meant to be one. It conveyed to us all that he had no further interest in the game. James, when called upon several times, woke up and said "Oh, I'm sorry, No."

Cuthbert went three spades. I said "Four hearts." Henry said "I'll double four hearts." "On principle," he added to James who wasn't listening, "I always double four. They go out in any case." James said "no," wearily and leaned over in his chair to get at his matches in his side-pocket.

Cuthbert went four spades and I went five hearts. Whereupon Henry cried "I'll double five hearts. Must do so, you know, if I double four. Doesn't make any difference anyway." James "passed" between puffs. Cuthbert said "I'll go seven spades. "Henry said "Well done, Cuthbert, that's the stuff to give them." James cried, "What's this seven spades," and consulted his hand again "You play partner."

"Not so fast," said I, and paused meditatively. "I'll go eight hearts."

Whereat there was a great scandal at the table. A murmur of disapproval arose. It seemed as tho' I were trifling with the royal game of Bridge. Even some of the standers-by saw good to chide me for an irrelevant call. Indeed, so loud and threatening grew the remarks and so lowering became the countenances of my opponents, that I began to feel as the hapless Oliver Twist must have felt when the Workhouse master caught him by the arm and called aloud for Mr. Beadle.

"This is absurd,' said Cuthbert at length growing articulate, "You can't go eight hearts, your only call is seven no trumps." "I am very sorry," I said "I insist upon going eight hearts."

"But you cannot get eight hearts" roared Cuthbert, who perhaps had cause to be a little irritated. "You contract to get fourteen tricks, whereas there are only thirteen possible tricks obtainable."

"If," said I, "I fail to obtain eight tricks I shall pay the usual indemnity. I know nothing in Bascule, Contact or Brücke to prevent my endeavouring to obtain more tricks than you think I am likely to get."

"Likely to get, be hanged" said Cuthbert, only more forceably than this, for he was annoyed, "You can go seven no trumps or pass. What do you say, James?"

"Well," said James slowly, "I'm in a delicate position. I like the lad and admire his pluck. I don't see anything wrong with his call. It is open to you if you want to beat him, to call eight spades. I don't think you will get' em, but you can try."

Cuthbert made some remarks in his best style about eight spades and their use to him. I don't remember his exact words, but I recollect he put the whole case well and convinced us all that eight spades were no use to him and, moreover, that he considered he was being done down and robbed of a good hand. He ended with, "All right let him go his eight hearts. I don't agree with you. But let him go."

"And I'll double eight hearts" cried Henry, suddenly inspired. "On principle I suppose," murmured James, sucking his pipe.

Henry led a spade, upon which Cuthbert put his ace and I a small trump. I then led nine hearts quickly and followed up with the three top clubs making seven odd tricks. "Sorry, partner," I murmured contritely. "We're are down. That's one hundred to them and eighty to us for five honours in our hand. I don't think we can claim a slam. But it's better than losing the game and rubber and goodness knows how many points besides."

"It's a shame all the same," quote Cuthbert, who had somewhat recovered his temper. "I had eight spades to the knave, queen, king and ace, and five tricks in diamonds. I don't believe yours was a correct call."

"Well," said I, "I'll write to The Cologne Post about it."

And so I have. Perhaps, Mr. Editor, one of the clever young men you employ to answer questions may know if my call was right or wrong.

THE MONTH OF MAY IN GERMANY.

It is the month of May. The Spring is half gone, and with it, Nature is awakening rapidly toward the fulness and beauty of the coming sunny days of Summer. It is not to say that we have had no sunny days: already, there have been many such — warm, almost oppressive days, with gorgeous sunshine. Only yesterday, after a lovely morning, heavy peals of thunder crashed overhead, with a vehemence that would have done credit to a British Artillery barrage.

Whilst the world is standing with bated breath, awaiting the signing of a Peace which shall, in Germany's own words "Strangle the very life of the German nation", Nature is assisting her to replenish her garners which have been so well nigh emptied by her hungry millions.

May in Germany — and May in England — are, to all intents and purposes, the same, and it would be difficult from the window where I write, to distinguish any difference (though I would fain be in England), save where German architecture breaks the landscape, or in the manner in which the German gardener below, toiling in his garden, wields the spade and hoe, for no English gardener uses these in the same style as the German. And his Frau is near by, helping to dig up the free soil.

Two days ago, the ground was parched and dusty, but two days of copious showers, rich, warm and refreshing, have created an almost unbelievable result. Verdure has increased in intensity of hue as in quantity: a richer, brighter, more satisfying beauty has settled on everything: the whole world of Nature has suddenly sprung into liveliness.

At the moment, there is every sign of an overwhelming abundance of fruit, flower and vegetable. The fruit trees are gorgeous in their apparel of white and pink blossoms, though the rain of the past two days has done much to remove the flowers from the set fruit, and the petals lay scattered around as confetti at a bridal function.

There is liveliness in Nature — and there is also a corresponding liveliness in the ranks of the tillers of the soil. Throughout the territory of the Rhineland now occupied by the Allied Armies, there are signs of energy on every hand, and, indeed, from Boulogne to Etaples: to Namur and through the Meuse Valley: around Charleroi: to Herbesthal on the border twixt Belgium and Germany: from Aix-la-Chappelle to Cologne — men, women, horses and oxen are engaged in preparing the ground and in sowing the seed which is to furnish the wherewithal that man and beast may live through the days when Nature has again gone to sleep.

Tow under through the fields—aye, or even to follow the main roads of the Rhineland, is to have one's eyes opened. The German, spite his self-vaunted "Kultur," is but a primitive creature when seen in comparison with the British farmer and gardener. His ideas of development and advancement with the times appear to have stopped short some eighty to a hundred years ago.

Let us stray off the beaten track, and go through the farm yard! Oh, no: you aren't trespassing, so long as you do not cross a cultivated field or garden. The farmer may look askance at us, and wish us — well, I am not conversant with where German people usually consign the unwanted, but he won't—he dare not say anything to us.

A growling, yelping dog threatens us in the approved German fashion, but, he is a braggard, and a steady glance into his eye sends him skulking into the furthermost corner of the yard, to continue his snarking from "a better 'ole."

Here and there are waggons, rough and primitive: an old cart with a centre pole, which is drawn by a pair of dreadfully slow oxen: a harrow, not the usual chain or well made gate we see in England, but a roughly apparently home made gate, with equally rough, wooden drills. This, too, is drawn across the fields by the oxen which drew an even more primitive plough to and fro in the early days of spring, and tomorrow roll in the seed with the bole of a tree.

Equally as ancient is the harness with which those self-same oxen are yoked, whilst the entire turn-out, farmer included, can hardly be credited as living in the present day. A "Rip van Winkle" may have considered them up-to-date. German "Kultur" has lamentably failed to illuminate and educate the German farmer to the fact that he is living in the twentieth century. It has failed to awaken the farmer to the development that has been taking place in all the other industries of life, and has left him stagnant, unaware, apparently, to the fact that his oxen are out of date, and painfully slow, or that it is possible to supersede them by quicker and more satisfactory methods.

Though the English farmer is far in advance of the German, it is not now the time for him to slow up in his advance, and think that he has a sufficiently good lead. We know the fable of the hare and tortoise, and must bear in mind that the race is not necessarily won by the speedy, but by the sure. It is necessary to carry on, and to carry on successfully; we must keep on advancing. If we are to wait until the Fatherland has regained its breath, we shall wait too long, and to our own sorrow.

So long as the British Empire and her Allies lead the way in the food production of the world, so long can she and they laugh at Germany and the Central Powers. These will need every ounce of food they can themselves provide before they can export any, but that is no reason that the British farmer, and in a lesser degree, the British gardener, should rest on his laurels.

"Compulsory" ploughing should be compulsory only in the sense of a moral obligation, resting on the agriculturist to better the resources of his country, that in the day of need, he may rest contented in having "done his bit."

A PARABLE.

Once upon a time there was a burglar who had brought off some great coups and had sedulously applied himself to all the meticulous details of scientific burgling.

So one day he planned his biggest scheme, which was to put him in a position of triumphant ease ever after. He boasted as to his future state for some time beforehand.

It was a big affair, but he met with a surprising resistance. It is true that, in the course of the resulting struggle, he wrecked the house he had entered, and caused loss of life and property to an appalling extent. But he was finally ejected and captured.

Then he said to the man sitting on his chest and preparing to see what proportion of the dreadful losses could be recovered from the marauder, and how the latter was to be prevented from having the chance of repeating his crimes) "Why this roughness? Let us go into partnership. In fact, I am prepared to make suggestions as to the wording of the deed. Is this Christian? Is it brotherly? Besides, you are hurting me! Also my wife and family will suffer if you punish me! Likewise it is past midnight now, and I started yesterday. I have turned over a new leaf to-day. I'm surprised at you!

Fellow-sufferers and sympathisers, pull him off!

To all of which the answer was ———

WHISKY FROM COPIES OF "THE COLOGNE POST."

MR. AND MRS. HASSAN'S CONCERT PARTY AT BORNHEIM.

One more unit is added to the already long list of those who tender their appreciative thanks to the Mr. and Mrs. Hassan Concert Party, that Unit being the 52nd Cheshires, who, on Thursday evening filled to overflowing the large concert room attached to the Schwadorf Hotel, at Bornheim.

Lieut. Lowe was the first artiste to appear and delighted all with two baritone songs, the favourite being "Gee up Hosses" which was heartily applauded. Miss Randles (solo violinist) was loudly encored for her playing of "Canary" and replied with the ever popular "Texas Way," which earned for her another tumult of applause; but the most popular turn of the evening was Miss Kitty Randles, who sang several songs to her own accompaniment. "Cecil, I Shall Have to Call the Guard" was followed by "When I get my Civvies on Again" which was received with such applause that Herr Schwadorf must have trembled for the safety of his roof.

Mr. Hassan then made his appearance and, ably assisted by Mrs. Hassan and two volunteers, Sgts. Claridge and Travers, completely mystified the audience (including the two gentlemen assistants) with coin manipulation, card tricks, "The Rope Trick," and spirit writing. His final effort endeared him to the whole audience, who heartily wished he would remain with them, as a gentleman able to produce whisky from back numbers of "The Cologne Post" would certainly make the 52nd the most noteworthy Battalion on the Rhine—and off it.

Miss Franklyn's "Really One Never Knows, Does One?" gained a well deserved encore.

The accompanist throughout the evening was Miss Kitty Franklyn, whose playing left nothing to be desired.

A DERBY SWEEPSTAKE.

HOW TO GET RACING THRILLS AWAY FROM THE MEETING.

Some time ago, in a special article, we published the views of a number of our readers on the subject of a Derby Sweepstake. With one accord these views were all in favour of such a scheme, and the popular idea was that someone should get busy and organize a bumper sweepstake on the lines of the Calcutta. Several writers hinted that we, as a journal, should tackle the thing, and although we were never very sanguine as to the possibility, we made diligent enquiries to find out the exact position of things.

We are now able to state definitely that it is impossible for The Cologne Post to undertake the organization of a venture of this kind, and we make the announcement with regret.

There is not the slightest doubt that the Victory Derby will attract an amount of interest far in excess of the same race for any previous year. The London and Course betting markets have been active for some time already, and private sweepstakes in England are receiving a wonderful amount of patronage.

THE THRILL OF A HARMLESS GAMBLE.

There is probably no more delightful sensation than being present amid all the hurry scurry atmosphere of the wonderful "Downs" and watching the colours representing your hard-earned bob flash past the winning post first.

The writer has never experienced such a full measure of joy himself, but he has extracted quite a fair amount of thrill in observing his favourite "gee-gee" being overtaken by one after another of the field, and inventing suitable explanations for his horse's failure while celebrating the success of some more fortunate individual.

Then the next best thing to this, is to be at the great meeting "in spirit," with a sweepstake ticket to lend additional interest. The mild excitement of wondering whether you will draw a horse and the subsequent newspaper description of how that particular runner "drew away from the field and won in a canter" (perhaps!) are wonderful thrill-producing elements.

However, to return to the point. There are a number of sweepstakes "on the move" already, and before the great race, it is safe to assume that there will be many others among Rhine "Army-ites." The prizes, of course, will not be anything like so substantial as they would have been in the case of a large sweep embracing all units, but subscribers will have the consolation of knowing that the fewer the entries the greater is the percentage of winning chance.

WHY NOT A TOTALIZATOR?

In conclusion, here is a suggestion from one of our readers that may be of value to the organisers of sweeps. "G.W." writes as follows:—

May I suggest that if a "spec" is fixed up for the Derby it takes the form of a Totalizator instead of a Sweepstake. The speculator can choose his fancy in the former case but in the latter he has a microscopic chance of getting a run at all. I have run several very successfully.

Considerable interest would be added by the publication in your paper each day of the number of shares taken up on the particular horses."

We would like to take this opportunity of thanking our many correspondents for writing us on this subject and to say we are sorry that circumstances prevent our being more actively associated with any scheme of the kind that may develop.

The Derby probable starters and jockeys will be published in The Cologne Post as soon as available, as well as any information of interest concerning the race that may come to hand in the meantime.

The sweepstake organized for officers by the 8th Corps Club at Cologne, is making wonderful progress and already the number of tickets sold exceeds 2,000. The result of the draw will appear in this paper on the 5th June.

WON BY A RUN.

EXCITING FINISH AT QUADRATH.

A most interesting game took place at Quadrath on Saturday, where the Cavalry Division H.Q. entertained the 5th Brigade. The R.H.A. batted first and started with disaster, Harris being run out in the first over from a smart throw in by Lieut Dart. Three of their wickets were down for 8 runs, but Bushfield and Hughman, improved the position by taking the score to 31 before the former was bowled. Adams was given a trial with the ball and secured 4 wickets from his first seven balls. However, Holding (9) and Hughman with the help of "Mr Extras" — 12 — took the final score to 58 before the last wicket fell.

Cpl. Adams came out with 6 wickets for 13 runs, and Spr. Evans 3 for 19.

The H.Q. in reply found run-getting very difficult against the bowling of Harris and Fox. Capt Stancliffe was bowled for 9, when he appeared to be set, his last stroke being a four over the bowler's head. Lieut Johnson batted most steadily, and Spr. Locke knocked up 9 in less than as many minutes. Lieut Johnson after making 13, all by singles, was eight out at 55. So three runs were needed to draw. The excitement increased as Capt. Parry scored a two which brought the score to 57. Cpl. Totley was run out trying to get the equaliser. Pte Newsome then went in as last man, and it was really a case of holding your breath or shuting your eyes. Harris bowled him first shot, so the R.H.A. won a most excitting game by a run, the H Q's being beaten on the post. A return game must be arranged.

FOUR WICKETS WITH FIRST FOUR BALLS.

52nd BATTALION THE FIFLE BRIGADE CRICKET MATCH.

A cricket match between H. Q. Coy and "D" Coy of the above named Battalion, played at Konigshoven on Sunday, resulted in a very fine display of bowling on the part of a "budding" A IV bowler, who took four wickets with the first four balls.

Winning the toss, H.Qrs. batted first, and totalled 88 runs before being dismissed, Lieut.-Col. Tyte giving a fine exhibitition of all-round nitting.

"D" Coy going in, Rfn. Smith, with the first four balls of the innings took four wickets, as above mentioned, without a score being registered. The winnings ended with D. Coy's score at 38. the batsmen at no time giving any trouble. Only one change of bowling was necessary.

2/4th, Bn. "The QUEENS" REGT. v. 2nd. LONDON INFANTRY BRIGADE H.Q.

Played at Ehreshoven last week, this match resulted in a comfortable win for Brigade H.Q by 10 wickets.

The 2/4th Queens won the toss, and electing to bat on a moist wicket, were dismissed by the luncheon interval for 63 (Lt. Wright 21). Brigade H.Q. replied with 90, (Lieut. C. B. Twemlow 35, Corpl. Kitchen 22), and succeeded in dismissing the 2/4th Queens a second time for 46. Lieut. Lester-Smith and Pte. Harrison then hit off the 20 runs required to win, without loss.

For Brigade Headquarters, Capt. Alexander (7 for 28 and 3 for 24) and Capt. Richardson (3 for 35 and 5 for 20) bowled unchanged throughout.

DRIVERS v. ARTIFICERS. 13 MOTOR AMBULANCE CONVOY.

On Saturday afternoon the 13 Motor Ambulance Convoy opened up their fixtures with a practice match, the Artificers challenging the Drivers. Despite all efforts on the part of the Artificers the Drivers ran out easy winners by 71 runs.

The feature of the game was the excellent display of batting given by Greenwood, who was rather unfortunate in getting caught after compiling a faultless 30. The deadly bowling of Flack and Walker proved the downfall of the Artificers' batting display.

Scores:—Drivers, 13 M.A.C. 101; Artificers, 13 M.A.C. 30.

EXCITING CRICKET AT QUADRATH.

An interesting match was played on Saturday last at Quadrath between Headquarters, 5th Brigade, R.H.A. and Headquarters Cavalry Division in which the former team won by 1 run. The R.H.A. batted first and fared none too well against the bowling of Cpl. Adams who took seven wickets at a very cheap cost.

The innings closed for 58, Highman, Bushfield and Holding alone batting with any confidence. The home team did no better against the bowling of the "Right of the Line" their innings closing, after a very exciting finish, with a total of 57.

OUR CRICKET CUP.

CRICKET, CRITICISM AND CROSS COUNTRY RUNS.

3rd. BATTALION MACHINE GUN CORPS.

The "Wallahs," that is to say a collection of clerks, servants, runners and others of that nature, ambitiously challenged the Battalion to a trial game at cricket. This was played on Sunday afternoon, and the Battalion 'declared' with seven wickets down and 124 runs up. The Wallahs had only made 16 when their last man took his curtain. No windows were broken in this match which was played on the barrack square. There is still some doubt as to why the Sports Officer, who umpired, placed his gloves on the stumps.

The Battalion Inter-Company Competition commences on Wednesday, when "C" company meets "D" at 14.30 hours on the grass pitch just outside the Barracks. "A" company meets "B" in the same competition on Friday. Everyone will play each other company four times.

"C" Company cares not that 'stiff' training means stiff limbs, and had their second cross country run last night in preparation for the Athletic Meeting shortly to be held.

We saw many medals in the Sports office which were being prepared for inscription. These are for the Football Competition, and will shortly grace the victors.

"MR. EXTRAS" SCORES WELL.

WIN FOR 8th FIELD AMBULANCE.

The match between the 8th and 142nd Field Ambulance (R.A.M.C.) at Efferen on Saturday resulted in a win for the former by 31 runs. Against a couple of fast bowlers in Sergt. Watson and Scott "Mr. Extras" scored runs with marked regularity, the first three overs producing 10 runs.

Blakely gave the best batting display and if his innings lacked enterprise it was certainly very sound. Adcock and Lieut. Benham also did well with the bat, the last named obtaining his runs all round the wicket. The fielding of the visitors was rather loose. With 100 on the board for the loss of 6 wickets, the innings was declared closed.

The 142nd Ambulance batsmen gave a brighter display at the wickets, and their running between the stumps was altogether smarter. Sergt. Watson, Scott and Capt Munn hit out in fine style and until Roberts foolisnly ran himself out there was a prospect of an exciting finish.

Scores:—

8th Field Ambulance 100 (for 6 wickets).
142 Field Ambulance 69.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

Fulsome Flattery Undeserved.

Two letters have been received by the Editor criticizing a recent report of a concert at Duren. Both the writers of these epistles complain that the report was far more eulogistic than the show warranted. One of the correspondents remarks that on the occasion of his visit the house was practically empty and he very much regretted the time and money wasted in attending such a feeble attempt at amusement. The writer of the second letter is much stronger in his comments. My chief has asked me to explain that whenever it is possible, a reporter is sent from this office to attend all forms of army entertainment with instructions to comment fairly and candidly upon the result. This is obviously a duty of The Cologne Post towards its readers as well as to individual concert parties. A really tip-top show should have ample praise bestowed upon it but it is not the policy of this paper to be flattering in its remarks upon every entertainment whether it be good, bad or indifferent.

The Cologne Post covers a very wide field, and all readers must be aware, and for this reason reports of various events from occasional contributors must be relied upon. The particular report in question was submitted by an apparently reliable correspondent and there was absolutely no reason to suppose that the enthusiasm reflected in his paragraph was not genuinely inspired. The same concert party announce that they are to give another performance in the course of a few days. This will be attended by a representative from this office whose report may be relied upon to be fair and unbiassed.

Rain, Hail or Snow?

If you were caught unawares by the showery weather we experienced a little while ago and got wet through in consequence, or if you were unprepared for the thunderstorm last Sunday week, or if you "cast a clout" a few nights ago and caught "a cold in the dose" by reason of the icy cold blasts that suddenly prevailed, you are absolutely unjustified in grousing about the matter. All those little unexpected vagaries in the German climate have been foretold by our meterological expert with uncanny accuracy. Out of 42 weather forecasts that have appeared on this page in succession, only three have varied to any material extent from the actual conditions that have subsequently prevailed. On each of these few occasions, showers have been prophesied when, as a matter of fact, the floodgates have been tightly closed. Therefore, if you want to know in advance the intentions of "Jupiter Pluvius," cast your eye on our weather forecast.

THE RAMBLER.

TROPICAL FOOTBALL.

D. COY 6th R.W. KENT v. C. COY 10th R.W. KENT.

An Inter-Brigade Semi-Final was played on the ground of the 6th R.W. Kent Regt. on Thursday, the teams being D Coy, 6th R.W. Kent, and C. Coy, 10th R.W. Kent. The 10th winning the toss elected to kick against the slight wind, and with a tropical sun shinning on their backs. The 6th were soon testing the 10th defence, but found them very safe. At length their efforts were rewarded after about 20 minutes play, Walker snapping up a good centre from Tuckwell and giving the 10th "goalie" no chance. After the kick-off a lot of midfield play ensued. Just on half-time a corner fell to the 10th, and this was put through, but the referee had blown for half-time, so of course it was disallowed. Half time arrived with the 6th leading 1—0.

A DEAFENING ROAR.

The second half commenced with the 10th determined to equalise, but splendid play again by the halves, and Cpl. Bones kept them out. The 10th "goalie" had one or two difficult shots to stop.

Later the 6th forced a corner, which was well placed by Robinson, and Walker got his head to it, and completely beat the "goalie." Midfield play ensued until the whistle went for time amid a deafening roar from the 6th (D Coy) supporters.

Result:—

D Coy 6th R.W. Kent Regt. 2; C Coy, 10th R.W. Kent Regt., nil.

D Coy meet B Coy 4th R. Sussex in the final.

"D" COY 51st R. WARWICKSHIRE REGT. v. ARMY LEWIS GUN SCHOOL.

This football match was played on Wednesday at Delbruck. Early on the Warwickshires pressed and narrowly missed scoring. Their sustained pressure was eventually rewarded, Pte Dutton scoring at short range. The home forwards afterwards had matters all their own way, and Sgt Lyne scored with a magnificent grass shot.

On restarting after half-time, play was of a more even character, the school trying their hardest to score but they could make no impression. A third goal was registered by the home sters just on time.

Result: D. Coy, R. Warwickshire Regt. 3; Army L.G. School, 0.

PIPE BAND AT FOOTBALL MATCH.

5th v. 180th LABOUR COMPANY.

The final of the Labour Group Competition was played at Amsterdamerstrasse on Thursday evening. The 5th who had some difficulty in raising a team owing to leave, etc., turned out as follows:— Lieut Wilkinson, Ptes Donachie and Cooney, Ewen, Leonard, and Forster, Sgt Grant, Pte Clark, Cpl Swan, Ptes. Charles and Brady.

The 5th lost the toss and kicked off against the sun. They had however, most of the play in the first half, 180th conceding frequent corners. None of these resulted in goals and half-time arrived with no scoring.

Shortly after resuming, 5th scored only to have the goal disallowed, and a "penalty" for handling given instead. Lieut. Wilkinson took the kick, and 180th goal keeper saved luckily. The play was fast and keen, both goals being visited in turn. It was anybody's game till 180 scored a well taken goal by Cpl Stevenson. This was all the scoring and 5th retired somewhat unlucky losers.

Result: 180 Labour Coy 1; 5th Labour Coy 0.

The pipe band of the 5th Coy discoursed music at intervals.

Bolshevism.

A lecturer who has intimate knowledge of, and is indeed an authority upon the old views that are now known by the new name of Bolshevism, Lt.-Col. Lysham, will speak upon this subject on Saturday, 24th. May, at 6.30 p. m. in the Cologne Central Y.M.C.A. whom we congratulate upon having secured so eminent a lecturer who is sure to attract an audience that will fill their great Hall.

BRITISH EMPIRE LEAVE CLUB

Major Gower Rees, M.C., D.A.C.G., VI Corps, gave a short address in the Theatre at 5 p.m. on Sunday evening.

He began by saying that he hoped they would look upon these weekly "Talks" as opportunities for free discussion, and that they would tell all their friends about them. He took as his subject "Are you in Need of a Guide?" and gave a stirring little address showing the absolute necessity of belief as a guide in life.

. . . . . .

The Band of the 12th Royal Lancers (by kind permission of Lt.-Col. Fane C.M.G., D.S.O.) also gave a most excellent concert, which was tremendously appreciated, in the Theatre.

The concert opened with the "Mikado,"—always a favourite piece — which was splendidly played with excellent rhythm. The Miniature Suite consisting of three charming pieces was beautifully rendered by Eric Coates. The first part of the programme was brought to an end by the Overture "William Tell" which was given with great spirit. Musicians J.C. Browne and Cpl. C. Carroll, acquitted themselves admirably in tubaphone and clarionette solos, which were much appreciated.

Variations by Latter on "Three Blind Mice" were full of humour and the audience demanded an encore. The programme finished with a selection from "The Bing Boys."

During the Interval, Cpl. Howard Fry and Bdr. Gibbs kindly gave some songs which were so popular that encores had to be given.

The hall was well filled with a large and delighted audience who enthusiastically applauded every item. Miss Decima Moore spoke a few words at the end of the programme, expressing her pleasure at the success which had attended the first week of the club, and she was loudly applauded by all present.

A former bank manager, named Gates, was drowned in an inch and a half of water at St. Leonards on Friday. He fell forward into a sponge bath.

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

THE SOCIALIST PARTIES.

It is commonly known that the splitting of the Socialist organization in Germany was directly due to the problems of the war, especially the war credits. The German socialists, even at the outset, were not all agreed as to the justifiability of Germany's actions, and there were those who plainly avowed that the Fatherland had made a great mistake. Thus came into existence the organization of the Independent Socialists, as distinct from the Majority who readily consented to any demands of the military powers in the hope that a speedy victory might ensue.

It might be added, too, that many of these Independent Socialists preferred a victory for the Allies, rather than suffer the tyranny of a belaurelled militarism.

Commenting upon this the Rheinische Zeitung says, "Which of the two parties has been right? The answer can be found in the terms themselves. The defeat feared by the Majority Socialists has come, and the Treaty clears up any doubt about the intentions of the Allies in the case of a vanquished Germany.

The Majority Socialists encouraged the war credits because, by doing so, they hoped to avert what has actually happened and because they knew that no advantages, so far as the working people and international socialism are concerned, could accrue from the annihilation and enslavement of Germany."

Throughout the war, each party has directed the bitterest hate against the other, the one blindly obeying the harsh dictates of the militarists, the other trying to convince the Government of its fallacy; and it is interesting to note that now the war is over, an effort is in progress to reconcile the two organizations.

BOLSHEVISM IN BRITAIN.

RUSSIAN ROUBLES FOR SINN FEIN.

Lord Ampthill presided at the Cannon street hotel over a large meeting of business men called by the National Party to discuss the peril of Bolshevism. First-hand evidence of what Bolshevism means in practice was given by Professor Miliukov, late Foreign Minister of the Provisional Government in Russia, and M. Polovtsoff, who lived for a year in Petrograd under Bolshevist rule, and is a leading authority on literature and art. Brigadier-General Page Croft, M.P., made an appeal for £50,000 with which to fight Bolshevism in Britain. It was revealed that money for the spread of Bolshevism in the United Kingdom is being sent to Sinn Feiners and other sympathizers.

The Chairman said the National Party had undertaken the duty of fighting the peril here because both the historical parties seemed incapable of doing it. (Hear, hear.) Perhaps they thought there was no danger of Bolshevism here. Well, five years ago they thought there was no danger of war with Germany, and declined to make preparations. Bolshevism was being propagated not only by Anarchists but by well-known Labour leaders, journalists, writers, Justices of the Peace, and even by Privy Councillors. Mr. Smillie said only two days ago that he was not out for bloody revolution, "if it could be avoided," which meant that if he could not attain his ends without bloody revolution he was not going to stick at that. The strikes at Glasgow and Belfast were an attempt at revolution.

At Glasgow the chief agitator was a Jewish tailor named Shinwell, and at Belfast the ringleader was a Jew, of Russian descent, named Simon Greenspon. Why were British workmen led away by foreign agitators? Bolshevism was a loathsome and dangerous disease propagated by invisible germs. He wanted to warn them against the carriers of those germs. Who were they? Jews, who had no nationality, and whose one object was to destroy the existing order (Cheers.) Bolshevism originated in German propaganda, and was being carried out by international Jews.

Professor Miliukov said the sacrifices of Russia in this war were not less than those of any other of the Allies. Bolshevism was being defended by exaggerating the forces at the disposal of the Bolsheviks and emphasizing the difficulty of coping with them in Russia. And while the resisting power of the Bolsheviks had been exaggerated, the international danger and the international origin of the peril had been minimised. Bolshevism was neither Socialism nor Democracy, but simply misrule by an insignificant minority, not even of a class, but of a ring. It was an international movement to promote a class war against all governments, to abolish private property.

Lenin was spending Russian money. In a recent telegram he said the Council of the People's Commissaries had rescinded the vote of 300,000,000 roubles for propaganda in France, and, instead had voted 500,000,000 roubles for general propaganda.

The first payment was sent to the Sinn Feiners in Ireland and the second to the Spartacists in Germany. The Bolsheviks printed foreign money freely—French banknotes, English pounds, and American dollars. That was a great international danger. (Hear, hear.)

M. Polovtsoff said Bolshevism was the creation of Germany. How would Russia be rebuilt? Would the business people of this country think of that? If they did not, other people would go in and do it. He hoped the British would be there first.

Brigadier General Page Croft, M. P. said we ought to encourage volunteering for Russia (Cheers.) The real Russia was coming out on top. (Cheers.) The peril of Bolshevism must be met. The national Party must meet it, and needed £50,000 for the work. (Cheers.)

SIR DOUGLAS HAIG AND EX-SERVICE MEN.

In receiving the Freedom of Dundee at the close of last week, Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig referred to the position of the demobilized soldiers, and the help that is their due now that fighting has ceased. "I cannot believe," said the Field Marshall, "that it is right for me to forget men who fought under me with so much gallantry, or, if a word from me can help them, to withold that word. It is, therefore, in all earnestness and sincerity, and with no desire to interfere in matters that concern me not, that I add my exhortation to yours, asking that all who are in a position to help our demobilized men over the difficult period immediately in front of them should put their shoulders to the wheel and do all that lies in their power to make their lot an easier one."

"Of the men themselves I ask patience, even when patience is most difficult. It is no easy matter to find work for all the many thousands of men who are now cast suddenly upon the labour market of these islands. It is inevitable that there should be cases of great hardship, for no human organization is altogether perfect, nor can it provide for all contingencies or cater for all needs. So long, however, as it is evident that the Government and the public are trying earnestly to meet the situation with all their power and ability, as I believe they are, I ask all you demobilized or discharged men, whether from the Army or from the special industries created to meet the needs of war, to do your best to be patient, and thereby help those who are trying to help you."

WORK FOR EX-SERVICE MEN.

Sir Douglas Haig, acknowledging the toast of "Our Youngest Burgess," referred to the problem of employment for ex-Service officers and men, and said there could be only one real remedy for the existing state of things, namely, that increase in productive capacity and general prosperity which we all hoped would follow from a return to normal conditions. That was a matter for our statesmen, and meanwhile the difficult transition period had still to be passed through. The activities of the Appointments Department of the Ministry of Labour were not concerned only with ex-Service men, but the training grant was reserved for ex-Service men only. Like the labour exchanges the department was designed to be a complete register of opportunities and vacancies all over the country, so that by application to any local office a man might discover what were his chances of obtaining employment in any part of the British Isles. The Department had branches all over the United Kingdom, and by its clearing house system in London an employer could command a choice of applicants from Land's End to John o' Groat's. A special feature of the work was the effort that was made to discover for badly disabled officers some form of occupation for which their disability was the least possible handicap. Already a good start had been made in this direction. He earnestly appealed to all employers to do what they could to give the Appointments Board a good start and a fair trial.

DELAYS IN PENSIONS.

NEW SCHEME OF ORGANIZATION.

Sir L. Worthington Evans, Minister of Pensions, addressing a conference of war pensions committees at Cardiff said the keynote of the conference, should be to find the best means speedily to compensate, not merely by money, but by treatment, training, and after-care, the disabled men, and to sustain and provide for the widows, children, and dependents of those who laid down their lives in the cause of freedom. He confessed that the present system of administration led to great delays in some cases—delays which amounted to a denial of justice and right to men entitled to look to them for help. Some of the delay was inevitable, but in some cases blame must be shared by local committees, which suffered in a minor degree from exactly what they suffered from at headquarters—namely, congestion. At headquarters they received 150,000 letters a week, and were housed in 40 different buildings, so they could realize the inevitable delays.

With a centralized machine dealing with some 600,000 pensioners, 200,000 widows, and 240,000 dependents, or thereabouts, along with their children, bringing the total beneficiaries to about 2,000,000 persons, they could not have speed and accuracy of working. They had about 2,200 local committees and sub-committees over the country, but their powers were limited, involving constant reference to headquarters. The real remedy was in strengthening local control. They were dealing now almost entirely with temporary pensions. Later on, when dealing with permanent pensions, he did not believe the present system could possibly be maintained.

Dealing with his new scheme in its application to Wales and Monmouthshire, the Minister said there would be a Welsh region with a Welsh regional director as its chief administrative officer, who would have to decide on administrative matters within the region. Major R. C. Roberts, late of the Welsh Fusiliers, who fought in South Africa and throughout this war, and subsequently served as Secretary of the National Service Ministry in the Welsh region, had accepted the position of director.

Disabled men would be directly represented on the local committees, but as regional councils were framed on the geographical plan he did not see how to combine that with class representation. He believed there was a good prospect of getting the new machinery at work within a month.

BOLSHEVIST CRUISER SUNK IN BALTIC.

BRITISH FLEET IN ACTION.

GERMANY'S COUNTER-PROPOSALS.

ORIGIN OF AFGHAN OUTBREAK.

GERMANY'S OBSERVATIONS ON THE TERMS.

A FEW OF THE POINTS.

Count Brockdorf-Rantzau accompanied by Herr Wassermann, manager of the Reichsbank, returned to Versailles yesterday morning from Spa with about ten secretaries. He was received at the station by Herr von Lersner, Herr Dunker and Lieutenant Bourgeois. The count, who seemed very tired, thanked Lieut. Bourgeois for the manner in which the journey had been organized at the last moment.

According to the Temps a member of the Peace Commission at Berlin has made a declaration to the following effect.

The German Government will be ready to secure to France the coal of the Sarre and rights over the coal of the Ruhr district.

They will accept the occupation of the left bank of the Rhine for the periods fixed at Versailles with the stipulations that these occupied territories will not be separated from Germany as regards their administration and that the clause concerning the plebiscitum of the Sarre population shall be suppressed.

As regards the Polish frontier they will recognize the Polish sovereignty over the territory situated within the demarcation line as fixed by the armistice and will demand a plebiscitum for the other districts under control of an American or Neutral Commission. Concerning Danzig they will propose that the port alone shall be declared free with a Polish autonomous administration and a Polish railway.

Germany will ask for the fixation of a definite total for the indemnity as she cannot settle her budget and determine her taxes without knowing what she will have to pay. The other points are still under consideration.

The German answer will be based on the fourteen points of President Wilson as seen from the point of view of the Berlin Government.

GERMANY'S COUNTER PROPOSALS.

According to the Berliner Tageblatt the German Government has submitted to the Peace Commission at Berlin the German counter proposals. The German observations on the draft of the Treaty are ready and were despatched to Versailles by special messenger yesterday. The delivery to the Entente will most probably take place on Thursday.

MORE RANTZAU NOTES.

Count Brockdorff-Rantzau is understood to be preparing for presentation in the next few days, notes on the Eastern frontier, Alsace-Lorraine, the occupied districts, German private property in enemy countries, and Labour regulations.

The intention to send a new note on the Labour regulations shows that the German Government does not regard M. Clemenceau's answer to the first note as final.

BOLSHEVIST FLEET IN ACTION.

ALSO OUT OF ACTION.

Helsingfors. On Sunday Bolshevist warships bombarded the Finnish Puumala batteries and Krasnaja Gorka. Five Bolshevist cruisers appeared outside Puumala but half an hour later three British light cruisers arrived and opened fire on the Bolshevist vessels, which fled in the direction of Kronstadt. One of the Bolshevist cruisers was sunk with nearly the whole of its crew. Another was driven round the Esthonian coast, after which the fight finished. One Bolshevist warship is said to have gone aground. The engagement lasted thirty-five minutes.—Wireless.

Helsingfors. 18th May. — A Bolshevist cruiser, two torpedo-boats and a number of mine sweepers left Kronstadt at six this morning. Simultaneously the Bolshevist batteries at Kranaja Gorka shelled the Finnish coast in that vicinity.—Reuter.

The Bolshevists have organised on board their warships a special force of marine infantry consisting of Letts, Chinese, and Red Finns whose task it will be to prevent any mutiny by the sailors.—Reuter.

The Board of Admiralty announces that on the 18th May British light forces in the Gulf of Finland, whilst co-operating with the Esthonian Army, encountered Bolshevist Naval forces consisting of destroyers and small armed craft supported by a cruiser. The Bolshevist vessels were chased until they gained the protection of the minefields and shore batteries. Some of the Bolshevist destroyers were reported hit. The British sustained no casualties.—Reuter.

Reuter learns that the Chief of the British Military Mission at Ekaterinodar has sent a telegram to the War Office stating that Denikin is personally conducting the operations against Tsaritzin. The captures already made include 10,000 prisoners, twenty-eight guns and one hundred and twenty machine guns.

Replying to Sir J. Wedgwood in the House of Commons, Mr. Guest stated that as the Bolshevists are already employing poison gas on the Northern front preparations are being made for retaliating in a similar manner. (Cheers).

ORIGIN OF THE AFGHAN OUTBREAK.

CONFIDENCE RE-ESTABLISHED.

Simla. 8th May.—A concentration of Afghan regulars and Tribal Lashkars is reported at Ningrahar between Julalabad and Dakka in the Khost Valley.

All is quiet in Waziristan and on the Chaman line. The arrival of troops at Kurram has re-established confidence. A few shots were fired yesterday at our aeroplanes flying in the vicinity of Torsappar and near Landi Kotal. The orders issued for the mobilization of the field army and concentration of our troops on the frontier is progressing smoothly and according to plan.—Reuter.

A statement issued by the Indian Government shows that the Afghan invasion of India was preceded by a threatened rebellion and the new Amir embarked on warlike operations in order to distract attention from his internal troubles. The Viceroy's stern warning was disregarded. Since the Afghan troops moved over the border into the Punjab the attitude of the Indian frontier tribes has been perfectly staunch. The situation is being satisfactorily dealt with.

The official communiqué covering recent disturbances in Afghanistan records the events leading up to the Afghan violation of the Indian frontier. It states that the Amir Amanullah held a Durbar on 13th April to secure its ratification of sentences he had already decided to inflict on persons concerned in the murder of the late Amir, Habibullah. It was openly declared, however, that innocent men had been punished in order to shield the real assassins, accusations being levelled at high officials, including Amanullah himself.

Dissatisfaction spread, especially among the troops, who had been foremost in insisting upon vengeance for the former Amir, and among Afghan tribesmen, with whom the murdered Amir stood in high favour. Amanullah's position became one of greater danger and therein lies the explanation of his sudden change from marked friendliness for the British Government to open hostility. Dissatisfaction developing into rebellion he resolved on the perilous measure of distracting attention from internal troubles by embarking upon war. He circulated absurd stories of disturbances in the Punjab and of fair fields lying defenceless at the mercy of Afghan invaders. When invasion began by a party of one hundred and fifty Afghans the Viceroy despatched a message of sternest warning, yet leaving open a way of honourable escape for Amanullah. This met with an uncompromising reply. The only answer to the menace therefore was to put into effect preparations held in readiness for such contingencies. The attitude of our own frontier tribes has been admirable. There are signs of disunion at Kabul and of the existence of a strong party not prepared to join in the betrayal of their country. British troops have already occupied Dakka Fort, an important strategical point within the Afghan frontier, and from a military standpoint this may be regarded as showing that the movement will collapse. The loss of Dakka is a very great blow to Afghan prestige.—Wireless.

Simla. 10th May.—The British agent at Kabul has been recalled and the Afghan envoy at Simla is returning to Kabul.—Reuter.

Information from Chaman indicated that three Afghan regiments have arrived at Fort Baldak. They are stated to be for defensive purposes. Considerable supplies of arms and ammunition are also reported to have arrived.

Parachinar reports that two Afghan regiments reached Peiwarkstal on the night of the 13th May and positions were taken up by the Afghans on spurs within British limits at the head of the Kurram Valley. The arrival of three regiments and two guns at Alikhel is reported. Waziristan is normal. The frontier tribes are all quiet and the internal situation calm. From the Khyber area forward the concentration of force continues. There is wire cutting and sniping in the Khyber from Kohat. Dispositions to deal with the Afghan movement in the Peiwar area have been made and the Kohat force is being reinforced.—Reuter.

Simla. The Afghan elders are reported to be disinclined for war though the younger men probably hold different views. Orders have been issued for mobilization of the field army and the concentration of our troops on the frontier is progressing smoothly and according to plan.—Reuter.

AUSTRIAN DELEGATES CREDENTIALS.

The exchange of credentials between the Austrian delegation and the Inter-Allied Commission took place yesterday at the Pavilion of Henry IV in the room where in 1638 Louis XIV was born.

The Allies' representatives were Mr. Cambon, President of the Commission, Lord Hardinge, Great Britain; Mr. White, United States; Signor de Martino, Italy and Mr. Martari, Japan.

The Austrian delegation consisted of Herr Renner, the Chancellor, Herr Klein, representing the Foreign Minister, Herr Peter and Herr Schuller, both of the Austrian Foreign Office.

The formalities lasted five minutes.

By the end of July all Australians, Canadians and New Zealanders available for repatriation will have left Great Britain.

STABBED TO DEATH IN BED.

MYSTERIOUS TRAGEDY.

A mysterious murder was committed at Cheshunt in the early hours of yesterday morning. Miss Jane Shannon, aged 27, a teacher at St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Schools, Waltham Cross, being found dead in bed, stabbed to the heart.

Miss Shannon, the only daughter of a widowed mother, lived with the family of Mr. Joseph Downs, an orchid grower, at 148, Turner's-hill. On Saturday night she went to bed as usual at about 9.30. Miss Mary Margaret Downs, the daughter of Mr. Downs, occupied the same room on the first floor, but slept in a separate bed. At about two o'clock yesterday morning Miss Downs was awakened by a piercing scream from Miss Shannon, who cried out in a smothered voice. "Oh, Mary, someone has their hand over my mouth. Light a candle quick."

The screams continued, but Miss Downs heard no other noise, and in the darkness she was unable to see anything. Then she heard a gurgling sound coming from Miss Shannon's bed. Thinking that the girl had been seized with a fit, she said, without getting out of bed, "it's all right, Jane." At that moment Mrs. Downs came into the room with a lighted candle, and it was then discovered that Miss Shannon was dead. Her nightdress and the bed-clothes were saturated with blood, which was issuing from a wound nearly an inch long and four inches deep in the left side.

Mrs. Downs called her husband and Father Dunford, a Roman Catholic priest, who also lives in the house, and who occupied an adjacent room. Father Dunford immediately dressed himself and went for medical aid, and Mr. Downs hurried out to inform the police. Dr. Walker and the divisional surgeon, Dr. Greene, attended, and both doctors agreed that the wound could not have been self-inflicted, and that it had been caused by some sharp pointed instrument. On the arrival of the police a search of the premises was made, and unmistakable signs were discovered of some person having been underneath the bed, where the floor covering was disarranged. A French window at the back of the house was found unfastened, and from this window there were footprints leading through the garden to a nursery. No weapon of any sort was found, and no intruder had been seen either to enter or leave the house.

MAN'S BODY FOUND ON LINE.

A possible sequel to the murder occurred later, upon the discovery of a man's dead body on the Great Eastern Railway line near the level-crossing at Cadmore-lane, Cheshunt. The engine-driver of the 4.42 a. m. down goods train from London reported that his engine had struck something when it was nearing the crossing. On the line being searched the body was found. One boot was unlaced, and the other boot was off. By documents found on the clothing the man was identified as Lewis Owen, aged 43, lodging at 3, Holly-road, Waltham Cross, and employed as a grocer's assistant at Mr. O. S. Clark's supply stores, Waltham-cross. He was a married man with two children, his wife and family living at Gravesend. Among other articles found in his possession were a lady's handkerchief marked with the name "J. Shannon," and an unstamped letter addressed to "Miss J. Shannon, 141, Turner's hill, Cheshunt." The handwriting of the letter, which contained affectionate passages avowing love for Miss Shannon, has been recognised as that of Owen's by his landlady, Mrs. Gater.

Owen was an accomplished musician, and used to give Miss Shannon lessons on the violin. She corresponded with him in a friendly way when he went abroad, but when he was discharged from the Army she told him the correspondence must cease. Miss Shannon was well known and highly respected in the district.

MUSTARD GAS IN THE SEA.

Swansea and Gower coast residents are up in arms over the presence of poisonous mustard gas in drums which are lying about on the coast. Two young sons of Mr. Egerton Forrester, of Swansea, went to bathe at Oxwich. They came home in agonies and have been under medical treatment ever since. Their bodies are burned and they are suffering from the same symptoms as those exhibited by two Mumbles coastguardsmen and Mr. Gammon, who handled a drum of mustard gas at Limeslade recently, and were placed under hospital treatment for weeks. The drums are American marked, and are stated to have come from a transport. The Board of Trade have been pressed to take action in removing or safely burying drums, but they place the responsibility upon the American naval authorities. Meanwhile the drums continue to remain round the coast, a danger to those who go near, by reason of the gases emitted and the liability to burns through handling. Some are being washed out to sea.

BELGIAN WAY WITH STRIKERS.

The commander of Belgian troops at Heerdt, in the Belgian zone of occupied territory, has announced that if a strike breaks out and an agreement between workmen and employers cannot be reached, all strikers will be transported to the right bank of the Rhine within twenty-four hours.

CLUMSY GERMAN INVENTIONS.

The German propaganda service has not yet discontinued operations. Telegrams from Basle and Haag announce that martial law has been proclaimed at Lyons, Marseilles and Versailles (of all places) as a result of troubles arising from Labour protests against the Imperialist policy of the Government and the Peace terms imposed by the Allies.—Wireless.

With the object of resuming the passenger service between Southampton and Cowes, which has been suspended for nine days by the strike of seamen, the Packet Company sent fresh crews from Cowes in a steam launch, but the engineers refused to work with imported men.

LET DOWN BY HIS BRETHREN.

SPORTING PARSON'S COMPLAINT.

The Rev. Everard Digby, "the Sporting Parson," occupied the pulpit at St. Paul's, Covent Garden, on Sunday night. He said he was preaching as an Army chaplain. He had expected to be demobilized on the previous day, but for some reason or other the authorities had postponed the event till today. Had be been demobilized he would have had a statement to make on the recent court-martial which would have surprised the public. There was a good deal behind in the inner workings of that case, and when he was demobilized he certainly would make a statement.

Mr. Digby preached from the text, "An enemy hath done this." He said his sermon had nothing to do with his case, but he referred to his experiences in the Tower, and said the only sign of religion there was within one's self. His fellow prisoners, one of whom was a boy, received no religious comfort. When, he continued, one came a cropper, as he did, it was like an airman sailing through the blue sky having a sudden crash. It was a bit upsetting. A bolt from the blue rather upsetting one over. The only people who had let him down were his own brethren. With the exception of their own vicar, Father Adderley, and three or four others, nobody thought of him. The bishop wrote that he had his prayers, and asked him to write when the case was over, when he would be glad to see him. That was not the sort of brotherhood that one looked for. It was not the sort of thing his brother Masons did or said. The first man who went to see him was a theatrical manager, who said, "How are you off for money, old man?" That man afterwards wrote him a cheque for £200. People had got to be more sympathetic to those in trouble. During his four years in the Army his first visit was always to the detention cells; it did not matter whether the prisoners were guilty or not.

With regard to the court-martial charge, he had never had one moment's doubt about the issue. He was not a bit afraid, but all the same one felt that one's hold was gone. He had felt it very much in the case of other people who did not do their bit.

R.A.F. INVENTOR'S CLAIM DISPUTED.

There was an interesting sequel today to the claim for ten thousand pounds compensation made a fortnight ago before the Royal Commission on awards to inventors by Lieut. J. F. Power R.A.F. At the former hearing Lt. Power stated that he was the inventor of a specified aerial target but Major Maclaulum R.A.F. appeared before the Commission yesterday and claimed the credit of the invention. He said the target had been in use at the School of Military Aeronautics, Reading, since 1915.

Before the same Commission Lieut. Robert Burn, who was Sectional Director of the Aircraft Production Department of the New Zealand Forces, claimed an award in respect of a grenade discharger cup for use with the Lee Enfield rifle.

Y.M.C.A. CRITICISMS.

Sir Arthur Yapp, representing the National Council of the Y.M.C.A., distributed badges, service bars, and certificates of the Order of the Red Triangle to over one hundred Y.M.C.A. workers at the Crystal Palace.

He said he had a drawerful of criticisms of Y.M.C.A. work. One clergyman wrote that the Y.M.C.A. was really the Young Man Comfort not Christian Association. Sir Arthur Yapp replied that the old conception of Christianity — a long face and a regular seat in church — was wrong. Men had been refreshed and cheered in body and spirit by tens of thousands through the efforts of the Y.M.C.A. behind the fighting lines.

The Y.M.C.A. would not demobilize. Great centres like Calais, Dunkirk, Brussels and Antwerp had never been busier than now and never had the work been more costly. There were sixty-eight branches in the occupied parts of Germany and the Association was on the eve of a very big financial effort to help its post-war schemes of usefulness.

The report of Sir George Askwith's Commission regarding the financial administration of the Y.M.C.A. states that there is no ground for suspicion that the Y.M.C.A. has failed to administer faithfully all money recived for war purposes. There is also no reason to fear that money now being subscribed would be devoted to making good past deficiencies, since the Y.M.C.A. war emergency fund is perfectly solvent.

A DANGEROUS FIND.

A bomb about a foot long with two flanges has been found in the suburbs of Walsall. It was discovered in a brook which dried up owing to the hot weather. It is believed to have been dropped by a Zeppelin during the big raid in January 1916 but failed to explode.

AQUITANIA DEFIES STRIKERS.

By patient and magnificent seamanship the Aquitania, with Sir Robert Borden, Canadian Premier, and six thousand Canadian troops aboard, sailed yesterday from Southampton for Canada despite the tugmen's strike. The great vessel was manoeuvred with ropes from the quayside and took two hours to turn.

WORKMEN'S INCOME TAX.

It was stated at Woolwich Police Court yesterday that seventy-five cases of workmen failing to pay income tax came before the Court daily. A Woolwich Arsenal official declared that in many of the cases the amounts were irrecoverable.

Greenwich Corporation has arranged to give a civic welcome to the cadre of the 120th Bn. the London Regiment (47th Division) when it returns from France this week.

WHERE IS ENGLAND'S HAWKER?

ANXIETY AND INDIGNATION.

Chagrin and disappointment is universal that America has had such a measure of success in flying above the waters of the Atlantic Ocean as to furnish it with one of those half truths which excuse but do not justify their claim to have "flown the Atlantic." America has not flown the Atlantic. It has flown from Newfoundland to the Azores. The Azores are 1,100 miles from the coast of Europe, and therefore America has only flown just over half the distance.

The hopes that prevailed yesterday when it became know that Hawker had left Newfoundland rose to fever pitch when it was at once seen that if things went well he would snatch a victory on the post for England.

All hopes were centred on Hawker, the bitterly disappointing smash which Raynham sustained leaving us absolutely dependent on the sportsman who rose to fly for the honour of England despite warnings of extremely adverse weather conditions.

At four o'clock on Monday afternoon Hawker was reported as being one hundred and fifty miles from the Irish coast. He had already beaten the distance record established by Commander Read in N.C. 4. (Ameroc News, please note). Preparations were made at Brooklands Aerodrome for his reception.

Since then no news of him has been received and now the hopes which ran high are turned into hopes that, even if a magnificent adventure has failed of full success, the two intrepid aviators have not met the fate they risked — for England.

There has been absolutely no news of Hawker and Grieve since they left Newfoundland and there is the utmost anxiety regarding their fate. Hopes were alternately raised and dashed yesterday evening by a series of messages from Ireland reporting that Hawker had been located by wireless at various stages of his journey. There was a feeling of intense relief that the airmen were at least safe, even if the flight had not been accomplished, when an Admiralty wireless message from Castletown announced, that Hawker fell into the sea forty miles from Loophead at the mouth of the Shannon. Hopes were practically extinguished, however, at two o'clock this morning when the Air Ministry announced that the Admiral at Queenstown had telegraphed that the Castletown wireless station considered the report of Hawker's descent into the sea as unreliable and that the warships which had been ordered to search the area had been notified accordingly.

The Board of Admiralty stated at midnight that is was still investigating the mystery.

Public interest and anxiety in the flight is most intense. The King caused enquiries to be made of the Air Ministry yesterday. Mrs. Hawker decked her house at Surbiton with flags in honour of her husband. She went to Brooklands in the afternoon and joined the crowd, hoping that Hawker would land there.

In the House of Commons Mr. Elliot expressed the universal disappointment at the negligence of the Government in failing to give Hawker proper support and said the country would be unsparing in its condemnation of the Government's desperate carelessness as regards the honour of this country and the lives of two gallant gentlemen.

Mr. Pratt in reply said he did not think the Government responsible but promised to bring Mr. Elliot's remarks to the attention of the Government.

Sir J. Wedgewood Benn asked what steps had been taken to aid Hawker in the enterprise and expressed the high admiration of the splendid spirit shown by the gallant airmen.

There was no reply.—Reuter.

"THE TRADITION OF THE BRITISH ARMY."

"The Tradition of the British Army?" you will say. "What do I know about it? Why, as much as the next man, I suppose. I know all about Waterloo and-er-Trafalgar and all these jolly old battles," — this a little vaguely.

Oh! my "Young Guard," my newborn "leathernecks," (as sailors call us) my budding Tommy Atkins, what do you know of tradition, of history, of legend and fairy tale of battle honours gained and nicknames earned, of heroic deeds and amusing incidents, what do you know of the doings of the men of your regiment one, two, three or four hundred years ago? Perhaps some of you know a little and the majority of you know—nothing! Nor is it your fault, for in many cases you have never been told, owing to the fact that the officers are nearly as badly informed as you are!

Probably four out of five officers could tell you who the leading lady is in "Kiss me Quick" at the Gaiety, and the men in the ranks would each have some particular football, boxing or cricket hero.

But do you all know the story of the badge which you clean so carefully with "Soldiers' Friend" every morning? Do you know why you wear it, what it means, how it was earned, who gave it, when, and what it looked like in 1752.? Of course not! Oh believe me, the lack of knowledge of our Army concerning itself is amazing, pitiful. Where can you find such glorious pages in any other army's history? What army but ours points back four centuries and can still say, "These were regular soldiers?" What other army gives a particular crest to every one of its regiments? Can any nation boast of such a record of successful fighting in every chink and corner of the wide world as we can and do boast of? Assuredly not. Then it ought to be our pleasant duty to rose out from the darkness of oblivion "The Story of the Regiment."

It is no obnoxious task when you have found some book on the subject — I have such a one at home which is crammed full of it all; it cost but two shillings—and having learnt a little of what your regiment did back through the ages, I feel certain you will re-echo Queen Guinevere's heart-broken:—

"It surely was my profit had I known;
It would have been my pleasure had I seen."

For here romance, tragedy, heroism, devotion to to duty, comical asides, curious fashions and quaint anecdotes are all to be found in abundance and once more truth is stranger than fiction, and the pages can bring forth figure after figure who deserves to go on down to history till the past and present are all one and the Army is no more. There are things which, if every man knew them, would add to the pride of the regiment and help to make esprit-de-corps.

Does every young Argyll and Sutherland Highlander know that his is the only infantry regiment in the British Army to flaunt the honour "Balaclava" on its colour? Do you of the Suffolk Regiment, you of the Lancashire Fusiliers, and from others as well, know that on August 1st of every year it is your right to wear a rose, in memory of Minden, in 1759? Could every 12th Lancer tell me the origin of that custom which bade the band of the regiment play five hymns every evening for 100 years? Can I go up to any youthful 3rd Hussar and be certain that he will tell me what Colonel Bland said to King George II the year after Dettingen, when asked where most of his men were?

You ought to know! They were worthy of you, those forefathers of yours, in quaint red coats and tall hats. They deserve to be read about. They made your regiment what it is, and they bought you the crest you wear — and very dearly too sometimes.

"The Tradition of the British Army!" It is being forgotten.

THE OPERA

"FIDELIO" AND "TIEFLAND."

"Fidelio" and "Tiefland", which were performed on Saturday and Sunday, represent to us very different types of opera. This is not to be wondered at, seeing that Beethoven was born in 1770 and D'Albert in 1864, the operas being first produced on dates about a century apart. It should therefore be expected that D'Albert's music should show the fruits of a century of musical and dramatic development. In an opera such as "Fidelio" the introduction of spoken dialogue between vocal numbers breaks the continuity of the whole, while in the grand opera style of "Tiefland," the objection to be taken is that parts of the text wholly unsuitable for musical expression have to be sung. It is always a case of Scylla and Charybdis.

The two operas are alike in this respect that they both work up to an effective, dramatic and musical climax. But what a difference there is in the nature of the situation!

In the one is depicted the devotion and heroism of Fidelio in thwarting the murderous designs of Pizarro, and her joyous reunion with her husband. In the other, one is regaled with the murder of Sebastiano and the carrying off in triumph of this villain's mistress by the altogether unsympathetic character of the yokel, Pedro, her bridegroom. No doubt according to modern ideas "Fidelio" is only "sweet" while "Tiefland" is "strong."

In the language of smells I am inclined to agree. Musically of course, there is a great gulf between the two. Beethoven frequently employs unison passages with varied rhythmic effects for the interpretation of deep emotion.

D'Albert, like other moderns, employs forcible harmonic and orchestral devices. Despite the fact that Beethoven uses only the simplest means of musical expression for his great climax, one cannot help feeling that he is able to work up his audience to a higher pitch of emotional feeling than D'Albert can achieve with the much greater musical knowledge at his disposal, and with all the resources of a modern orchestra.

There is no need to dilute on the sheer beauty of Beethoven's music. Perhaps one of the most charming effects is produced by the oboe melody which accompanies Florestan's song in prison which was beautifully played.

The orchestra was altogether very good, but it seems a pity to play the Leonora overture after the action of the drama is practically over. It would be better before the second act.

Herr Liszewski's singing was not sufficiently saturnine for Pizarro, giving more the idea of a nero than a villain. Herr Gless was as usual delightful as Rocco.

In the music of Tiefland one realizes at once that D'Albert was not wholly unacquainted with the works of Wagner which is all to the good. This is noticeable more in the harmonic progressions than in the melody. At the same time at the opening of the opera one can imagine Kurwenal's turning up from a performance of Tristan and asking for the right tune, and to have it played on the English horn instead of the clarionette.

THEORY AND PRACTICE.

We give, on another page, an illustration showing, some of the buildings that are being occupied as the Army Technical College at Siegburg. In addition to these, two large workshops are being taken each measuring about 200 feet in length by 40 or 50 feet in width; one of these is to form the engineering, machine and fitting shop, the other will contain the woodworking, bench and machine shop, a shop for electrical work, another for plumbing and whitesmith's work and, in the annexe, a complete smith's shop. From a recent visit it is clear, that rapid progress is being made in getting together the modern machine-power tools necessary to such a comprehensive scheme as that contemplated. The three outstanding features of that scheme, as it has been communicated to us, are the provision of a "trades-refresher" school with classes in technical subjects, an arts and craft workshop, and, for those, whose ultimate aim is one of the higher levels, courses leading to professional qualification as an architect or in one of the branches of engineering. It is to the first named of these, the trades-refresher school, that the great number of existing apprentices serving in the Army of occupation may be expected to gravitate. Here we hope to see the beginning of that judicious blending of theory and practice without which modern efficiency in utilitarian matters is unattainable, or attainable only at an expense too great to allow of serious competition with those manufacturing countries where the interdependance of science and industry is recognised as of real commercial value. How often have theory and practice been contrasted and ranged into antagonistic camps as if mutually repellent in nature? There is no practice that cannot be improved by theory and no theory that can be perfected without practice. To speak of them as independent is a contradiction: each is the handmaiden of the other. As someone has said, "if they do not agree, either the theory is wrong, or the practice is incorrect." It is by the study of both together that the most correct method is arrived at; therefore we are glad to learn that suitable provision in this direction is to be made at the Army Technical College. The Times special correspondent in a recent article, in which he deals generally with the provision for the educational needs of the Army of the Rhine, draws attention to the German example in this connection and points out that, while the German is as anxious as other workers to shorten his hours of labour, as a learner he thinks nothing of a twelve-hour day. That is, of course, as a learner in his own interests, since they are also the interests of his nation, are well provided for. How extensive that provision is can best be realised by a visit to the three trades and technical schools in this city: the completeness of the trade training in all branches of industry must be seen to be believed. To return to the Times article we have quoted the correspondent; it by no means follows that we entirely agree with all the deductions in the leaderette based upon his report. For one thing the army has to keep on being the army which is perhaps a truism and trite but none the less a fact. Therefore these and similar educational courses can be but brief incidents with us and, therefore, it will be "up to" the students to make them intensive courses. For, and let it not be overlooked, there is another and none the less fatiguing war going on even now, the competitive war for industrial supremacy in the markets of the world. Again we note a pleasing feature in the scheme of technical education; some provision is to be made for the less fortunately placed soldier who is not a skilled tradesman, by giving some instruction in a skilled rating in which there is no rigid system of apprenticeship.

"SHELL SHOCK."

Shell Shock. — A composition of flavoured air and colour, which looks like a beautifully iced cake, a work of art in its trimmings and gorgeous colours. The various flavours of the "cakes" are very good and the small particle of jam on them looks very tempting, but on attacking an "eine mark fünfty" portion with the spoon supplied therewith, it proves to be nothing but a swindle, a churned-up froth, but very pleasing to the taste. But after two or three portions, which you feel you must have, according to the number of marks in your possession and the period between now and next pay day, you feel like a well-filled balloon, and more like leaving the tea rooms by the skylight than the stairs made, of course, for the purpose. Therefore as I said before, the best thing to do is to keep your mind occupied, so that you are not tempted by these beautiful sirens, which lure you on to the rocks, and rob you of your marks, for you must buy some of their chief accomplices, the "Sawdust Biscuits" to serve as ballast or you'll never return to your billet, but sample the pleasures of a Jules Verne voyage to the moon instead.

The most marvellous accomplishment of the German is the mysterious way they get the stuff to stay on the plate. Goodness alone knows how they do it.

"Shell Shock" is but another German atrocity. A concoction, which we cannot help buying though the price is robbery, that will reduce the strength of the Army of Occupation so much that Fritz can safely start war again, on the profits made by Shell Shock. I am a slave to it as much as Billie Carlton was to cocaine, and know it will lead me to ruin and a horrible death — ah! Only the other day I heard from very reliable authorities that an unsuspecting newcomer to the Rhineland, having succumbed to the temptations of the beautiful sights in the Café windows, floated away and entered one of the windows of the grey monastery which stands on the top of Michaelsberg, overlooking Seigberg. There he's suffering torture from the silent monks no doubt.

The remaining stock of it I suppose they will send over in a barrage, squirted through small muzzled guns, so that it is churned into an enormous volume. Then we'll flounder in the midst of it, like the fly that I saw settle on a piece of it, for it will not bear a fly's weight on its surface. He was like an unhappy man sinking into the depths of a quicksand which look perfectly sound outside.

"Friends, soldiers and countrymen, lend me your ears." Keep away, play not with the fire lest thy life be made an abomination unto thee.

J.A.G.

Most effective musically and dramatically is the scene at the end of the first act between Pedro and Martha, as is also the musical setting to Martha's narrative of her rather lurid past. The whole production was very good indeed and one was able to hear Frau Mimi Werhard-Poensgen's singing to advantage in the less intense moments of the opera. The part of Sebastiano was well suited to Herr Liszewski, while Herr Menzinski was excellent as the silly shepherd.

The only really sympathetic character behind the footlights was the electrician who worked the sunrise effect on the snow mountains which was beautifully done.

—A. F. Jones.

EXTRACTS FROM THE LETTERS OF A PRODIGAL SON.

A PILGRIMAGE.

I chose a gloriously sunny day for my first visit to Cologne. For four months I had held out against the lure of the great city and at last I had to take the plunge.

On arriving at the West Station I asked an F.M.P. to direct me to the Cologne Post Office. I wanted the office of The Cologne Post, but through my misuse of the clarity of our language I was deservedly directed to the Post Office where registered envelopes and War Bonds are sold. After a while, however, I found the offices of Cologne's premier news-paper. It is a wondrous building of "sky-scraper" proportions — as I found to my cost when I climbed the stairs leading to that "holy of holies," the News-Editor's sanctum. Having run out of visiting cards I sent in my pay-book, but was informed it was not of sufficient interest for publication, and was also told that the Field Cashiers' office was quite a long way off. This slight misunderstanding was put right when I explained to the office boy that I wished to see the "News-Editor" on a matter of urgent business. Thereupon I was shown into a modestly furnished office and, overcoming my natural bashfulness, I explained my business.

Briefly, my object was to suggest that an up-to-date publication like The Cologne Post needed a special correspondent in London, and I offered my services in that capacity knowing full well that an enterprising and capable journalist was needed for such a post (I also wish to get home). The Editor gave me a compassionate look and murmured purringly, "Try the 'Kladderadatsch'."

The official reason of my visit to Cologne was to perform a certain duty at the G.H.Q. Rhine Army, Hotel Excelsior. On my way there I strictly adhered to the saluting regulations — as every good soldier should do — and I studiously tried to give the "circular motion" to every officer I passed, but regretfully found that it was an annoying impossibility.

My duty done, I left the Excelsior by the main entrance and as I did so the Guard turned out and "presented arms," while trumpets trumped triumphantly. I was astounded — but afterwards discovered that the compliment was not intended for me.

My return train was leaving Cologne at 14.30 hours and having three hours to wait I sought out a comfortable place wherein I could sit down and eat my "unconsumed portion" of the day's ration which, it is written, a soldier should take with him when proceeding on temporary duty away from his unit.

I took my frugal meal at a corner table at the Café P—. The ornate decorations of this place, and the winsome wine that I imbibed, reminded me of the livelier days of my youth when Gatte's, Lockharts, The Ritz, and Sam Isaacs were favoured by my patronage.

However, I would willingly "swap" all the wine obtainable in the Café P— for one long sweet-swinging-swipe of Bass at the Saloon Bar of the "Elepnant and Castle." That is by the way — a long way.

While I was ruminating upon my virtuous past, a young lady of noble proportions seated herself gracefully in a chair near my table. Sheba in all her glory never wore a hat like unto that of this Fräulein. I continued ruminating, but was disturbed when a waiter came to my table and politely informed me that I was not allowed to be seated near German civilians of either sex, and that the rules on this point were strictly observed. He explained the point to me so that I had not the heart to give him my explanation of the incident and so drank my wine and made for the ever-moving door.

As I passed through the revolving apparatus I received a smack in the back from one of the moving partitions which brought to my mind the days when I used to suffer from a chronic "chuck-out" from kindred establishments in the cold, cruel town of London.

The Rathouse struck me as being like an elaborate workhouse and I became home-sick at the sight of it. My next spasm of excitement was my visit to the great Cathedral. Much has been written about the vast Dom by far abler pens than mine. The stumpy towers and highly ornamented exterior did not impress me so much as did the grandeur of the interior with those vast columns of white stone.

"The Dom is magnificient, but painfully new," I remarked to an American soldier as he and I walked down the entrance steps together. "Yes!" he announced, "But the guy who built that lot was some bricklayer, Sarge!"

I agreed, and we parted. I then went to the station and finding my train on the point of leaving I got aboard and left Cologne — unwept, unsung, and no band. What a life!

"THE NAUGHTY WIFE".

ENTERTAINMENT BY 52nd BEDFORDS CONCERT PARTY.

During the past week concerts by the above party were given at Kaldauen, Wolperath, and Braschoss, each performance being an unqualified success. The party was organised by and under the direction of the Rev. Capt. Kemp, C.F. The troops who crowded the three halls had their first experience of "jazz" from the band which gave some splendid selections under the baton of Sergt. Drmr. Barrett. Pte. Merry gave a comic interlude, a la Charlie Chaplin; Sergt. Stone was loudly encored for his selections on the Mandoline; and Sergt. Drmr. Bowyett scored heavily with his songs and monologues.

The second half of the programme consisted of that splendid comedy "The naughty wife", in which Cpl. Machen as Mr. Mivins, Cpl. Furby as Mrs. Mivens (the naughty wife), Sergt. Foster as Mr. Tamberluke Brown, splendidly sustained the chief parts. They were excellently supported by Signaller Bacon who made a most captivating Mary, Drmr. Childs as "Bob" the waiter, and Boy Maguire who caused great amusement as Jemima Ann.

At Wolperath and Braschoss when the party were assisted by C.Q.M.S. Veasey and C.Q.M.S. Scales, who sang several songs in fine style, Sergts. Jackson and G. Wood Stone also gave several selections on the Zither harp; while Pte. Adams gave the monologue "Spotty" and Sergt. Davies told a few short stories. R.S.M. Walker made an effective chairman.

THE FRATERNISERS.

CLEVER CONCERT PARTY'S DEBUT AT MUNSTEREIFEL.

A galaxy of talent. This aptly sums up the concert party of the 51st South Wales Borderers, "The Fraternisers," who made their bow to the Army of the Rhine at Munstereifel in Friday evening. Long before the commencement there was standing room only, and the waiting period until the curtain went up was enlivened by Sergt. Woodland and his merry orchestra.

The success of the party is undoubtedly due in a very large measure to 2nd Lieut. T.R. Bromham. The possession of various voices and accents, and an excellent repertoire of stories is bound to appeal to an audience. When in addition one is also a female impersonator, and a ventriloquist the appeal becomes irresistible. He was well supported by Lieut. G. Esmond, who proved equally as entertaining in dramatic recitations, as in comic work, or in the more serious note struck by Kipling and Elgars' "Sweepers." 2nd Lieut. Duchett obtained the laughter of the house with his "Burglar Jim" song, and "Shut up," while as an encore he gave the time-honoured "Village Pump," his facial contortions showing to great advantage in the latter. Also one must not forget Capt. Hurst, the lade-dee-da, the immaculate Piccadilly knut, who played his part in the party in most capable style.

The other members of the party were L/Cpl. Bo as an exceeding y smart step-dancer, Sergt. Delph, a tenor, and Pte. Jones a baritone. The concert concluded with a very witty little sketch, "The Broken Mirror," the parts of Capt. Oswald" "His Butler," and "The Servant Girl," being well taken by Capt. Hurst, Lieut. Duchett, and Drummer Symond respectively.

THE "RED PATCHES" CONCERT PARTY.

Although only a few weeks have elapsed since the "Red Patches" Concert Party (52nd Bn. Manchester Regt.) gave their initial performance, they have already established a big reputation, which is being enhanced after each performance. This talented party, each member an artist of high standing, has proved a great draw, and has in the past fortnight played to large and appreciative audiences at Geistingen, Hennef, Siegburg, Menden, Hangelar and the neighbouring areas. The salient features of their performance are originality, excellent singing, and clean-toned burlesque. The "Red Patches" will shortly pay a visit to Cologne and district.

LEAVE CLUB WHIST DRIVE.

The second of the weekly whist drives which is to be held at the British Empire Leave Club tomorrow, promises to be even more successful than that of a week ago. Weather permitting, the drive will be carried out in the spacious club gardens and accomodation will thus be available for an increased number of participants. There will again be six prizes of a substantial character for the successful competitors, in addition to which there will be a sealed number prize given by a donor who wishes to remain anonymous. There will be no booking in advance, the motto on this occasion being "First come first served." In order to allow of an interval for refreshments without unduly prolonging the game it is essential that intending players should be on hand not later than 6.15 so that a start may be made punctually at the half hour.

ENTERTAINMENTS FOR THE WEEK.

WEDNESDAY: Besides the usual 5 o'clock concert the American Jazz Band is coming up specially from Coblenz to play for the dance in the theatre from 6.30—9.

THURSDAY: The Pipers of the 11th Royal Scots will pipe to lovers of the Pipers from 5—6, and if the weather is fine the whist drive at 6.30 will be held in the garden.

FRIDAY: Those who wish to hear of the adventures of our Silent Navy will flock to the theatre to hear Lt. C.H.B. Foxley speak on "Anti-Submarine Warfare" from 7—8 pm.

SATURDAY: Being Empire Day the Club will be en Fete, and during the dance from 8.30—9 there will be a special March Past with flags.

BATTALION v DIVISION.

INTERESTING FOOTBALL MATCH At WESSELING.

Though the present weather is not exactly ideal for football, it does not follow that sport loses all its interest. If this is so, the match at Wesseling between the 1/4th Cheshires and the H.Q Staff of the 1st Division, must have proved to be the proverbial exception to the general rule, for in spite of the high score, the game was interesting throughout. To avoid the heat however, the match was played in the evening and not in the afternoon as previously arranged.

Both teams played an excellent game, but the 1/4th Cheshires were the superior team by far, and asserted their superiority right from the kick off. They finally won by 6 goals to nil. The scorers for the victors were:—Pte. Sharpe (2), Pte. Fairclough and Pte. Turner (2) and Pte. Gracey.

The game was by no means as uninteresting as the score suggests, for the Divisional "goalie" gave an excellent account of himself. The six shots which did get past him were absolute "scorchers," and it was practically impossible for him to save them.

Preparations are proceeding apace for the Battalion Sports of the 1/4th Cheshires which are to be held shortly, and it is expected that they will well maintain the tradions of the 1/4th as a sporting battalion.

A DING-DONG FINAL.

No. 1 v. No. 6 PLATOON 9th GLOUCESTERS.

Before a good attendance this inter-platoon final was played at Leuchlingen on Wednesday.

At the commencement play became fast and exciting and after 20 minutes play Philpotts, receiving a nice pass from Carter, dashed past the backs and scored a good goal for No. 6. Keeping up the pressure the lead was increased at the end of 30 minutes play. Rousell receiving on the wing, raced away and closing in, scored with a great shot, amidst tremendous cheering. The game was being fought out at a great pace. Half-time arrived with the score:—6 Platoon 2; 1 Platoon 0.

On resuming No. 6 went right away from the kick-off and Rousell again scored. From this point No. 1 Platoon played well, applying severe pressure, but met two resolute backs in King and White. It was typical football for final, and excitement was great. All the winning team played splendidly, the "shining lights" being White, King, Payne, Williams and Rousell, whilst for the losers Brindle and Sherwood wer emost conspicuous.

Final Result:—

No. 6 Platoon 3; No. 1 Platoon 0.

"D" COY. 1/5 SOUTH STAFFS v. "A" BATTERY, R.F.A. HOSTEL.

The return match between these two teams was played on "Don's" Ground on Wednesday, a thrilling game ending in "Don" Coy winning by 4 goals to 1. After a period of midfield play, the "Don's" made the "running" and the Battery's right back put through his own goal.

The Gunners later broke away, making the score one goal each, and half time came with the score unaltered.

On the resumption, the game opened at a great pace. Lathe, receiving a pass in midfield, dribbled through the defence, crowning a brilliant movement by a lovely shot, thus giving D Coy the lead. Result: "D" Coy, 4 goals; "A" Battery 1 goal.

SPORTING ITEMS IN BRIEF.

Aberdovey Golf Club.

A number of interesting competitions have been arranged in connection with the Whitsuntide meeting of the Aberdovey Golf Club.

50/- Tennis Rackets.

Tennis rackets which cost thirty shillings before the war now cost fifty shillings, the increase in price being generally typical.

Too Much Of A Good Thing.

As regards the public, says the "Observer", there are already unmistakable signs, that half-past seven as the time for drawing stumps is too late. At the Oval recently not more than 200 people remained till the end, and at Lord's the ground empties fast during the last hour.

Sports Gear Shortage.

There is an acute shortage of sports gear of all kinds in England at present. Judging by the orders which have poured in during the last few days demobilized members of the British Army are rushing in a body from the drill-square to tennis-court and cricket ground.

A.B.A. Championships.

All things considered the entries received for the Amateur Boxing Association Championships, to be held on May 23 and 24 at the Northampton Institute, Clerkenwell, are very satisfactory, 65 names having been sent in for the various weights.

Amateur's Successful Debut.

Mr. O. Dugdale, an officer in the Scots Guards and son of Mr. J. L. Dugdale, the squire of Picton, made a first public appearance in the saddle at Lewes last week on Pollen.

Race-Horse Purchaser.

Mr. Cecil C. Hatry, one of the principals in City banking circles, blooded his new colours with Furious last week. He has just bought Furore, Matruh, and the useful 3-year old at a big figure for Percy Woodland to train.

Stage Golfings Society.

The leading golfers in thd theatrical profession have revived their organisation, which before the war was known as the George Edwardes C.S., and which has been renamed the Stage Golfing Society.

Saturday Cricket.

A paper specially prepared by the London Cricket Conference shows that in pre-war days about 100,000 men and youths played cricket on Saturdays in Greater London alone, and that about 8,000 teams, consisting of all grades and classes, were then in being.

Tournament Polo.

Tournament polo begins this week when the contest for the Social Club's Cup takes place at Burlingham. There are four entries this year namely (for the first time) a Bachelors' Club team, and teams from the Cavalry Club; Royal Automobile Club, and White's Club respectively.

"THE COLOGNE POST" CRICKET CUP.

BONN LEAGUE FIXTURES.

Below, we print the first day's fixtures for the league in the Bonn area, but as so many club officials have failed to notify us of their location, it is impossible to publish the complete lists for all the leagues to-day, as was intended.

To morrow and on subsequent days we will publish either one or two further leagues, according to the information that reaches this office and, in the meantime, this will enable those secretaries who have not already done so, to send us the name of the league area in which they desire to be included.

Time is racing on and it is essential that the leagues should get started. Therefore we have dated the first matches for Wednesday, 28th May, and we trust that clubs will get busy right away in making arrangements so that there shall be no hitch in disposing of the matches.

It is generally agreed that three matches a week would be a popular number, and we propose that Monday, Wednesday and Saturday are likely to be the most suitable days.

As circumstances vary considerably in various units, the time for the start of the matches is a matter most satisfactorily arranged between the opposing clubs themselves.

SPORT IN ENGLAND.

NEW CRICKET PROBLEM.

PLAYERS DISTURBED BY AEROPLANES OVER LORD'S.

The popularity of flying is causing a new problem in cricket circles. Several aeroplanes at different times swept over Lord's on Saturday apparently in order to give the passengers a view of the cricket from the air.

The players were disconcerted and there was a temporary stoppage just when Gunn and Lee were nearing centuries. Lee shortly afterwards misplayed a ball and was caught at the wicket, many spectators attributing his downfall to the disturbing effect of an aeroplane.

Old cricket enthusiasts declare the question who owns the air over Lord's must be settled without delay.—Reuter.

THE DAVIS CUP.

A Reuter telegram from Sydney states that South Africa's challenge for the Davis Cup has been accepted. The redraw resulted:—

South African versus Great Britain.
Belgium versus France.

The winners meet in a final round to decide who will oppose Australasia for the Cup at Sydney.

SIR DOUGLAS HAIG BEATEN AT GOLF.

Lady Haig and the professional Andrew Kirkaldy beat Sir Douglas Haig and General Kiggell by two holes in a Golf foursome at St. Andrews on Saturday.

THE SIDNEY CUP.

The race for the Sydney Cup was run at Randwick, New South Wales, on Monday. The result was:— 1, Janor 12—11; 2, Night Watch 5—1; 3, Arch Morella, 25—1. Won by three lengths; one and a quarter lengths between the second and third.

LATEST LONDON BETTING.

The Derby:— 13 to 7 The Panther, offered; 5 to 1 Lord Basil offered; 10 to 1 Bucaun; 100 to 7 Grand Parade, Stefan the Great, and Paper Money, taken and offered.

TANCY LEE DEFEATED.

BOXING AT LONDON AND LIVERPOOL.

In a fifteen round contest at the National Sporting Club on Monday, Petty Officer Eddie Shevlin, America, beat Eddie Beattie, Scotland on points.

Charlie Stone, Wales, beat Tancy Lee in the fifteenth of a twenty-round contest at Liverpool on Monday.

The annual volume of the "Racing Calendar," issued yesterday, shows that the value to the winner of stakes won during 1918 (not including prizes to second and third horses) was as follows:—England, 369 races, (including one motor, £151,437; Ireland, 322 races, £51,130; and Scotland nil.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

Wednesday, May 21, 1919.

Wind Easterly 10—15 miles per hour. Fine with some afternoon cloud. Visibility indifferent early, good during day. Moderate temperature.

MAN AND SUPERMAN.

ARMY DRAMATIC COMPANY'S LATEST SUCCESS.

The Rhine Army Dramatic Company achieved another great triumph on Monday when they submitted to a crowded audience the first of six performances of Bernard Shaw's "Man and Superman" at the Deutsche Theatre, Cologne.

Any misgiving that may have been felt as to the ability of a company of such recent birth successfully to tackle so ambitious a proposition, was dispelled after the first performance of "The Mollusc". In this initial effort, the members revealed such sterling merit that one felt beforehand that the brilliance of the "book" of "Man and Superman" would suffer nothing as a result of indifferent acting. This proved to be an accurate trend of reasoning and it was not surprising to find a well-filled theatre some time before the performance was timed to commence.

John Tanner is the individual represented in the title. He is a man of extraordinary character, and spends the greater part of his time in hitting out in all directions at all our familiar conventions. This attitude sometimes lands him into rather awkward situations and positions of considerable embarrassment. But what cares he? Endowed with a fluent tongue and a quick wit, he invariably talks himself out of these predicaments with absolute success. He has another peculiar trait in his character, too. Although admittedly in love with all members of the fair sex, he never tires of renouncing the ulterior designs in the excercise of their fascinations.

It is fairly obvious from the start that John has more than a sneaking regard for the fair and charming Ann Whitefield, and that the affection is reciprocated is even more apparent. He positively and vigorously refuses to admit this state of mind to himself, however, and for this reason he calls the lady whom he declares to be ensnaring him many horrible things that no ordinary mortal would dream of saying to his lady love.

The "Man" is in love and craves for the satisfaction of human affection; the "Superman" in his construction is above all this sort of thing, and sees in the prospect of the natural outcome of love, nothing but misery and unhappiness.

It is the fight between these conflicting phases that forms the basis of the play, but to keep interest alive, we have glimpses of the duplicity of modern people and the psychology of woman.

The Artistes Successful Efforts.

Lieut. S.E. Percy, R.L.I. on Monday played the part of John Tanner in a manner born only of long experience. He gave to the play a brightness and crispness that would have been lacking had the part been in the hands of a less brilliant and versatile actor. He was ably supported by Miss Shirley King who was in every way charming as Ann Whitefield. Major A.J.C. Pollock, R.G.A. was thoroughly "American" as Hector Malone, while Miss Inez Bensusan undertook the role of the elderly Mrs. Whitefield with absolute trueness to life.

The important part of Octavious Robinson was entrusted to Corporal Bernard-Jukes, Gordon Highlanders, who, while his impersonation was quite good, displayed signs of "first-night" nervousness. He was not easy and natural in his gesticulations, but he showed considerable promise, and these little trifles will be overcome in course of time.

Miss Gabriel Paul was a delightfully young and winsome Violet Robinson and Miss Beale and Miss Forbes-Adams performed the little work that devolved upon them with creditable success.

By no means the least prominent in the caste, for the excellence of his efforts, was Lieut. C. Spiegelhalter, Lancashire Fusiliers, who made a splendid Roebuck Ramsden. As Henry Straker (more frequently known as 'Enery) Lieut. A.R. Whatmore, R.A.S.C. was natural and displayed a real appreciation of the mannerisms of the character he represented. Lieut E. Mearn D.L.I. made the most of his opportunities as Old Malone.

The play which is in three acts was produced by Lieut. S.E. Percy. The stage director is Capt. A.H. Read, London Division, and Lieut. Mocatta, 1st West Yorks is the stage manager.

SPORT NOTES — 3rd BATTALION M. G. C.

September seems a long way off; nevertheless many enthusiasts have started training in earnest for the Army Championships in that month. All 3rd Bn M.G.C. men can practise any night by applying to the Sports Officer, who makes the necessary arrangements with companies. It is hoped that the Third Battalion will put up a good show in the Championship.

King Willow again called and was answered by a considerable number of men, who played a practice match on the grass pitch outside the barracks. Rumour hath it that this same pitch is soon to become a site for horses or mule lines. And what will King Willow do then poor thing?

Perhaps the scores for the match mentioned yesterday between Wallahs and the Battalion will be of interest. Here they are:— Cpl. Johnson "A" 55 bowled; Sig. Lawson. "D" 8 run out; Pte. Cank "C" 25 bowled; Pte. Oldroy 12 not out.

Everybody lives in hopes of some aquatic sports shortly, and it is becoming quite usual for a number of men to take practice at the excellent swimming baths at Ehrenfeld. Many who made considerable use of these whilst the Battalion was stationed there regret that it is such a long way back.

The splendid Gymnasium too that was in our old quarters is sadly missed.

The Surrey Walking Club held a scratch walking race on Saturday at Huckbridge, over seven miles. There were 29 entries, the result being: 1, A.M. Hehir, time 55 mins. 59 and four fifth secs.; 2, F.C. Cater. Herne Hill Harriers, 58 mins. 27 secs.

THE COLOGNE POST

HOTEL DISCH CONCERT

COLOGNE COMPOSER'S WORKS.

To-night at 6.30 p.m., in the Rokoko Hall of the Hotel Disch, a pecial concert will take place when the works of the Cologne composer, Ewald Straesser, will be given. Straesser is one of the most prominent composers of modern times. His name is known everywhere and the concert promises to be a great musical event.

There will be two new items: the "4th string quartett" and an "allegro" for the piano. In addition there will be songs and a trio for violin, violincello, and piano. The party includes Frau Grimm-Mittelmann, contralto; Max van de Sandt, Pianist, and Riele Queling, Eugen Brunell, Grete Eweler, Willy Lamping (Stringquartett) who guarantee a first-class performance of the works of Straesser. The composer will accompany his songs himself. Tickets may be obtained at Tonger's Am Hof, and at the entrance to the Hotel Disch.

OUR BOOKSHELF.

"THE 3rd Bn. M.G.C. MAGAZINE."

"The 3rd Battalion Machine Gun Corps Magazine," the May number of which is to hand, is an exceedingly well-printed publication, turned out in a neat and artistic manner which reflects the greatest credit on the Continental printers concerned. A bright and breezy production, the contents are as interesting as they are varied. There is a capital sketch of "The Colonel" who, in the preface of issue Number One, asks for the co-operation of all ranks to make the magazine in every sense a real live organ of their community. This object, by the way, seems to have been pretty well attained already.

The chronicles of the Battalion contain a stirring account of its exploits during those trying days of March 1918, when the full force of Ludendorff's onslaught was directed against the particular sector in which they were at the time.

The promoters have wisely devoted especial attention to Battalion sports, and the Sports' pages promise to be very interesting. There is a page and a half of spicy reading under the title "Harassing Fire," and in "Between Ourselves," the acting-Editor chats with his readers, mentioning incidentally that one of their old officers, Lieut. Alec Waugh, who was taken prisoner on 28th March, 1918, has written a book entitled "The Prisoners of Mainz." "Rex" writes a beautiful poem "The Price," dedicated to "Our dear Dead."

The magazine is excellent value for the sixpence charged, and will be of especial interest to members of the Third Division whether they be infantry men or gunners, while we can imagine no more suitable souvenir from Rhineland to send to old comrades of the Battalion now "demobbed." We congratulate the hon. Editor, Lt.-Col. W. J. Cranston, D. S. O., and the acting-Editor, 2nd Lieut. Wallace King on the readable magazine they have produced, and we look forward with interest to future issues.

Printed and published by "The Cologne Post" at 25 Marzellen-Straße, Cologne, May 21. 1919.

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

WHO IS TO DECIDE?

The Delegates or the People.

With regard to the Peace Terms, the German people can be divided into three distinct categories: (1) the right wing and centre party, who prefer not to sign; (2) the democrats and majority socialists, who wish for a plebiscitum, but who at the same time are making propaganda for a refusal; and (3) the independent socialists, who seem ready to sign the terms as they now stand.

At the present time the right wing consists of the bon genre, amongst them being the bureaucracy, monarchists, conservatives, capitalists — many of whom will lose greatly, both in money and prestige, should the terms be signed.

The centre party consists of the Roman Catholics, who throughout the war supported the Government and who are, even yet, prone to serve those in authority regardless of their value.

In yesterday's issue we gave the distinction between the majority socialists and the independents, the remaining parties which make up categories (2) and (3) respectively.

A great responsibility.

In defence of the necessity for a plebiscitum the Vorwarts, the majority socialists' paper, says that whether the delegates refuse to sign or not, they will meet with much opposition from the German people and they will have many enemies. Also, those who disapprove of whatever action is taken will hold the delegates directly responsible. Whereas if a plebiscitum were taken, no certain individuals could be attacked and the nation would rise or fall according to the dictates of its own people.

"In the hour of the fate of a great people," states the paper, "the decision as to its further mode of existence ought not to be made without the consent of the individuals concerned. Then, when the answers are given, the Government merely has to execute the wish of the majority, thus freeing itself from the reproach inevitably resulting from any answer given on its own initiative."

PEACE OF THE WORLD.

APPEAL FOR THE SMALLER EASTERN STATES.

M. Take Jonescu, the Roumanian statesman, speaking at the Essex Hall on Saturday after a lecture by Professor Georges Blondel, appealed to the Western Allies not to neglect the economic support of the smaller Eastern States. Above all things, he asked them to facilitate the constitution of a political block from the Baltic to the Aegean, where Poland, Bohemia, Serbia, Roumania, and Greece would form an aggregate population of nearly 80 millions, and an area, in its variety of climate and topography, almost self contained. The tactful, yet enthusiastic aid of Great Britain and France was necessary, if Germany was not to exploit such fissures as might exist between these new and small states, and so, commercially speaking, recapture some, or all of them.

M. Jonescu asserted that the peace of the world depended on the continued solidarity of the Alliance between Great Britain and France. So long as they held together, so long would the Germans be impotent. The day they parted company, which he hoped and believed would be never, that day would recommence the hopes of "Deutschland uber Alles."

THE ARMY TRUSTEE.

In a pamphlet on "The Constitution and Powers of the Army Trustee," the War Office announces that the four additional directors appointed to the Corporation are Lord Weir, Sir John Simon, K.C., Major-General Sir Gerald Ellison, and Major R. L. Barclay. The Army Trustee, which is a non-profit sharing Corporation under the Companies Acts, is empowered to act as trustee of any moneys or securities the property of H. M. Forces, transferred to its custody.

The owner of some fowls which are alleged to have been stolen at Wimborne identified their heads, which were preserved in spirits and exhibited at the police court. He recognised them by marks on the combs and the very large lobes.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

The Editor, in publishing letters from Correspondents, will use his own discretion, and if necessary, limit the publishing of correspondence on any subject whatever. It must be understood, however that he is not responsible for the views stated.

All communications for this column should be brief and to the point, and preference will be given to those which bear the writers' signatures for publication. No letter will be published unless accompanied by rank name, and unit of sender, which are needed for the purpose of reference.

Many letters of a perverse nature have reached the office, and the Editor wishes to point out that these only cause waste of time both to the writer and the Editor himself. Letters of this nature will not be published.

A MISTAKEN IDENTITY.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.—I should be grateful if you will publish this letter, which I am sending after due consideration.

I have played at the Apollo Theatre for some ten days, and nearly every night after the performance I have had the mortification to hear that several members of the audience (including officers) had inquired who I was, and whether I was a "Jerry". Seeing that I was born in Derby, and studied at the Royal College of Music, Manchester, it is galling to me to think that after trying to do my best every evening to give some moments of pleasure to the audience, I should be possibly taken for a "Jerry". There is no greater insult to an Englishman, certainly none greater could be offered me.

Alfred Barker.

Answers to Correspondents.

[The flow of correspondence, since the Cologne Post was instituted, has been enormous, and the Editor would like to point out that only a certain number of the innumerable questions can be answered in each issue. Should any inquirer find that his question has not yet been answered, he can have the assurance that it will receive attention in due course, and the answer will appear accordingly. Many questions have been received which could be answered much easier by the Adjutant of the unit concerned, and all such cases which affect the unit commander must be taken to him and not sent here. — Ed.]

Gunner.—Yes, all pay for that period is forfeited.

W H.—Suggestion has been forwarded and is being dealt with.

B. Pearce.—Apply D.A.T.S., Stolkgasse.

37421.—Your Adjutant will give you the particulars you require.

N. O.—Thanks for your suggestions. We will make a note of them

A P.—We expect to publish an article on the subject before long. It would be too lengthy to answer in this column.

M. E.—See note to subscribers and contributors in this issue.

A. O.—You can get both stamps and postal orders at the Army Post Office, Stolkgasse, Cologne.

N Y.—We will give you an answer by letter in the course of a few days.

C. O. Y.—The population of Newcastle is approximately 278,107.

VISITS TO WAR GRAVES.

It is not yet possible to grant general permission to relatives to proceed to France or Belgium to visit graves or cemeteries. Large areas under the British Army of Occupation are entirely closed to visitors as the work of exhumation and concentration to central cemeteries of all isolated graves is taking place within these areas, and until this is much further advanced it is unlikely that the present restrictions can be removed. The removal of restrictions is also dependent upon such other factors as transport and accommodation, facilities for which in the areas in which most of the cemeteries are situated are still quite inadequate.

It should be added that the Minister of Transport recently announced in the French Chamber that it was not possible to grant travelling facilities at the present time for those wishing to visit the graves of soldiers who have died in France. A similar state of affairs exists in Belgium

As soon as conditions improve and it becomes possible to open up parts of the country public announcements as to the areas accessible for such visits will be made, says a war Office message.

BRITAIN'S LARGEST LINER.

The Aquitania, the largest British liner afloat, made her first call at Plymouth on Saturday in connection with the Cunard company's new Channel service from Southampton to Cherbourg and New York. She landed passengers and nearly 5,000 bags of mails and a quantity of specie.

Since the armistice Cunard liners have been engaged in transporting American and Canadian troops home. They have made 31 voyages in connection with this service. The Aquitania alone has carried 27,000, the Mauretania just under 20,000, and the Caronia and Carmania 24,000. The total for all the ships approaches 1,00,000. During the war Cunard liners made 230 voyages with American troops to Europe, and it is stated they transported nearly half of the total brought in British vessels.

The White Star liner Olympic left Southampton on Saturday carring about 256 Canadian officers and 4,960 other ranks, and also some 300 civilian passengers. The departing Canadians had an enthusiastic send-off.

In South Wales the value of the shares of steamship companies quoted on Cardiff Exchange has risen during the past few days. New companies offering alluring dividends to shareholders are being floated at Cardiff, Swansea, and Newport.

PARTITION OF THE TURKISH EMPIRE.

MOHAMMEDAN PROTEST.

GERMAN OBSERVATIONS OVERDUE.

MORE RUSSIAN SUCCESSES.

GERMAN OBSERVATIONS DELAYED.

COUNTER PROPOSALS.

The period allowed the German delegates for consideration of the Peace terms and the submission of their observations expired yesterday, but in spite of the utmost activity a few more days are likely to elapse before the German comments can be handed in.

It is reported that the Germans will submit counter-proposals among which will be urged:

1. Acknowledgment of President Wilson's fourteen points.
2. Settlement of the Polish question by a plebiscitum.
3. Refusal to consent to the annexation of the Sarre district.
4. Evacuation of the occupied area of the Rhineland.
5. Surrender of a greater part of the Navy but of fewer merchant ships.
6. Maintenance of a bigger army than as fixed by the Entente.

REPUDIATION OF LIABILITY.

In their answer to Count Brockdorff-Rantzau's note urging that the present German Government repudiates responsibility for the actions of the late Government, the Allies point out that the German argument is inadmissible. In 1871 Germany made the French republic responsible for the actions of Napoleon III. Even during this war Germany did not have consideration for the fact that in Russia another Government had superseded the Government which was in power at the outbreak of war. Germany must take the responsibility for the damages caused by her behaviour.

THE PROTEST OF ISLAM.

The statements made to the Council of Four by Lord Montague, the Maharajah of Bikanir and the Mussulman delegates of India seem to have made some impression.

The Mussulmans of India urge that they have taken a preponderant part in the fight against Turkey, the ally of Germany, and that it was promised to them that advantage should not be taken of the victory to humiliate Islam in the person of the Sultan.

Nothing has been definitely settled yet but it seems that Turkey's integrity will be respected, exclusive of the Arabian territory. The Sultan would remain at Constantinople and the different Allied Powers would share the protection of Turkey.

According to Le Temps Great Britain will administer Mesopotamia, Palestine and Arabia; France, Syria and Anatolia; the United States, Constantinople, Armenia and the districts of Adana and Mersina; Italy, Adalia and Konia; Greece, the coastal area of which Smyrna is the centre.

Le Journal, however, states that by special request of Mr. Lloyd George, Constantinople will be jointly administered by Great Britain, France and the United States.

ROUMANIAN ARMY STATIONARY.

Reuter understands that the Roumanian Army in Hungary still remains stationary on the river Theiss with two divisions in line and three in reserve in Transylvania. The Hungarian Soviet Army is showing some signs of renewed activity and reorganization while the Bolshevists appear still to be making preparations on the Dniester, with their chief centre at Tiraspol, on the left bank of that river.

ALLIES' EQUIPMENT FOR DENINKIN'S ARMY.

Reuter learns that valuable assistance is being given by the Allies to Deninkin's Army. Great Britain is supplying complete equipment, with arms and guns, for 250,000 men. The first consignment has already arrived and the remainder is on the way or on the point of despatch.

GERMAN OFFICER PRISONER'S ESCAPE.

First Lieutenant Kurt Vogel, who, on the 14th inst., was sentenced to two years and four months imprisonment in connection with the death of Rosa Luxemburg, was taken from prison on Saturday, according to a Berlin telegram, by an unknown infantry officer, provided with a false warrant, and is still missing.—Reuter.

RUSSIAN SUCCESS.

The War Office announces receipt of the news from Murmansk dated 19th May that Pavyenets, at the Northern extremity of Lake Onega, has been occupied by Russians. Before evacuating the place the Bolshevists removed all males over fourteen years of age also all steamers and launches. As the lake is icebound, however, the vessels cannot be far away.

VICEROY'S PROCLAMATION TO AFGHANS.

FUTILE HOPES.

Simla, 10th May. The Viceroy has issued a proclamation in which his Excellency says he desires to make known to loyal subjects of the King-Emperor the regrettable news that the Amir, violating all treaties and disregarding the steadfast policy of his wiser predecessors, has resolved on a sudden wanton attack on India.

The Viceroy believes this folly is due directly to internal events in Afghanistan, and has also reason to apprehend that the present breach of faith with India is the possibly long-delayed fruit of the efforts of the friends of Germany at Kabul who had failed in their endeavour to seduce the loyalty of the late Amir. His Excellency says he possesses evidence showing that the Amir excuses his treachery by pretending that India is in a state of revolution, which will react on Afghanistan, and has also told his people that in India neither property nor religion is safe. Relying on such falsehoods, he has called on Hindus and Mussulmans to show him allegiance. He has also falsely stated that the Sikhs had fired on British troops, and that Germany was about to recommence the war, and that the English were destroyed. The Viceroy also possesses proof that the Amir had prepared false leaflets for dissemination in India, and had made plans to corrupt and buy certain newspapers.

The Proclamation continues: "Inspired by futile hopes of seducing his Majesty's subjects, the Amir has commenced military operations. In suicidal folly the Amir has ventured to measure his strength against a Power which has just emerged victorious from the greatest war ever fought. The Government possess overwhelming strength, and the criminal and wanton incursion will meet with the speedy punishment it deserves." The Viceroy, having confided in the people, earnestly appeals to them not to believe false rumours and to refrain from any conduct adding to the burden of the Government. He refers to the sorrowful experience of the past invasions from the frontier, from a repetition of which the Government is well able to protect them in the name of the King-Emperor. The Viceroy enjoins upon all loyal people to assist the Government to crush the enemy of the peace of India and to refrain from giving colour to false stories assiduously disseminated.—Reuter.

GREAT VICTORIES OVER BOLSHEVISTS.

CAVALRY PURSUIT.

Great victories in Russian territory during the last few days are announced by the Esthonian Headquarters. According to the official Esthonian Press Bureau, the Esthonian army, with its Russian and German-Baltic auxiliary forces, is continually advancing on a 100 kilomètres (62 miles) front, between Narva and Gdoff, and has already reached the lower course of the River Luga, some 120 kilomètres (about 75 miles) west of Petrograd. The Russian division, called the Northern Corps, which is fighting under the Esthonian Supreme Command, had a big share in these victories. On May 13 the Russians advanced from the middle course of the River Narova to the Narva-Gdoff railway, capturing two armoured trains and one field battery. In the next few days they captured another armoured train and thirty machine-guns, and took 1,500 prisoners, including a brigade commander and the brigade staff.

At the same time the German-Baltic division fighting north of Gdoff captured an enemy battery, making fifty prisoners. On May 15 the Russians retook the town of Gdoff, on the bank of Lake Peipus, capturing 1,000 prisoners, twenty machine-guns, and a rich booty of war material. Colonel Balachowitch's cavalry detachment pursued the enemy, who were fleeing in the greatest confusion. The cavalry was supported by the active fire of the Peipus fleet.

The excitement of the Petrograd Soviet authorities is thus not only due to the Finn's approach from the north, but to the Esthonian army's advance from the south-west.—Reuter.

NO CHANGE AT ARCHANGEL.

A War Office communiqué announces that General Ironside telegraphed from Archangel on the 18th May that there was no change in the situation. There has been slight shelling by the enemy's river craft and the land batteries on the Dvina front during the week but they were successfully silenced by our artillery in co-operation with the river flotilla. In Tulgas and on the railway front patrol encounters have taken place. Deserters continue to come into our lines daily.

GREAT AUSTRALIAN FLIGHT.

The conditions of the competition flight from Great Britain to Australia have been officially announced at Melbourne. A price of £10,000 sterling is to be awarded by the Federal Government to the first pilot of Australian nationality arriving from Great Britain on an all-British aeroplane or seaplane before midnight on 31st December 1920, within seven hundred and twenty consecutive hours (thirty days) of his start.—Reuter.

HOW THE ALLIES ARE FEEDING GERMANY.

HUGE UNDERTAKING.

Mr. Roberts, British Food Controller, has given some remarkable information relative to the very large amount of relief work which is being carried out by Great Britain in Germany, German Austria and other European countries. The British contribution to this work is to a great extent on the side of shipping but it includes also food stuffs and finance. Twelve and a half million pounds sterling have been spent by the British Treasury in providing food and medical stores for devastated areas in Europe, while private effort has been made additional to the work carried on by the Treasury and British Food Ministry. Many British societies, together with various relief funds, have sent considerable supplies both in cash and kind for European relief. In the case of Poland the British Red Cross have sent 100,000 pounds' worth of drugs and the British Government have authorised the expenditure of a further 100,000 pounds' worth to be sent for medical requirements of the civilian population.

The following figures show the quantities of foodstuffs and other commodities supplied to various devastated areas through the British Ministry of Food either from the United Kingdom or from other countries, but financed by British credits and shipped by the British Government to devastated areas.

To Poland there have been shipped by the United Kingdom 5,167 tons, to Rumania 13,165 tons, with additional 7,310 tons from America financed by British credits, also 27,530 from Australia similiarly financed. Canada is also financing considerably shipments of cereals. To Serbia there have been shipped from the United Kingdom 3,705 tons and from America and Australia, financed by British credits, 17,000 tons. To Jugo-Slovakia 2,745 tons and to Czecho-Slovakia 1,900 tons have been sent from the United Kingdom.

To German Austria there have been shipped on British credit 46,790 tons of foodstuffs. Arrangements have been made for a further supply of 680 tons of condensed milk. In addition to these shipments the British Governments have sold to the Finnish and Esthonian Governments large quantities of cereals, condensed milk and certain other foodstuffs and have made special arrangements for shipment and despatch of assorted goods in order to relieve the immediate necessity of these two countries.

With regard to Germany, arrangements for deliveries of food were considerably belated owing to difficulties raised with regard to the use of German ships. Finally on March 22nd the first German ships left the port in accordance with the ultimate arrangement. On March 25th 7,000 tons of food were delivered in Germany and the the total quantity delivered since that date up to 10th May is about 250,000 tons. Negotiations are constantly taking place at Rotterdam between representatives of Great Britain and her Allies and contracts have been signed for the sale by Great Britain to Germany of foodstuffs up to the value of over twelve million pounds sterling, covering 864,000 tons.

Negotiations are also in progress for the sale to Germany of further 200,000 tons of potatoes, 15,000 tons of preserved meat and a large quantity of herrings, while various other miscellaneous commodities of high food value have been offered by the British Government to Germany. These large quantities of foodstuffs naturally call for corresponding tonnage space which has to be spared from shipping required to convey cereals and other foodstuffs and medical necessities to various other relief areas.

Already, however, a considerable portion of the goods for which contracts have been signed have actually arrived in Rotterdam for delivery to Germany. The quantities shipped from British works and actually delivered to Germany up to last week of April amounted to 328,000 tons out of the 392,000 tons delivered at Rotterdam.

The above mentioned contracts by no means exhaust the offers of essential foodstuffs which Great Britain is prepared to make to Germany either through the British Government direct or through channels of private traders, facilities for which are at present being arranged. The blockade has now been lifted to a great extent and as far as it still remains much has been done, by supplying food and other necessaries, towards neutralizing its effect.

DARING LONDON ROBBERY.

Two masked men armed with revolvers carried out a daring robbery on Sunday night at the Elysee Restaurant, Coventry-street, London. They shepherded the acting manager and porter into the stoke-hold and forced the former to give up the key of the safe. This they rifled, and got away with six hundred pounds.

The Elysee Restaurant is notable from the fact that it is a copy of the first class saloon on the Lusitania.

MISHAP TO LEAVE TRAIN.

A mishap occurred on Sunday to a heavily-laden leave train from Cologne. As the train was nearing Calais Station it broke in halves, and the rear section collided heavily with the forward coaches. A number of the men were cut and bruised, but fortunately there were no serious cases of injury. After spending the night in the rest camp at Calais these troops were able to cross to Dover yesterday.

CHEAP FARES FOR SCHOOL TREATS.

The Railway Executive Committee state that the railway companies will endeavour to make arrangements for the conveyance of children in connection with school treats between now and the middle of July, and have agreed to the issue of reduced fares in connection therewith.

A three engined Caproni aeroplane carrying eight persons left Turin on the morning of the 18th May and arrived at Kenley Aerodrome, Croydon, next afternoon.

WAGES MORE THAN DOUBLED.

WORKING HOURS REDUCED.

Striking details of the rise in rates of wages in the principal trades and industries during the war appear in the current issue of the official "Labour Gazette." It is stated that the increases on pre-war rates range from under 60 to over 150 per cent., and that, taking all industries together, the wages of manual workers generally have been more than doubled since July, 1914. Although the information available is insufficient for an exact calculation of the general average rise, there is little doubt that it lies between 100 and 120 per cent.

In the principal groups of trades the average increases have been approximately as follows:

Building trades	About 100 per cent.
Coalmining	110 to 120 per cent.
Metals engineering, and shipbuilding	100 to 120 per cent.
Textile trades	100 to 110 per cent.
Agriculture	88 per cent.
Railway workers (men)	33s per week.
Dock labourers	6s to 8s per day.
Carters, tramway & bus workers	30s per week
Pottery (North Staffordshire)	71 per cent.
Glass bottle manufacture	64 per cent.
Boot and shoe manufacture	87 to 93 per cent.
Printing and bookbinding	29s to 35s per week.
Baking and confectionery	27s to 33s per week.

In addition to large wage increases, hours in important groups of trades have been substantially reduced. In some cases the shortening of hours has involved no reduction in the workers' earnings; in other, wages have been increased for the purpose of bringing them up to the same level as before the reduction of hours. In the engineering and shipbuilding trades, for example, the working week has been shortened from fifty-three or fifty-four to forty-seven hours, without any reduction in time rates. In the building trades the week has been reduced in some districts to forty-four and in others to forty-seven hours; and in the transport trades also a shorter week has been adopted, generally of forty-four hours for dock labourers and forty-eight hours for railwaymen, carters, tramway, and omnibus servants, etc., without any reduction in weekly wages.

OUT-OF-WORK DONATIONS.

16,000 POLICIES SUSPENDED.

The Minister of Labour reports that the numbers drawing out-of-work donation during the week ending May 2 were:

	Civilians.	H.M. Forces.	Total.
Men	212,987	402,151	615,138
Women	415,096	1,316	416,412
Boys	22,872	—	22,872
Girls	28,337	—	28,337
Total	679,292	403,467	1,082,759

"A scrutiny of policies lodged at exchanges during the last six weeks has resulted in the suspension of payment in nearly 16,000 cases, until satisfactory evidence is produced. A number of cases of fraud have thus been discovered, and prosecutions have taken place."

PARCELS FOR THE TROOPS.

The Post Office announces that uninsured parcels containing articles, such as foodstuffs, clothes, boots, &c., for the personal use of the addressee, but not parcels sent for commercial purposes, can now be accepted for all parts of Germany in Allied occupation at the following rates of postage: For a parcel not exceeding 3lb, 1s 4d; over 3lb and not over 7lb, 1s 8d; over 7lb and not over 11lb, 2s.

LARGE SUNSPOTS.

Several large groups of sunspots adorn the face of our solar luminary at the present time. Observations made at the Bonn University Observatory yesterday showed that one of the three main groups is at least eighty to one hundred thousand miles across its longest diameter and contains numerous single spots, each of which is many times the diameter of the earth. This group should be easily seen without employing a telescope provided the observer takes great care to protect his eye by looking through a piece of smoked or dark glass. If he can catch the sun at sunrise or sunset, when it is protected by mist and looks red, he might be able to dispense with the smoked glass.

Such groups of spots as these are frequently accompanied by magnetic storms on the earth, storms which occasionally upset our telegraphs and other apparatus operating electrically or magnetically. On one such occasion it was impossible to communicate for many hours, by wire over so short a distance as from London to Brighton. Displays of the aurora also occasionally accompany periods of solar spottedness.

N.C.3 SAFE BUT DAMAGED.

Reuter learns that N.C.4 left Horta for Ponta Delgada at 12.40 and arrived there at 3.22, Greenwich time. N.C.3 entered the harbour at Ponta Delgada on Sunday afternoon under her own power amidst the sound of syrens, rockets and bands of music. The seaplane had an eventful voyage, encountering fog and rain on Saturday morning, after which the aviators were unable to see anything till ten o'clock on Sunday morning, when they descended to the sea seventy-five miles from the Island of Pico. From that place they reached Ponta Delgada on the surface, refusing all offers of assistance.

Washington.—Admiral Jackson has notified the Navy Department that N.C.3 will be unable to resume the trans-Atlantic flight, declaring that the buffeting of the heavy seas has definitely put her out of the race.—Reuter.

Campbell's Dyeworks at Perth were destroyed by fire yesterday. The damage is estimated at half a million.

SEARCH FOR ATLANTIC AIRMEN.

HOPE DEFERRED.

Up to three o'clock on Wednesday morning no news of Hawker and Grieve had been received. All ships in the Atlantic have been called up and apprised of the situation.

By Admiralty orders, all war vessels stationed at Queenstown have been sent out to patrol the seas off the Irish coast and all merchantmen not fitted with wireless are being spoken.

In the House of Commons Lieut. Commander Kenworthy asked what naval vessels were available on the south west coast of Ireland before Hawker started to fly the Atlantic; what steps were taken in case of accident and how many vessels are now searching for him. Dr. Macnamara, Parliamentary Secretary to the Admiralty, replied that the vessels stationed off the south west coast of Ireland comprised one flotilla leader, two destroyers and one sloop, all with reduced crews: two sloops on ferry service and one under refit; sixteen motor launches, one patrol boat, four paddle-vessels, ten trawlers and five drifters.

The motor launches are only suitable for inshore service and the paddle steamers and trawlers are continually employed in mine sweeping. During yesterday eleven trawlers were at sea off the west coast of Ireland and at seven o'clock in the evening were carrying out a sweep in the vicinity south west of Blacksod Bay.

THE MYSTERIOUS MESSAGE.

When news of the commencement of the flight was received such steps as were possible were taken on the assumption that Hawker was approaching this side. Yesterday afternoon orders were given for all vessels in the Irish command to proceed to sea as a precautionary measure. All vessels are still at sea searching the area off the west coast of Ireland. Dr. Macnamara explained the theory of the report that Hawker had fallen into the sea forty miles off the Irish coast. He said the Admiral at Queenstown received the wireless message that the Sopwith machine was down from Castletown wireless station. Castletown had received it from a French station and the presumption is that the French station intercepted it in fragmentary form and misconstrued an order of the Admiral to his ships.

Not a single report has been received from any of the numerous aeroplanes, destroyers, mine-sweepers and other craft sweeping the seas off Ireland. Their task is greatly hampered by fog and rain.

GOVERNMENT STATEMENT.

A Government communiqué issued late last night emphasises the fact that these trans-Atlantic flights are private enterprises. The attitude of the Air Ministry has always been to enjoin caution on the participants, not to urge them to make the attempt.

Although not recognising its responsibility in this matter the Government furnished every possible information and assistance to lessen the hazardousness of the attempt. After recapitulating the measures taken to assist Hawker the communiqué warns the public that the chances of finding Hawker are most remote, and referring to criticism of the Admiralty it draws attention to the many heavy responsibilities of the British Fleet everywhere in the world. While anxious to do its utmost to save the gallant and intrepid airmen the Government warns those who may in future attempt the flight that the Government's resources make it utterly impossible that the immense task of patrolling two thousand miles of ocean by way of protection can be undertaken.

In the House of Commons Brig.-Gen. Seely said that up to a late hour the Air Ministry had received no news of Hawker. There was a possibility that the airmen had been picked up by a passing vessel without wireless equipment and also that Hawker's own wireless was damaged when the undercarriage of his plane was dropped. Every available ship and aeroplane has been searching for him under very adverse weather conditions.

Mr. Elliot asked the Government to consider the advisability of limiting further attempts to fly the Atlantic in view of the desperately hazardous conditions. Brig.-Gen. Seely replied that the matter had been given the most careful thought. He considered, however, that it was not right and it certainly was not the function of the Air Ministry to say that our countrymen should not undertake this daring flight and the risks entailed.

CHALLENGE TO FATE.

St. Johns. The start was made in the face of weather conditions which Mr. Hawker characterised as "not yet favourable but possible." Mr. Hawker and Commander Grieve decided to stake everything on the effort. Mr. Hawker considered the question of weight to be of the utmost importance, and, lifting Commander Grieve's bag before starting, he inquired solicitously whether he could not dispense with his pyjamas, declaring that he would have a long sleep at the end of the trip. Before starting Mr. Hawker tried the Sopwith machine for a minute or two and found it in good order. He and Commander Grieve therefore gave the plane a final inspection. Some persons here thought the dropping of the carriage savoured of a challenge to Mr. Raynham, and quoted almost the last words of Mr. Hawker before starting. "How about old Tinsides?

Commander Grieve asserted that the Sopwith would head straight for Ireland. "If we strike Ireland anywhere," he added, "we shall find our mark, but if we hit England we shall be nearer home." During the past few days Mr. Hawker installed a wireless apparatus with a radius of 250 miles. The plane is without landing devices except light skids. If forced into the sea Mr. Hawker and Commander Grieve have little hope of rescue. Both wore watertight suits, designed to keep them afloat for many hours, but as their course lies outside the shipping route, the chances of their being picked up are virtually nil. Concentrated rations were carried, and their fuel supply amounted to 340 gallons.—Reuter.

THIRTEEN.

The Allies accepted President Wilson's fourteen points as the basis of the treaty which they would offer to Germany with two exceptions, which do not concern us here. The point which calls for consideration bears the unlucky number of thirteen, and is as follows:

"An independent Polish state should be erected which should include the territories inhabited by indisputably Polish populations, which should be assured a free and secure access to the sea, and whose political and economic independence and territorial integrity should be guaranteed by international covenant."

At the conference, the Allies had to apply the principles so laid down, with the assistance of the one man who should possess the key to unlock the meaning in these few printed lines—Wilson himself.

The summary of the Treaty's provisions as to Poland is:—

"Germany cedes to Poland the greater part of upper Silesia, Posen, and the province of West Prussia on the left bank of the Vistula. A field boundary commission of seven, five representing Poland and Germany, shall be constituted within fifteen days of the Peace to delimit this boundary. Such special provisions as are necessary to protect racial or religious minorities shall be laid down in a subsequent treaty between the Allied and Associated Powers and Poland with other provisions as to portions of East Prussia."

It is usual to speak of the partitions of Poland as being the dismemberment of a corpse.

This is not accurate. Poland never died. Prussia, Austria and Russia have for a century-and-a-half been rending and torturing a being which would not die. Herein, rather than in the historic wrong done to her, lies Poland's claim to restoration.

For the efforts of Prussia to stamp out the obstinate life from this prostrate being have been well directed, vigorous and costly. Frederick the Great began the colonization of his share of the spoil at once, and settled 300,000 Prussians on Polish land. Bismarck colonized ruthlessly. In the year 1886 alone, 100,000,000 marks were raised for the purpose of buying Polish land for Prussian settlers, and this process continued up to the outbreak of the war until something like one-third of what had been Poland had passed into the hands of Germans. Against this must be set the fact that the Poles, though it was forbidden, had bought back some of the land from its Prussian owners. With the settlement of German colonists came the foundation of German villages, schools and churches, and the German "Kultur." But the penetration was not limited to the confines of German colonies. In pursuance of the policy of the Kulturkampf, the Catholic schools of the Poles were closed, their endowments confiscated, the clergy deprived of their benefices and imprisoned. German officials were substituted for Poles who were precluded from holding government posts. The Polish language was forbidden to be taught in the schools or used for official purposes; towns and streets received German names.

The latest means employed in the campaign of denationalization has been the cultivation of the Polish Jew, whom Germany has bound to her interest by the provision of Jewish schools, and avenues to financial gain.

In spite of all these measures the Polish spirit of nationality is quick. To the annoyance of Prussian bureaucracy it was found that the Polish population grew faster than the Prussian. Poles, deprived of land at home, might imigrate into Westphalia to find employment, but they also steadily increased in numbers in Upper Silesia. They resisted, as far as a people in the grip of greater force could, by the formation of Polish associations and Polish banks. They refused to be Prussianized.

To return to the fourteen points: Is there anything in the summary of the Treaty which is plainly at variance with point thirteen? The phrase in that point which most calls for interpretation is "territories inhabited by indisputably Polish populations," but the ruling aim is to be found in the first four words.

Now note, first that the Polish inhabitants were not to be in a majority in any particular district. The territories are to be "inhabited" by a people of whom it can be said that they are Polish; secondly, it is impossible, in view of the history and situation of Poland, to permit of a Polish majority in certain areas. It would be difficult in some parts of Scotland or England to say whether the population is within certain districts more English, Irish or Scotch; but the proper category into which it might fall as regards the nationality of the land could not be doubtful.

It may be taken that what was Poland is inhabited throughout by Poles, though the percentage to the rest of the population may vary in different districts; and it would be entirely contrary to every principle of law if Prussia were allowed to take advantage of her own wrong doing and to plead: "I, by my possessory rights, extruded the Poles from this or that area of their country and filled it with Prussians—therefore it is Prussia, not Poland."

Further, the governing idea of the whole clause is in the first four words; and to constitute a Polish state which shall be independent it must have such economic resources and population, and such frontiers, as will enable it to stand by itself free to develop its life with or without the concurrence of its neighbours.

The territory which is released from Prussia to Poland by the treaty is the minimum which can answer the requisites of point thirteen.

We have said that the stubborn refusal of Polish patriotism to die constitutes a stronger claim to the restoration of Poland than the ancient wickedness of her partition. But once Germany, in her greed for new dominance, was arrested in the perpetration of new crimes against the established order of Europe and found guilty, the record of the criminal was opened for her judges. She herself has annulled the prescriptive tolerance accorded to the old misdeeds of nations.

The further limits of Poland are under discussion. When Austria and Russia have handed back their quota, she will have a population of some 20,000,000 at least. Included among these will be the disturbing element of 4,00,000 Polish Jews upon whom, if Poland be not strong enough, the old Prussian influence may act. On the other hand Germany has done Poland one good turn. In the struggle to make a good land for Prussians she has developed a well-organized heritage for Poles. It will be up to them to show that they have the stability requisite to establish a great and ordered community destined to the mission of recivilizing Eastern Europe.

RANDOM REFLECTIONS ON OUR BATT.(?)

No, dear reader, gentle or otherwise, the interrogation mark is not a printer's error, for whatever else may be said of "Our Batt.," it must ever remain a conundrum—at any rate, a "Riddell" bulks very largely in its composition.

By the way we are lucky in having two colonels with us. Its just as well there are two, as one's always "Tyte." When somebody from higher up was given to understand by an intelligent orderly that the C.O. was upstairs in that condition it caused him to think furiously, and he scratched his head as he made his way to O.R. It was so very early in the afternoon, you see.

En passant, does P.M.C. mean "Please More Contribution" or "Pfennigs and Marks Commandeered?"—ah! perhaps it stands for "Phederated Malay Consolidated." though I've never heard of their shares being quoted on the S.E.

We had a Second-in-Command once—for a short time only. To our sorrow his stay below was brief and he has been translated to a higher sphere. Oh, what did you not "Stop for(d)"?

Of course, every well-organised battalion simply must have its C.D.O. in this country, and ours is a busy man. His occupation, unlike that of Othello the Moor, is most certainly not gone. He's always interviewing infuriated women or women or burgomasters foaming at the mouth, or ferreting out or rounding up somebody or something—in fact, his motto appears to be "The 'Moore' the merrier".

There's a policeman at the cross roads, just where the only "Dedman" in the Battalion is to be found, and as I passed the other day I overheard scraps of a conversation between him and a Lance-Corporal in charge of a fatigue party who evidently was enquiring the way to somewhere. The M.F.P. indicated the spot where the rations come from and commenced to whistle "I was standing at the corner of the "Street." (It was a "Grey" day, not to say beastly wet) It was quite true he was standing there, but as I passed on I couldn't help feeling that something was wrong somewhere because there aren't any corners on our G.M.!

Have you seen our transport? Oh, you must have seen our transport, it's like the money Dan Leno used to sing about earning. Not much of it but what there is, is good; but then, you see, the T.O. isn't given to any self-advertisement. Our sports officer too is a very busy man (we rather fancy our chance in the sports line) but now that he has a capable assistant, his time is a little "lreer," and he is still able to look for football fields that don't exist.

Next time you visit "Our Batt." don't fail to call in at the E.O. You don't mean to say you don't know what the E.O. means!! Why, it's the very "Hub" of things, the pulsating life centre without which the life of "Our Batt." would cease to throb. I refer, of course, to that "Hive" of industry — but never mind, if you are so obtuse, so ignorant and so benighted as not to know, I for one shall not attempt to enlighten you. All I know is that their chief is a "Martyr" to the cause, that they are the "Stapleton" which our whole organisation hangs, and that they are not so "Green" as some people "Wieckly" aver.

A very healthy sign in "Our Batt." is the keen rivalry betwen Companies both on parade and off.

Our Company is for ever "Huggin" the main road through the village. I don't blame them, it's beastly dusty everywhere else. You see they are so awfully clean, and are very fond of their "Tubb." One of them had a silent sorrow in his Little Mary the other day and as I passed I heard his Section Commander say "Does the "Stew'urt" yer old man?"

Another Company is very like Oliver Twist. I don't mean because the men ask for more — they all do that — but haven't they a "Beadle" ever at their elbow? There is something, too, to substantiate the rumour that they are fond of English literature, especially Dickens, for they are never without their "Barnaby Rudge."

The third Company is "Garrisoned" in the middle of the top of the village — mark you, not the middle of the bottom of the village — that's quite a long route march to the S.E. as the worm flies.

Now they really are a very patriotic lot. Although on alien soil, they never forget "Brittain." Um, quite so, his "Cousin" wont let' em!

"Spare the rod and spoil the child" is perhaps a bit out-of-date, but their C.C. no doubt finds it very useful always to have a little "Burch" at his right hand. "Brayne," too, if of the active variety, is a useful commodity, and its "na sae bad to always hae "Johnny Walker" on tap aboot the hoose ye ken.'

A "Mase" is a very good substitute for a sceptre, at least so the remaining company say. Their favourite song is "Oh, 'Willey' we have missed you; welcome, home." They have to mind their P's and Q's I can tell you. Their C.S.M. must have an eye like an 'awk "for no matter what they do, or when or where they do it, he can always truthfully say "I Saw yer'."

The editor is prepared to offer a prize of 1,000,000 Mks for the first correct guess as to which "Our Batt." is. (I don't think — Ed.).

THE OPERA.

"HOFFMANN'S TALES".

A full house welcomed Tuesday's performance of the ever-fresh "Erzählungen". Perhaps the fact that the composer was a native of Cologne, or the intrinsic charm of the tuneful music, or both reasons combined, afford the explanation. Be that as it may, it was an enjoyable performance throughout, the scenic effects deserving warm praise. In the opening scene in Luther's Keller, the chorus sang con brio, and made an admirable background to Hoffman's (Karl Schroeder's) rendering of the Legend of Kleinzack. In the first act, Käte Herwig as Spalanzani's automaton sang and acted with much charm. The popular Barcarolle in the second act ushered in a magnificent mise-en-scene. The bevy of fair ladies reclining in the stately marble hall under the soft witchery of the moonlight with the gondola on the blue water made an impressively romantic ensemble. Here the honours fell to Anna Scheffler, who made a seductive Giulietta. Her duet with Hoffmann was warmly received, and both were again recalled at the close of the act. Antonia's (Johannn Geisler's) singing of the opening romance in the third act was a fine bit of vocalization. Nor can less be said of her duet with Hoffmann. Herr Liszewsky in the different roles of Lindorf, Coppelius, Dapertutto and Dr. Mirakel, had an exacting task to which, however, his versatility as actor and vocalist did ample justice. Katharina Rohr made an attractive Niklaus.

THE EPISTLES OF PETER BIRSE, JUNIOR.

A Night With Journalists.

Dear Maister Editor,

Bein' a Cawmbridge Univairsity man, ye'll hae haird o' the celebrawtit vreeter an' skolar, Bob Burton, the far frae lugoobrious author o' "The Anatomy of Melancholy." He was aye i' the forebreist o' m' fauverits i' m' freevitus, love-seek yooth, fan capreeshius lassies turn'd m' heid b' day, an' spoil'd m' sleep b' nicht. Weel Bob, ye'll reckoleck, fan he wearied o' fat a learned frien' o' mine ca's "the academic calm of dispassionate narration," an' sigh'd for a wee bit healthy relacksashun, betook himsel' mony a time tae the Thames tae hear the bargemen swear.

On exackly the same preenciple, fan A tire o' Nat Gould an' Schopenhauer, Bunyan an' Victoria Cross, A repair wi' leisur'd fitsteps tae the "Den o' Thieves," a quate rendy-voo in a back thorofaur in Coloan, whaur some o' m' journaleestic ackwantances drink awa' their gowden 'oors. A dinna gae there expraisiy tae hear them swear, but simply tae hear them crack, tho' that of coorse is practickally the same thing. The noospeyper fraternity has aye graitly interestit me, nae sae muckle on accoont o' auld Peter's weekly epeesels, but becawse the mimbers o' the fourth estait are different kategory men — morally speakin' — frae masel'. Tae m' min' there's only three classes o' humainity — them that draw doon a' their blinds on the Sabbath Day, them that draw doon only the blinds facein' the street, and them that dinna bawther drawin' doon ony. Every journaleest walkin' this airt belangs tae the third class; A belang tae the second; an' Kirsty, m' mither, belang'd tae the first. Auld Peter, the canny carl 'at he was, ees'd tae jump frae the third tae the first class accordin' tae hoo near he thocht his en' was.

"THE DEN O' THIEVES."

I' the "Den o' Thieves" th' eeswal seleck company o' drouths were drinkin' their time awa', regairdless o' this warld or the neist. A dizzen "empties" in front o' them unmistackably testifeed tae the amoont o' conveeviality that had already prevaul'd. As far as I cud gaither they'd been drinkin' ither fowks' health till they begood tae sairiously injoor their ain.

"Hullo, here's Peter Birse," cried ane o' the glez'd-eed tipplers, as I stappit in at the door, "it's time he stood his hand."

I winna dispute, Maister Editor, but fat it maybe was m' turn tae pet m' han' i' m' pooch, but I railly dev objeck maist beeterly an' emfatickally tae bein' remindit in publick o' my soshial responsibeelities.

"Mercifu' heavins," says I tae masel, "fat am I tae dae?

My moral duty i' the cirkumstances was perfeckly pawtint, an' accordin' tae Confucius — that maist sapient o' Chinks — tae see the richt thing an' nae tae dee't is want o' currage. A Birse wi' lack o' currage! Lat it never be said.

So clappin' masel' on the chest i' the reejun o' the Mons Ribbon, A struck a dramatick attitude an' shoutit voceeferously, "Three bottels o' fite wine". A then stappit a Widbine i' m' mooth an' waitit developmints. Th' excitement was intense; th' atmosfeer magnetick.

"Has Peter startit a "Croon an' Anker" brod?" speer'd a fool-mooth'd snipe.

"Na, fye, na," fusper'd anither, wha micht think shame o' 'imsel'. "He's hawkin' soap amang the "Jerries" an makin' a gran' thing o't."

Meanwnile the lang-neckit bottels were makin' an appearance, an' th' 'oor o' m' diskomfitur' was at han'. Whether on laive or peyin' oot siller, pertin's aye a doolfu' bizness. Sax an' thirty marks was the cost o' the lioawshun — a micnty price, a hantle ower heich, for fullin' the wame wi' inseept grape joose.

A GLORIOUS INSPIRASHUN.

Tae sugar the pill a wee bit A threw awa' the fag an' loadit my pipe, kiddin' masel, an' if possibel the company, that money was nae objeck tae a Rothschild in disgyse. In the prosie o' lichtin' m' pipe a priceless inspirashun seiz'd me. Stappin' the burnt spunk i' m' pooch A chuck'd the boax o' matches oot at the open windick into the street.

"Mercifu' heavins," A scraim'd, "I've shied a boax o' spunks oot at the windick b' mistack", at the same time rushin oot o' the door o' the pub. Nae half a meenit had elaps'd sin I made the horrible "blun'ar" but aledy a German littlin, efter the depridawtery menner o' the Clown Prince, had nabbit the boaxie, an' at his heels in cloas purshoot were a couple o' fite-breekit bobbies erm'd wi' soords. Whether they wintit the loonie or the spunks I canna tell, but the chaise proveedit a specktackle as thrillin' as it was comical.

As A was ankshus tae see the upshot — A'm naething if nae a sportsman—A follow'd the bobbies an' the crood, resolv'd if need be, tae assseest the august meenions o' the law.

Suddintly I mindit I hadna pey'd for the drinks, but Maister Editor, I hadna sampl'd them. Some yalla-dogs o' the guttersnipe vareety wid probably hae gane back an' pey'd for the licker, but a'm a fite man, an' the son o' a fite man, tho' the latter for a time was i' the coal-contrackin' bizness. The reglar habituees o' the pub, forbye, were infeenitely better able tae pey for't than I was, so I left the "Den o' Thieves" tae Sawten an' his scribblin' blagairds.

ADVENTURE WI' AN AUTOMATICK MASHEEN.

Wi' a dowie face, an' utterly disjeskit, A stravaig'd alang the Bricht Strassy, a mockery o' a name on the present occashun, an' resolv'd like an Irishman tae droon m' sorrow wi' a smoke. M' cherry-briar a birthda' present frae a deemie i' th' peyper warks at Muggiemose was quickly loadit, but gweed be here, A'd nae a spunk tae kennel't wi'. My boaxie b' this time was dootless in a German bobby's Sunday breeks' pooch waitin' for him tae mak' use o' or for his spouse tae nab.

Spyin' an automatick masheen A drappit a 10 tennig coin into fat I took tae be the slotty for spunks. In the coin drappit wi' a metaillic soun', A birs'd, an' pu'd an' ruggit an' tuggit but damm a thing wid come oot livin' or deid, big or sma, cauld or het, sweet or soor, weet or dry. M' hard earn'd siller was tint — it blackit a' thing.

On closer inspeckshun A fund A'd ackwally drappit the coin intil a letter-boax! M' Aunty Leeby aye thocht A was gaikit an' losh A'm beginnin' tae think the same. The neist colleckshun o' letters, accordin' tae a passin' Jerry, wasna till neist mornin', so A swither'd whether A wid wait a' nicht or come back i' the mornin', tae get m' siller back.

Eventwally A agreed tae wait at the letter-boax tho' A hadna mony oors tae stan', for a street picket cam alang an' took m' name, num'er, rank, et setera, an' order'd me tae m' billet immidiat'ly. On the table o' m' billet was a bizness letter lyin' waitin' me wi' the followin' impident accoont frae the "Den o' Thieves" enclos'd:—

3 Bottles White Wine (Moselle) — — — M. 36.

"A WIFE ON TRIAL."

51st ROYAL SUSSEX CONCERT AT ALTENRATH.

Another very successful concert was given by "X". Company of the 51st Royal Sussex on Saturday last at Altenrath. The battalion orchestra under R.S.M. Blake came over from Donrath and rendered some excellent selections. After an overture by the Orchestra, C.S.M. Bell opened the programme with a song "When You Come Home," and gave as an encore "Let the great big world keep turning". The second item was a fine exhibition of Indian Club swinging by Pte Dunn who was followed by Lieut. O'Brien in a comic parody. The next item, a cello solo by Cpl. Gardiner of the battalion orchestra was much appreciated, and his technique was really excellent. A sketch "Charlie Chaplin Boxing" was again given by Cpl Hankin and Coy and once more elicited roars of laughter. A violin solo, by Pte Pollard, concluded the first half of the programme.

In the second half of the programme Capt. Horst obliged with "An Old-Fashioned Town." His fine rich voice brought forth loud applause and he gave as an encore "Until." Sergt. Wheatley followed with a cornet solo "Land of Hope and Glory" with orchestral accompaniment. After a song by Cpl Southcott, "My Aim Folk" the concluding item was reached — a sketch entitled "A Wife on Trial." Pte Peart took the part of the Bachelor, L/Cpl. Missen, the wife (on trial) and Pte Wilden, the Doctor. This sketch which deals with the trials of a bachelor who is afraid of a new tax, was very amusing. L/Cpl. Missen in particular is to be congratulated on his make up as the "wife."

"THE BRAGANZAS."

By kind permission of their Commanding Officer, Lieut-Colonel Lee C.M.G. D.S.O., the concert party of the 11th Battalion ("The Queen's") H.W.S. Regiment gave an entertainment to their neighbours the 10th Battalion, on the 16th inst at Lindlar. Although "The Braganzas" are a comparatively new formation, they showed perfect cohesion, which is so often lacking in any new organization, and an excellent "Show" was the result.

As "The Girl," L/Cpl Tompsett was a great success and one would have to seek far afield to find a more suitable "Persona" for this difficult part. Captain Webber and Lieut Kelly in their "Doubles" were "The Goods" of the evening, and always willingly responded to the numerous encores awarded them.

A word of praise is due to their indefatigable organizer, Lieut Penfold and there is no doubt that more will be heard of "The Braganzas" in the near future.

THE RHINE ARMY MUSICAL SOCIETIES.

Rehearsals have now been resumed by the Choral and Vocal Societies. The first of these Societies, which consists of male voices, was formed in February, and from its formation to the end of April held 28 rehearsals, and gave 12 concerts. At two of the concerts sums of 1000 marks and 900 marks respectively were raised for the R.A. memorial Fund and the R.E. Commendation Fund, and the Society also assisted at the concerts in aid of Lord Roberts Memorial Fund. There are at present vacancies for male Altos, second tenors and first and second basses, who are able to read simple music at sight, and intending members should go to the rehearsals which take place each Monday and Wednesday evening at 5.45 in the lecture room on the first floor of the Church Army Club in Antoniter Strasse. A new series of part songs is now in rehearsal of a lighter type than those previously sung by the Society.

The Vocal Society, consisting of mixed voices, is made up of members of the various units, of English ladies stationed in Cologne, and of the men of the Choral Society. Rehearsals are held at 5.45 p.m. each Friday at the above-named lecture room, and all English ladies stationed in Cologne who are interested in vocal music are invited to become members, by attending the next available rehearsal.

A DERBY FLUTTER.

A SWEEPSTAKE FOR ALL RANKS.

We recently expressed regret that someone did not organize a big Derby Sweepstake for the edification of "other ranks" and we published a number of letters which proved conclusively that such a project would be immensely popular.

The announcement that the British Empire Leave Club, Cologne, intend to remedy this deficiency will accordingly be hailed with considerable satisfaction. This wonderful institution, which caters for every kind of entertainment and recreation, proposes to run a huge sweep, and tickets are to be issued forthwith at ten marks a time.

Admittedly, time is short, since the race is to be run on the 4th June, and it will be interesting to observe whether or not the sweep will be as successful as we forecasted.

As far as officers are concerned, the VI Corps Club Sweepstake continues to make great strides. The tickets sold now number close upon 3000 which means that the lucky individual who draws the winning horse will pick up an agreeably substantial sum. The sweep is open to all officers, Army and Naval, as well as ladies of the various British organizations who are now in Germany. Fifty per cent of the proceeds are to go to the holder of the ticket representing the winning horse; 30 per cent to the second, ten per cent to the third, and the remaining 10 per cent will be divided among those who draw quarters.

The results of both the draws will appear in The Cologne Post on 4th June.

DEADLY LANCASHIRE BOWLING.

CRICKET AT OLD TRAFFORD.

VICTORY FOR HOME COUNTY BY TEN WICKETS.

There was little hope for Derbyshire when play resumed on Tuesday morning at Old Trafford. With the exception of Oliver no one stood against the Lancashire bowling and the home county won by 10 wickets.

FOOTBALL RUGGER OR CRICKET?

"SIR HARRY LAUDER", "GEORGE ROBEY", "WILKIE BARD" ETC. AT BROHL.

A remarkable and most eccentric football match was played last week, under the burning rays of the sun at Brohl, by "C" Company, 51st Battalion, Bedfordshire Regt.

The opponents of the celebrities won the toss and chose to play with the sun on their necks. Rapid exchanges took place, and after an elapse of twenty minutes it was difficult for the spectators to discern whether "Soccer" or "Rugger" was being played.

"George Robey" getting into a sharp sprint, neatly hooked the ball from a corner and centred it with much force, causing great excitement among the spectators. A spicier shot, one never saw before. "Wilkie Bard" checked the ball and almost scored, but for the timely intervention of Private Joyce, who, forgetting that football was being played, saved the celebrities from getting hilarious by claiming the ball in both hands.

Throwing of Missiles.

The eagle eyes of the referee saw this, and he proclaimed a penalty in favour of the "Celebrities." The task of taking the kick was left to poor old "George" who, amidst a terrible uproar and throwing of missiles, managed to score. The exertion on the part of "George" who, honestly, had never played football before, caused a few minutes to elapse to allow his lungs to refill.

The second half started with much pressing and bombarding by the Company's team, the forwards soon harrassing their opponents goal. A corner resulted and after much discussion as to the positions of the various Celebrity players, the shot was taken. This was too much for "Will" who promptly turned the game into cricket and caught the ball with both hands. Again that keen eyed "Umpire" did proclaim a penalty. The kick was taken by the dashing left-back of the Company team and resulted in a score, thus bringing the game to a draw, which was the state of affairs when the final whistle blew.

INTER-COMPANY CROSS COUNTRY RACE.

"D" COY., 13 PLATOON v. "B" COY., 8 PLATOON, 51st MANCHESTERS.

This race took place over a very trying 3 mile course at Stieldorf on Thursday and resulted in a rather easy win for "D" Coy by 279 points to 186.

Lieut. Mulholland, the first to arrive home, put up a fine race, his time being 14 mins. 15 secs, the best so far over this course. The race was one of a series to decide the best Coy and Platoon at Sports in the Battalion and on yesterday's form "D" Coy 13 Platoon should stand a very good chance of gaining this honour.

The first ten men home were:— 1, Lieut. Mulholland, "D" Coy; 2, L/Cpl. Melaney, "D" Coy; 3, Sgt. Hope, "B" Coy; 4, L/Cpl. Hubbard, "D" Coy; 5, Cpl. Moran, "D" Coy; 6, R. S. M. Birtwhistle, "D" Coy; 7, L/Cpl. Kilpatrick, "D" Coy; 8, Pte. Newland, "B" Coy; 9, Pte. Gibson, "B" Coy; 10, Lieut. Penswick, "D" Coy.

Mr. Norman Brookes, the present lawn-tennis champion, has cabled from Bombay to say that he has been detained at that port. He is not now expected to reach England before the first week in June.

5th DEVONS TRIALS.

On Saturday last the above Regt. held a small athletic meeting in an endeavour to find some runners to represent the Battalion. In delightful weather, and favoured by the attendance of the band, everything went smoothly. Sergt. Johnston of A Coy displayed good form in the sprints, and Cpl. Marsh of B Coy will be a useful asset. Capt. Anderson won the cross country comfortably and Lieut. Puddicumbe the officers' 100 yards. The inter-Platoon cross country event was won by H.Q. 4 with 52 points, and 2nd place fell to No 8 platoon with 77 points. Cpl. Leo and Pte. Moon ran 2nd and 3rd which enabled their platoon to win the event.

CRICKET FOR OFFICERS.

SPORTS CLUB ARRANGEMENTS.

A meeting of the Committee of the Cricket Section of the above club was held at the Excelsior Hotel on May 19th. Lieut.-Col. J.C. Hartley D.S.O. Commanding 52nd N.F.s presided. There were also present:

Lieut.-Col. C.H.B. Blount M.C., 2nd Wing R.A.F., Capt. R.S.. L. Fowler M.C., 17th Lancers, Major P. Bowes Lyons. Hon. Sec. Officers Sports Clubs Lieut. P.T. Ryding, K.R.R.C. Capt. E.G.M. Buckley A.D.C. VI. Corps was appointed Hon. Secy. to the Cricket Committee. It was decided to call the club The Rhine Officers Cricket Club and that the ground, in the Stadtwald, Lindenthal, Cologne, should be allotted to each Corps, Army H.Qrs. and R.A.F. for one week at a time in turn. It was agreed that each Corps should be allowed to sub-allot the ground to its divisions but not to lower formations.

All officers who play in teams must be members of the club, but to encourage cricket and to stengthen teams, a proportion of other ranks may be included.

On Saturdays, Sundays and Wednesdays, the ground is to be used by Corps for any matches they arrange, e.g. versus other Corps or Divisions. On Tuesday the Corps is to produce a Corps or divisional team to meet the Rhine Officers Club. On Thursday of each week the ground is to be reserved for the use of teams formed independently of formations, e.g. Scotland v. Ireland; Cavalry v. Royal Artillery; R.E. v. Incognito, etc. Applications for the use of the ground on Thursdays should be made to the Hon. Secy. as soon as possible, stating matches arranged.

It was further decided that the week commencing July 12th should be Cricket Week, the following fixtures being arranged:

July 12th and 13th Free Foresters v. Rhine Army. Manager of Free Foresters team Lieut.-Col. J. C. Hartley D.S.O., 52nd N. F.

July 14th and 15th I. Zingari v. Rhine Army. Manager of I. Zingari's team Capt. R. H. L. Fowler M.C., 17th Lancers.

July 16th and 17th Infantry v. The Rest.

A draw was made to decide the order of allotment of the ground, the following being the result:

RHINE ARMY WRESTLING.

LIEUT. HAYE'S AMBITION.

Lieut. E.W. Hayes, 51st Devons, who, by virtue of defeating S.S.M. Thorpe, R.A.M.C. a few days ago, is the 10stone 7 lbs. champion of the Army of the Rhine, is anxious to compete in the English championships this year. Although this undoubtedly clever wrestler has never competed in this competition before, he succeeded in being the runner-up to the champion in an open competition.

SPORTING ITEMS IN BRIEF.

Lawn Tennis On Grass.

The first of this season's lawn tennis tournaments on grass began at Surbiton on Monday.

Baseball at Chelsea.

In a baseball match at Chelsea, United States beat Canada 17 runs to nil.

First Class Cricket.

A first-class cricket fixture has been arranged between H. D. G. Leveson-Gower's XI. and Oxford University at Eastbourne on July 3 and 4.

Thames Sailing Boats.

Saturday was a very busy day with boat sailers on the Thames, no fewer than seven clubs giving races.

Whit Monday Sports.

Sports promoters are now getting their programmes forward for Whit-Monday, and although some of the old meetings are still missing, quite a large number will be revived, including some very popular meets.

Teeth Protector At Home.

It is little wonder that Mansfield was so badly marked at the finish of his fight with Wilde, although the fact that he had left his rubber teeth protector at home was responsible for much of the damage to his lips.

Amateur Golfer Turns Professional.

Lieut R. Brook, the assistant secretary to the Royal St. George's Club, Sandwich, is going out to California in September to become professional to the Los Angeles Club.

Three Days for Henley.

So many entries have already been received for Henley Regatta that the management committee have decided to extend the meeting by a day. The date originally fixed was July 4 and 5, and the committee have now taken in July 3.

The Cricket-Footballer.

Moderately strong sides wearing the Arsenal and Chelsea colours met at Highbury, and it is interesting to note that Hardinge, who was included in the home forward line, had been playing cricket during the week at Attleborough.

A London Surprise.

London had a surprise the other day. A coach, horsed with three bays and a chestnut, was tooled skilfully through such crowded thoroughfares as Piccadilly, the Haymarket, Strand, Ludgate Hill, the Bank, and London Bridge. The occupants of the coach were attired in strange and picturesque garb.

SPORT IN ENGLAND.

NEWMARKET RACING.

LORD JERSEY'S COLOURS AGAIN SUCCESSFUL.

The going was firm at Newmarket on Tuesday and the weather gloriously fine. The various events resulted as follows:—

Visitors Plate:— 1, Maeldune (100—6); 2, Soviet (100—6); 3, My Patsy (100—8); Fifteen ran.

Norfolk Plate:— 1, Cinna (4—1); 2, Woodrow (10—1); 3, Poltava (5—4) Nineteen ran.

Newmarket Handicap:— 1, Arion (6—5); 2, Tinspear (7—2); 3, Strolling Saint (3—1); Also ran — Sandmole. Four ran. Three quarters of a length separated the winner and the second, and four lengths the second and third.

Burwell Plate:— 1, Good night (3—1); 2, Perion (2—1); 3, Callander (6—4). Four ran.

Somerville Stakes:— 1, Marshall Neil (7—1); 2, Cumberland (100—6) 3, Morganatic Marriage (100—6). Fourteen ran.

Sweepstakes:— 1, Sheenly Boy (5—4); 2, Brussiloff (4—1); 3, Exford (11—8). Three ran.

"THE DERBY" FAVOURITE.

WHAT THE RACING SCRIBES ARE SAYING.

The Panther, the favourite for the great 4th of June event, will not run again before the Derby, says "Hotspur" in the "Daily Telegraph": Owner and trainer will, as a matter of course, be criticised by those who think they know more about the horse than they do, and how he should be raced and trained. For myself, I am satisfied to know that the Derby favourite has gone steadily forward since his victory for the Two Thousand Guineas. It would, no doubt, have been highly interesting to see a meeting again between him and Lord Basil, but if Manser thinks the horse would not be placed at a disadvantage through not running, then he is entitled to avoid what risk there may be in running this mile and a quarter on going which is sure to be on the hard side, unless rain falls in the interval. Some horses have not survived their experiences in the Newmarket Stakes after winning the Two Thousand Guineas.

The Decks Cleared.

Derby matters will now engross attention, the decks being cleared of the spring handicaps. The Panther does not run again until Epsom, so that Lord Basil can win the Newmarket Stakes this week without telling us anything more about his Derby chance. Very tall stories (says "Robin Goodfellow" in the "Daily Mail") are in circulation about Grand Parade—what he can o with He and Dominion over their best distances. In a mile and half gallop yesterday with Royal Welsh and Skyrocket he showed to poor advantage.

MISS CECIL LEITCH IN BRILLIANT FORM.

Following the draw, the matches to determine the 32 players returning the best scores qualifying to play in the Ladies close golf championship, began at St. Annes on Tuesday.

Miss Cecil Leitch, the holder, easily headed the list with 84; Mrs. Temple Dobell (formerly Miss Gladys Ravenscroft) who won the open championship in 1912 was in poor form and only returned 99.

LAWN TENNIS AT SURBITON.

The results of Tuesdays lawn-tennis matches at Surbiton were as follows:—

In the first round singles the Hon. Mr. Fisher, New Zealand beat Donisthorpe 6—1, 6—3. In the second round Thomas Australia beat O. Turnbull 6—2, 6—3. Doust Australia beat R. Turnbull 6—0; 2—6, 6—0. Roper-Barrett beat Raymond South Africa 6—2, 6—4, Dodd South Africa beat Keeve 6—1, 8—0. Heath Australia beat Boone 6—1, 6—2. Thomas, Australia beat Turnbull 6—2, 6—3. Ritchie beat Phillon 6—2, 6—3, The Hon. Mr. Fisher beat Aitkin South Africa 8—6, 4—6, 6—2. Patterson Australia beat Dash 6—0; 6—0.

THE HAT TRICK AT MUNSTEREIFEL.

51st v. 43rd SOUTH WALES BORDERS.

At Munstereifel on Saturday on the ground of the 53rd. Both sides had noticeable absentees.

Seven minutes from the start Roberts netted for the 51st. Dyer missed an open goal, and Robert experienced hard lines with a hard drive. After a short visit to the 51st end, Dyer broke through, scored a very fine goal, and a minute later obtained No 3. The Bedfords were all over their opponents, and it was not long before Dyer, taking advantage of a faulty clearance by the "goalie" performed the hat trick. by scoring the 51st's fourth goal.

Just before the interval Roberts scored again, and the Bedfords crossed over leading by five clear goals.

The Greens had a look-in on the resumption, but hesitation in front of goal lost them opportunities. They forced a corner but this was cleared, and Dawson transferred play with a good run. Nuttall struck the upright with a hard drive, and then in an attack on the Reds' goal Pritchard broke the 53rd's duck with a nice shot.

There was no further scoring, and so the 51st ran out winners by 5 goals to 1.

52nd D.L.I. OFFICERS v. SERGEANTS.

The 52nd Bn D.L.I. opened the cricket season on Sunday with a game between the officers and sergeants of the Battn.

The officers took first knock and thanks to a breezy 45 by Lieut. Beardall and a few bakers dozens by the other shining lights, compiled the respectable score of 140 before the innings closed.

The sergeants in fear and trembling took their stand and totalled 70 — 25 of which came from the bat of Sgt. Chambers.

After an interval for tea, the sgts. had a second knock and put together 95, leaving the officers 28 runs to gain the day, which they did with the loss of two wickets. For the officers. Lieut. Harding took 5 wickets for 20 runs in the 1st innings and 6 for 38 in the 2nd. Both sides showed great keenness and a good season is anticipated by the battalion.

102 FIELD AMBULANCE v. 113 BRIGADE R.A.F.

The above cricket teams met at Wahn on Saturday, the result being a win for the Ambulance by 109 runs. The chief scorers were: — L/Cpl. Clark, 30, Sergt. Mattick, 28; Pte. Libbiter, 23; and Pte Platt 15;

The Gunners made a poor show before the bowling of Mattick and Platt, only making 38 runs.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

Thursday, May 22, 1919.

Wind Easterly 5 to 10 miles an hour. Fine with some mid-day cloud. Visibilty good. Rather warm.

HILARIOUS SPORTS.

MUSICAL CHAIRS WITH MULES AT ROYAL SUSSEX MEETING.

A delightful afternoon's entertainment was provided on Saturday at a mounted sports meeting held at Neunkirchen by the 52nd Battalion, Royal Sussex Regiment. There were some exciting horse races and several events intended to amuse. As the latter introduced those creatures of incalculable temperament—the mules—it follows that the desired object was thoroughly secured. Sgt. White and Sgt. Sims, who attended in costume and performed equestrian feats, also contributed greatly to the afternoon's hilarity (apologies for grouping them with the four-footed entertainers.)

For the best turned out horses and mules competition was keen, and the judges only reached a decision after a lengthy inspection. The awards went to:—

First prize: Pte. Pearce "B" Coy (horses); Second: Pte. Gammon. "D" Coy (mules); Third: Pte. Wall. "C" Coy (horses).

For the best turned out officers' chargers the following were the awards: 1, Pte. Towler, "D" Coy; 2, Pte. Love, H.Q. Coy.

After several heats in the tug-of-war on mules the grooms team were declared victors. In these contests the mules were more or less amenable but in the mule race with riders sitting backwards they strayed all over the field and the sixth man was the one who actually passed the winning post first—Pte. Pearce. H.Q. Coy; Second, Pte. Allwood, H.Q. Coy; Third Pte. Burgess, "D" Coy.

AFTERNOON'S FUNNIEST EVENT.

Musical chairs was the funniest event of the afternoon. The officers were the competitors. They were mounted bare-backed on mules and when the music stopped they had to dismount and sit on the chairs—if the mules would let them. These humorous animals affected to find something sinister in the chairs: they backed all over the field. Capt. McDermott and Major MacRoberts. D.S.O., M.C., were left seated at the end and were thus the winners.

Racing, on horses and mules, was the principal feature of the proceedings. In the horse race (officers) Capt. O. Smith's Kitty, ridden by Capt. A.W. McDermott, led from the start and apparently up to the straight was to be an easy winner. Here, however, Lieut. J.A.Houghton, the Transport Officer, by a splendid piece of horsemanship so neatly turned a difficult angle as to come in winner by a short head. Capt. C.E. Going, M.C. (Adjutant) made a good third.

In the horse race (grooms) Pte. Fairhead again brought Capt. Smith's horse in first. Pte. Carey was second with the Adjutant's horse and Pte. Towler third on Capt. Richmond's. The other results were:—

Officers' race (mules): 1, Lt. Houghton, 2, Capt. McDermott, 3, Capt. Going.

Drivers' race (mules): 1, Pte. Gammon "D" Coy; 2, Pte. Burgess, "D" Coy; 3, Pte. Norton "A" Coy. In the drivers' race the favourite was rather fresh and threw his jockey, much to the satisfaction of the totalizator, as the winning horse was not backed.

The prizes were distributed by the Commanding Officer, while the duties of judges were undertaken by Lieut. Col Gosset, Lieut. Col Dobbie and Lieut. Col E.R.C.P. Bellingham, C.M.G., D.S.O. (Commanding 52nd Battalion, Royal Sussex Regt.) The arrangements for the meeting were most successfully carried out by Lieut. P.G. Hindess, who also acted as clerk of the course.

GAS RATTLES IN ACTION.

68th BRIGADE R.G.A. v. 93rd BRIGADE R.G.A.

Much interest was evinced in this game played at Mulheim on Saturday, when '68', a practically untried and unknown side, entertained the 93rd Brigade, of which such glowing accounts had been read in The Cologne Post. Walton and Tully on the visitors' left were prominent with some good runs but the veteran Rainbow though appearing as a reserve, proved a particularly good spoiler. It was the right wing of the home side which was always giving trouble to the "Clarets" and it was from an exquisite run by Batty and Duncan that the Swindon player scored a fine goal.

Enthusiasm ran high among the supporters, a full establishment of Gas Rattles of the Brigade having been unexpectedly found through the energies of a new "Stinks" Officer, whilst the 'Ford Car' the Grand Stand for the 68th Brigade Commander was observed to be rocking rather dangerously through the obvious delight of its occupant.

The battle was renewed with increased vim, Lieut. Lloyd cleverly stopping Tully and Walton when on a raiding expedition which boded no good for the leaders. The '93rd' eventually equalized, the ball glancing off a home back into the goal just before the interval.

Refreshed by lemons and lemonade, the latter being the present day beverage of the R.G.A., "93" took up the running, their centre-forwards shooting wide. The visitors eventually secured the lead, their inside right as a result of a strong burst, beating the burly Lieut. Brown with a fine ground shot.

The 'Gas Rattles' had apparently become casualties by this time for the goal certainly deserved recognition. The 'Senior' Brigade obviously nettled at this reverse 'got down' to some real graft and the opposing defenders resorted in their oppression to the 'handling code,' three times cleverly deluding the referee.

Batty was working at top pressure for '68' giving Duncan some fine passes which 'Jock' put to good use. Lowe at last cleverly placed to Leigh who equalized through a great effort, to the accompaniment of a chorus by the 'Rattles', which had apparently been receiving attention from the battery 'Spokies.' Both sides were now right out for a lead and a great game ended in a draw of 2 goals each, the two sides thereby maintaining unbeaten records.

FORTUNES FROM THE DEEP.

NEW ERA IN TREASURE HUNTING.

In our schoolboy days we delighted to read of expeditions for the recovery of lost wealth from the sea. Many of the stories concerned mythical Spanish gold but the spice of adventure was there and that was enough. To-day this kind of enterprise offers greater attractions than ever. Many millions' worth of property have gone down during the past four and a half years.

While war lasted the Admiralty kept all salvage work in their own hands. But they have now decided to reopen it to civilian enterprise and to confine naval plant to work on the Belgian coast. As a result private organisations such as the Liverpool Salvage Association are restarting as quickly as they can. New companies are also being formed, for the scope of opportunity is world-wide, and holds promise of rich reward.

There exists no difficulty in finding "prospects" to get to work upon. Around such promontories as Beachy Head the seabottom is thickly laden with sunken vessels. It is the same in part of the Mediterranean, off the Irish coast, in the North Sea, the Baltic, and the White Sea. Wherever a prominent "landfall" exists, by which U-boats could wait for prey, wrecks may be found in plenty.

Hundreds are so deeply submerged that the hulls cannot be raised, though their cargoes may be recovered. But in hundreds of other cases both ships and contents are salvable. These jobs will be taken in hand first. They are not only the more profitable, but also most important nationally — we badly need the tonnage they represent.

So pressing did our need of merchant tonnage become during the war that the Admiralty assembled the largest salvage plant ever formed. This was placed under the direction of Commodore F.W. Young, R.N.R., and by means of it there were raised between 400 and 500 vessels, representing a value of approximately £40,000,000. To expedite salvage generally the Admiralty are selling some of their salvage ships to private firms, keeping only sufficient to complete the work being done for Belgium — reopening her ports and inland waterways, blocked up by the Huns.

TOMMY'S ACCOUNTS.

BIG JOB FOR POST OFFICE.

Staffs of local post offices at home have a big job on hand just now in settling the accounts of the demobilized men. Every soldier on dispersal is paid his month's furlough allowance and ration money, together with the balance standing to his credit in his Pay book, by means of warrants to be cashed at the nearest post office. Supposing there is due in this way £20, a few days after arriving home the soldier receives a pay warrant for £5, a week later a warrant for £7, and later one for £8. Subsequently he will receive a Post Office savings bank book with the amount of his war gratuity placed to his credit.

A great many men are drawing on this money, but this is only to be expected, as the object of the gratuity was to furnish a man with money to help him to re-establish himself in civil life. Many have to buy new clothes, or, disappointed of the hope of getting employment before the end of their furlough, may require money to live on.

A system of paying gratuities to ex-officers by instalments is indicated in the following letter, headed Form 477, sent to an applicant by the Director-General of Awards, Ministry of Pensions, Officers' Branch, New North-street, Theobalds-road, W.C. 1:—

Sir,—The Minister of Pensions is sure you will readily understand an immense number of cases have to be dealt with by this Department at the present time, and I am directed to inform you that it is not yet possible to deal with the claim for your gratuity. It has, however, been decided to pay you advances on account of any award for which you may be found eligible, and this will be recovered from that award.

A draft for £5 is enclosed representing the first advance and further advances will be made from this office at intervals not exceding one month until it is found practicable to deal with your case.

Should you change your address during the next two months it is requested that you should be good enough to notify this office immediately.

The Prince of Wales has expressed his willingness to accept the gift of a pair of shooting boots from ex-Service men who are learning bootmaking and repairing at the Bangor Training Centre.

Woolwich has nearly completed its task of raising £50,000 to build a general hospital, which will not only be a war memorial, but will serve to relieve the London hospitals of much work from the congested south-eastern district.

SOLDIER'S TRAFFIC IN COCAINE.

A COSTLY SOUVENIR FROM AFRICA.

Enough cocaine to cause the deaths of a hundred persons, was found in the possession of Sapper Harold J. C. Draper, (30), who was charged at Tower Bridge on Saturday with attempting to administer cocaine at the Horse and Groom public house, Westminster Bridge-road, to Mrs. Jane Beard, of Lambeth. He was further charged with having cocaine in his possession.

Mrs. Beard stated that she was glancing at a looking-glass when she saw Draper take a yellow bottle from his pocket, remove the cork, and shake the bottle over her beer. He said to her afterwards, "It is cocaine. It is worth twenty quid."

"She lies all the way through," said Draper.

Mr. Gill (the magistrate): "I do not think that the evidence justifies conviction on the charge of attempting to administer the drug."

A public analyst stated that a bottle found in the possession of the soldier contained more than 200 grains of cocaine, and that two grains would be sufficient to kill a person.

Mr. A. H. M. Muter stated that a small dose produced temporary excitement.

Draper said that he bought the cocaine by accident in German East Africa. It was labelled "boracic acid," and he purchased it as such, but soon found out his mistake. He showed it to several persons, and a man in Capetown told him that it was cocaine. He brought it to London to make sure. He did not attempt to put any in the woman's beer, but he showed the bottle to her, and said that if she knew any friends of Billie Carleton they could do some business.

Mrs. Beard: "You asked me if I knew an actress who would buy the cocaine, and you said you had some more in your kit-bag at the Union Jack Club."

Mr. Gill said that cocaine was a most dangerous drug for a man like Draper to have in his possession, and he strongly suspected that he was trying to sell it. It was a serious offence, and he would be sentenced to three months' hard labour.

Instructions were given for Draper's kit-bag to be searched.

AFTER FIVE YEARS.

CHANNEL ISLANDS FOR THE HOLIDAYS.

The Channel Islands are once again open to holiday makers. In August, 1914, hundreds of visitors were unceremoniously packed off home, since when holiday-making there has been impossible. Now the islanders are looking forward to a great inrush of visitors from England, hotels and boarding houses, long closed, are being reopened, and keepers of apartment houses are already becoming busy.

It has always been the pride of the Channel Islands that the islands themselves are the great attraction to visitors, and no attempt has been made to supply the artificial attractions so common at English seaside resorts. The most striking feature of the islands is still their insularity. The inhabitants are well satisfied with things as they are and keenly jealous of the neighbouring islands. The main rivalry is between the two larger islands. Sark, by general consent, is acclaimed the most beautiful of the islands, the rugged grandeur of its coast and its general picturesque scenery stamping it as a thing apart. Sark is already filling up, and Alderney, too, has its attraction, since spirits and tobacco can be obtained more cheaply there than in any of the islands.

Jersey and Guernsey are agreed that, with the resumption in a few weeks of a daily mail boat, large numbers of visitors may be expected. The passport restrictions have not been removed, but they do not involve serious difficulty, and the islanders are consoling themselves with the reflection that their effect will tend to limit their visitors to the wealthier classes.

A road, erected at a cost of £220, was dedicated to St. John the Baptist Church, Spalding, on Sunday, as a memorial to the men belonging to the parish who have fallen in the war.

NOTICE TO CONTRIBUTORS AND ENQUIRERS.

We have stated several times that no notice can be taken of any communication which does not give full particulars concerning the sender—rank, name, unit, etc. These need not necessarily be published but the Editor must have them for reference.

Further, the rank and name must be printed in block letters. Valuable time is wasted in attempting to decipher hieroglyphics which are possibly easily deciphered by the writer but by no one else.

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

A GENERAL AND THE EX-KAISER.

General von Bernhardi, the celebrated author-General of Germany, and incidentally one of Prussia's most erring prophets, has come into the limelight again by giving a few criticisms on the Kaiser's guilt. He it was who eight years ago exhorted the German people to higher ideals of militarism as the only means of obtaining power in the world. "The end-all and the be-all of a state is power," said the General, "and when threat of war is insufficient to call attention to its own claims the concert must begin; the obligation is unconditional, and the right to fight becomes the duty to make war."

Justified by such moral creeds Germany decided to make a great bid for World Dominion. To quote Bernhardi's pre-war words: "We must not aim at the impossible. A reckless policy would be foreign to our national character and our high aims and duties. But we must aspire to the possible, even at the risk of war. This policy we have seen to be both our right and our duty."

So that the planning of the Great War was no reckless scheme, it was a deep hideous plot (covered to the German people by the leaders with a grand rich cloak of "duty") to overthrow those powers which blocked the way to Germany's future progress. It was a callous plan founded on that time-worn system of the survival of the fittest. "The longer we look at the things with folded hands, the harder it will be to make up the start which the other Powers have gained on us."

Preventive War permissible.

The crushing of the militarism, which this great General said must assuredly win a glorious future, has had no effect in altering his views. In a recent article in the Rote Tag, a Berlin paper, he declares that the Kaiser's sole guilt consists in his not having begun the war soon enough while Germany's enemies were not yet prepared. We have seen that Bernhardi upholds the duty to make war, and we find in this article no only the reiteration of that sentiment, but that war should be made, if it is to be successful not on the occurrence of any violation by another country, but merely at the precise moment when the enemy is at its weakest. This phase, he urges, must be looked for, and the opportunity taken immediately it is presented.

"In the World War," says Bernhardi, the Kaiser up to the last moment, believed Russia would refrain from carrying out her hostile intentions and that England would not take part in the war. He acted in this belief until the end, and was only with difficulty induced at the last moment to accept the challenge flung at him."

Newspaper Criticisms.

The Kölnische Volkszeitung regrets that this article has been published but at the same time points out that one advantage is afforded in that "it proves that the wishes of those who (according to the opinions of our enemies) controlled the pre-war politics, have not been fulfilled either by the Kaiser or the authorities."

The Tageblatt remarks: "General Bernhardi admits that certain persons urged the acceptance of the challenge. The present situation shows whether, by their pressure, they led the Kaiser and the German people."

Y.M.C.A. ACTIVITIES.

A "GILBERT AND SULLIVAN" NIGHT.

At a delightful concert-lecture on 20th May, the creator of "Raffles," Mr. E. W. Hornung, appeared in the new rôle of vocalist. Supported by Dr. Francis and Rev. A. D. Mackenzie he gave a spirited rendering of "A Policeman's Life is not a happy one." Many other solos, as well as duets and quartettes, were given in illustration of a lecture on "Sullivan and his Place in Music," which was one of a series of illustrated lectures on celebrated composers, in the Central Y.M.C.A. Loreley Hall.

The director of the musical activities of the "Central," Mr. Jones, played and sang, and he was ably supported by Mr. Mackenzie, Pte. Brickall and a quartette party which included Miss Thomson, Miss Tuckett and Mr. Hatch of the Y.M.C.A. Headquarters' Staff. A duet, "Pretty, Pretty Maiden," from The Mikado, was given with admirable dramatic effect by Miss Tuckett and Mr. Mackenzie. At the unanimous request of the audience, Mr. Jones consented to give another "Sullivan" evening on an early date.

GERMANY GRANTED EXTENSION OF TIME.

ALTERNATIVE MEASURES.

WOMEN REPULSE BOLSHEVIST ARMY.

FREEDOM OF THE SCHELDT.

GERMANY ASKS FOR MORE TIME.

CO-RESPONSIBILITY.

Count Brockdorff Rantzau has formally requested the Allies to allow Germany more time to present its counter-proposals to the Peace Treaty. He says the German Government intends in the next few days to address communications on the following further points territorial;—questions in the East; Alsace Lorraine; the occupied region; the reparation problem; Labour legislation; treatment of German property in enemy countries.

German press forecasts prophesy that the principal points of the reply will be a proposal to institute a joint committee consisting of representatives of both sides, with a neutral president, to decide economic controversies; the appointment of a similar committee to determine the amount of the damage in Belgium and France (protests against damage to Germany being left out of consideration); that Austria-Hungary, being Allies of Germany, must be held equally responsible with Germany.

BERLIN DEMONSTRATES FOR AND AGAINST THE PEACE.

Many thousands of people yesterday again demonstrated in the streets of Berlin. The Majority Socialists gathered at the Wilnelmsplatz. Among others, Scheidemann, Prime Minister, harangued the crowd, and was severely heckled.

In front of the Reichstag building the Independent Socialists assembled with those of the Majority Socialists who, like themselves, are ready to sign the Treaty. Carrying red flags they tried to enter the Wilhelmstrasse in order to demonstrate against Ebert and Scheidemann, but only a small number succeeded in reaching the chancellory. Yesterday the Independent Socialists made a huge demonstration at which they called for the overthrow of the Government, for the liberation of political prisoners and the establishment of a republic of Soviets. Hugo Haase, leader of the Independent Socialists, pointed out that a world revolution would change the Peace Treaty into a "scrap of paper."

A member of the "International Association of the disabled" climbed on the monument of Friedrich Wilhelm III and, acclaimed by the spectators, put a red flag into the hand of the statue. The head of the horse was also ornamented with flags and finally a placard was attached depicting a soldier playing a barrel-organ with the title "The Gratitude of the Fatherland."

There was no real disturbance. Demonstrators who wanted to enter the Hotel Adlon, where the Allied Missions reside, were soothed by policemen and retired.

ALTERNATIVE MEASURES.

The Allies and their associates are resolute to enforce the terms if Germany does not accept them. There can be no question either of their determination to take this course. Marshal Foch has completed a tour of inspection of the Rhine and Germany has been reminded already that the machinery of the blockade can again be put into operation at a few hours notice. General Pershing has been obliged suddenly to postpone his eagerly expected visit to Great Britain. It is officially announced that the reason for this change of plan is "uncertainty about the German attitude regarding the Peace Terms and the situation arising therefrom." The significance of the incident at the present moment cannot be missed. It conveys a very clear intimation to Germany that America is in full agreement with the intention of the Allies to take military action if necessary in order to secure signature of the terms.

EXTENSION OF TIME FOR GERMAN OBSERVATIONS.

In response to Count Brockdorff-Rantzau's representations that the observations of the German delegates are so complicated as to prevent their presentation within the fortnight originally granted, M. Clemenceau has agreed to extend the time until the 29th May. A further week will then be permitted to the Germans before making their final decision to sign or not to sign.

It is believed generally that they will sign but they will probably first try to induce the Allies to make changes enough to show the German people that the terms are not, as at first, unacceptable. Alternatively they may refuse to sign and then submit to "Superior Force" to save the face of the German Government. It is expected that the terms to Austria will be presented to the Austrian delegates early next week.

VOTES FOR FRENCH WOMEN.

The French Chamber of Deputies has decided by 344 votes against 97 to give political rights to women.

The death is announced of Colonel G.H. Brook Coats, C.B., aged sixty-seven. He was a retired Indian Army officer who served in the Afghan war and took part in the march to Kabul and Kandahar.

POLISH WOMEN BATTALIONS.

BOLSHEVIST ATTACKS REPULSED

The Polish National Commitee announces that the Ukrainian offensive in Eastern Galicia, which was directed against Kamienopol and Brusy, was beaten back by Polish women battalions and troops from the garrison of Lemberg. This success enabled the Polish troops stationed north of Kunikow to make considerable progress. There is also much fighting in Volhynia, where the Poles scored a victory near Zolkiew, and also occupied Obroszyn, Turynka, Mosty-Wielkie, Sokol, and Krystynopol.

On the Lithuanian and White Ruthenian fron the Poles attacked the Bolsheviks, upon whom they inflicted casualties amounting to 500 in killed and wounded. They also occupied Nowoswienaiany and Inturki, and made same booty in railway material. They took 100 prisoners and five machine guns.

Ataman Oskilko, one of Petlura's generals, who commanded a Ukrainian army against the Bolsheviks, arrived with his staff in the Polish lines asking protection. His declaration that Petlura is in close contact with the Bolsheviks, made a great sensation in political and military circles.—Reuter.

Copenhagen, Tuesday. A telegram from Warsaw quotes the following official communiqué: "Polish troops have taken Borysiav and Dronobycz, and other detachments have captured Nikolaievsk and forced a crossing of the Dniester. A bridge near the Bozwadow military road and the Lemberg-Nikolaievsh railway are entirely in Polish hands. The enemy is fleeing precipitately."—Reuter.

NATIVE INDIAN LOYALTY.

The India Office last night issued the following: The following news has been received from the Viceroy of India:

Council of Regency Bahawalpur have placed Imperial service troops and whole resources at disposal of Government, in view of Afghan war, at representative gathering of Moslem, Sikhs, and Hindus at Lahore. Lieut.-Governor of Punjab received from all communities convincing assurances of support to Government in the present crisis.

TEACHING THE AFGHANS A LESSON.

Reports received from the Government of India state that our forces at Dakka were attacked by Afghans in force on the 16th May. The enemy were driven off and the night was quiet. Our casualties are reported at about one hundred and thirty. On the 17th the First Indian Brigade, with the co-operation of aeroplanes, attacked the enemy on the hills West of Dakka, which was captured. Our casualties are not yet reported. The enemy's strength was reported as eight battalions with guns, four of which were captured. Over one hundred enemy dead, mostly regular troops, have already been counted. On the 18th the situation was reported by the General Officer commanding the First Indian Division as being very satisfactory. Our pickets now hold the hills West of Dakka. Sherabad and Rubat, about two miles North West of Dakka, are occupied by us. This successful action is reported to have had an instantaneous and beneficial effect on the tribes.—British wireless.

SCHELDT TO BE FREE.

Paris. At the meeting this morning of the five Foreign Ministers the Dutch delegates accepted the revision of the Treaty of 1839, as far as the free use of the Scheldt and Meuse is concerned, but were unwilling to agree to the revision of the territorial clauses of the treaty.

[By the Treaty of 1839, the navigation on the Scheldt was forbidden to foreign warships, the territory on either side of the river being Dutch. The result was that at the beginning of the war Antwerp could not be relieved by the British Navy using this waterway. So jealous were the Dutch of their rights over the Scheldt that shortly before the war—and in expectation of it—they fortified the entrance to it at Flushing, to the great advantage and joy of the Germans, and against the vain protests of the Belgians and the French.]

GERMAN GOLD.

Yesterday a special train from Germany to Holland conveyed 200 million marks in gold. This money was deposited in the Nederlandsche bank as guarantee for the payment of foodstuffs from America.

ARRESTED U-BOAT CAPTAIN.

Berlin, Monday.—The German Armistice Commission at Spa has protested against the arrest of the German U-boat commander, Herr Kiesewetter, in England, urging that the British Government expressly promised safe conduct to the German crews. — Reuter.

THE MURDERED YOUNG W.A.A.C.

SERGEANT-MAJOR ACCUSED.

The inquest on Ellen Florence Ruby Rault, the young W.A.A.C. who was found murdered on May 12 in Wilstead Wood, near Bedford, was resumed yesterday.

Company-Sergeant-Major Montague Cecil Keith Hepburn, of the Royal Engineers, who has been charged with the murder of the woman, was in court. He appeared calm, and talked without emotion to the two police officers who had charge of him.

The proceedings took place in a hut at Haynes Park Camp, where Miss Rault was stationed with her unit.

Miss Hickson, Unit Administrator, stated that Miss Rault had been under her command since 9th November. She was a perfectly straight girl, and on good terms with her fellow-workers. Only on one occasion had she committed a breach of discipline. She stayed out for an hour without leave. She said she did it on the spur of the moment for a lark.

She was a very lively girl, and had to be spoken to severely before she could realise the seriousness of the offence. This was about two months ago.

Eva Brown, a good-looking girl, also belonging to the corps, said she had known Miss Rault nearly two years. Witness last saw her alive about 3.30 p.m. on Friday, 9th May, when they had a cup of tea in the kitchen of the officers' mess. Miss Rault was then off duty, and she said to witness: "I am going to meet a sergeant-major at the gate outside the camp to go on the river at Bedford."

THE DEFINITE ARTICLE.

The Coroner: Did she say "a" sergeant-major or "the" sergeant-major?—She said "the" sergeant-major.

Had she anything in her hand?—No, she had a book in her pocket. She took it out in the kitchen.

What was it?—The book of "A Hundred Poems."

Witness and Miss Rault had attended a dance at the camp on the previous night, and Miss Rault had danced with the sergeant-major. Witness did not know his name; they spoke of him as "the little dark man." There had sometimes been quarrels among the girls about a certain man, but she had never known any quarrels with Miss Rault over the sergeant-major.

Answering the Coroner, Miss Brown said Miss Rault had shown her certain photographs in her wallet.

Do you remember seeing these photographs?—I have seen two of them, but I don't remember the third one.

Mr. A. Farr, representing Sergeant-Major Hepburn, asked to examine the photographs and they were handed to him. They were of men in uniform.

The Coroner (to witness): Was she afraid of walking about by herself in the camp?—No.

Did she talk much to you about the sergeant-major?—No.

Did she ever tell you she was engaged to him?—No.

Witness said she did not think deceased knew the sergeant-major's name. The two were on quite good terms.

She knew an individual called "Tom the Stoker," but had not seen Miss Rault talking to him more than any other girl did.

HOW THE BODY WAS FOUND.

Corporal Augustus Walter Martin, R.E., stationed at the Haynes Park depot, described the finding of the body. It was partly covered with branches of a tree. The legs were doubled right under the body.

The deceased girl was lying on her back, and her hair was disarranged. Her dress was pulled up to her waist. There were the marks of three blows on the face. On her left hand rested a pocket wallet, and between her right and her body a small patriotic calendar. The wallet was open and the photographs were inside.

Police Constable Holdon said he found four stab wounds in the breast. A purse contained 10s. 5d. Close to the right hand was an Army dinner knife. It looked as if it had been cleaned by being plunged in the ground; there was no stain on it, but some rust. There had been a heavy thunderstorm.

Police Sergeant Stack said he found signs of a struggle at the place where the body was discovered. At the medical hut he found some short brambles under the girl's tunic and close to her skin.

THE FATAL WOUND.

Dr. William Garner described the various wounds on the body. One stab had penetrated the heart. In his opinion the weapon used was a sharp, pointed instrument. He found no evidence of criminal assault.

Is it possible for any of the wounds to have been caused by the Army knife?—I do not think so. Witness added that he was of opinion that wounds were caused by a dagger.

Were you shown another knife by the police?—Yes, and a red-handled clasp knife.

Could those wounds have been caused by the large blade of that knife?—They might have been.

John Charles Bray, a Bedford Modern School boy, said that when he was cycling home shortly before 5 p.m. on May 9, he heard someone breathing hard in the wood and the noise of the cracking of dry bushes in the opposite direction. He saw Sergeant-Major Hepburn sitting in an open lorry at the camp when he passed through. Hepburn waved his hand to him.

Betty Davis, another member of the corps, said that the deceased told her she was going to Bedford to go on the river with the sergeant-major.

The hearing was then adjourned.

A motor cyclist in the uniform of a Sergeant-major of the Canadian A.S.C. was killed yesterday at the dangerous cross-roads between Canterbury and Ramsgate by collision with a motorcar.

Babs, of Beattie and Babs, the well-known music hall couple, was seriously injured in a motorcycle smash on Saturday.

LORD FRENCH'S CANDID CRITICS.

FRENCH COMMANDER'S REPLY.

General Lanrezac, Commander of the French Fifth Army at the beginning of the war, replies to the criticisms against him made by Field-Marshal French in his book "1914," which is appearing in the Daily Telegraph. General Lanrezac says in the Paris edition of the New York Herald: "The Field-Marshal in Chapter II., gives vent to an expression of opinion in my regard in a form which, coming from a man who has held such a high position in the heroic British Army, is insulting and inadmissible. I will not follow him along that path, for abuse is never an argument, and, apart from that, the state of my health absolutely forbids it. I regret that the Field-Marshal does not rate me higher, but I can easily resign myself to it, being accustomed to despise adverse opinions so long as they are not based upon facts.

I will confine myself to dealing with one of the Field-Marshal's assertions, in which he says that he judged me very unfavourably from the first day he met me, on Aug. 17, about noon, at Réthel, where I had just established my headquarters. Up to that time he had never had any relation with me, and knew me only by report, which was very favourable to me, it would appear, according to what he says himself. The interview lasted only ten minutes, and neither he nor I uttered a single word which would have given the most minute observer the chance of forming an estimate, one way or the other, of our respective values as Commanders-in-Chief.

Reasons of propriety alone would have prevented my criticising the English operations before if the most elementary sense of honesty did not forbid it, for even to this day I have not an aquaintance with the facts sufficiently comprehensive and assured to expatiate upon them.

Field-Marshal French is certainly no better informed as regards my operations than I am as regards his: he should therefore display more reserve in respect of me. It is certainly the case that I was relieved of my command on the evening of Sept. 3, but the Field-Marshal is not aware of the true reasons for the disgrace which has fallen on me, and even if he knew them, in the absence of sufficient evidence, it would not be in his power to judge in what degree those reasons are well-founded. The Field-Marshal knows by experience how uncertain is the fate of military leaders in an unsuccessful war.

FIRE AT SHOOLBRED'S.

FIFTY MOTOR PUMPS IN ACTION.

In the early hours of Tuesday morning London firemen were engaged in extinguishing a big fire which, broke out late at night at the emporium of Messrs. James Snoolbred and Co. Ltd. and burned with increasing intensity for a long period before the brigade, with fifty motor pumps in use, began to make an appreciable impression. Originating from an unknown cause in a packing room of the basement, the outbreak had gained a considerable hold on that part of the building by the time any considerable force of the brigade was assembled. The density of the smoke and the great heat made the work of the brigade very difficult. As a consequence the ground and upper floors of the building became more or less affected, and in one part the flames reached the roof; but the main damage occurred on the lower floors, and in the result the outbreak did not develop to such an extent as at one time appeared likely. The departments principally affected were the despatch rooms and the stationery and piece goods branches. The whole of the furnishing establishment escaped damage, and the store department was practically untouched. The outbreak attracted large crowds to the neighbourhood of the Tottenham-court-road. The drapery and fashion departments, the furniture departments, and the grocery, provision, and stores departments are untouched, and yesterday business was being carried on in all sections as usual. In all there were seventy-five brigade motor appliances in attendance, including fifty motor pumps. The damage is estimated at £100,000.

1st 20th LONDON REACH HOME

The cadre of the 1-20 Battalion County of London Regiment, who returned from France last week, were welcomed at Greenwich yesterday by the Mayor and Mayoress, with whom were the Mayors of Deptford and Lewisham and the Astronomer-Royal. Officers and men, numbering about fifty, arrived at midday at Greenwich Station, and marched through cheering crowds to the Borough Hall, where luncheon was provided. The Mayor of Greenwich presided, and congratulatory speeches were made by the Mayors of Deptford and Lewisham. Afterwards there was a triumphal march through the principal streets to Holly Hedge House, Blackheath, the headquarters, where they were entertained to tea. The thoroughfares, which were lined with schoolchildren, were gaily decorated.

MILITARY MEDALLIST'S SUICIDE.

A case of remarkable determination on the part of an Australian soldier in committing suicide was investigated by Mr. Gilbert White and a jury at Woking yesterday.

The man, W. Francis Cox, M.M., was a native of Woking, and was on leave pending his return to Australia. On Sunday his mutilated body was found on the railway near Byfleet, and, according to the medical evidence, he had first cut his throat (an open razor was found close to the body) and then placed himself in front of an express troop train. He had been working as a joiner at 1s. 9d. per hour, and his wife had an allowance of 10 guineas per month from the Australian Government.

A verdict of "Suicide during temporary insanity" was returned.

AMERICAN TRIBUTES TO HAWKER AND GRIEVE.

"TWO SPLENDID FOOLS"

No news has been received of Lieut. Hawker and Commander Grieve, and the worst fears as to their fate are now entertained. Almost the only possible hope is that the airmen may have been picked up by a vessel not carrying wireless. The Government last night announced that the Naval authorities have ordered the immediate despatch of a number of destroyers in further search, though in view of the vast areas involved the Admiralty warn the public that the chances of finding them are very remote.

Air crossings, in tragedy and triumph, are subjects of much comment in the American Press. When news came that Mr. Hawker and Commander Grieve had soared into the air in their frail biplane and sped away into the unknown, the heart of every red-blooded man here leaped in his breast. "They have given an example of daring and daring," says the New York Herald, "of which mankind may be proud, and it is a great pity they did not reach the goal." "But," says the writer, "in this year of closing war, is proof necessary that the British race still breeds men?" "As an example of what men will dare, and of contempt for death", says the New York Globe, Hawker and Grieve, "two splendid fools," will be immortalised. Another comment is that if the American seaplane enterprise, with all its precautions, was so hazardous, how much more hazardous was that of Hawker and Grieve without precautions. It is questioned here whether even the most elaborate preparations by the British naval authorities would have saved the day for the intrepid fliers, and there is no attempt whatever to make capital at the expense of the British Admiralty. There is good reason, according to information received here from St. John's, to believe that the British officials warned the competitors to delay their start until a time when the conditions might prove less dangerous, and when naval co-operation would lessen the risk. How far this story is correct one cannot say, but it has been frequently repeated. Dead or alive, Americans esteem Hawker and Grieve for their sporting courage, and will count them as a pair of the bravest men who ever went out on a daring, and, as most people here think, hopeless errand.

OTHER UNDETERRED COMPETITORS.

Mr. Raynham has ordered another engine for the Martynside machine which is now being dismembered, and will be rebuilt here with the aid of the spare parts already on the spot, as two-thirds of the rear fuselage are unharmed. It is expected that the machine will be ready for flight within four weeks, and a start will then be made from Mount Pearl instead of from Quidi Vidi.

Preparations for other flights are proceeding apace, and Admiral Kerr, of the Handley Page machine, says his workmen are two days ahead of their schedule time in their preparations at Harbour Grace. Captain Alcock, whose Vickers machine is expected this week, may also proceed to Harbour Grace, having been granted permission to use the Handley Page aerodrome for the flight, as his machine is much larger than either the Sopwith or the Martinsyde machines.

Major Partridge, who was arranging for the venture of Colonel Porte's flying boat trip from Cape Broyle, has been instructed to make no further contracts for essentials regarding the undertaking. This is regarded as evidence of a possible alteration of plans by the British authorities, and the impression here is that a big British airship will shortly attempt the flight from England direct to New York.—Reuter.

LORD MAYOR WELCOMES THE H.A.C.

UNIQUE RECORD.

The cadre of the First Battalion of the Honourable Artillery Company, consisting of six officers and forty-eight non-commissioned officers and men, arrived in London from Cologne on Tuesday. The party, which in reality consisted of an escort to the colours already presented to the battalion, reached Waterloo shortly after eleven o'clock, where a large crowd gave the men an enthusiastic reception. Amongst those present at the station were General Fielding, commanding the London district, and his staff. Headed by the band of the regiment, the home-coming men marched off to headquarters at Armoury House, cheering crowds lining the route as the men, with bayonets fixed, swung through the City streets. The cadre was reinforced by several hundred demobilised H.A.C. men, who joined their comrades at different points along the route.

As the men passed the Mansion House, the Lord Mayor, in his robes, took up a central position on the balcony, with him being the Lady Mayoress, the Sheriffs, Lord Denbigh (Colonel of the H.A.C.), and Colonel Treffry, who commanded the battalion when it first went out to France. At Armoury House a hearty welcome awaited the men, who were entertained to lunch. The First Battalion left London for active service in September, 1914, and on the occasion of their departure they were reviewed by the King (Captain-General of the regiment) in the grounds of Armoury House. Among those who went out with the battalion and who returned yesterday were Lieutenant-Colonel P. G. Cooper, who was in command of the party, Major and Quartermaster G. H. Mayhew, M.C. and Sergeant Adams, M.S.M.

At the lunch at headquarters Lord Denbigh, who presided, told the men that the magnificent reception they had received from the City that morning was a mark of the high esteem in which their regiment was held.

Colonel Cooper, who commanded the 1st Battalion during the last two years, thanked the officers and men who had served under him for their loyalty, and mentioned that the Honourable Artillery Company had the record of never having had a court-martial during the war.

GERMANY'S RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE WAR.

A STUDY IN GERMAN MENTALITY.

When we are dealing with Germany's responsibility we must always bear German mentality in mind: as we pointed out in a previous article on the "Two nations". There was the Prussian "nation" of the Prussian Government, its military and bureaucratic officials, most of whom still continue to hold office, and the great mass of the German people who accepted the official statements as to foreign policy with a childlike credulity. Now the Germans are not a people of great political insight. Neither their temperament nor their past history has fitted them for the role of self government such as we have developed during the past 800 years.

Hence the credulity of the average German is astounding beyond belief; he believes implicitly in the Einkreisungspolitik (Policy of encirclement of the late King Edward, in the war of defence against a treacherously premature Russian mobilisation—and so on—.

Now this ignorance, both of the causes and origin of the war, and of the real reasons of the breakdown in November last, has a great bearing on the present German attitude towards the Peace terms. When, in the course of last September and October, Ludendorff realised that the game was up, the German people were kept in complete ingnorance of the fact that their armies were being rapidly defeated and, had the armistice not been granted, would have been confronted in a fortnight with a super-Sedan. The breakdown of the home front was, in their opinion, the chief contributory cause, together with the defection of their allies and the rigour of the blockade. The sudden outbreak of the revolution was engineered by the troops on the lines of communication, and consummated by the naval revolt at Kiel and Wilhelmshafen. Then came the Revolution and abdication of the Kaiser.

Therefore the German is apt to decline all responsibility for the past misdeeds of his Government on these grounds: "Yes, doubtless there were many wrongful deeds and acts of violence committed by the Army Authorities during the course of the war: but by our Revolution the old possessors of power (Machthaber) have been swept away — the sponge has been completely passed over the slate. We start with an entirely new policy and frame of mind — disarmament, International Socialism, League of Nations — all these ideas we share — and yet you will persist in treating us a though we were the legal inheritors of Prussian militarism. You seem to forget that one of your own statesmen has laid down that you would mete out far different treatment to a democratic and de-militarised Germany from those terms which would have to be exacted from an unrepentant Germany ruled by old autocracy, still animated by the spirit of Prussian Junkertum."

But has Germany really changed in spirit throughout all its sections of political thought since 1915—16? At the Stockholm Conference in June, 1917, which was attended both by Majority and Minority Socialists, some rather strange views were put forward. Ebert, Scheidemann, Fischer and David Legien were amongst the Majority representatives.

What had they to say about the "Schuldfrage" (question of responsibility for the war) as early as then? Scheidemann defended the action of the Party on August 4th, 1914 when they threw in their lot with the Government. He also claimed that, so far from its having accomplished nothing, the Russian Revolution should be put down to its credit! David repeated the stock German arguments about England's commercial jealousy, and he even attempted to present the concatenation of events in the fateful 12 days of 1914 in such a way as to make the Entente powers appear the guilty parties, and Germany innocent. As for what had happened in Belgium, England, he said, was responsible! Subsequently, Ebert deprecated the whole business of the "Schuldfrage." They were not there, he said, to apportion blame. In their view, the Frieden der Verständigung (peace by understanding) simply meant that the Central Powers were to go back to the map of July, 1914.

And so we simply come back to this: that the Germans assert that they were not the only guilty ones, and that the Entente, having accepted President Wilson's fourteen points as a basis for peace negotiations, there ought to be no peace of violence such as the present treaty foreshadowed. But the Germans forget that points seven and eight anticipate the financial reparation due to Belgium and France, just as point 13 lays down the delimitation of the future Polish State including the corridor through W. Prussia to Danzig. Moreover, the fourteen points were never intended to be the actual framework of the Peace Treaty, nor were reparations and indemnities intended to be replaced by generalities, which, excellent, in themselves, were rather intended to be a "terminus ad quem" rather than a "terminus a quo"—an ultimate goal and vision to be aimed at, rather than a starting point.

One final (15th) point and we have done. If President Wilson's message which dates from January 8th, 1918, evorked such heaty approval from November last onwards, how did it come about that no voices were raised to advocate its adoption between January and November last? The answer is plain to read—the German High Command persuaded its dupes, the German people, that the great "Spring offensive" would sweep the Entente's forces off the battle fields of Northern France and Belgium, and, despite half hearted adherence to the policy of "no annexation and no indemnities" on the part of the Socialists, this was the real explanation of the silence of the German people and their representatives, viz. that they hoped to achieve by one last desperate effort what no Presidential message or fourteen points could give them, viz, the ultimate victory over the Entente.

WEATHER MEMORY.

BY A GUNNER MAJOR.

An article some time ago in the Daily Mail on the subject of weather memory urges me to send you my impressions, which I am sure hundreds of thousands of soldiers, who served in France will recall at once and bear me out that their weather memory, however poor it may have been, has been sharpened by over four years of war to a very fine degree.

Weather does not affect the ordinary citizen in civil life half so much as he really thinks. He only notices the weather during his hours of recreation and he naturally complains when the coincidence is not favourable. You will notice that the farmer, the agricultural labourer, and the sportsman generally have a very vivid weather memory. They will tell you of the six weeks drought, the long spells of wet weather and the heat wave in the first week of partridge shooting, not to mention the races run in snow storms.

Without any reference to diaries or other records all Mons men will remember the great heat during the retreat. I came out with my battery in the seventh division and sleeping under the stars during that glorious defence of Ypres from October 17th. to Nov. 11th. well remember the exceptionally fine weather and the fact that there were only two wet days during all that period. Then came the hard frost of the last week of November, followed by what seemed the two wettest consecutive months in the whole war. In England, which is a similar climate to Northern France, the winter of 1914-1915 was the wettest for many years. I was wounded at Neuve Chapelle and did not return to France until Nov. 1915. My mind is a complete blank as to the weather in England during that summer, bearing out my argument that to the average peaceful citizen, the weather is of small concern.

The last week in Nov. 1915 produced the hardest Autumn frost I remember. December was comparatively wet and January fairly fine, but the second week in February 1916 favoured us with a terrible blizzard of snow — the worst during the whole war. There was a deal of snow towards the end of March and a spring heat wave on April 1st. The summer weather was uneventful, but all of us who were on the Somme in the big offensive will remember the torrential rain on or about July 7th when every trench and dug-out were completely flooded. Again, no one will ever forget the rain after the taking of Beaumont Hamel, the shell holes full of water, where men and horses were drowned on dark nights and the bottomless depths of the engulfing mud in the trenches, where men actually died of exhaustion before they could be pulled out by their comrades.

Who will forget the thirty days of frost from the middle of January to the middle of February 1917, the hardest Winter since 1895? The mercury fell to 0 deg Fahr. Eggs could not be fried, as it was impossible to get them out of their shells Trenches were dug by the use of dynamite.

Will not everybody who took part in the assault of Vimy and the battle of Arras remember the snow showers on April 9th and succeeding days, at the only pleasant feature of the dismal operations that suceeded? viz:—The three weeks of sunshine in the end of April and beginning of May. The stormy weather of July 31st and the mud of Passchendaele are undying memories to most, and the few of us who marched through northern Italy to the Piave will cherish grateful recollections of a wonderful climate. I am told it was an exceptionally open winter, but the fact remains that from November, 1917, to March, 1918, we in Italy experienced only two or three days rain and about three days of snow. It snowed for two days on the Montello about Christmas, and the snow lay a month in brilliant weather accompanied by sharp frost.

At the March offensive of the Germans we returned to France and experienced ordinary climate conditions till our August effort. There for the first time the "clerk of the weather" joined up on the British side and a wonderful spell was maintained almost unbroken until the final battle. The only real break was the rain on October 20th at the Battle of the River Selle.

The new interest in the weather, aroused in so many of us during the War, will assuredly stand us in good stead in the years to come, and offer us many comparisons when we think of the four long years of the Great War.

Lecturers of standing and experience, the great majority of whom have been 'through it' as have their students. Where the comfort in billet and mess, irrespective of rank, almost verges on the luxurious, all combine to enable us to qualify for the great struggle coming in which we shall all be 'unit commanders' to advance or retire according to the qualifications we shall have achieved by our own merits.

THE EDUCATION OF AN ARMY.

We may be accused of having chosen a theme beyond our powers; we, therefore, admit our limitations by confessing at once that we desire to catch the eye; unblushingly, window-dressing if you will; yet done with an honesty of purpose, since we are convinced that we have something convincing to say and the ability to say it convincingly. Yet this popular title may mislead; it is not with the education of the Army qua Army we would deal, but with the provision for that of the individuals it absorbs. Neither is this article an abridged edition of Clausewitz, or, to be more modern, and move with the times, of Foch; it is the education of the individual as an individual that is the reference. To quote from "Mr. Dooley, Philosopher," "it's education that makes a nation." What is education? We give no answer; we have none. Let the specialists quarrel over terms; definitions leave us cold. What the average man in the street—"other rank" or officer—wants is that education shall be "practical" as far as he is concerned. Oh, most blessed of indefinite generalities! But why worry? Is he not asking for education?

We ourselves can discern several divisions under which this desirable practical education may be. The provision for the ultra-practical man, he who desires more of the practice that makes perfect and studies theory only to that end—be he of artisan or of professional status, has already been dealt with in these columns. For the benefit of that other group of equally practical men, they who would adventure for profit in commerce, there exists the commercial side of the Army General College—in this city. The subjects taught are many and varied and exceedingly relative to modern business demands thus: The growth and development of Trade, Industry, Money and Finance; Commercial law; Principles of Banking; Accountancy and Book-keeping; Actuarial Practice and Insurance; Commercial Geography; Modern languages for Commercial intercourse; and many other subjects all tending to broaden a man's views of business on the large scale, of world finance, of the great industrial and commercial movements of these progressive times. Any group of these should qualify the concientious student to take a leading part in the great struggle for commercial supremacy which is bound to follow on the internecine international Armageddon now, it is to be hoped, satisfactorily ended. A fact clearly recognised by the Army since the demand for a commercial training was so great that the commercial side was established about the middle of March last.

"Would follow knowledge like a sinking star
To the utmost bounds of human thought" there exists the Academic side or general education in subjects such as English, its Literature and the History of its people; Political and Physical Geography; Ancient and Modern Languages; Mathematics, elementary or advanced, practical or theoretical, pure or applied; and the sciences of Physics and Chemistry for which there are well-equipped laboratories, in physics particularly. There is also a special course for Ordinands instituted at the request of and arranged in accordance with the wishes of the Chaplain General. The treatment of these subjects on the Academic side may be divided, at present and roughly, into two grades; the higher of which implies the standard usually attained in a University or University Colleges at home, while the lower one is a revision course of the standard set by the examinations required for entrance to a British University; such, for example, as Matriculation in the University of London, the Joint Matriculation Examination of the Northern Universities, the old entrance examinations to the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge and so on. Not, of course, that there is any compulsion in the way of taking these or similar examinations on account of having attended a course at the Army College; on the other hand, it cannot be too strongly borne in mind that possession of the Active Service Army Schools Special Certificate qualifies the holder for admission to the University he may select, and, if he reaches a certain standard, maintenance and other allowances to a maximum of £175 per annum.

Of course, on neither the Academic nor the Commercial side can all the subjects be taken during the all too short period of six weeks. The most that can be attempted in the time available in any of the Army Colleges — General, Commercial, Science or Technical — is a grouped course of some three or four subjects; and in this respect advice is available to all as to the best course for a specific purpose for each individual. Here, it will doubtless be pointed out that the student's progress is largely dependent on his present educational ability whatever his previous attainment may have been; it is advisable therefore that each should take full advantage of any educational provision in his unit as a preparation for those longer courses at one of the Colleges. To get the habit of study is the main thing and rather difficult after four-and-a-half years of war. This has been experienced alike by students and instructors. To sit indoors and study for more than an hour at a time was found to be impossible. The habit of concentration had been lost and the greatest difficulty was experienced in again taking up subjects once well-known. In fact, the advantage in attending a six weeks course at one of the Colleges undoubtedly lies in the re-acquiring of the power to study rather than in the actual amount of studying done. At such courses, 'wars wild alarums' do not penetrate the 'cloistered calm' and the student immersed in the comfortable and sympathetic atmosphere of College life gradually reassumes his old habit of, and pleasure in study, while keeping himself fit with Badminton, basket-ball, boxing and tennis in the College gym. and grounds.

It is a stupendous conception, the education of the Army of the Rhine: but these have been and still are stupendous times with a stupendous Army. We shall not be far wrong if we estimate it (we trust the censor will permit us) at close upon a quarter of a million individuals. When we can find time to cast our minds into the dark backward and abyss of time before the Armistice, we shall attempt a brief history of the small beginnings of a scheme which it is rumoured will culminate in compulsory education for the whole Army of the Rhine. To-day we have to adapt ourselves to rapidly and ever-changing conditions whether as a soldier or as a civilian. To-morrow we shall go home and be asked to take our part in a great world-outburst of production and manufacture to maintain the Empire at its present pre-eminence. Nor must it be forgotten that we have fought to make the world safe for democracy; and we, the Demos, must — if only to save ourselves — take a responsible share in the governing of our country, of our Empire, and, since the League of Nations, of the World.

With the dictum of Mr. Dooley, Philosopher, we whole-heartedly agree. And there can be no better place than the Army College in Hansa Ring where the necessary education is free for the gaining in a palatial building of spacious classrooms equipped to the least detail with the utmost perfection of German thoroughness, with DRAUGHTS AND CHESS.

A CHANCE FOR AN ORGANISER.

Interest incited by the unique performances of Sergt. M. Yates, 92nd Field Ambulance, as reported in our columns, and our comments from time, to time, has occasioned voluminous correspondence on the subject of draughts and chess.

Knock-out chess tournaments, draught, leagues, etc. have been proposed to be run under the auspices of The Cologne Post. The idea is an admirable one, but owing to ouronerous duties in connection with the Cricket Cup, we cannot ouselves organise a competition and give it the attention we would like. However, should any enthusiasts care to form competitions or leagues in specified areas we would be pleased to give them publicity and do all in our power to ensure their success.

There are surely quite a number of Sports, or amusements officers who would be pleased to help in this matter. Why not tackle the Sports Officer in your unit on the subject? With his help and the publicity given in your paper, doubtless some enthusiasm would be roused among the draughts and chess experts of the Rhine Army.

And what is better that a quiet game of draughts or chess, in the cool of the evening, after a particularly sweltering day? Surely the project is worth considering.

THE EMPIRE LEAVE CLUB SWEEPSTAKE.

A VERY PROMISING START.

Within a very few hours after our announcement that the British Empire Leave Club proposed to organise a Derby sweepstake, open to all ranks, there was a tremendous rush for tickets for the event.

Applications for tickets (which are 10 marks each) made by post, should be addressed personally to Lieut-Col J. A. Levey, D.S.O., Controller, British Empire Leave Club, Cologne. All you have to do is to write your rank, name and unit in block capitals on a sheet of paper, state how many tickets you require, and enclose the necessary amount of money.

In return, a post card will be sent by the Club giving the particular ticket number. This should be carefully kept. The lucky numbers will be published in The Cologne Post on the 4th of June with the name of the horses drawn, printed against them.

Tickets for the sweepstake will be sold in the club between the hours of 5 and 9 p.m. and at no other time.

The sale of tickets closes on Saturday 31st of May, after which date no further subscriptions will be accepted.

The Club provides excellent facilities for tennis (16 courts at Lindenthal and four at Flora Gardens), golf, polo, boating and Swimming.

BRITISH EMPIRE LEAVE CLUB.

A very successful variety entertainment was given at the British Empire Leave Club, on Tuesday, by the "Pedlers" Concert Party and the "laddy Umpties." A very large audience was collected which thoroughly appreciated every item.

The dancing act by Bobbie Macaulay & "Nelly" Joyce of the "Pedlers" was a special favourite, and an encore was insisted on.

The second part of the entertainment was given by the "laddy Umpties," and was in every way excellent.

One of the most popular items was perhaps "Imitations" on the piano from "Three Blind Mice." Another clever idea was the parody of such familiar tunes as "Annie Laurie" and "John Peel." These met with much applause. Both singers and instrumentalists are to be much congratulated on the success of the entertainment throughout the evening.

On Wednesday, the American Jazz Band came from Coblenz to play for the dance from 8.30 to 9. The hall was tremendously crowded, and the band, which was excellent, was greatly appreciated. At the close of the programme Miss Decima Moore called for a vote of thanks for the performers, which was heartily responded to.

On Saturday next, Empire Day, the Band of the 10th Hussars (by kind permission of the C.O.) will play for the special Empire Day Dance.

NOTTS v. LEICESTERSHIRE.

LEES IN BRILLIANT FORM ON NOTTINGHAM GROUND.

At Nottingham on Wednesday, Notts. and Leicestershire played the first county match which has been witnessed on the Trent Bridge Ground since 1914. A feature of Notts. innings was the brilliant batting display by Lees, who scored 158 before being bowled by Curtis.

DEADLY BOWLING BY 75th BRIGADE R.F.A. PADRE.

In the match played at Marienhof (near Königsdorf) on Saturday between "A" and "D" Batteries of the 75th Brigade R.F.A. "A" batted first and compiled 99 runs.

"A"s bowling then proved too much for "D" Battery who failed to reach double figures, thanks largely to the "Padre" who disposed of 6 wickets for 3 runs.

51st ROYAL SUSSEX v. 2nd LOYAL NORTH LANCS.

A very fast and exciting game was played on Friday afternoon at Altenrath by the above teams.

The 51st were early on the aggressive and within five minutes of the start Taylor opened the scoring by hooking into the net a spendid centre from Davan. They continued to have the better of the exchanges and during the pressure Lieut. Argent increased the lead. After these reverses the Lancs bucked up and from a break away, scored. Some pretty passing of the Lancs forwards enabled them to get through and equalize.

On the resumption the Lancs immediately took up the offensive and must have scored but for the splendid goalkeeping of McCowan. With only five minutes to go it looked as though the game would end in a draw, but the 51st worked the ball up the field and a splendid long ranger from L/Cpl. Collins put them ahead. From the kick off the ball was rushed down and Lieut. Argent scored with a terrific drive. This ended the scoring the 51st proving the victors by 4 goals to 2.

The Band of the Lancs was in attendance and their selections were much appreciated. The teams were afterwards entertained to tea and altogether a very enjoyable afternoon was spent.

GLOUCESTERSHIRE'S PROGRAMME.

Gloucestershire will open their season with a strong team, which will be selected from F. G. Robinson (capt), D.C. Robinson, P.F.C. Williams, A.K.G. White, E.B.T. Studd, W.H. Rowlands, Parker, Dipper, Ellis, Mills, Jefferies, and Barrow. They will meet Sussex to-day and to-morrow, and Yorkshire on the following Monday and Tuesday, both games being at Gloucester.

Surrey v. Essex.

The Surrey team against Essex at the Oval on Saturday and Monday will be:—E.G. Hayes (captain), Capt. W.H.G. Heath, Hobbs, Sandham, Harrison, Abel (W.J.). Peach, Abel (T.). Hitch. Strudwick, and Rushby.

AN INNINGS AND AN OUTING.

For some time past considerable friction has been raging between the Company and Clerks' Mess of the 289 A.E. Company. This culminated in a spirited match held at Euskirchen, the abode of the IX Corps Headquarters, on Tuesday.

A fine pitch was prepared, a few hills being shifted to a neighbouring valley.

The teams turned out in spotless khaki flannels, trimmed with Army braces (one pair, men's) and socks (grey).

Owing to the lack of adequate footwear, the usual rubber boots (with 'obnails) had to be used.

The play was fast and furious (i. e. the wickets fell fast and the batsmen were furious). With scientific accuracy the bowler Glover (who used to play for Paradise Alley at Charity Matches) did the "hat trick" and the "confidence trick" on 5 wickets. At 42 runs the Company condescended to retire, through no fault of their own.

Then came the massive pen-pushers. The first two came up in wheelbarrows, and were placed at the wickets. Out of the past suddenly came a ball, and three wickets lay like dead Jerries after the first push. The next one to fall was the batsman, who was a personal friend of the bowler. During the next few overs, the bowler certainly succeeded in hitting the bat. The runs gradually mounted up to the magnificent total of 102, but owing to one of the Clerks being posted as "missing, believed abducted" they had a finish at 10 players.

The 289 Clerks (and a few others thrown out) dropped hints that matches with players "under 9 and over 90" would be eagerly accepted.

Scores:—

Company Mess: Pte. Knight, 1; Pte. Hood, 4; Pte. Smith, 10; Pte. Thornton, 5; Capt. Pocock, 0; Pte. Dowthwaite, 0; Pte. Wilson, 3; Pte. Abrams, 10; Pte. Molyneux, 0; Pte. Langley, 4; Pte. Churn, 2; Extras, 3; Total 42.

Clerks' Mess: Capt. MacMahon, 1; Sgt. Clark, 0; Pte. Lord, 11; Cpl. Jones, 10; Capt. Ford, 1; Pte. Glover, 67; Pte. Tautz, 5; L/Cpl. Smith, 3; L/Cpl. Munt, 0; L/Cpl. Poole, not out 0; Extras, 4; Total for 9 wickets) 102.

MILITARY POLO.

The Hurlingham Club has presented a trophy to be called the Military Polo Cup which is to be competed for in a tournament open to the Royal Navy, any regiment of British Cavalry Yeomanry, Infantry, Royal Artillery, Royal Engineers, or R.A.S.C. that has served continuously for eight months in any one army corps, with any overseas British armies; any Brigade or Tank Corps, Remount Depot and Air Force. Officers composing teams must have served at least six month continuously overseas.

SPORTING ITEMS IN BRIEF.

Southend Football.

Southend will have first-class football next season, unless certain enthusiasts for the game are sadly mistaken.

French President's Racing Programme.

The President of the French Republic has promised to attend the meeting at Auteuil on June 22 to witness the Grand Steeplechase and the Prix de la Marne.

W. Smyth Demobb'd.

After serving three years abroad, W. Smyth has been demobilised, and he hopes to resume riding next week at 8st 8lb. He is still attached to Wootton's stable.

Charge For Golf Caddies.

On the occasion of a recent meeting in the London district, the charge for caddies was 10s. a day—an unprecedented figure. And yet it was difficult to obtain sufficient caddies.

Preston North End.

Contrary to expectations, Preston North End made a profit of £130 on the year's working, and the financial position of the club is not unfavourable.

Yale v. Harvard.

According to a U.S. wireless message from New Haven, Conn., Yale have defeated Harvard in the first dual track meeting since 1916. The points scored were 64⅓ to 52⅔. Most of the events were run in a terrific rainstorm.

Goddard's Sparring Partners.

Frank Goddard is training from the Norfolk Arms, Wembley, for his championship match with Jack Curphey. Corporal Clements, of the Canadian Army, is one of his sparring partners, and Nutty Curran is another.

1500 Guineas Offered For Bill.

Mr. Joyce has had an offer of 1,500gs. made for Bill, whom he bought for 620gs. after the youngster had beaten Sweet Serf colt., Ho Ho, Ether filly, and Sunnygama— all winners since —at Newmarket last month.

Warwickshire Pro.

Lieut. J. Parsons, the Warwickshire professional, who is in Birmingham on leave from India, had a turn at the nets last week, and showed much of his old form with the bat. He is likely to remain with the Colours, and will be badly missed by Warwickshire.

Bristol Rovers Signatures.

Bristol Rovers have secured the signatures of several locals who did so well for them in the season just closed, and have come to terms with David Harvie (full-back), George Davison (centre-forward), and Sergt. J. Caddick (inside-right).

"THE COLOGNE POST" CRICKET CUP.

FURTHER LISTS OF FIXTURES.

A REARRANGEMENT OF THE LEAGUES.

Appended, we give the fixture lists for the Cologne Leagues. The large number of entries from units in and around Cologne has necessitated the league for this area being divided into "Town," "Northern," and "Southern" Divisions, and units have, as far as possible, been included in the most convenient division for them, having regard to the matter of travelling while at the same time keeping the leagues fairly equal in size.

The lists are not complete, as a number of club secretaries have not yet responded to the urgent request for information as to their locations. This will necessitate supplementary fixtures being published as soon as the required information is received. This all means delay in getting the Leagues into swing. Time is all important, and teams are anxious to get to serious business, so the gentlemen concerned are asked to notify their locations and the league they prefer without further delay. Those who find their clubs not mentioned in these and the previously published lists will know it is through lack of information that we have not been able to assign them to a league.

A Change in Leagues.

The competition will now consist of seven leagues, in consequence of the division of the Cologne district and the dropping of Overath, from which area there was a dearth of entries. Looking ahead, there is promise of some interesting sport when the winners of each League are matched against each other for the final honour.

Club secretaries should send in as soon as possible a list of the cricketers from whom their teams will be selected, and any new players should be registered with this office 24 hours before they are to play.

Below are the fixtures for the three leagues which comprise the Cologne area. These matches should be played on Wednesday next, 28th May.

8 VETERINARY HOSPITAL v. R.A.F.

Played on the "Vets" ground in fine weather. From the commencement the visitors played good football and soon opened the scoring from a corner. The "Vets" could not get going for some time and their faulty play looked like letting the R.A.F. increase their lead, but half-time came with the home team one down.

On resumption the "Vets" showed better football and fine play by their forwards resulted in Short equalising. Soon after the same player placed his side ahead. End to end play now followed and the "Vets" obtained a penalty which came to naught. The home team made things warm for a while and obtained another goal through Johnstone. Continuing to press the "Vets" scored again from the head of Woodward. After a time the R.A.F's broke through and scored their second goal which ended the scoring.

Result:— Veterinary Hospital 4; R.A.F. 2.

GENERAL MESS v. 212. EMPLY. COY.

These teams met on Sunday at Ohligs in tropical weather and before a good attendance. Fine play by Cpl. Riley enabled the visitors to settle down a bit only to be met by the stubborn defence of Weatherby and Pow. Play resumed in midfield and following a pass from McCullum Lean beat the goalie with a fine ground shot. The Emply Coy shaken by this reverse went off with a rush and equalised through Amond putting through his own goal. Following a fine run by Horseman Leah received and put the Mess another goal up with an easy shot. Half Time. Mess 2, Emply. Coy. 1.

On resuming the Mess pressed heavily. Amond put on another goal for the Mess, the "goalie" misjudging the ball. Soon after McCullum registered the fourth. Play was now all with the Mess and the final whistle went with the score Mess. 4. Emply. Coy. 1.

Wilson and Doyle both played well for the Mess while McIvor and Riley did likewise for the 212.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

To Win the Derby.

Never again will I attempt to write anything humorous. My little effort that appeared in Sunday's issue, under the title "What will win the Derby?" has resulted in abuse being flung at me from all directions. My forecast seems to have been taken seriously by many readers. Let me now explain, for the benefit of those people who failed to penetrate my possibly crude wit, that the only object in the paragraph was to point out that many newspaper tipsters, in fortelling the probable winner of a race, do so in such a vague manner as to leave the reader more in the dark than ever. Out of a field of perhaps a dozen horses, it not infrequently happens that half this number is included in a rambling effort to indicate the winner. Since no backer would dream of supporting all these horses the tip is valueless. To provide the point in my item, the names of horses that first came to mind were written, whether or not they were eligible to run in the great race. Even fictitious or deceased horses might have been named without in the least interferring with the subject of the paragraph.

Where to Buy Books.

The Y.M.C.A. bookshop, under the Continental Hotel, Cologne, is growing in popularity. Open every day except Sunday, brisk business is being done with the sale of all kinds of books including cheap editions of popular fiction, text books, dictionaries etc. as well as monthly magazines, music and games.

So great is the demand for all types of literature, that it is proposed to open a lending and reference library in the near future, and the advent of such an institution is bound to be well received.

Army Troops Sports.

Lieut. Onions has been positively inundated with entries for the sports meeting which opens at Pola Wiesen Sports Ground, Cologne, to-day. Every event includes a strong field and there is little doubt that some capital sport will be witnessed. To-day's events include 100 yards, 440 yards and one mile flat races; pillow fight, tug-of-war, putting the shot and other attractive items. There will be an equally strong programme on Saturday when one of the chief events will be a five mile cross country race.

"THE DERBY."

GOSSIPY TIT-BITS FROM HERE AND THERE.

One cannot help regretting that The Panther did not run on Wednesday (says the "Daily Express.") Since winning the Guineas he has put more heart into his ordinary exercise gallops, and on Saturday was seen quite at his best in a merry spin on the Limekilns, when led by Jack Role and Leandros. The son of Tracery is progressing as well as his best friends could wish, and I suppose we must leave it to his connections to know what is best for him.

No Risk To Be Taken.

There is no stronger-legged horse in training than The Panther, and his absence simply means that no risk whatever will be taken between now and the Derby. He is pleasing everybody in all his gallops, says another "Express" correspondent, Glowing Accounts.

The three-day meeting at Newmarket was shorn of its chief attraction by Sir Alex. Black adhering to his week-end decision not to run The Panther in the Newmarket Stakes. The most glowing accounts are to hand says "Uno" in The Daily News, concerning The Panther's progress since he won the Two Thousand, and he is out by himself in the Derby quotations. His absence from the big event left Lord Basil with a fine chance of making some atonement for his Guineas defeat.

LADIES' GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP.

The match of the day at St. Anne's on Wednesday was that between Miss Edith Leitch (sister of the Champion) and Miss Barry of Stoke Poges. Miss Barry won by 2 and 1.

The following was the result of the second round:—

Miss Fraser beat Mrs. Chambers by 8 and 6.
Miss Hilda Prest beat Miss Evans by 4 and 3.
Mrs. Dobell beat Mrs. Harrap by 2 and 1.
Mrs. Morrice beat Miss Helme by 2 up.
Miss Lobbett beat Miss Leaver by 4 and 2.
Miss Barry beat Mrs. Chadwick by 5 and 4.
Mrs. Laidlay beat Mrs. Norman Craig by 3 and 1.
Miss Cecil Leitch beat Mrs. Medrington by 5 and 4.

ART AND PHOTOGRAPHIC EXHIBITION.

UNDER THE PATRONAGE OF LT. GEN. SIR T. L. N. MORLAND K.C.B.

As already announced, this will be held on June 6th, 7th and 8th. A large number of entries have been notified, and some exhibits have already been received. It is hoped that many more will overcome their natural modesty and send in their efforts. Every exhibit will receive due consideration, be it a humble "Study of a London Fog" (this picture is already to hand) or a life-size portrait of Bottomley, or any other famous person.

A mass of correspondence has been received enquiring if pictures are to be framed or mounted. This opportunity is taken of informing those concerned that such details are left entirely to the exhibitors' discretion.

Fortunately, the principal Art Gallery of Bonn — the Stadt Museum, Villa Obernier, next door to the Königsnof, in the Coblenzerstrasse — has been secured for the Exhibition.

Several novel features will be shown, and it is certain that a visit to this unique collection of works of art will be amply repaid.

It must be remembered that this is the first exhibition of its kind to be held; it may possibly be the last.

So to prospective visitors and exhibitors I would quote — but on second thoughts I will not. My memory fails at quotations. Let me say just this "Do it." If you can send in a picture, do it. If you want to see the exhibition, come and see it just the same, and you will feel glad afterwards that you came. Tell your friends about it. The "Study of a London fog" alone is well worth seeing. Above all remember that the proceeds are to be handed to the British Red Cross Fund.

Tickets will be on sale in a few days. Prices of admission are Officers 3 marks; O.R.'s 1 mark; Civilians 5 marks;
Visitors' hours: Daily from 14,00 hrs to 18,00 hrs.

PEACE CELEBRATIONS.

DATE TO AWAIT SIGNATURE.

It is the Government's intention not to make the promised official announcement regarding the form of the peace celebrations and the dates which are to be declared public holidays until the Peace Treaty is actually signed. There had been a considerable amount of speculation as to when the rejoicings will take place, and people who will have to undertake the duty of organizing festivities in the various localities all over the country are naturally anxious to receive authentic information on the point. It is obvious, however, that the Government can make no definite statement at the moment, and there is reason to believe that, while the suggestions received from many sources have been reported upon after careful examination, final decisions have yet to be taken on certain points. Therefore, while opinion favours three days early in August as suitable for the purpose, it would be unsafe at present to name any precise dates.

According to a telegram from Stockholm, the Bolshevist fleet is stronger than all the other Baltic fleets put together as regards types of ships and artillery. It has 56 heavy, 337 medium, and 339 light guns.

IN THE COMMONS.

OUR MISSING MEN IN GERMANY.

THE POSITION OF THE CROWN PRINCE.

The fate of well over a thousand British soldiers, who are known to have been taken prisoner by the Germans, is still in doubt, though the War Office, hold out little hope of the men being alive.

In the House of Commons on Tuesday, Mr. Lyle (C.U., Stratfort) asked the Secretary for War what reply, if any, had been received from the German authorities to our requests for information touching the fate of the untraced British prisoners who are known to have fallen into their hands and then disappeared.

Captain Guest: The German authorities have made no direct reply to the demand for information as to the fate of the untraced British prisoners of war, but the German official lists of deaths, which were sent periodically from Berlin during the war, are still being received, and a number of reports relating to the previously untraced prisoners have appeared in them. The British Military Mission in Berlin has also been able to collect from the German records a considerable number of definite reports of deaths which had not previously been sent to this country, and evidence has been obtained from other sources. The information received in various ways since the list was presented to the German authorities has enabled the number of outstanding cases to be reduced to considerably less than half; 1,763 cases have been settled, while 1,299 remain at present unsettled.

Mr. Lyle: Does not the hon. gentleman consider that, failing an immediate and satisfactory reply, steps should at once be taken against the governors of the districts in which our prisoners disappeared?

Captain Guest: The machinery which is working now has been very successful. In a very short time it has reduced the number of untraced by over one-half.

Major Entwistle (L., Hul., S. W.): In view of the great number of cases, is there any hope of any of these missing men being still alive?

Captain Guest: I think, on the whole, it would be very unwise to hold out much hope.

CROWN PRINCE'S TRIAL.

Mr. Lyle (C.U., Stratford) asked the Prime Minister what steps had been taken to secure from the German authorities those camp commandants against whom inhuman treament of our prisoners of war was alleged, so that they might be formally placed on their trial, also whether under the Peace Treaty or otherwise the Allies proposed to take any punitive action against the ex-Crown Prince of Germany.

Mr. Bonar Law: The ex-Crown Prince and the others mentioned in the questions would, under the terms of the Peace Treaty, be liable to trial in the same way as the other named persons connected with the war.

Mr. Lyle: Has my right hon. friend had his attention drawn to a report which has been issued by one of the large Press agences, in which it is stated that the ex-Crown Prince is reported to have said that if his extradition were demanded he would commit suicide, and, if so, would it not be in the interests of all concerned to demand his immediate extradition?

Mr. Bonar Law: I do not think that is a case in which his Majesty's Government should take any action.

Lieut.-Commander Kenworthy (L., Hull, Central): May I ask whether the name of Grand Admiral Von Tirpitz is down on the list?

Mr. Bonar Law: I did not mention any names, and I think the House will readily understand that when a committee has been examining evidence it would be a very unwise thing to mention names if there was any desire to punish the people concerned. (Hear, hear.)

Lieut.-Colonel C. Lowther (C.U., Lonsdale): In view of the fact that the Crown Prince has given that sacred pledge, will the right hon. gentleman see that he has the very fullest opportunity of trial? (Laughter.)

Brig.-General Page Croft (N.P., Bournemouth): May I ask whether we can take it for granted that all these commandants who have been guilty of all these crimes against civilisation can be recovered by the Allies at such time as is necessary?

Mr. Bonar Law: It is part of the terms of the treaty, as mentioned in the summary, that the German Government are to hand over the people who are demanded for trial by the Allies. (Cheers.)

Mr. Lyle: Are we to understand that the British Government must wait until the Allied Commission has reported before we can demand that the people who maltreated our prisoners are to be handed over to us? Is it not the fact that the longer we wait the more difficult it will be to get them?

Mr. Bonar Law: If the hon. gentleman will look at the summary, I think he will see that each of the Allies is entitled to demand the persons against whom there is a charge of having committed atrocities in connection with any one of the Allies.

PRE-WAR BEER — NOT YET.

Mr. SEDDON (C.U.D.P., Hanley) asked the Prime Minister whether the discontent among the industrial workers arising out of the shortage of the beer supply was being aggravated by the widespread opinion that the causes that led to the reduction of output did not now exist; and whether, in view of the danger to industrial peace arising out of the beer shortage, the present cereal supply warranted a resumption of the pre-war beer supply.

Mr. ROBERTS: This subject was very carefully considered by the Government, and the increase recently announced was the decision of the Government. As a matter of fact, available supplies do not at present justify resumption of brewing on the pre war basis.

PEACE COINS.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN, replying to Professor Oman (C. U., Oxford University), said there had been no change of circumstances which would allow him to reconsider his decision not to direct that some one of the denominations of the national currency should be struck as a commemorative Peace coin for 1919 with the type and inscription suggested to him in the joint petition of the Royal Historical and Royal Numismatic Societies.

NO FREE PASSES.

Mr. FORSTER (Financial Secretary to the War Office), in reply to Lieut.-Commander Kenworthy (L. Hull, Central), said that having regard to the expense involved, which would possibly amount to over £2,000,000, it was not considered practicable to issue free travelling passes to poor people who wished to visit the graves of relatives in France and Flanders.

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

MILITARY? POLITICAL? OR BOTH?

It is a common comment of the German to say that their defeat was the direct result of the Revolution; in short, a political defeat, not a military one. Some body must be found responsible for the defeat and so there has sprung up an antagonism between two parties: on the one hand the militarists, who avow that they were invincible but the people at home had deprived them of their armour and so were no longer able to carry on; on the other hand there are those who attack the naval and military leaders as being incompetent and reckless. In a recent lecture, a Prussian Colonel said that Germany ought to have won the war. Their Generals were incomparable, but the people succumbed under discord, hesitation, and pessimism.

And thus wages the war of argument. Suffice it to say both from a military standpoint and a political one were the Germans defeated. On land our armies had routed them; whilst the navy had contributed no less sucess on the sea by means of the blockade which resulted directly in the Revolution within Germany,

German Comment.

The Berliner Tageblatt, in answer to the words of the above mentioned militarist, says that unfortunately the Colonel did not explain why it was impossible to find out the reserves Marshal Foch had placed in the woods and why the Germans had been informed that these troops had been destroyed. "He did not tell us of the superiority of the Allies with regard to aeroplanes, neither did he mention the failure of the submarine warfare which even could not prevent the arrival of American troops in Europe. In order to excuse and to veil his faults he charges the soldiers who during many years, and by no means in casinos and well-heated rooms have confronted misery and danger, and the people who have died with hunger, crushing themselves in queues before empty shops."

More Revelations.

"The greatest blunder committed by Germany's naval leaders was that they did not put the navy in action at the beginning of the war.' That is the view of Counter-Admiral Foss, an influential person in German diplomatic circles, who has recently published a book giving revelations of the downfall. The British navy at that time, says the writer, was not so mighty as ours, and there were possibilities, greater then than at any time since, of crushing the enemy.

The reason he gives for the inactivity of the navy is that Bethman Hollweg and his followers wished to keep the Fleet as a reserve power for the final stages of the war.

The Kaiser — and his capabilities.

In the same book he makes caustic comment on the ex-Kaiser. "His mental capacity was small, he says, but his character was weaker still. One cannot speak of him as a man who performed his duties faithfully, because everything done by the Kaiser was merely inspired by personal caprices and disposition. His great desire was to give opinions on subjects and incidents of which he knew nothing and of which he had not the diligence to make any careful study."

CONCERT AT THE HOTEL DISCH.

A full house and an appreciative audience assembled on Wednesday evening to attend the performance of several works by the well-known composer, Ewald Straesser, of Cologne. These compositions comprised a string quartette, eight Lieder, an allegro for piano and a trio for piano, violin and violoncello. The string quartette was written in 1919, and consists of four parts. The introduction is of a "grandioso" character and the violin theme in the first part, which is repeated in the second movement as well as the Hungarian minor scale which we encounter throughout the whole work show its unity. The second part is full of poetry and charm, while the third movement shows an effective contrast between the second and fourth part. An Elegie with a wonderful theme, at first à quatre voix, then worked out as fugue and ending with the theme represents the final movement of this most remarkable work, which one could feel was executed with genuine admiration and true musical spirit by the four artists.

Fräulein Riele Queling commands a fine tone and her technique is no doubt far advanced, but her "spring bow" has still to be perfect, it shoud be lighter and softer. Willy Lamping's singing cello tone is so well known, that to comment upon it would be "carrying coals to Newcastle." The way Lamping played the staccato passages was an excellent lesson for all those amateur 'cello players noticed to be present. Fräulein Eweler and Herr Brünell filled their parts as true musicians so that the ensemble playing was masterly.

Frau Berta Grimm-Mittelmann then sang four Lieder of which "Wenn ich wüsste" and "Märzabend" had most success. Later in the evening the artist sang some more songs of which we preferred the last, "Ruhelos." Her fine cont alto voice, rather to powerful for the small hall, sounded to full advantage and she achieved a great success. A real feast was the first performance of an "Allegro" for the piano, which the eminent Cologne piano-virtuoso, Max van de Sandt, executed. His tone as regards strength and beauty is simply marvellous and the light and shade of it characterizes the whole of his playing. The concert closed with a trio for piano, violin and "cello in which Riele Queling, Max van de Sandt, and Willy Lamping were once more able to show their masterly conception of a most effective and interesting chamber musick work. The composer, Ewald Straesser, was greatly fêted. Ch. L.

"ROSES OF MESSINES."

The great nineteen-mine explosion at Messines on June 7th 1917, was vividly described by Captain W.B.R. King, C.B.E., formerly geologist to the Engineer-in-Chief at G.H.Q., in a lecture to the Royal Geographical Society.

"Nineteen giguntic roses with crimson petals seemed to rise slowly and majestically out of the ground," he said.

"It was probably the most spectacular scene of the war. The crimson petals gave place to a pillar of fire, intensely bright, and variously coloured. In a moment, dark material could be seen hurtling skyward through the centre of the fire pillars."

Captain King gave geological proof that the sand and gravel used in the construction of the German pill-boxes came from the Rhine.

THE QUESTION OF TONGUES.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—With regard to the excellent article on "The Question of Tongues" in a recent issue of The Cologne Post, I urge all to put first (after English of course, the need of studying and appreciating which is only too obvious to-day in all ranks) Spanish. French—charming, precise and graceful language as it is—gives us, it is true, a common means of intercourse with the educated of all countries. But, beyond that, it gives us but one country for its use, and that a very resistant land, fully developed and in the hands of a people entirely capable of doing all that is needed therein. German—well, who will learn German after things are settled? We who know something of the language may find a use for it. But the Germans will learn English more than ever. But Spanish! Given English as a starting point, you have with Spanish the whole of the New World, plus (which is all either of the other language gives you,) one European country—or two, if you will. For a Spaniard has no difficulty in making himself understood in Portugal, and even less in Brazil, which, though a Portuguese speaking country, I propose, therefore, and advisedly, to include among its surrounding Latin-American neighbour.

Let us see how many countries this gives us. In the old World, Spain and Portugal (2); in the New World, Mexico, Guatemala, San Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Panama, Columbia, Ecuador, Bolivia, Peru, Chili, Argentina, Uruguay, Paraguay, Brazil, Dutch Guinea, French Guinea, British Guinea, Venezuela, (20); not to to mention Cuba and other West Indian Islands So that for this one language we may claim that it gives, not one but, twenty and more lands of which, and their opportunities it makes us free. More—these are just the countries in which most development of natural resources and of commercial opportunities is not merely waiting, but crying out for aid, the countries where the chance of making a fair fortune is by far the most favourable. The Germans knew this well, and in no part of the world had they planted, before the war, deeper roots, nor anywhere else, perhaps, had they the prospect of a greater future, now thrown away. A man speaking English and Spanish can range in the new world between the poles and finds every variety of opportunity. I could tell some wonderful stories of fortune—even vast fortune—acquired by men who arrived penniless in Latin-America.

Learn languages—as many as you can. But, for Britain's sake and for your own sake, choose first of all the language which gives utterly incomparable openings for the future. I am sure the Education Officers, who have provided for the teaching of this very musical, simple and beautiful tongue, will agree. O.W.

PHOTOGRAPHIC EXHIBITION.

Sir.—May I take the liberty of trespassing on your valuable space, in order to oppose the suggestion, which was made in this column a few days ago, regarding the proposed Photography exhibition in Cologne. Your correspondent states that all classes of photographs could be entered and no exception need be taken to entries which had been developed and printed by one of the numerous dealers who do that kind of work. In my opinion, an exhibition of this kind should be run on purely amateur lines and any work which savours of the professional left out of it altogether. If it was run on the lines your correspondent suggests, it would simply be the man with the most spare cash who would walk off with the prizes, as he would be in a position to pay a high price and have his prints finished in elaborate style. In that case the average private or N.C.O. would stand very little chance against an officer. In an exhibition of this kind, each entry should be judged on its merits, as regarding its technique, composition, and cleanliness of working. If this method of judging the prints were adopted, it would even things up considerably, and also encourage numerous amateurs, who do all their own work, to enter with some chance of success. Thanking you in anticipation of your publishing this letter.

Answers to Correspondents.

[The flow of correspondence, since the Cologne Post was instituted, has been enormous, and the Editor would like to point out that only a certain number of the innumerable questions can be answered in each issue. Should any inquirer find that his question has not yet been answered, he can have the assurance that it will receive attention in due course, and the answer will appear accordingly. Many questions have been received which could be answered much easier by the Adjutant of the unit concerned, and all such cases which affect the unit commander must be taken to him and not sent here. — Ed.]

NORTH RUSSIA RELIEF FORCE ARRIVES.

ESTHONIA DECLARES ITS INDEPENDENCE.

GERMAN DELEGATE'S BAD FAITH.

NORTH RUSSIA RELIEF FORCE.

ARRIVAL AT MURMANSK.

The relief force has arrived after an uneventful passage except for several mines, one of which came dangerously close to the transport when only two days out. The health of the troops is described as excellent, and the men are very keen.—Reuter.

BRILLIANT RUSSIAN CAVALRY.

The War Office has issued the following:

Archangel.—On May 18 our troops, in conjunction with the river flotilla, advanced on the left bank of the Dvina to south of Tulgas, capturing twenty-one prisoners and nine machine-guns.

Russian cavalry, General Ironside reports, distinguished themselves in the operation. It is believed that one of the Bolshevist gunboats was sunk in this encounter.

On the 19th a strong patrol of our Russian troops broke through the enemy's outpost line on the Vaga front on the Mata-Beresnik-Ignatovskaya road. They succeeded in capturing two officers, sixty-nine other ranks, and three machine-guns, whilst twenty of the enemy were killed.

Murmansk.—Several patrol encounters took place on the 19th near the railway in the neighbourhood of Lumbushki (north end of Lake Onega). Some of these were of a very determined nature, but our troops nevertheless succeeded in driving back the enemy's patrols and located their main line of defence. As a result of their recent defeats on this front the Bolshevists have removed their commander and replaced him by another of presumably greater capability.

POLISH ARMY ADVANCING.

The Poles have taken the offensive against the Ukrainians from Pripet to the Carpathians and made considerable advances on both sides of Lemberg. In the Ukraine all is quiet on the Dniester front. A rising on a large scale under Gregoriev is spreading rapidly in the centre of the country. The Bolshevists are taking counter measures to deal with it.

British gunboats have entered the sea of Azov to deal with possible landings in the Crimea. Denikin's troops in the middle of the Dometz area have had to relinquish most of their gains.—Reuter.

KOLCHAK'S PROGRESS.

Reuter learns that, according to an official telegram from Omsk, dated May 5, the Siberian army is continuing its advance on the Volga-Bugalma railway in the direction of Simbirsk. Rapidly progressing from the town of Iletskaya Zashchita, Admiral Kolchak's troops took the station of Dongusskaya (sixteen miles south of Orenburg), capturing prisoners, machine-guns, and rifles, and are approaching the town of Orenburg.

BOLSHEVIST PRISONER EXCHANGE.

A special British Mission has been to Moscow to arrange an exchange of prisoners. It has been decided that Raskolnikoff, commissary of the Bolshevist Navy and so-called admiral, together with another Bolshevist who has been a prisoner in England, will be sent to Russia in exchange for about twenty officers who were kept prisoners in Moscow by the Bolshevists. The exchange will take place at once.

GERMAN VIOLATES HIS PRIVILEGES.

Berlin, 21st May.— Major Pabst, President of the sub-commission for prisoners of war of the International Commission of Armistice at Spa has had to resign by order of Marshal Foch.

He had given a lecture in Berlin in which he dealt with the efforts of the German delegation to liberate the German prisoners of war and criticised the "resistance" of the Entente to all the German efforts to ameliorate the lot of the prisoners. A French officer who heard the lecture reported to General Dupont, Chief of the Allied Mission in Berlin, with the result that Marshal Foch ordered Major Pabst to leave Spa immediately.

He is succeeded by Major Kämmerling.

U-BOAT SURRENDER COMPLETED.

According to the Berliner Tageblatt, the delivery of the U-boats which had to be surendered under the terms of the armistice has now been completed. Eight U-boat cruisers, 62 large U-boats, 64 U.B. boats, and 42 U.C. boats have been delivered, says the journal, together will all salvage vessels and floating docks, with the exception of one of the latter, which has not yet been surrendered, owing to bad weather conditions. Electric and oil engines had to be delivered in place of boats sunk in crossing. —Reuter.

ESTHONIA DECLARES ITSELF INDEPENDENT.

PETROGRAD OFFENSIVE.

Copenhagen. The Esthonian National Assembly has passed a resolution declaring an Independent Republic, and claiming a place in the League of Nations. It re-affirms that it will fight Bolshevism to the bitterest end.

The Swedish newspaper Folk tidaghlad states that Esthonian troops are advancing in the direction of Pskoff and are now only fifty miles from Petrograd. British troops landed at Luga Bay and occupied a number of villages after fights with Bolshevists. The Petrograd Soviets are much alarmed. They have decided to defend the city to the last and then destroy it if it is in danger of being captured.

Copenhagen. 22nd May.—The offensive against Petrograd is being pressed with great energy. The forces marching against the city from the south west have now got into touch with one another and formed a joint front. The attacking armies are composed of two main groups, one of which is marching against the batteries of Kraskaja Gorka and to the west of Petrograd, while the other is operating in the district south of Narva.—Reuter.

INFLUENZA FATALITIES IN INDIA.

In the House of Commons yesterday Mr. Montagu, Secretary for India, introduced the Indian Budget. He said the currency situation in India is causing anxiety owing to the increased price of silver, which necessitated fixing the rupee at 18. He had decided to appoint a new currency commission to investigate the situation caused by the rise of silver in a limited world supply.

Referring to the part played by India in the war Mr. Montagu said that India had won for herself a place in international discussion as an equal among the British Dominions and greater than any power in the world except the "Big Five". The House must have been gratified to learn that India is to be a member of the League of Nations and take her share in International Labour organization.

With reference to the Afghan trouble Mr. Montagu said that we desired nothing in Afghanistan except those friendly relations which we achieved when that country was ruled by the wise statesman Habdullah, who was recently treacherously done to death. We should, however, exact a stern but just punishment for raids and invasions.

Dealing with recent troubles in India Mr. Montagu said that though all danger was not past we had reasons for rejoicing. There had been riots but events had shown the unshakeable and undismayed loyalty of India as a whole. The Indian Army to a man, and the Indian police, despite attempts to provoke insubordination and to undermine discipline, had remained without a single stain upon their reputations. This was a tribute to the men who had won renown in the field of war but it was also a tribute to the officers of the Indian Army, who had shown so great a capacity for leadership.

Dealing with the causes of the unrest, Mr. Montagu said that between five and six millions died from influenza in India last winter. Two thirds of the population had suffered from it, with consequent removal of labour from industry and agriculture.

AFGHAN SITUATION.

The Afghan concentration along the whole of the Eastern front has been very pronounced during the past week and it is evident that large forces are before the British Expeditionary Force in that area. Large numbers of the enemy are Afghan regular troops well armed and equipped and in every way formidable adversaries. The Afghans' attempt to raise the border-side against the British met with only very moderate success.

The British representative at Kandahar has reached Quetta in British Baluchistan. No violence was offered him before leaving but he stated that a Holy War was being vigorously preached and that everybody in Kandahar was buying arms.—Reuter.

DECOY SHIP DECORATED.

Vice-Admiral Sir Alexander Duff, assistant chief of the Naval Staff, yesterday afternoon unveiled a tablet which has been placed in the saloon of the s. s. Loderer, one of the "mystery" ships, at present lying in the Greenwich reaches. The Admiralty has decided that each vessel of the mercantine marine that has been engaged on this special service shall have a memorial tablet placed on board, inscribed with certain details of her service, together with the names of her commander and the members of the crew who received decorations, and this was the first ceremony of the kind. During the war the Loderer was known as the "Q. 5," and she was under the command of Captain Gordon Campbell, V.C., D.S.O., R.N. While she was in Government service, from Oct. 21, 1915, to Feb. 24, 1917, she successfully fought three actions with enemy submarines. The decorations gained by her crew were one V.C., three D.S.O.'s, seven D.S.C.'s, and sixteen D.S.M.'s.

THE MURDERED YOUNG W.A.A.C.

STATEMENT BY ACCUSED.

Company Sergeant-major Montagu Cecil Keith Hepburn, R.E., appeared on remand before the bench of magistrates at the Shire Hall, Bedford, yesterday charged with the murder of Nellie Florence Ruby Rault, a young member of the Q.M.A.A.C., who was murdered in Wilstead Wood on May 9. Her body was found by a search party lying covered with bushes near the Wilstead entrance to the camp of the Royal Engineers Signal Services at Haynes Park.

At ten o'clock the court was crowded, and a still larger number of people were unable to gain admittance.

Hepburn, who has protested his innocence, was wearing the Mons and M.S.M. ribbons. He is good looking, thick set, and of medium height, and is popular in the camp. Mr. A. Farr appeared for the defence.

Superintendent Purser said that he had been instructed by the Director of Public Prosecutions to give formal evidence of arrest only at this stage, and to ask for the case to be adjourned till Tuesday next.

The superintendent stated in the witness box that on Tuesday May 13, he arrested Hepburn at Haynes Park Camp and took him to Bedford, where he charged him on suspicion of murdering the girl. Hepburn, after being cautioned, replied. "I quite understand my unfortunate position and your justification for arresting me: but I am innocent, and I shall be able to prove my innocence. Whoever says I was wearing black leggings that day has made a mistake. I was not."

Hepburn was remanded till next Tuesday on this evidence.

A fund is being raised in the camp for the defence of Sergeant-Major Hepburn.

SECOND DEGREE OF UNWRITTEN LAW.

TOTTENHAM TRAGEDY.

Before Mr. Justice Darling, at the Old Bailey yesterday, Arthur Pank, 35, a soldier, was charged on indictment and coroner's depositions with the murder of Beatrice Pank, of Tottenham.

Mr. Cecil Whiteley, for the prosecution, said Mrs. Pank was the wife of prisoner's brother. Husband and wife lived on friendly terms. Prisoner was a sergeant in the Military Foot Police, and had served in the Army 19 years. He had been in India and had a long service good conduct medal. He also served in the present war in the East, and had volunteered for service in Russia. He was on seven days' leave, which expired on April 22nd last, and on that date went to his sister-in-law's house. At six o'clock prisoner went up to a policeman at the corner of the street and said: "Will you go round with me? I have just shot a woman." He produced a five chambered revolver unloaded and some cartridges. The policeman went to the house and found the dead body of Mrs. Pank with two wounds in the head.

MENTAL INSTABILITY.

Dr. Hickson, Medical Officer in charge of Brixton Prison, said two days after the tragedy he had an interview with the prisoner, who told him the complete story. He said his sister-in-law had insisted on going with him to see his brother in the City. They had a few drinks together, and after her husband returned to work she insisted on his returning home with her. He stayed for tea, and when he said he must be going she remarked. "Oh, there's plenty of time", took off her boots, lighted a cigarette, and then went to a bedroom and called for him to join her. She made a suggestion to him, and he said, "If you were my wife I should do for you". She laughed and said, "No man would frighten me like that". He then pulled out his revolver and fired at her. After firing he realised what he had done, and turned the weapon on himself. The revolver, however, missed fire. He took out the cartridge, replaced it and fired again, but as it still had no effect, he went outside and gave himself up. Witness said the prisoner realised the seriousness of the offence, and stated that he had no intention of evading the penalty. He considered prisoner was in an unstable mental condition, which would probably develop into insanity, and he thought his act was the first manifest symptom of his insanity.

In cross-examination, witness said prisoner realised what he had done, and also said he was justified in doing it. He thought he was defending his brother's honour.

TAINTED FAMILY.

Evidence was also given by prisoner's father, showing that prisoner's mother died by drowning, and that the witness's brother had hanged himself.

Mr. Justice Darling, in summing up, said the defence put forward was that prisoner was insane in the legal sense—that was, that he did not know the nature and quality of the act he was doing when he killed another. It was most necessary to uphold that, because there were no end of people now who were trying to trifle it away, and to allow people in certain circumstances, and especially those in khaki, to kill others with little or no excuse. Miss Cavell would not have said she was not doing wrong against the German law in aiding British and Belgian people to escape, but she said she was obeying a higher law in what she did and they would think so too. Did they really think it credible, in view of all the evidence given, that what the prisoner had described could possibly have happened? The evidence was entirely against the story.

The jury, after a long deliberation, found the prisoner guilty, and Mr. Justice Darling passed sentence of death.

Mr. John McGrath, Secretary of the Workers Union at Enfield Lock, has been placed on the Commission of the Peace for Middlesex. He is the first working-man magistrate from the Enfield District.

FRENCH'S TRIBUTE TO THE TERRITORIALS.

BETWEEN EMPIRE AND DISASTER

In the House of Commons yesterday.

Captain Ormsby-Gore (C.U., Stafford) asked the Secretary for War whether, with a view to laying at rest doubts which had been expressed in the public Press as to the conduct of the late Field-Marshal Lord Kitchener in France during the operations which preceded the victory of the Marne 1914, he would arrange to lay upon the table of the House copies of the instructions given by the then Government to Lord Kitchener when they sent him to Paris to see Field-Marshal Lord French, together with a copy of the letter written by Lord French after the meeting of the two Field-Marshals in Paris.

Two supplementary questions concerned the liability of the Daily Telegraph and differences between Lord French's statements and official despatches.

Captain Guest replied: In the absence of the Secretary for War in Paris, I have had no opportunity of consulting him with regard to these three questions. They appear to raise matters which cannot be suitably dealt with in answer to a question, more particularly in the absence of the Secretary of State. Meanwhile I am not in a position to add anything to the statement of my right hon. friend on the 12th inst.

Sir E. Carson (C. U., Duncairn): Will there be any opportunity given to discuss this matter?

Captain Ormsby-Gore: Am I to understand that these questions should be put down again when the Secretary of State for War returns from Paris?

Captain Guest: Yes. I shall be glad if the hon. member will do so.

Mr. Waterston (Co-op., Kettering): May I ask if the publication of these secret Acts is not an offence under the Defence of the Realm Act?

The Speaker: That is a matter of law.

FRENCH AND "1914".

In the latest instalment of "1914" in the Daily Telegraph Lord French says:

"I have spoken already elsewhere of what I have always regarded as our great initial administrative mistake in the war—namely, the raising of an entirely new Army—when the machinery for expanding the Territorial Force especially established by Lord Haldane for the purpose (I mean the Territorial County Associations) was already at hand, and would have proved by far the most efficient and economical method of raising the troops required. Lord MacDonald and those who are left of the early Volunteer soldiers must in their old age rejoice in the knowledge that they have lived to see the Force which they tended and nurtured against such appalling difficulties actually for several months standing between the Empire and disaster.

Such a spirit as that which the Volunteers cult vated and maintained is bound sooner or later to make itself felt, and, as the years rolled on, the country came at last dimly and slowly to realise the Volunteers' true value.

"The time for the employment of troops other than the regulars of the old Army arrived with drastic and unexpected speed. The wastage of war proved to be so enormous that the fighting line had to be reinforced almost before the New Armies were in existence. It was then that the country in her need turned to the despised Territorials. The call came upon them like a bolt from the blue. No warning had been given. Fathers and sons, husbands and brothers, left families, homes, the work and business of their lives, almost at an hour's notice, to go on active service abroad. It seems to me that we have never realised what it was these men were asked to do. They were quite different from professional soldiers, who are kept and paid through years of peace for this particular purpose of war; who spend their lives practising their profession and gaining promotion and distinction; and who, on being confronted with the enemy, fulfil the great ambition of their lives.

A SPLENDID RECORD.

Equally distinct were the Territorials also from what has been called the New Army, whose officers and men had ample time to prepare themselves for what they were required to do. I wonder, sometimes, if the eyes of the country will ever be opened to what these Territorial soldiers of ours have done. I say without the slightest hesitation that without the assistance which the Territorials afforded between October, 1914, and June 1915, it would have been impossible to have held the line in France and Belgium, or to have prevented the enemy from reaching his goal, the Channel seaboard.

DECREASED OUTPUT OF COAL

Mr. Thomas Ashton, the veteran ex-secretary to the Miners' Federation, stated at Manchester yesterday, that the output of coal in Great Britain will be less for some time than it was in pre-war days. The number employed in the mines was greater than before the war, but those who had become miners during the last five years were not to be compared as far as output was concerned with the pre-war miners, who had been trained in the craft from boyhood. Furthermore, the nation must remember that a large number of able-bodied miners had lost their lives, that a large number of others were no longer physically fit to follow the occupation of miners, and that not 5 per cent. of the miners who returned to the pits after service in the Army could dig coal as they dug it before the war.

CANADIANS GOING HOME.

Such progress has been made with the repatriation of Canadian troops that the total sailings for the present month up to the 20th inst. is 42,852. Altogether 175,445 Canadian troops have sailed for home since the date of the armistice, and if no untoward circumstances arise to interfere with the present progamme, only about 80,000 should remain to be repatriated by the end of the month. There are now only about 4,319 Canadian troops in France, and none of these are combatants. They consist solely of base staffs, hospital staffs, patients, and working parties.

THEORY OF HAWKER'S DISASTER.

QUESTION OF TEMPERATURE.

St. John's. Undaunted by the disappearance of the Sopwith, the other fliers are hurrying preparations for the trans-Atlantic flight. The Handley-Page will be ready to fly on the 31st May. Raynham's navigator, Capt. Morgan, is suffering so seriously from shock and other injuries that he may be compelled to return to England.

Lieut. Jensen has arrived from Paris to investigate the conditions for a flight by French airmen later in the season.

Experts now agree that Hawker and Grieve's machine must have collapsed shortly after leaving Newfoundland, because no wireless message was ever received, nor is there any indication of their being in the air at all during the five to six hours necessary to bring them into the track of liners, which track they should have reached before nightfall. The opinion is growing that the vast masses of field ice and icebergs, extending for a hundred miles off the Newfoundland coast, affected the working of the engine through the intense cold congealing the lubricating oil. The Americans flying from Trepassey actually suffered this experience.—Reuter.

FOOD MINISTRY AS LAW BREAKERS.

BUTTER AND INJUSTICE.

When a Bermondsey retailer was summoned for selling Government butter containing 17 per cent. of water—1 per cent. beyond the legal limit—a Government Committee wrote to the magistrate asking for the case to be withdrawn.

The magistrate fined the retailer, and the Bermondsey Council made a strong protest against the Food Ministry supplying butter which did not comply with the law.

The Food Ministry have now replied that—

"Owing to the shortage of supplies it is necessary to obtain butter from every available source, and it is impossible to avoid receiving a certain amount which contains more than 16 per cent. of moisture. The actual amount so received is, however, very small.

In the ordinary course it is issued to bakers and manufacturers, but under present conditions of transport and storage some small quantity may be distributed inadvertently to the trade. Under the distribution scheme of the Food Ministry butter is allotted to traders and taken up by them in good faith, and it therefore seemed undesirable that the trader should be penalised for the quality of butter which she was bound to accept."

The Public Health Committee of Bermondsey regard the reply as begging the question as to why a Government Department considers it is entitled to break the law, and at the same time encourage some traders to act in the same manner. Since the original case was reported upon another case has come to light.

A strong letter is to be sent to the Ministry of Food protesting against the attempt to justify the procedure.

SPORTING PARSON STARTS TALKING.

The Rev. Everard Digby, know as the "Fighting Parson," who was recently acquitted by a courtmartial, made a statement yesterday drawing attention to alleged irregularities in connection with the proceedings. He explained that as he was only finally demobilized the previous night, this was the first opportunity he had had of making such a statement.

Mr. Digby summarised the alleged irregularities under the Army Acts as follows:

1. No report was furnished within 24 hours to my C.O.

2. A statement was taken from me without the customary warning being given.

3. I was illegally arrested a week after the alleged offence.

He stated that the offence was alleged to have been committed on Friday, March 14, and that it was only when he was taken before an officer, "whose name has all along been refused to me," on Thursday, March 20, that he was put under arrest. He was then handed over to the police and removed to the Tower.

"I was told I should only be there for two or three days," Mr. Digby said, "and I should write a statement which would go to the G.O.C., who would decide whether the matter went further or not. I consider this arrest, a week after this alleged offence, during which I had been pressing for inquiries, was utterly illegal. If the A.P.M. had arrested me at the time I should have had no grievance on this point. In fact, Captain Lloyd, the A.P.M., has admitted that if he had believed the statement true he would have arrested me at the time."

Dealing with the taking of the summary of evidence, Mr. Digby said, "The whole of the evidence was utterly discredited on cross-examination, being contradictory as to time, place, and everything else, and my legal advisers feel that the case should never have gone further. The matter of identification, of which Sir A. Bodkin made a great point at the actual courtmartial, was a farce, as this had been done at the taking of the summary when I was the only man in the room who could possibly be identified.

Mr. Digby mentioned that the engaging of Sir A. Bodkin by the military authorities had necessitated his engaging a counsel of equal eminence, and the proceedings had cost him nearly £ 1,000.

R.A.F. MAJOR CRASHES.

Ascending from Shoreham aerodrome yesterday morning, Major Albert Desbrusay Carter, D.S.O., and bar, Canadian R.A.F., was killed. He was flying near Lancing College and fell from 7,000 feet. It is thought a wing of his machine broke.

EMPIRE DAY, 1919.

Once more we greet the festal day of Empire, the day when we were wont to forget the parish pump and look to the broader horizon of Empire — the British Empire. Then for four dreadful Mays came the grim spectre of the bloodiest war this earth has ever beheld and many of the Empire's citizens held their breath, fearful at times lest they had insufficiently valued an inheritance which might dissolve before their eyes. "England," said Germany, "can be beaten; Imperial dissension will prevent the Empire joining in; the kingdom overpowered, the Empire shall be ours: therefore let us no longer rattle our sabres, let us have war." How gravely they had miscalculated the essential meaning of "British Empire" they now have learned to their cost.

How came such a nation to make so grave a miscalculation? Because it had never understood the more-sacred meanings of the word Empire. Their own efforts at empire-making had produced a labyrinthine structure where the utter subjugation of the various members to the immediate demands of the conqueror was the keynote. That is not Empire building and the result of such fatuous labour is now to be seen in the shattered and bruised remains of what was the German Empire. The word "empire" essentially conveys the idea of jurisdiction which should connote justice, and on these lines has the British Empire been built.

An empire is built up of a number of heteorogeneous units, and if it is to stand the strain of time the mortar must be good. Justice and Humanity are the only safe cements to employ in empire building. Let us never forget, when family troubles brew, the splendid efforts, the noble devotion — even unto death — displayed by all the great and varied families that make up our empire. From the small volcanic rock in the Atlantic, from the Antipodes, from the magnificent Orient, from every corner of the earth they trooped, they offered even life itself, in order that the great heart of the Empire, the small isle off the coast of Europe, should not be riven asunder; that the seat of Justice and Humanity should not be shaken. And they did this, they fought fiercely, they died nobly, because each nation white, black and brown had adopted the great idea of Justice and Right.

Peace hath her victories
No less renown'd than war.

Now that Peace is approaching what further victories are we going to achieve? We have many serious battles to fight. The spirit of unrest stalks o'er the earth and it needs but a jar here, an injustice there to banish victory for ever.

Whichever part of this mighty Empire we hail from, let us never forget that on the muddy fields of France and Flanders, on the blazing beaches of Gallipoli, amid the heat and horror of the Holy Land, in fact wherever the Allies fought, the blood of our bravest was mingled in the great fight against military domination which knew only Might as its secret of government. Let each Empire Day remind us of the bloody but glorious fields of Ypres, Passchendale, Delville Wood, Anzac Beach, the Somme, and scores of other places only too well known; and in such great and glorious memories let us forget the infinitesimal pin pricks that may seem momentarily to interfere with the smooth, brotherly working of the Imperial organism.

As with the Empire as with the individual nations. Can any one class say we fought and died for you? Nay, the old idea of the man paid to die for us has gone. From the slum and the peerage, from the field and the factory they poured forth blood, seas of blood, in order that all might live more securely. Debrett has changed as much as has the factory pay-sheet. Intellect and brawn have supped from the same mess tin and often supped Death. Under what a glorious debt of honour this places all who have been fortunate enough to come through. Never again must the idea that Labour and Poverty are pre-ordained show its noisome head. Only by a brotherly regard for every unit of the nation, of the Empire, only by assuming that the battle of the weaker brother and sister is our battle, can the nation of the Empire hope to survive. And the promise of this is good.

As with Empire and Nation so with the Home. One thing we must never forget and that is the glorious bravery displayed by the women folk of the Empire during this time of stress. Not always near the battlefield, not even necessarily in the munition factory or the canteen, but everywhere. For sheer bravery and consistency let us look into the homes where the wife and mother has "carried on." Smiling when smiles were helpful, encouraging when duty was difficult; ever ready, ever sacrificing, the woman of the Empire has fought her battles and there is no less glory and honour due to her than that awarded to the hero of the battle-field.

Thus the war has left us all a wonderful glory and also an enormous debt of honour, to our homes, to our nations, to our Empire. Only by a conscientious endeavour to repay this debt can we hope to see the Empire, for which our brothers died, raised to that pinnacle of glory and stability which they endeavoured to buy for us and for it. We can only have a real Empire by endeavouring to live up to some such ideal as Milton expressed in "Enflamed with the study of learning and the admiration of virtue: stirred up with high hopes of living to be brave men and worthy patriots, dear to God and famous to all ages."

A REPLY TO "AN OPEN LETTER TO THE CHAPLAIN."

Dear W.E.S.—Whatever your signature may indicate, your open letter does not reveal the colour of your padre, and so you set all the more of us a-thinking. I have a fair knowledge of the chaplains who have represented the Scottish Churches, Wesleyan, and English Free Churches over here, and am sure they will regard your letter less as a criticism than as a frank attempt at explaining your position and giving a clear idea of the lines along which you need guidance.

We padres are out here for no other object than to try to understand and help you and your comrades, believing that we have a message —a great piece of good tidings—that has power to remove the difficulties that you set before us in your own way. We want to understand you —though not many of you are ready to open your minds—and we as surely want you to understand us. It is not our business to boom one Church at the expense of another or even to tell you "Be good and you'll be happy;" but to keep before you the Lord Jesus Christ as the hope of the individual and the race, and to provide you with convenient opportunities for reverent worship.

We have our different ways of presenting the truth that is able to save men here and now from the things that prevent their being at their best, believing the best, and hoping for the best, in this world and the world that is to come. You must try to believe that we are never quite content with the best we have done to state this simply and directly as you require, and in that unity and breadth of spirit that the comradeship of active service has taught; though it is not always easy to answer in a few simple words those deep questions of theology, philosophy and Church history that you set.

In your own case, I should advise you to go straight to your padre, so that each may have a chance of discovering that the other is something better than "not a bad sort," and you will together get a step nearer to the solution of some of these great problems that are for the members as well as the ministers of the Churches. It is just this sympathy and exchange of ideas that we need to prove that the religion which kept us through the fire of the trenches, with its "Quit ye like men, be strong," can do the same for us in the hotter fire of temptation— and so our mutual confidence will make plainer the way to the new heaven and the new earth in which God is.

SIEGBURG MONASTERY.

The Reception Camp of the Eastern Division, Army of the Rhine, is at present situated in the historic building of the Siegburg Monastery.

This building was commenced as far back as 1064, and dedicated as a Benedictine Monastery in 1066. The Crypt of the present church is the original one of the old building, and shows the simple strength and purity of design of those early days that we in England associate with the Normans.

The monastery grew in power and prestige till it reached its greatest height in the fifteenth century. The Abbot was an ecclesiastical Prince, having autocratic power over a tremendous tract of surrounding country. We read that at one time in later days the monastery lost its lands on the left bank of the Rhine. As Siegburg is situated ten kilometres from the right bank, some idea of the extent of the monastic state can be gained from this fact.

During the sixteenth century, the monastery began to decline in power and suffered, as all the petty German states suffered, from the terrible scourge of the thirty years war (1618 to 1648). During its history, the building has twice been burnt down, and one of these fires occurred during this terrible time.

It is interesting to note, when we remember that the place is now used to billet British officers and men, that during the Thirty Years War, the Swedes took possession of the town and monastery and used the latter as quarters for their officers.

The peace of Westphalia, which concluded the Thirty Years War, left the Rhine practically a French river, and the present building on Michael's Mount is a French building throughout, built in 1651, three years after the French occupation.

The monastery continued to decline, although the surrounding country quickly became German once more. It does not come into prominence again until the time of Napoleon, who also used it for billeting his officers. It is of absorbing interest to note that the great Generals, Jourdan, Kléber, Ney, and Bernadotte lived in the very same rooms now occupied by British officers.

After the treaty of Lunéville (1801) Siegburg ceased to be a ecclesiastical state, and the monastery was used for other purposes. It has been, during the nineteenth century, at one time a lunatic asylum, and at another a prison.

In the latter part of the last century the monks returned, impoverished of lands and goods, and very few in numbers, but carrying on the work for which the Benedictines are famous.

During the Great War, the building was adapted for and used as a hospital for German and British wounded.

All men going on leave from or rejoining the Eastern Division, through its Reception Camp should be keenly interested in the historic building that they pass through, famous both in peace and war throughout eleven centuries.

GERMANY, THE LAND OF MUSIC.

BY JUVENIS.

I have heard many people, when discussing Germany, say unhesitatingly that the German people are more musical than the British. While not posing as a musical critic, I cannot help feeling that such statements are erroneous.

Germany, of course, can boast of a glorious past in the history of music. No one would dare to depreciate the greatness of her eighteenth and early nineteenth-century composers. The names of Beethoven, Mendelssohn and Schumann will always take the premier rank among the world's musicians. Their works have rightly earned for Germany in the past the title of "The Land of Music".

At the same time, I doubt whether Germany can still claim those laurels, or rather, whether she will be able to do so much longer in the future. The mind and the temperament of the German people has altered considerably since the days of their great musical stalwarts. A new idea has obsessed the minds of all classes in Germany, and all else has given place to the attempted fulfilment of that idea.

The history of Germany, was recorded during the last fifty years might be termed "The German Renaissance." It marks the awakening of the Teutonic states, their welding together in a close union of empire, and their onward march towards world dominion. That Renaissance would differ from the earlier one of the time of Lorenzo of Florence, in that it marked the re-birth of materialism, not Art, in Germany.

The great idea was world supremacy, and the German rulers did everything possible to place Germany in the front rank of European nations. So systematically did they set to work, that they did not confine their attention solely to the preparation of an army and navy. They even conceived the idea of gaining for Germany the laurels as the first nation in art and learning.

In accordance with this plan, music was encouraged in every sphere of German society. Every school had to include it in its curriculum. State-owned Opera Houses were built in the main cities of Germany, so that the love of music might be fostered among the people. Gradually, the people have been trained to regard music as an essential part of their life and consequently we find evidences of that regard in every class of society. The smallest public house owns its piano, while no café of note is found without its orchestra. The Englishman travelling in Germany is naturally amazed at this outward devotion to an art which is apparently neglected in other countries.

We have earned in this war to how great an extent "camouflage" can be employed, and the words in Portia's caskets have been proved only too true.

"All that glitters is not gold."

Outward appearances have been proved many a time to be most deceptive, and so if we want to gauge the true attitude of the German people towards music, we must penetrate more deeply than the outward mask they assume.

The true artistic spirit of a community can be gauged by its production. The periods in our country's history when literature has been most appreciated, have been marked by the immortal writings of our greatest poets and authors. In the same way, the wonderful works of Handel and Beethoven marked the period when the German people had reached the zenith of their appreciation of music.

It has often been remarked that the course of history changes like the swinging of a pendulum, and the most fruitful periods are often followed by a period of literary dearth. In England, the excellent work started by the lake poets was checked in the middle of the last century by the fatally materialistic writings of such men as J. S. Mill, Huxley and Haeckel. It has taken England nearly half a century to regain her temporally lost love of romance and art, crushed by those un-imaginative Victorian writers, whose ideas of man as a mere automaton blinded their followers to all the most beautiful in life.

The musical production of a country is also affected by the general tone of philosophy current among the people, and the advent of nationalism marks the decline of that same spirit of romance and art which alone can produce true music. Consequently, the harsh creeds of militarism, propagated by such men as Nietzsche, Bismarck and Bernhardi, have had their effect on the character of the German people. Their old love of music, for its own sake, because of its charm and beauty, has gone. We behold the superficial exterior, still artfully disguised with that veneer which would seek to hide the fact that the German people, in their lust for more material things, have lost their own soul.

While admitting that England, too, has suffered heavily in this war, we are proud to believe that it has led her to regain much of that old spirit of chivalry, which can combat and overthrow the more deadening influences of materialism. The Englishmen's nature, I am convinced, is just as responsive to the appeal of true music, which represents the higher pleasures of life as is that of the German. He only needs encouragement and incentive to develop those gifts which nature has bestowed upon him.

England has long boasted that its Government refrains from interfering with the private life of its citizens. At the same time, however, the Government has the opportunity of directing the energies of its people, and such is its duty. Especially at a time like the present, when the aftermath of the war will have a tendency towards materialism among our people, it would be a good thing for our Government to do everything possible to encourage the study and love of music and art among the people.

In the cultivation of such tastes alone rests the chance of establishing our country at a pitch of true greatness, for, while our industries and commercial wealth increase, we must never forget that at the same time our love of music and literature, and the natural chivalry accruing from that love, must grow apace.

The Englishman, I am certain, has the capacity for appreciating and cultivating the love of music in as great a degree as any foreigner, and he only needs encouragement and guidance to bring in a second renaissance into our land.

GOOD NIGHT!

Soft, "Good Night!"
Weary ones, now slumber light!
See, the sun has made his westing,
Busy hands have found their resting:
Till the morn awakens bright,
Sweet, "Good Night!"

Time for sleep!
Tired eyes 'neath lashes peep;
Quiet grow the streets, and only
Chimes the hour from belfry lonely;
Chants the night in accents deep,
"Time for sleep!"

Happy Dreams!
Slumber till to-morrow beams;
Slumber till the new day's beauty
Calls to Life and Love and Duty.
Fear not; God thro' darkness gleams.
Happy Dreams!

BAKERS' BILLIARD MATCH.

At the Bakeries Billet, R.A.S.C., Kalk, Cologne a most interesting billiard match was played between R.A.S.C. Bakers and 8th Motor Ambulance Convoy (Bonn). The visitors put up some very fine games, indeed losing by only 50 points.

It is only fair to say that the Bakers have every opportunity of practising on their own table which is a full sized Burroughes and Watts.

The Bakeries have a match arranged for Monday next when they play No. 1 Sergts. Mess, G.H.Q. They invite anyone interested in billiards to come and see it, the first game being at 5 p.m. They also invite further friendly matches.

No 8 PLATOON, 51st D.L.I. v. TRANSPORT.

Played at Riehl in very hot weather. About ten minutes after the start the Transport pressed very hard and eventually scored. Ten minutes later Sergt. Foster headed in for 8 Platoon from a corner kick. Just before half-time Transport scored again. Half-time score:— Transport 2; 8 Platoon 1.

The second half was very keen but 8 Platoon soon got the upper hand, Sergt. Foster netting twice and Dakers adding a third.

Final Score:—

8 Platoon 4; Transport 2.

111 v. 248 SIEGE BATTERY.

This football match was played on the ground of the first named at Nothberg, on Wednesday.

There was no score in the final half, but the visitors had slightly the better of the exchanges. After the interval the home team opened the scoring. Fowler giving the "goalie" no chance with a shot from short range. A minute later Howlett got through and put the home team further ahead. Two more followed from the same player, who thus performed the hat trick.

Final:—

111 Siege Battery 4; 248 Siege Battery 0.

A MULEISH MISHAP.

3rd BATTALION MACHINE GUNNERS LAMENT.

The grass cricket pitch found so conveniently near the Rheil Barracks has been commandeered for horse and mule Lines, and there is gnashing of teeth and wailing. Matches now will have to be played on the Barrack Square, and as the 30 sets of matting wickets, coming for the Army of the Rhine are at present in, on, or under the sea, the Sports Officer has been reduced to the manufacture of netting wickets in lieu. Whose chicken run has suffered, we wonder?

Hockey hangs fire, because though we have the players and the pitch, sticks are 'napoo'. If any club is giving up this sport and has any sticks for sale perhaps they would communicate with the Battalion Sports Officer.

Swimming still attracts, and no wonder, considering the weather. Arrangements are in hand to promote the much desired Aquatic Gala. Much surreptitious training is going on and no doubt some dark horses' will be brought to, light' (or should we, considering the nature of the sport, say, Dark Dolphins')?

INTER-ALLIED SPORT.

ENGLISH TEAM OBLIGED TO FALL OUT.

The Australian lawn tennis players are going to Paris on Sunday to participate in the inter-Allied army contests in which France, Belgium, Italy, America, and Rumania are playing. It is understood the English team has fallen out at the eleventh hour, the authorities refusing to help financially.

OFFICERS, W.O'S AND SERGTS. AT HOCKEY.

After a great deal of practice in their spare time the Warrant Officers and Sgts. of the 13th King's Liverpool Regt. decided to challenge the officers to a hockey match. The contest was decided at Beuel on Tuesday.

The officers did all the pressing in the first half but were only able to score one goal before the interval. This was the result of a scramble in the goal-mouth, 2nd Lieut. Hogg putting the finishing stroke to a good effort.

The second half was of a more even nature and although both goals were raided in turn no further score resulted.

Final:—Officers 1 goal; W.O's and Sgts. nil.

"PRICE PINCHING."

Bitter complaints are made of "price pinching" by a certain section of bookmakers. "These men at Hurst Park," protests a "Daily Mail" correspondent, "betted the most awful odds on every race except the Jubilee."

Has the microbe of profiteering caught these crampers of the odds?

EXCELLENT FIELDING.

51st v. 52nd BEDFORDS' CRICKET MATCH AT HENNEF.

Played at Hennef on Saturday, this match was doubly interesting, as the two teams are drawn together in the Eastern Divisional Cup which match takes place very soon. The 52nd Bedfords were some-what at a disadvantage as this was their first match of the season, and they have not had any opportunity for practice. Batting first the 51st Battery were rather quickly disposed of for 27 runs, the small total being largely due to the excellent fielding of the opposing side, who captured no fewer than 6 wickets with catches.

Opening the inning for the 51st Bn Lieut. Mason and Sergt. Cope soon began to get runs and only 3 wickets had fallen when the 52nds' total was passed.

A bright display of batting came from Dr. Dodman and Sergt. Carter who scored 14 and 26 respectively, the remaining wickets falling rather cheaply, making a total of 73.

CAPT. BOND'S XI. v. D. COY, 2/4 DUKE OF WELLINGTONS.

A very interesting match was played at Erp on Tuesday between Capt Bond's XI. and D. Coy of the 2/4 Duke of Wellingtons. D. Company opened against the bowling of Bond and North. The first wicket did not fall until 22 runs were scored, but after that none showed any signs of making a score. The whole side were dismissed for 46.

Capt. Bond's XI. opened very feebly having 5 wickets down for the same number of runs, but Corpl. Albone and Pte Bromwich made things look a bit brighter, taking the score up to 20 before the 6th wicket fell. After that Cpl. Eastwood and Pte North showed good form, and knocked off the remaining runs, thus winning a good match by 3 wickets.

OUR CRICKET CUP.

FIXTURE LISTS FOR REMAINING TWO LEAGUES.

CORRECTIONS AND ADDITIONS.

The fixture lists for the remaining two Leagues in our Cricket Cup Competition are published below, together with the supplementary lists completing the other Leagues.

Further delay in getting the competition completely started could not be considered, and those clubs from which no word has been received signifying a preference for a particular area have been alloted to the League appearing most suitable while at the same time keeping the Leagues as even as possible in size.

As is unavoidable when the complete fixtures of a competition cannot be published as a whole, a little rectification of the previously published lists is necessary, due partly to one or two units withdrawing from the competition in consequence of demobilization, and partly to notification of location in other cases having been since received. It must be understood, however, that no further changes in the composition of the different Leagues can be made.

THE DERBY.

WHAT THE RACING SCRIBES ARE SAYING.

Much comment has been made on the withdrawal of the Derby favourite the Panther from all meetings previous to the great classical event. Referring to the past, the racing correspondent of the "Times" reminds us that the Duke of Portland's Donovan ran for the Newmarket Stakes in 1889, proceeding to win the Derby a fortnight later. Mr. Mc Calmont's Isinglass in 1893 took the Newmarket Stakes, after carrying off the Two Thousand Guineas, and going on the Epsom, won the Derby. "Ladas followed his example precisely, and St. Frusquin after this victory in the Two Thousand, would have run for the Stakes I well remember Mr. Leopold de Roth child telling me, but that the stable was able to provide what was believed to be and proved an efficient substitute in Galeazzo". In 1897 Mr. Gubbin's Galtee More took all three races, and later the Prince of Wales's Diamond Jubilee did the same. Lord Rosebery's Cicero won the Stakes, and the Derby in 1905, while Mr. J. B. Joel's Sunstar in 1911 won all three races.

McKinley.

It was suggested some time back that Mr. Vanderbilt would not send M'Kinley over to run in the Derby, but I should be very chary of accepting this as the last word (says "The Scout" in the "Daily Express.") The colt won the French Two Thousand easily on Sunday from Observateur, who has also been mentioned in connection with Epsom. The last Derby there was won by the French-trained Durbar II.—a rank bad horse—so a spice of French opposition would be doubly welcome this Entente celebration.

Lord Basil's Defeat.

The Derby situation was materially influenced at Newmarket this week when Lord Basil, who was second favourite for the Great Epsom race, was hopelessly beaten for the Newmarket Stakes, for which in a field of five he went out favourite at the comparatively long odds on of eleven to four.

The defeat, indeed, may be said to have amounted to a rout, and I much doubt now (says "Hotspur" in the "Daily Telegraph") whether the horse will even run for the Derby.

ITALIAN CYCLE RACE.

An Italian long distance cycle race commenced at Milan on Thursday, a hundred competitors entering for the contest. The course which covers ten stages is as follows:

Milan—Trente; Trente—Ferrara; Ferrara—Pesaro; Pesaro—Naples; Naples—Rome; Rome—Florence; Florence—Genoa; Genoa—Turin; Turin—Milan. Among the competitors are Girardengo, Gremo, Belloni, Egg, Buysse, Vanserberghe, Godivier etc.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

Cologne Amusements.

A recent grouse remarked upon the scarcity of amusement for other ranks in the occupied area generally and in Cologne in particular. Great Scott! What are people coming to? Every day there is difficulty in finding space in this page for the sporting events that are happening all over the place, so numerous are the reports sent in. During the day-time in Cologne, excursions on the river by steamer, rowing on the delightful lake at the Stadtwald, Lindenthal, cricket and rambles into the country provide ample recreation for the more energetic, while those who prefer to take their pleasures quietly may, as a result of a visit to the Y.M.C.A. and the canteen, arm themselves with literature, smokes and (if in extravagant mood) chocolate, and hie them in some byway to live for an hour or two in complete contentment. Then in the cool of the evening, there are the theatres and picture palaces, billiards and concerts at the Leave Club and the Y.M.C.A. and elsewhere, interesting lectures at many halls and a dozen other attractions to help the troops to while away the time. If the correspondent who complained will compare in his mind's eye this state of things with the opportunities for enjoyment the majority of us remember in civil life, he will realize he is not so very badly off, after all. But some people are extraordinarily hard to please.

The Silly Season.

Some time ago we had that hardy annual in all newspaper offices, a coo-coo story. Then the progress of time brought along the fishing and the golf yarns that are always as prolific as poets in spring, and now comes this: "A Butterfly.—When walking down Hohe Strasse on Thursday, I watched a butterfly for fully fifty yards flying a few inches over a gent's head. It finally alighted on his straw hat." The advent of the usual sea serpent story is expected at any time now and then the list of subjects inspired at this season of the year will be complete.

THE RAMBLER.

ARMY TROOPS SPORTS.

SUCCESSFUL FIRST DAY'S EVENTS.

If for no other reason than as an excuse to spent a lazy afternoon amid the most congenial surroundings, a visit to-day to the Pola Wiesen Sports Ground, Cologne, can be thoroughly recommended. The sloping banks of the Rhine form an admirable stand for spectators. From them an uninterrupted view of all that is happening may be had with the most picturesque scenery as a background.

Yesterday, the two days athletic sports meeting of the Army Troops opened in delightful weather at this ideal spot and the preliminary events decided were full of promise for the success of to-day's proceedings.

The officials of the meeting are:

INTER-ALLIED ARMY GAMES.

THE POSITION OF RHINE ARMY ATHLETES.

Many ambitious athletes have written to us enquiring if it is possible to enter for some of the events in connection with the Inter-Allied Army Sports to be held in Paris in July.

We have made enquiries of the authorities, as a result of which we learn that in view of the very high standard of many of the entrants, it has been decided that no candidates from the Rhine Army shall participate in the sports as representing the British Army.

The reasons for such a decision are fairly obvious when it is pointed out that the conditions of the sports lay down that any individual is eligible who has served in the Army during the war. The result of this has been that the Americans have made arrangements for their champion athletes to come over to France to compete.

Since the present British Army covers such a wide field, application has been made for the introduction of several events in which athletes may be sent from Germany to represent the Army of the Rhine as distinct from the British Army as a whole.

Up to now, no reply has been received as to whether such a thing is feasible, but meanwhile, time will be saved if those anxious to participate will communicate with the Superintendent, P. and R. T., Excelsior Hotel, Cologne.

HEALTH—ENERGY—VIGOUR.

The Nerve Centres derive their energy from a natural phosphoric nutrient which is replenished by certain elements in the food we eat. In cases of strain or excess, we obtain insufficient to meet the demand. The Muller Nutrient is identical in composition with the natural phosphoric fat, and is a food, not a drug—nourishment, not a stimulant.

The Muller Nutrient increases the physical energy, instead of making demands upon it, and immediately supplies the exhausted nerve centres with their vital nourishment. The user soon becomes conscious of the help and strength his system is receiving.

RIVAL INVENTORS.

OFFICER'S CLAIM DISPUTED.

Whether Major MacCallum or Lieutenant J.F. Power, both of the R.A.F., is the inventor of an aerial target, which it stated, has proved of invaluable assistance to the Military authorities in the art of "spotting for the Artillery," is the problem which the Royal Commission on Awards to Inventors are now considering. A fortnight ago Lieut. Power, as the inventor, brought a claim for £10,000 before the Commission, and at its last sitting Major MacCallum appeared before the Commission, and claimed for himself the credit of the invention. He explained that from what he had read in the papers Lieut. Power's invention semed to be almost identical with the one he had in operation at the end of 1915, and had been using ever since. (Lieut. Power had claimed for the use of his target by the authorities since 1916.)

The present applicant said that his target was in use at the School of Military Aeronautics at Reading while he was in command. His target consisted of a representation of an actual section of the front, showing an area including Neuve Chapelle, Armentières, and Lille. It was an exact replica of the scene, picturing ruins, forests, and trenches as they would appear to the aviator flying at a height of from 5,000ft. to 8,000ft. He claimed that his target was so realistic that airmen had mistaken photographs of it for photographs of the actual front.

In reply to the Chairman, Mr. Justice Sargant, Major MacCallum said that to his knowledge nobody had ever produced anything similar before.

The Chairman pointed out that Lieut. Power admitted that the idea was old. His claim was for three improvements he had effected. Major MacCallum said he did not think they were improvements, but the Chairman said they had the evidence of highly-placed officials on that point. One great advantage of the Power target, he added, was its portability.

Mr. Trevor Watson, on behalf of the Ministry of Munitions, said Major MacCallum's invention had been continually in existence in the school at Reading from early in 1916 till after the date of the armistice.

The award of the Commission will be made known at a later date.

"BOOM" IN EMIGRATION.

OFFICIAL SCHEME FOR EX-SERVICE MEN.

A "boom" in emigration to the Dominions is anticipated. It will be remembered that in the House of Commons on April 8 it was announced that the Government had decided to grant free passages to the Dominions to "ex-Service men who are accepted as approved settlers under any settlement scheme of the overseas Governments, or can show that they have assured employment awaiting them, and are otherwise acceptable to the authorities of the Dominion to which they wish to proceed." The same privilege is extended to women who have served in any of the recognized women's service corps, including the Land Army.

Recently there has been opened at 59, Victoria-street (previously the Passport Office) an "Overseas Settlement Office," which is virtually a sub-Department of the Colonial Office. Within the last few days a Committee appointed by the Department has been engaged in consultation with representatives of the overseas Dominions, in the preparation of a scheme for giving effect to the Government's decision.

We understand that it is proposed to make the fullest use of the existing immigration machinery of the Dominion Governments for testing the suitability of applicants for State-aided emigration. Each of the Dominion Governments, through the High Commissioners or Agents-General in London, already possesses an organization for the examination and approval of intending settlers, and under the proposed scheme the approval of these immigration authorities will continue to be required. The Employment Exchanges will also play a part in the scheme. Men or women wishing to obtain free passages will be required to get forms of application at the Exchanges and lodge them there, and it is possible that the Exchange machinery will be employed for purposes of verification.

Inquiries made show that little progress in the emigration of British ex-Service men is anticipated, until early next year. The Dominion authorities, though they have had during the war, and continue to have, many inquiries from men and women wishing to emigrate, have naturally done little or nothing in the way of assisting people to leave the country. At present, and for some months hence, the repatriation of their own soldiers will rightly have the first claim on their resources, and the shipping available or in sight does not justify any hope that they will be in a position to give much help this year to British ex-Service settlers. Still less is it likely that they will be prepared to give assistance to civilian settlers, at any rate until they have had some experience of the effects of the new Overseas Settlement scheme for ex-soldiers.

From inquiries with which the leading shipping companies on Clydeside are being deluged it is evident that, as soon as transport facilities are available, there will be a great exodus of emigrants from Scotland to North America. As soon as the Armistice was signed numerous inquiries were made at the various shipping offices as to prospects for emigration, and all agents are anticipating that, directly travelling restrictions are removed and ships are available, a great "boom" in emigration will take place.

The chief reason for this is the fact that for fully four years there has been no emigration, and people who would have left the country but for the war are anxious to get away at the first opportunity. Ex-Service men, unwilling to return to sedentary occupations, are also anxious to try their fortune overseas, while the influence of Dominion and American soldiers who have been quartered in this country has had an unsettling effect upon many people.

"THE BLACK LIST."

ORIGIN OF CONVICTED MEN.

In the House of Commons Sir John Butcher asked the Home Secretary the country of origin and the date of naturalization of the following persons who are ineligible Government contractors and who were convicted of offences during the war—namely, David Assersohn, 31, St. Bride-street, E.C.; Bernard Albert Kufferberg, managing director of Engines, Limited, Willesden; David Gestetner, Neo-Cyclostile Works, Tottenham Hale; George Edward Heyl, Kingsway, W.C.; and Barnett Rabinowitz, Sclater-street, Bethnal Green.

Sir Hamar Greenwood: B. A. Kufferberg is a natural-born British subject; David Assersohn and Barnett Rabinowitz are men of Russian origin naturalized in 1901 and 1902; David Gestetner is a man of Hungarian origin naturalised in 1886; and G. E. Heyl is a man of German origin naturalized in 1899. The cases of Heyl, Rabinowitz, and Gestetner have been carefully examined, but they do not present facts on which proceedings for revocation of the naturalization certificates could be based. In the case of Assersohn the Home Secretary proposes to institute such proceedings.

Mr. Joynson-Hicks said he hoped the new Aliens Bill would make it easier to get these men denaturalized.

Bound from Baltimore for Gothenburg, the Atlantic transport steamer Lake Placid, with 4,000 tons of coal, struck a mine at Vinga, near Gothenburg, and sank in five minutes. The crew were rescued.

THE ADVANCE GUARD.

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

"MICHEL" AND HIS ATTITUDE.

In a recent issue of Die Welt am Montag, an interesting article was published, dealing with the increasing excitement of the Germans.

"Never was the German people," says the writer, "in need of as much cool reflection as in these most critical hours of the nations life."

The writer goes on to say that despite the Revolution, the Michel (the representative impersonation of German manhood) remains just as he was in 1914. In those days he believed in the fabulous reports of aerial attacks on Nuremberg, poisoned wells in Flanders, and in the purely defensive attitude of the German government.

"To-day," states the paper, "Michel believes in our having to choose between an affirmative and negative answer to the signing of the Treaty; he believes that protestations would be successful, and that those who do not protest are not true Germans. He is still faithful to the Government; he trusted Bethmann Hollweg, he now trusts Scheidemann."

The writer then mentions the political weakness of the German of to-day. "Pure simpletons," he calls them, even though they are so "infinitely capable" in other departments of State control. "The Germans," he says, "amongst whom have been so many deep thinkers, have now no political ideas whatever, and act merely upon impulses and with blind adherence to any authority."

THE PEACE BONFIRE.

Canon Rawnsley at a meeting of the executive of the Parliamentary Bonfires' Committee reported that applications for flares, rockets, and hand lights had been received from 700 places in the British Isles. Applications had come from 18 places in Cornwall, and every important height and headland in that county would be lit up. From some counties comparatively few applications had been received. If August Bank holiday should be one of the peace days the Committee had decided to light the bonfires at 11 p.m. in England, Ireland, and Wales, and at 11.30 p.m. in Scotland.

WOMEN AND INCOME TAX.

Before the Royal Commission on Income Tax, Mrs. M. M. Ogilvie Gordon on behalf of the National Council of Women of Great Britain and Ireland, put in a series of examples showing that the tax paid by a man and wife who each have an income is considerably more than the tax paid by two unmarried persons having similar incomes.

Mrs. Gordon claimed that the husband and wife should be separately assessed, and further suggested that the "wife's allowance" (£25) now made to the husband should be considerably increased where the wife has no separate income.

She admitted that the cost of a household consisting of a man and his wife was ordinarily less than the cost of maintaining two independent persons.

In yesterday's issue we published a letter "The Question of Tongues." In the list of Spanish-speaking countries, three names should read Dutch Guiana, French Guiana, and British Guiana, and not as given "Guinea," in each case. We regret this error.

EMINENT ORGANIST ON MUSIC OF THE RHINE ARMY.

Major Walford Davies the organist of the Temple church London, gave a fascinating talk on the "Music of the Rhine Army" at the Y.M.C.A. central on Thursday evening. The lecturer aptly illustrated his remarks on the piano, and also sang several songs with chorus, the large audience itself singing the choral part under the lecturer's tuition. Major Davies laid especial stress on the joys of part singing and urged everyone to make a point of coming to the practices of the Y.M.C.A. mens' chorus, which meets at the Central on Tuesday evenings.

NORTH RUSSIA RELIEF FORCE.

ROUTE MARCHING.

Kem, North Russia, May 23rd. The troops of the relief force are temporarily held up at Murmansk owing to the ice conditions at Archangel. It is intended that they shall make a daily route march through Murmansk and its vicinity with bands and colours. This will both provide exercise for the troops, who are living on board the vessels which brought them, and will also relieve the monotony of life in the town, which is like a swamp, for the British and Allied troops stationed there. The appearance of the new arrivals has created an excellent impression on the inhabitants.

General Maynard's headquarters have been removed to this place (Kem), which is 400 miles south of Murmansk. Everybody here is accommodated in huts built entirely of wood, of which all buildings in this part of Russia are constructed. Mosquitoes are beginning to make their appearance.—Reuter.

MORE MURMANSK SUCCESSES.

Last night the War Office issued the following:

Murmansk.—General Maynard reports the capture of Medvyejva Gora, at the North-Western end of Lake Onega, after a series of actions with the enemy's rearguard. During his retirement the enemy suffered severely, and captured documents, show that our unrelenting advance has undermined his morale.

We have now occupied the heights surrounding Medvyejva Gora, and are in full possession of this area. The rapidity of our advance prevented the enemy from doing any but slight damage to the piers, wharves, railway workshops and buildings of the town.

TWO DEATHS FROM PLAGUE.

The Secretary of the Local Government Board last night issued the following announcement: "A soldier passenger on board the steamship City of Sparta, which left Bombay on April 3, was taken ill during the voyage and died of bubonic plague. He was buried at sea. The vessel on arrival at Liverpool on April 29 was treated as a suspected ship and all the usual precautions were adopted. The Local Government Board have now received an intimation that a native member of the crew fell ill and was removed to the Liverpool Port Sanitary Hospital on May 13. He developed a bubo on May 16 and died next day. The illness was diagnosed as plague, and this diagnosis has been verified by bacteriological examination. The Local Government Board are making further inquiries in regard to this case through one of their medical inspectors."

CADETSHIPS AT WOOLWICH.

An Army Order issued yesterday announces that a limited number of cadetships at the Royal Artillery Academy, Woolwich, for the Royal Artillery and Royal Engineers, will be filled by specially selected warrant officers and petty officers, non-commissioned officers, and men who served overseas prior to Nov. 11, 1918. Candidates must have attained 17½ years of age, and must not have attained the age of 21 on July 1, for the July examination, and on Nov. 1 for the November examination. Names should be forwarded through the usual channels in the case of those who are still serving, or in the case of those who have left the Service, direct to the Secretary, War Office. In either case applications must reach the War Office by July 1 and Nov. 1.

RESTRICTED COAL OUTPUT.

Mr. Hugh Crankshaw, who is visiting Swansea after being eight years manager of the Cranberry Creek Colliery Company Pennsylvania, and later manager of the Harwood Coal Company, has made some very significant pronouncements regarding America's plans for world trade. He said that in the best American collieries the output was as much as seven tons a man per day compared with the British output of one ton, and that coal could be put on board at Newport News at 20s a ton. When freights became more normal Americans, he said, would be easily able to deliver coal in London at 35s a ton, and make a good profit. Americans were building a large mercantile marine for their foreign trade, which was being developed in many directions. A thing that astonished Americans was the restrictive output policy on this side. British miners, and especially Welsh, seemed to think every one was exploiting them. Now American miners did not care how much owners got out of the industry provided the workers got their share. "People in Britain," he said, "do not seem to realise what America, perfectly openly, is out for".

In the current issue of the London Scottish Regimental Gazette the sixth subscription list of their war memorial fund is published, the total of which now amounts to £32,783 12s 9d.

BOLSHEVISTS ADMITTING DEFEAT.

1,100 PRISONERS.

Reuter learns that a telegram dated May 13 received from Omsk gives the following report of the progress of the Siberian troops: "In the sector of the Ekaterininsky Canal our troops are advancing. In the direction of Ourzhoum (eighty miles south of Viatka) our offensive is proceeding successfully. In the direction of Malmyzh (towards Kazan) our troops have crossed the Idyk river, and have advanced several versts Westwards. The enemy attack along the Kazan railway has been repulsed. In the Chistopol sector the Reds, having succeeded in crossing to the East bank of the Chzame river, were obliged to retreat. Our troops have wiped out six companies of the enemy. We have taken two machine guns, 300 rifles, and 1,100 prisoners. In the Bugulma sector stubborn fighting is going on."

PRINCE OF WALES TO VISIT CANADA.

With the approval of his Majesty the King, the Prince of Wales will visit Canada during this year. It is expected that his Royal Highness will leave England in August, in order formally to open the new Parliament Buildings at Ottawa.

Speaking last night at the dinner of the Canada Club, the Prince said: I was almost going to say "Goodbye," but "Goodbye" would have been a most inappropriate word, because I am very glad to be able to take this opportunity of telling you all to-night that I am coming over to Canada very soon, I hope in less than three months time. (Cheers.) Naturally the prospect of this visit to the great Dominion would have delighted me in any circumstances, but now I shall enjoy it all the more because I shall look forward to the pleasure of meeting many old friends again—and I hope of making a lot of new friends as well. (Cheers.) It is true that I shall be setting my foot on soil that is new to me, but somehow or other Canadian soil will not seem strange now, because, often in company of some of you here this evening, I have tramped over the battlefields of Flanders, which, as the scenes of the exploits of Canada's battalions, and by the memory of their gallant dead who rest there, seem to have a just claim to be regarded for all time as closely associated with the very soil of the Dominion itself. So the message I have to send through you, Sir Arthur, to all ranks of the Canadian Corps who are still on this side of the Atlantic is a very simple one and can be compressed into one word, "Au revoir!"

ASQUITH ON MUNITIONS.

Mr. Asquith, speaking at Newcastle on Saturday afternoon said. "I came here in April 1915 when we had had nearly nine months of war. I made a speech then which has been more unscrupulously and shamelessly travestied than any public utterance of our time. From the very beginning of the war the possession of an adequate supply of munitions was the subject of serious solicitude by the Government. As far back as September 1914 I appointed a strong committee, presided over by Lord Kitchener, of which the present Prime Minister and Mr. Haldane were members, to deal with the matter in all aspects. The development of new methods of warfare and the unprecedented scale upon which ammunition had been expended in the Winter and Spring increased the urgency of the situation. Accordingly I resolved to come here to urge that an increased output of munitions had become more important than the growth of recruiting. Before I left London I asked the highest military authorities, if up to date, our operations had been crippled or seriously hampered by lack of munitions and I was assured by Lord Kitchener, who had been in direct personal communication with Lord French, that such was not the case. It was on the strength of that assurance that I made the statement as to the past which has been so often quoted, but I did not attempt to conceal from my audience or the country the anxiety as to the future. I summed up my general conclusions by saying there is not a single naval or military authority among us who does not declare that a large and rapid increase in our output of munitions has become one of the first necessities of the State. This is the speech for which I am charged with lulling the nation into a false sense of security. I am glad to remember that the speech had precisely the effect it was intended to produce.

SHORTAGE OF FOOD.

Sir Edward Brotherton has just entertained over 1,200 members of the Leeds Pals' Battalion—which he was instrumental in raising—to dinner. The men consumed 400lb of salmon, half a dozen lambs, eight legs of veal, 200lb ribs of beef, 100 hams, 100 turkeys, and 200 cheddar cheeses, with fruits, wines, &c. Sir Edward Brotherton employed twenty-five chefs and 250 waiters.

It is now officially announced in the "London Gazette" that the King has been pleased to appoint General Sir Herbert Charles Onslow Plumer, G.C.B., G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O., to be Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Island of Malta and its Dependencies.

INQUEST ON MURDERED WAAC.

LAUGHTER IN COURT.

The inquest was resumed yesterday on Nellie Florence Ruby Rault, the young W.A.A.C., stationed at Haynes Park R.E. Signal Service Camp, near Bedford, who was found murdered in Welstead Wood on May 12. The girl, whose parents live in Jersey, left the camp about 3.30 on the afternoon of May 9, and was not again seen alive. A military search party was sent out on Monday, May 12, and the body of Miss Rault was found in the wood near the Welstead entrance to the camp. Evidence already given showed that she had expressed an intention of meeting a sergeant-major at the gate. He was known to witnesses as "the little dark man" and "Nellie's sergeant-major." Medical evidence disclosed that deceased had been stabbed by a sharp pointed knife in the chest and back. A soldier's dinner knife found near the body could not have caused the wound, but Dr. Garner was of opinion that the large blade of a red handled clasp knife shown to him could have been used.

John Charles Bray, a pupil at the Bedford Modern School, stated that he and another boy found a book entitled, "The Hundred Best Poems" on the road about fifteen yards from where the body of the W.A.A.C. was found. She had been seen previously sitting in the wood close by reading the book. Bray, according to his statement, also heard someone breathing hard in the wood, and a sound of the cracking of dry bushes fading away in the opposite direction. He thought someone was asleep. He saw at the moment an open N.A.C.B. lorry coming from the camp, and as it passed him he saw Sergeant-major Hepburn sitting in the back of it. To-day Hepburn was again in court, occupying a seat immediately behind his solicitor, Mr. A. Farr.

A SHORT DARK MAN.

Miss Hickson, the Unit Administrator of the W.A.A.C.'s in the camp, who was now recalled, deposed that she had inquiries made as to whom Miss Rault was going to meet on the day named, and she ascertained that she was going to meet a sergeant-major whose name seemed to be unknown. He was described as a short, dark man, who usually wore black leggings. On the Saturday following witness unsuccessfully made inquiries as to the sergeant-major's identity. On Sunday she spoke to the regimental sergeant-major, described the man to him, and told him she would like to speak with him. About 10.30 p.m. the regimental sergeant-major informed her that the only man who answered the description of the man she wanted was Sergeant-major Hepburn, who, he remarked, was a most unlikely man to make an appointment with the girl, and also that he did not know her. Hepburn, he said, was a man who always went out by himself, and never attended dances. Witness added that Hepburn had never reported to her, and it was not until Tuesday afternoon she heard that Hepburn had made a statement.

SCHOOLBOY'S EVIDENCE.

John Charles Bray, the schoolboy, being now recalled, informed the coroner that it was on the Tuesday night that he first made the statement to Police-sergeant Tingey about seeing Sergeant-Major Hepburn in the military lorry. There was no one with the police-sergeant at the time the statement was made. When the breathing was heard in the wood a schoolfellow named Lewis was with him. The witness volunteered his statement. It was on the Tuesday afternoon in Bedford that he first heard Sergeant-Major Hepburn's name had been mentioned in connection with this matter. He believed it was Lewis who first mentioned it to him, but he could not say which of them was the first to remember that Hepburn was seen in the lorry.

The Coroner: Is it a fact that your father, Captain Bray, and Hepburn enlisted in the army about the same time prior to the war?—My father joined before him.

Used they to be friends?—Yes.

Did you go to the edge of the road to look into the bushes?—Yes.

On Tuesday did you said you did not look into the bushes?—We went to the edge of the road.

Then the statement you made was not correct?—No, but I have said all along that we did look in that direction.

MISSING STATEMENT.

Claud Lewis, another pupil of the Bedford School, who was with the last witness, said he heard sounds of deep breathing in the wood. He heard the snapping of twigs, the sound of which died away as if someone was walking on them. At first he thought it was someone singing and gathering primroses. He heard two breathings and two groans, and the snapping of the twigs began after the second groan. Witness saw Hepburn in the lorry which passed him just after they entered the camp gates. He had known Hepburn for some time. It was not until the Monday evening that he spoke to his parents about the noises in the wood, and next morning he mentioned the matter to Bray. He could not remember if he said anything at all about Hepburn on the Tuesday.

Mr. Farr put a question to witness about the joint statement he and Bray had made to Police-sergeant Tingey. Witness replied that such a statement had been made.

Mr. Farr: I want that statement, please.

The Coroner: I have not got it.

Mr. Farr: The police have got it.

Superintendent Purser: It is news to me.

Private William Rush (recalled) said he was quite close to the boy Bray when the book of poems was picked up. He saw Sergeant-Major Hepburn on the back of the lorry. There was no one else with him.

At this stage Colour-sergeant Hepburn was asked by the coroner if he wished to give evidence. After consulting his solicitor, Hepburn replied: "Not to-day, sir."

FACETIOUS WITNESSES.

Sergeant Lewis George Smith Royal Engineers, deposed that Hepburn was employed with him in the demobilization office. On the afternoon of May 9 Hepburn was with him in the office, and they left together just before four o'clock to go to tea in the sergeants' mess. Hepburn was in the office all the time from two till four, their desks were eight yards apart, and witness did not recollect Hepburn leaving the office. Witness added that they reached the sergeants' mess, and he turned into it. Hepburn passed up the road as if he were going to his quarters. He did not make any remark to witness. On the following morning he accompanied the witness and others on a wagon to Bedford to attend some sports. Witness did not see him on the Saturday night or on the Sunday, but on Monday morning he was at work in the office. Witness could not remember if he was in the office in the afternoon. He first heard there was a girl missing on Saturday morning, and so far as the sergeants' mess was concerned, it seemed to be generally known. So far as he knew no inquiries were made at the mess. In his opinion Hepburn must have known that the girl was missing. On May 13 witness was interviewed by Police-sergeant Tingey.

The Coroner. Do you remember his asking you what time Hepburn left your office on the Friday afternoon?—No. I have a very poor headpiece.

Do you remember telling him that Hepburn never left the office until five o'clock that afternoon?—No.

Do you remember anything of the conversation?—No. sir.

I suppose you realise that this is a serious matter? Yes, sir, that is why it makes me feel worse than it would some people. I have a very bad top storey—(laughter)—and I cannot rake it sufficiently to get the information I want out of it.

The Coroner: You seem to have a peculiar memory, sergeant-major.

Mr. Farr (to witness): Have you had sunstrokes?—Yes: I was invalided from Gallipoli.

Police-sergeant Tingey deposed that he and Police-sergeant Stock made inquiries on May 13. He asked Smith what time Hepburn left the demobilization office on the 9th. Smith replied he never left the hut all day until five o'clock. Witness said "This girl being murdered is a serious thing, and I want the truth, no humbug." Smith repeated that Hepburn never left the hut. Both he and Hepburn were in the hut all the time.

LEGGINGS OR PUTTEES.

Horace James Hill, Kempston, said he was driver to the N.A.C.B. lorry referred to. He arrived to camp at 4.30 p.m. on May 6. On his reaching the canteen a sergeant-major wearing black leggings spoke to him saying. "Are you going to Bedford?" and then walked away. About twenty minutes to five as witness was moving away the same sergeant-major mounted the lorry at the back. Witness slowed down to enable him to get up. On the way out of the camp witness passed Private Rush, and further on another soldier got on the lorry and sat beside the sergeant major. On reaching the Prebend bridge, Bedford, the sergeant-major got off the lorry. Witness did not remember seeing two boys on bicycles. On the Monday the same sergeant-major halted him, as he was leaving the camp, about a quarter to five. He left an officer and asked witness, "Seeing as he knew the girl, and he might be taken for the case would witness testify, if necessary, that he went to Bedford on that evening?"

Second Corporal A. Burden, Royal Engineers, said he knew the deceased, and saw her pass the power-station at the camp between 3.30 and 4.30 on May 9, going in the direction of Welstead. She was alone. A short time later he proceeded to Welstead on leave, but he did not see Miss Rault or anyone near the gate of the camp. The canteen lorry overtook witness, and he got in at the back of it. There he found Sergeant-Major Hepburn, who was wearing black leggings. Witness said "Good afternoon," and Hepburn nodded.

Victor Tobias, Royal Army Service Corps deposed that he was on the lorry, going back to the camp from Bedford, about twenty past seven on the evening on May 9. On the road between Elstow and Welstead he asked a sergeant major to get in. The sergeant-major was wearing puttiees.

The Coroner: You are quite sure of that, are you, because it happens to be important?—Yes, sir.

Tobias added that the sergeant-major looked depressed—as if he had lost a pound and found threepence. (Laughter.) He never spoke to anyone.

At this stage the inquest was adjourned until Monday next.

CELEBRATIONS OF EMPIRE DAY.

Yesterday being Empire Day, the arrangements made for the observance of the occasion in London included a memorial service to Dominions' fallen soldiers at Westminster Abbey; a concert by Imperial Choir and bands of the Brigade of Guards in Hyde Park; and a service for Boys Brigades, Scouts and Girl Guides at St. Pauls Cathedral.

Lord Meath to whom more than to any other public man is due the observance of the day, bore the financial burden of the enterprise for awhile, but quite recently he transferred responsibility to an organization bearing the name of the Empire Movement, of which he is president, with Viscount Peel and Lord Leith of Fyvie as chairman and vice-chairman.

Last year over twenty-two millions of British subjects joined in the celebration, nine millions being school-children. The movement seeks the creation of good citizenship. Its aims are non-party, non-sectarian, non-aggresive, and non-racial, and all loyal subjects were invited at least to hoist the Union Jack in recognition of the common allegiance of 400 millions of people to the Sovereign. The authorities in seventy important centres of the United Kingdom had promised to do everything in their power to promote the success of this year's observance.

Citizens of the Empire were asked to:—

Return heartfelt thanks to Almighty God for Victory and Peace.

Hoist the Union Jack over churches, chapels, public buildings, schools, and their own houses.

Wear daisies, oxeyed daisies, bachelors' buttons, marigolds, or marguerites.

Attend local celebrations of the Day and join heartily in singing and cheering.

The United States Navy in London yesterday received the following wireless message from Ponta Delagada, Azores: "The N.C. 4 will not leave Ponta Delagada to-day. Sea too rough to get off."

RED LIGHT SEEN IN THE ATLANTIC.

WAS IT HAWKER?

Yesterday great interest was aroused by the following announcement: "The Wireless Press is in a position to state that the cable ship Faraday sighted the red light of an aeroplane in position 50.28 deg N., 30.02deg W., in the early hours of Monday last. This position is approximately midway between Newfoundland and Ireland, and, roughly, in a direct line between St. John's and Valentia Island."

The position indicated is actually some sixty or seventy miles north of the direct line from St. Johns to Valentia, and is about 1,000 miles from St. John's. Unfortunately the exact time at which the red light was seen is not available.

The Faraday is a cable-laying steamer of 5,023 tons, belonging to Siemens Bros. and Co. Ltd., of Woolwich and London, by whom she is employed on repair work. She left London on May 7 on this mission.

The sighting of this red light—if, indeed, it really belonged to Mr. Hawker's aeroplane—disposes of the theory that he met with disaster soon after leaving St. John's. but it affords no help whatever towards a solution of the problem of the fate of the gallant aviators, which remains as much a mystery as ever. There is, unhappily, no reason to think that anything more than the slenderest chance of their safety exists. Until all the ships on or near the route last Monday have reported there can be no certainty. In the case of sailing ships a week or more may elapse before all have returned to port. Wiring from Montreal on Monday, Reuter says that officers of the steamships Minnedosa and Saturnia, which were off Newfoundland on Sunday when Mr. Hawker and Commander Grieve set out on their Transatlantic flight, reported on arrival at Montreal that nothing had been seen or heard of the aviators, and that repeated calls in the Sopwith wireless code had failed to elicit any response.

BRAVO! "DAILY MAIL."

If fears are realised and all doubt eliminated that Hawker and Grieve have been lost, the Daily Mail announces that the prize of ten thousand pounds will be divided between Mrs. Hawker and Mrs. Grieve and their next of kin, in the proportion agreed upon between the pilot and his navigator for sharing the prize. A further ten thousand pounds will be offered as the prize still awaiting the winning.

Inquiries made at the Admiralty and the Air Ministry late last night showed that no news whatever had been received regarding Mr. Hawker and Commander Grieve. The search by naval vessels has given no result.

It is stated that the navigator invited by Mr. Raynham to accompany him on his next projected flight over the Atlantic has accepted, and he leaves England on Monday. Messrs. Martinsyde have entered for the £10,000 Australian prize. Captain Morgan, who was to have acted as Mr. Raynham's navigator, is incapacitated by his recent fall with the Martinsyde machine at St. John's.

ADMIRALTY HELP IMPOSSIBLE.

In the House of Commons yesterday afternoon, Lieut.-Commander Kenworthy (L., Hull Central), asked the First Lord of the Admiralty whether naval assistance would be given and organized beforehand if and when a British citizen again attempts to fly the Atlantic.

Dr. Macnamara (in a written reply) says: I am glad this question has been put. It enables me—and this is most desirable in the interests of all concerned—to make perfectly clear the fact that it is quite out of the question to organize naval assistance beforehand if and when a British citizen again attempts to fly the Atlantic. It would not have been possible, if sought, in connection with the recent flight. It will not be possible in any future flights. The views of the Government were expressed in a communiqué issued on Tuesday night, and it is unnecessary for me to repeat them, except to call attention again to the many and heavy obligations of the British Navy in many waters. I wish, however, to make it plain that the Government did not, and could not, accept responsibility of any kind for private enterprises which were not under their control. The efforts made, therefore, by the Admiralty were not in any sense a belated attempt to give protection which should have been arranged for earlier, but were the spontaneous efforts to do what was possible to save the lives of the two very gallant gentlemen who had made this attempt.

In a recent telegram from St. John's (N.F.) Reuter's correspondent suggested that Hawker's engine may have been affected by the intense cold, causing the congealing of the oil. Messrs. C. C. Wakefield and Co. Limited write that such a thing was impossible, as Mr. Hawker was using their lubricant known as Castrol "R." which was specially selected for its remarkable cold-resisting properties, it having withstood a temperature much lower than anything likely to be encountered on the Atlantic flight.

COMIC STRIKE AND LOCKOUT.

It was not so much a strike as an Utopian idea. The electric tram service exists for the convenience of the inhabitants of Cologne, and for some time past, in accordance with the fashion of the times, the tram workers have agitated for a four marks daily increase of pay. This was refused by the Corporation. On Saturday therefore, the trams started running as usual but the conductors refused to take any fares. This happened very early in the morning and only proved satisfactory to non-season ticket holders.

When the municipal authorities discovered what was happening, they first appealed to the British authorities for advice and then cut off the current. All the trams of course stopped where they were for a few hours until the strikers resumed work later in the morning at three marks per day extra pay.

Propaganda leaflets were affixed to some of the stationary cars.

SUBSCRIBING UNITS PLEASE NOTE

The Money received by us, in payment for THE COLOGNE POST, includes some notes of local origin, i.e. issued by some particular town or towns. These are of no use to us, unless they happen to be Cöln notes, and will in future be returned and debited to the sender. The same thing applies to the coins (Kriegsgeld) issued locally.

We have also received coins of English, French, Belgian, Portuguese, etc. origins and for small values, which can only be accepted at their face value, not subject to the rate of exchange. Thus 10 centimes is reckoned as 10 pfgs. and so on.

THE VOICE OF REASON.

It is rather refreshing to find that whilst the leading Majority Socialists are raising their voices to advocate the rejection of the Peace terms the dictates of reason are being listened to amongst some sections of the people and in certain Press organs in Germany. We have pleasure in reproducing an extract from an article which appeared recently in the Volksstimme of Magdeburg. It runs as follows:—

"We must adopt a cool and critical attitude in face of the accusations of lust of vengeance which are being brought against our opponents. What are the actual facts? The war has cost France alone the sum of about 180 milliards of francs, rather more than less, with a population of 38 millions. The burden of debt per head of the population is greater than in Germany. The paper currency issue has also been larger. In addition, France has raised a greater portion of her loans abroad, and will have to pay back the interest as well as the capital in gold. For 4 years long she had to see her richest coal and ore districts in enemy occupation, a prey to exploitation, robbery and finally destruction. France has gained the victory, and with France the whole civilized world is firmly convinced that the war was started by Berlin and Vienna as a war of conquest.

Germany is held responsible for all the distress and for all the misery which has come upon France through this war, and it is quite self-evident that the instigator should be held fully responsible, not only from the French standpoint but morally as well, for all the damages in so far as they can be made good by financial methods. Germany acted in precisely similar fashion in 1870—71.

That the war bill should now amount to 100 milliards and more instead of five is merely the bad luck of the defeated party. In view of the Peace conditions we must ask ourselves the question:—

HOW WOULD GERMAN IMPERIALISM HAVE ACTED IF WE HAD BEEN THE VICTORS?

We need only refer to the speeches of Helfferich and other ministers, or else to the thousand of newspaper articles right up to May of last year, in which all sorts of possible and impossible terms against France and England were formulated if they gained the upper hand. We do not intend here to enter upon the threatened annexations. We would only briefly remind our readers that in March of 1915 six influencial associations—the Farmers' Union, German Peasants' Union, the Christian Peasants' Association, the Central Association of German Business Men, the Union of German Leaders of Industry and the Middle Class Union of the German Empire—addressed a petition to the Chancellor, Bethmann Hollweg, demanding the annexation of Belgium, if not in form at least in substance, together with an extent of French Territory amounting to 20,000 sq. kilometres (= 7,891 square miles roughly) with 3½ millions of inhabitants, making with Belgium 50,000 square kilometres (= 19,230 square miles) with 11 millions of inhabitants.

In the East, they "contented" themselves with claiming 80,000 square kilometres (= 30,769 square miles) with 5 millions of inhabitants; all this of course only in order to "secure" the German Frontier.

France now also wishes to "secure" herself against further surprise attacks by Germany.

The occupation of the Saare district for 15 years is first and foremost a punitive measure for the destruction of the mines of Northern France by Germany; at the same time, the profits of the Saare mines are intended to compensate for the deficiency of output in the French mines.

The occupation of the Rhine Territory until the payment of the war indemnities is in accordance with the customs of war; similar action was accordingly not only carried out by Germany in 1870—71, but provisions to this effect were also laid down in 1917 in the Treaty of Peace with Roumania, and were carried out in Russia and in the Ukraine, as will be clearly recollected by everybody who can carry his mind back a few months.

It is true that the Entente is not concluding Peace with Imperialist and war-like Germany but with a popular republic. But we must take into consideration in what light the matter is viewed from the other side of the frontier. With regard to the material claims, according to French views France's very existence is at stake. Her burdens would not become any less heavy and oppressive because she happened to have as her neighbour a German Socialist State based upon popular government, but she is not even faced with such a neighbour as this on her flank, but with a democratic, capitalist state —albeit with an undoubtedly large social minority. Various combinations of popular representation can take place with surprising rapidity, and what would be the consequences then."

* * *

It is not therefore surprising if the terms exacted by the Entente are of a rigorous nature. When one contrasts these terms with those which have been publicly put forward over the signature of a prominent member of the German Government at the present time one is tempted rather to say with Lord Clive. "Gentlemen, I stand aghast at my own moderation."

A REFLECTION.

There is something exhilarating about going on a Course after a few months of the daily round of duty with one's unit. So when the adjutant rang up one morning and asked if I would volunteer for a three weeks course of instruction in "The Methods of Education" at the Corps College in Cologne, I seized my pass book, made a rapid mental calculation and answered in the affirmative.

On the appointed day, I duly reported at the college, and was directed to my billet and the officers' mess. On sitting down to dinner I noticed with an inward qualm that, with the exception of myself and another somewhat dejected looking individual the company was entirely Scotch. Horrid visions of being dirked on dark nights, or compelled at the point of the revolver to consume vast quantities of haggis flashed through my mind, but I forced myself to appear unmoved. (I may say in passing that none of my fears were realized, and that I was always treated with the greatest courtesy, as one whose birth was an unfortunate accident, and due to no fault of his own.)

The following morning at 9.30 we assembled in the class-room and were given an outline of the methods and aims of the course. We were shown the difference between the ancient system of Education, whereby great numbers of hard facts were crammed into the pawnbling heads of the pupils, and the present one which aims at creating interest and thus stimulating the desire for further information.

The first week was devoted to "methods of teaching," and demonstration lessons in various subjects, followed by discussion, which was generally heated, and often amusing. Never shall I forget the lesson on Shelley's "Ode to a Skylark," during which an amateur ornithologist suggested that the simile of the glow-worm in the grass referred to the skylark sitting in a tree, concealed by the foliage. If anyone desires a quiet three weeks in hospital, he need only mention that bird in his presence. Later on each member of the class was allotted a subject on which he had to give a lesson to the remainder. The unhappy wight who was allotted the History lesson chose the "Life of Oliver Cromwell." His first stumbling block occurred when, from pure nervousness, he stated that Cromwell was an M. P. from 1628 to 1840. This caused some merriment, but he ploughed ahead until he came to the subject of General Fairfax. Here his tongue refused to serve him. He tried 'Flairfax' and noticing signs of mirth had another go with 'Fairflax.' This was too much. Strong men burst into tears. One stolid highlander, who had faced German bayonets and machine guns with unmoved countenance, broke down and sobbingly implored his friends to carry him out before he died. But the lecturer got his own back later by reading out with great unction a passage describing the Battle of (I think) Marston Moor stating that the Scottish army was defeated and entirely dispersed!

These instances may not appear very mirth provoking, but a class of officers, like the House of Commons, is easily amused. Space forbids me to tell of the fate of the unfortunate Sassenach who confused the Battle of Bannockburn with the Battle of Flodden, and made matters worse by using the term 'Scotchmen.' The ensuring discussion in the mess that evening must have made our German hosts think that the war had broken out again.

Alas, all good things have an ending, and we are now back with our various units again, brimming over with educational efficiency, and yearning for the opportunity of testing our newly acquired skill on the intellects of our long-suffering N.C.O.'s. I personally shall always retain the happiest recollections of my three weeks at the College, and the conviction that if my own education had been conducted on similar lines I should be now a far more efficient and useful member of society.

MAN.

HIS POWERS AND DIGNITY.

(BY A CORRESPONDENT.)

In the Bible Story of Creation man was made to have dominion over the whole earth. He was the representative of the Divine Creator. He was granted powers by which he could co-operate with the Creator in the great evolving process of Creation. He was the master-piece of the Creation. That man has realised his powers, and the dignity and divinity of his life is quite another story. The thoughts and conduct of men even in this advanced stage of his evolution too often lead us to the impression that he cherishes too low an estimate of his own value. If his worth be measured by his size, he would be negligible. He dwells in a world, that has been discovered to be a mere speck in the vast universe. He seems scared by this vastness and surrenders to the forces of his environments. Though he may make spasmodic attempts to escape from his prison-house, his efforts lack persistence. Not knowing his powers, and forgetful of his dignity, he submits too readily to what appears as the inevitable, and accepts for his rule of life "Let us eat and drink, for to-morrow we die" To what depths does man sink! How easily he surrenders his God-given powers! And yet measured by that which we call his soul, how supreme his value! He stands in the world as King of Creation, all that is beneath him is imperfect without him, and only begins to approach perfection as he exercises his sovereign power upon it. We may quail before the terrific forces of Nature, but it is in the power of man to defy them. Destructive forces can be converted into constructive forces by the working of his mind. He can harness the wild forces of the world, to his use, and overrule the unalterable laws of the world by his knowledge of them. We speak of the conquest of air, and in that phrase there is the implication that it is the mind of man which is triumphant. The whole creation is subservient to and dependent on the will of God, and some of this majesty and omnipotence is given to man.

When we ponder the words of Jesus we discover that He lays special emphasis on the value of man. "He knew what was in man," and in his scale of moral values man heads the list, his worth is unique and priceless and nothing could be compared to him. He made the soul of man the pivot of the world. He set the world around a moral and spiritual centre, the souls of men. The world cannot be perfect until man is perfect. Wherever the mind of man has worked unfettered, there has been a corresponding uplifting of his environment; the purer his life, the higher his aspirations, the better will be the little world in which he lives, and in which his interests are focussed.

Man is the centre, and all the gifts in the realm of Nature are created for him. He alone finds joy and pleasure in a vision of beauty. The beasts of the field have no sense of beauty. God's gifts to man are many, and he need only use them to attain the noblest standard of life.

To solve the problems and mysteries that cloud our lives, we must realise the dignity and divinity that is ours, and see our life as the reflected glory of God. Then the whole creation would take to itself new meaning and new value, with man as the centre of interpretation. How much more pleasant the world would be to live in, if we could only see the goodness, the greatness, the majesty of our fellow-men.

There is so much good in the worst of us
And so much bad in the best of us
That it behoves all of us
To think well of the rest of us.

"How much is a man of more value than a sheep?" Jesus would say "A man's soul"—with its unmeasured powers and possibilities; it is worth more than the whole material world. And why? Because of the undiscovered reserves of moral and spiritual power there; because to man's soul alone God can come. He set a supreme value upon man's life for He believes man worth dying for.

A SAD STORY.

UNPAID "BILLS".

Once upon a time, in a quiet and residential thoroughfare dwelt Bill Smith, John Crapan and Jean Van Witt—three peaceful and prosperous tradesmen. Then came amongst them to live, a certain Bill Schmidt; also a peaceful and prosperous citizen with dynamite in his boots. And for many years this colony of respectable and stodgy tradesmen flourished and grew nearly as wealthy as munitioners; until, one day Bill Schmidt "got fed up" with the simple life and decided to paint the street a deep shade of vermilion. So he "nied" himself over the fence and administered to Van Witt five rounds rapid with a garden roller and afterwards attempted the unique feat of drawing Johnny Crapan through his own keyhole by his whiskers.

Then the local population "got the wind up" and called a "copper". It took seven hefty policemen to overcome Bill Schmidt and relieve him of his Krupp's samples, but eventually they hauled him up looking somewhat "part worn" before the "Beak," who said. "Look here Bill, this is a bit to thick. We don't mind a joke but when it comes to punching holes in half the universe—well, it is'nt done, really it is'nt. I don't want to be harsh but you'll have to pay for what you broke and I am going to leave a man in possession until you have weighed out the "dough"—"Fustien?" And Schmidt "fustiened."

Fourteen years rolled by; during which time Messrs. Smith, Crapan and Van Witt sorted out their effects from the universal scrap heap and made a "corner" in wooden legs and glass eyes. Meanwhile, Schmidt, in his happy little home was doing himself exceedingly well. The "Bum-Beatiff" had become even as one of the family, for he tilled the soil, tended the herds, did the house work and washed the kinder. Furthermore he kept undesirables away from the home and spent all his wages in purchasing from Schmidt relics of the "dust-up". And therefore one day Bill Schmidt hurried to the Beak and said: "Sir, the time limit you imposed is unreasonable. I want it altered." "On" replied, "The Clink Purveyor," I suppose you want it shortened?" "Himmel, no," yelped the horrified Schmidt, "I want it lengthened."

And the moral of this little story is this. If you cast some bread upon the waters it will return—with jam on.

UNIQUE CRICKET OCCURRENCE.

UMPIRE'S WRONG DECISION AT TAUNTON.

WHAT IS A TIE?

There was an occurrence at Taunton on Thursday afternoon which is unique in the annals of cricket.

Somersetshire were playing Sussex. Sussex were required to make 105 runs in their second innings in order to win the match. They made 104 of these runs for the loss of nine wickets. Consequently at this juncture the match was a tie. There was one more batsman, namely, H. J. Heygate, to go in. The statutory two minutes interval allowed by law between the outgoing and the incoming batsman had elapsed, and H. J. Heygate, who was known to be injured, had not put in an appearance. Finally, dressed in everyday clothes, he came out of the pavilion into the field, but Street, one of the umpires, presumably putting into force Law 45 (which he thought governed the situation), did not allow Heygate to bat, but pulled up the stumps. Roberts, the other umpire, according to the information at my disposal, did not give a ruling, and there was no further play.

Law 45

I owe no apology for discussing in some detail this phenomenal and indeed important occurrence (writes Col. Philip Trevor in the "Daily Telegraph"). The wording of Law 45 is a follows:

"They (the umpires) shall allow two minutes for each striker to come in and ten minutes between each innings. When they shall call 'play' the side refusing to play shall lose the match."

Obviously everything depends on what constitutes refusing. In this case I will say at once that in my opinion Street, the umpire, was wrong, and I venture to give my reasons for thinking so. I take it that a refusal is something definite, and that mere neglect or delay does not amount, within the meaning of this law, to a refusal. As a matter of fact Sussex very clearly showed that they did not refuse. Their captain, indeed, sent Heygate in to bat, and it is perfectly obvious that he had no possible object in refusing. The match at this juncture was already a tie.

What a Tie Means

Now, what does a tie mean in a cricket match? It means a bracketing together of two competitors for the first place. Sussex could not possibly be lower than first, whatever happened. If the result of Heygate's batting had been the addition of 1 run to the score they would still have been first, but with their honours unshared. If no run had been added, they would have been first with their honours shared. Sussex were therefore in the delightful position of playing. "Heads I win, tails I can't lose." It is indeed difficult to understand Street's point of view.

The Wise Referee.

"The wise referee", says Fred Dartnell in the "Daily News," "is he who tries to please nobody, but only desires to satisfy his own sense of what is just and correct to all parties concerned in the fight".

Thanet Whitsun Golf.

The Whitsuntide Challenge Cup presented by the captain of the club and open to members and visitors, under lowest club handicap, will be the chief event at the Whitsun meeting of the North Foreland Golf Club.

"Some Sportsman."

Surrey police, on foot and on bicycles, were hunting this week for the resourceful thief who was caught breaking into the co-operative stores at Woking, and who, after being twice captured in attempts to escape, finally swam a canal and got away. To aid him in his escapes he rode three stolen bicycles and a motor-bicycle.

"THE VICTORY DERBY."

LATEST INTELLIGENCE OF THE GREAT EPSOM CLASSIC

BY "JERRY M," LATE OF "RACING MAIL"

Once again it is possible to run the greatest of classics at its historic home, Epsom. And everyone at this moment is eagerly discussing the merits of the various competitors. Will the favourite win? Personally I do not think "The Panther" is by any means a sound investment at 13 to 8 against. I was present at the "Two Thousand Guineas" and am convinced it was a very near thing with "Buchan." "The Panther" perhaps was not quite as fit as he will be on "Derby Day". But this is also true of others.

I am assured on good authority that in spite of the ultimate placing in the Guineas "Lord Basil" is the best of the Manton colts. His astute trainer is not likely to make any mistakes and if Lord Basil is better than "Buchan" he is a real good thing. "Stefan the Great", like the majority of the "Tetrarch" family proved himself a non-stayer and can safely be left out.

"All Alone" won in real good style on Saturday (May 10) from Leaddros. This horse strikes me as likely to prove a dangerous outsider. As the distance of the Durham Handicap was 1 mile 5 furlongs his staying abilities were beyond doubt. It was freely stated in the clubs last week that Lady Torrington had refused an offer of £10000 for the colt. So someone evidently fancies his chance.

FANCIED BY HIS TRAINER.

"Grand Parade" has been steadily supported in the clubs during the last 10 days, and is I am told quietly fancied by his trainer. However in a gallop last Sunday with "Skyrocket" and "Royal Welsh" he failed to impress.

The Derby horse ridden by A. Smith waited on the others, "Skyrocket" leading a really good gallop for about nine furlongs. Then Smith asked his mount for an effort. He responded momentarily, but immediately afterwards dropped back. Smith accepted the position without riding the colt out.

At first blush it appeared that the colt cannot stay, and according to his breeding it is possibly the case, but it may also be that it was not intended to send him along beyond 1½ miles and he was almost certainly giving away a lot of weight as G. Gotting was "up" on the other.

"Bergerouse" easily beat a moderate lot at Lewes ridden by Donoghue, who it is said greatly fancies his Derby mount "Paper Money," but the latter will have to improve greatly on his exhibition when beaten by "He" to have any chance against such as Lord Basil.

To sum up I take
LORD BASIL to win, and
ALL ALONE as a good "place" investment.

ENTERTAINMENTS.

"THE GREEN DIAMONDS."

The 9th D.L.I. Concert Party, "The Green Diamonds," made a successful debut on Thursday evening at the Central Y.M.C.A. with a variety programme that reflected credit on all concerned.

The concerted items showed harmony and artistic talent, the tableaux "In Somerset" and "My Moon" being highly effective, while their dancing in "That Irish Night" and other items showed them to advantage. Corporals Greetham and Umpleby were a pair of versatile comedians, and their comedy "diving" act had the audience laughing as well as guessing. Pte. Stevens monologues, expecially "The 11.69 Express,' displayed his fine elocutionary power. Pte. Milburn has a rich tenor voice and is a highly useful member of the party. Cpl. Davis and Sergt. Chapman were dainty and captivating "ladies' and did their parts well. Bandsman Bowers gave an excellent step-dance and also introduced the necessary humour into Pte. Stevens' "Comedy Conjuring." Sergt. Harris sang "My Moon' and other numbers in a pleasing manner and rendered yeoman service at the piano.

The youthful bandsman, Errington, played two old favourites as cornet solos, being enthusiastically encored while Pte. Ryder's violin solo was a masterpiece of exquisite technique, and was beyond praise. Cpl. Butters scenic and lighting effects contributed greatly to the success of the show, which "held" a full hall from beginning to end. Success to the Pioneers and their Concert Party is assured.

THE BRITISH RHINE ARMY ORCHESTRAL SOCIETY.

This Society, which came into being in April continues to show excellent promise. Rehearsals are held every Tuesday at 5.45 p.m. in the Lecture Room, on the first floor of the Church Army Soldiers Club, Antoniter Strasse, Cologne, and membership is open to all instrumental players of either sex who are with any unit of the British Forces or organisations in Cologne or the immediate district. If you play an instrument, please attend the next rehearsal.

SALVATION ARMY BAND'S VISIT TO BONN.

On Thursday evening the Salvation Army Band paid a visit to Bonn for the purpose of playing in the ground of the S.A. Institute there. Each of the items was well received, the excellent rendering of the Hymn "Abide with Me" at the close being specially appreciated.

The band is composed of Salvationists attached to the British Army of the Rhine. It numbers 25 instrumentalists and is formed solely for the benefit of the men of the Rhine Armies. It is making good progress under the able leadership of Mr. F. Dare, of Leigh-on-Sea.

It should be added that excellent work is being carried on at the Salvation Army Institution at Bonn. The building previously was a German Students Club and has every convenience. The good cup of tea, the bright smiles of Capt. (Miss) Broughton and her helpers, as well as the general appearance and comfort of the building draw large crowds of men each day.

FAST BALLS UNPLAYABLE.

CAVALRY DIV. H.Q. v. 1st ROYAL DRAGOONS.

The Cavalry Divisional H.Qrs' club were at home on Wednesday receiving a visit from the 1st Royal Dragoons. The H.Q. batted first, and made a total of 91 runs. Sergt. R Keevil, D.C.M., was top scorer making 20 after being let off with his score at 4. Pte. Stevens assisted him, both making 22 for the fifth wicket. Pte. Stevens and also Cpl. Adams each made 14. Lieut. Joy for the visitors did well with the ball, his fast balls at times being unplayable.

On going in to face the score of 91, the "Royals" started disastrously, losing Sergt. Phillox and Trumpet-Major Parry with only 5 runs scored. Things did not improve greatly against the bowling of Cpl. Adams and Sergt. Keevil, five wickets being down for 21. Lieut. Harries (11) decided to make a stand, and played most steadily. Lieut. Stander and Pte. Palmer were dismissed cheaply, the latter by a smart catch by Cpl. Tolley. Pte. Emberton with Cpl. Guy scraped together 23 runs for the last wicket with the assistance of "Mr. Extras," so the final score was 63, which meant that the Headquarters, ran out winners by 28 runs. The fielding of the home side was very keen, Pte. Stevens, Cpl. Adams, Spr. Bennet and Corpl. Tolley, all bringing off excellent catches.

"The team has consisted throughout of 4 officers, 3 sergeants, 1 corporal, and 3 band boys. Taking into consideration the numbers available to draw upon the results is very creditable.

On two occasions the luck was with them viz:—v-5/14 Siege Battery R.G.A. and 12th Coy R.A.S.C. (M.T.) but in the only game lost they were well beaten, although there was but one goal scored against them.

THE LEAGUE OF YOUTH.

To representatives of the Press Mr. A. Lyle Samuel, M.P., explained the aims and objects of the League of Youth and Social Progress. What the league desires to do is to gather in, co-ordinate, and direct the social and political aspirations and activities of the young men and young women of to-day. It is pointed out that thousands of these who are being released from the Army and from general war work are animated by an ardent desire to build a new world worthy of the great sacrifices which have been made. There exists no effective organization, specially appealing to them, capable of fostering that worthy aspiration. To meet this need the present movement has been set on foot, and it is proposed, by means of propaganda throughout the country, to create an uplifted social consciousness and to educate the members who join it on the great problems of reconstruction and home and foreign affairs, and to unite in a bond of fellowship and social service all the bright and ardent spirits of the day. Whilst specially appealing to those comparatively young in years, it is proposed to welcome as members all who are young in spirit. It is proposed to invite the active co-operation of the universities, the public schools, Churches, and scientific bodies.

Mr. Lyle Samuel, himself one of the young members of the political arena, said he hoped the movement would prove the basis and foundation upon which an important structure would be built. The world had been saved by its youth; its chivalry and purpose had manifested themselves on the battle-field. He believed that the seed sown on the various battle fronts must result in a rich harvest of social progress. But for that very reason youth must no longer be disqualified from expressing its ideals, or be baulked in its desire to carry responsibility. Courage was at its height in youth, and it behoved them to see how they could harness this force to advance the truest progress in this country. They knew how great was the need for social reform, and he could but hope that as a result of the new movement the ideals, the courage, and the aspirations of youth would not only find verbal expression, but would take practical form. They must see that, as each issue comes forward affecting the youth of the country, youth itself should be enabled to come forward to express its views on those issues.

THE WORKERS' BEER.

WAR CABINET CONSIDERING QUESTION.

A deputation numbering fifteen representatives of the Lancashire retail licensed trade, had an interview in the House of Commons with several Lancashire M.P.'s. The deputation dealt with the situation that has arisen at Manchester and in surrounding towns owing to the shortage of the beer supply and the consequent action of the people, who, it was declared, were now menacing public peace and order. The deputation subsequently had an interview at the Ministry of Food with Mr. McCurdy, and submitted particulars showing the local position of matters, and said they were sent to tell what Mr. McCurdy described as "new and startling facts." Mr. McCurdy also said he would have the deputation's statements transcribed and submitted to a War Cabinet meeting to be held for the purpose of considering the question of the beer supply.

IN THE COMMONS.

BOTTOMLEY AND DISCUSSION OF TREATY.

QUESTION OF INDEMNITY.

In the House of Commons on Thursday, Mr. Bottomley (Ind., Hackney, S.) asked the Prime Minister whether the Peace Treaty with Germany had yet been signed.

Mr. Bonar Law, in replying, said that the statement which appeared in the Press this morning as to the extension of the period is correct.

Mr. Bottomley: I take it that we may assume that there are only seven more days before the treaty will be signed, if it be signed, and in view of the statement that when it is signed this House will have no power to alter it, can the right hon. gentleman now see his way to give some opportunity to the House, before it is signed, of elucidating the financial clauses of the treaty?

Mr. Bonar Law: I can well understand and sympathize with the desire of the House to have a discussion on this subject, but, apart altogether from the question whether it is desirable to have a discussion at all until we know what the action of the Germans is going to be, the House must remember that we did not win this war entirely by ourselves, and we cannot make peace by ourselves. The question whether or not there should be a discussion was considered by the heads of the five Great Powers, and they unanimously came to the conclusion that a discussion, until we knew the German answer, would do harm, and we agreed definitely, as far as the power of the British Government was concerned, that there should be no discussion. In these circumstances I have no option but to say that we cannot have it.

INDEMNITY QUESTION.

Lieut.-Colonel C. Lowther (C.U., Lonsdale): Can it be derogatory to British interests for the Germans to know that this House of Commons insists on the enemy countries paying the whole war debt, when and if they are in a position to do so?

Mr. Bonar Law: I am sure the House will agree that in any case it would be a great mistake to discuss parts of the treaty, and that if we discuss it at all we should discuss it as a whole. As I pointed out, all the Allied Governments, rightly or wrongly, and I think rightly, have come to the conclusion that a discussion would do harm until we know what action the Germans are going to take. In that case, so far as Government action is concerned, it is quite impossible for us to consent to a discussion.

Lieut.-Colonel C. Lowther: Won't it be too late when we know what action the Germans are going to take?

Mr. Bonar Law: Of course, it will be too late, but surely my hon. and gallant friend must realise that no treaty could ever be reached if it were to be done by a large body like the House of Commons. It can only be done by representatives who are trusted by the House for that purpose. When the Prime Minister was last here, I remember him distinctly saying this to the House. "Now is the time. It will be too late if you do not show your confidence in those who represent you."

Lieut.-Colonel Sir F. Hall (C.U., Dulwich) So far as we are concerned, we do not know the exact terms of the treaty, notwithstanding that it has been communicated to the people of Germany.

Mr. Bonar Law: I have dealt with that so often that I can say nothing more. I thoroughly sympathize with the desire of the House of Commons to see the full terms of the treaty, but surely in a case of that kind we must leave the decision to the men who have been entrusted with the duty.

Lieut.-Colonel A. Murray (D.L., Kincardine): Was the undertaking given by the Government that this House should discuss the treaty with a view possibly of making alterations in it, or merely to discuss it before ratification?

Mr. Bonar Law: Oh, no. Long ago many questions were put to me on this subject, and I gave exactly the same answer as I gave to-day. I gave an undertaking that no ratification would take place until this House had approved. More than that, in my opinion, it is really impossible to do.

Mr. Bottomley: In view of this remarkable statement, I am sorry to say that at the end of questions I shall ask leave to move the adjournment of the House to call attention to it.

Accordingly, at the end of question-time, Mr. Bottomley asked leave to move the adjournment of the House for the purpose of discussing a definite matter of urgent public importance, viz., the absence from the Peace Treaty of Germany of any definite provision for the reimbursement of the cost of the war as distinguished from reparation for damage to persons and property. Only seventeen members supported the request, which was accordingly not granted.

BRITISH EMPIRE LEAVE CLUB.

Lt. H. C. B. Foxley, R.N. gave a thrilling lecture on "Anti-Submarine Warfare" to a well-filled hall on Friday evening, 23rd. May. He began by giving a brief description with diagrams of the submarine, explaining that when they are on the surface they are driven by internal combustion engines, and when submerged, by motors run by electricity which is stored in large batteries. These batteries periodically have to be recharged which has to be done on the surface. Lt. Foxley described the way in which the submarines attacked both in legitimate warfare and their ruthless onslaughts on merchantmen and other shipping, and told a few of the difficulties that had to be overcome in defeating them, and of some of the methods of anti-submarine warfare including the zig-zagging course; the guard of destroyers which used to encircle the battleships when they went out; the depth charge (the most successful of which was not perfected until 1917), and other inventions of which the most important are the paravane and hydrophones. The most successful of all the anti-submarine methods employed was the "Q" Boat. These mystery ships varied in size from fishing trawlers to large ships, were fitted with four inch guns, had especially trained personnel of the Royal Navy and were instrumental in destroying the morale of the German submarine commanders' crew. Lt. Foxley concluded his lecture with the story of a trawler which with a small crew surprised an captured the crew of a large German submarine. This tale evoked an outburst of cheers, and when they had subsided Miss Decima Moore said a few words of thanks to the lecturer, who was heartily applauded.

The lecture was followed by a concert given by the Ladies Orchestra of the British Empire Leave Club. The opening item was the Lilac Domino Waltz excellently rendered by the quartet, a 'cello solo came next by Miss Somers Cocks, and then a piano solo by Miss Ricamond. Afterwards Major Boat sang "Rolling down to Rio." Another orchestral piece and a further song brought a very enjoyable evening to its close.

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

PAYMENT IMPOSSIBLE.

The special Berlin correspondent of the Daily Telegraph has had an interview with Herr Dernburg, Finance Minister, who has just returned from a conference with Count Brockdorff-Rantzau. From this interview we gather that Germany is willing to indemnify the Allies but cannot do so if the source and foundation of her industry is taken away.

Exaggerated figures.

"It is clear," Herr Dernburg said, "that we shall be unable to pay an indemnity if our resources are cut down by six-sevenths. Our stock of gold amounts to 1,500,000,000 marks (nominally £75,000,000), and that sum will hardly suffice to buy the necessary foodstuffs. We shall want raw materials for our industries in order to manufacture goods with which to pay the indemnity. We can also pay in coal and other produces. Our annual coal production, however, amounted in pre-war times to 150,000,000 tons. Half of this quantity will be lost if we have to cede the Saar district and Upper Silesia, both of them purely German territories. Of the remaining 80,000,000 tons, 40,000,000 have to be supplied free of charge to the Allies. Consequently, 40,000,000 tons will be left to us with which to run our railways, keep our industry going, warm our houses, and cook our meals. But even this figure is exaggerated, for our production is now considerably lower, nor can it be raised to its former level, seeing that the war cost us one-eighth of our male population—dead or crippled—and that the workers are exhausted by constant under-feeding."

The Finance Minister then spoke of the loss of territory and said that this, Germany could not agree to. "The Saar district was always German soil," he said. "Shall its population go into bondage simply because it contains natural treasures? And Silesia. In 1904 there was only one Polish delegate in the Reichstag from Silesia. In 1912 there were four, three of them getting into Parliament only with the assistance of the Catholic party, with whom they concluded a compromise at the time. No, we cannot think of ceding these territories, or of allowing a foreign committee to interfere with our internal affairs."

In referring to the confiscation of property he said that the Germans were deprived of the right to settle in other lands. Before the war the country could not feed its own people, but the tendency towards emigration will grow inevitably if German industry is crippled.

We must be allowed to live.

In conclusion Herr Dernburg said: "We are willing to lay our cards on the table: we are willing to show what our resources are: we are willing to let the Allies point out how much and how we can pay. But we must also be allowed to live. We will honestly hunt the terms of an agreement arrived at under such conditions. But then the whole process of negotiation must be altered. The slight alterations so far made in the peace terms are insufficient, for the reasons which I have put forward. Let there be an equitable peace, let us sit down and devise together terms which are not above our power to fulfil. And if this cannot be done, let the Associated Governments run this country. Let them get more out of it if they can. But we determinedly refuse to sign the terms of the treaty which is now laid before us.

"I can say this as Vice-President of the Cabinet, and I can add that the whole Government is unanimous."

Interview with Rantzau.

Dr. Friedr. Hirth, of the Hamburger Fremdenblat recently had an interview with Count Brockdorff-Rantzau at Versailles. The subject of course, was the attitude adopted with regard to the peace terms, and this adroit German statesman relieved himself in a "speakable" manner of some of the burdens which have been thrust upon him. "Mighty" perusal brought forth only one comment, he says, "unacceptable." But on closer study, though not having given any intimation of a change of view, the delegates have certainly modified their earlier statement.

Rantzau admits to a certain extent the guilt of Germany in that he states that "they were prepared for heavy terms, and that they were willing to accept them."

"On May 7," he says, "the question was discussed as to whether to negotiate or to refuse the terms immediately and unconditionally.

Naturally, they decided to try the former, knowing full well that to refuse would afford them little or no consolation. And so busy have been the delegates that they have now asked for an extension to prepare more fully their counter-plans. "By this fact," says the Count, "the German people will know that we intend to do not only complete, but honest work. In the negotiations we are willing to be guided solely by principles of honesty." That surely is encouragement for the Allied ministers, who will furnish these guiding principles.

"I cannot say as yet," Rantzau further states, "how much the representatives of our enemies will hinder us. I only hope to induce them, by their knowledge of our actual situation, to keep to the maxims they offered in November, 1918."

DO YOU SING?

There are doubtless in Cologne these days numbers of men who have in the past been members of Church choirs and who would welcome the opportunity of a return to Sunday duties. This is afforded by the Military Church Choir. Services are held in the Church, 57 Schildergasse, each Sunday at 10.30 a.m. and 6 p.m., at which "Hymns, ancient and modern" and "the Cathedral Psalter" are used. Intending members are invited to take a place in the Choir Stalls at the next Service and should hand to the Choir Secretary at the close of the Service a slip showing their full Regimental particulars. If sufficient numbers are forthcoming it is hoped to sing some unaccompanied male voice anthems in the near future.

BRITISH CIVILIAN IN COLOGNE.

THE FIRST ARRIVAL.

In an article describing the formation of a British Chamber of Commerce in Cologne, which we published on May 16th, it was claimed that Mr. Hastings Pimbury was the first British civilian to appear in Cologne, after the Armistice. He is not to be allowed however to get away with this honour undisputed and informs us that he now learns that Mr. Charles Davis reopened the Cologne branch of Messrs. Thos Cook and Son on March 1st. Mr. Hastings still claims to have secured a 'place' being one of the first three. We wonder are there others?

GERMAN THEFTS IN BELGIUM.

From a Belgian official source, Reuter's Agency learns that in view of the protests made in the German Press against the obligation under which Germany is played by the Peace Treaty to restore 120,000 head of cattle and horses to Belgium; some figures showing the extent of Germany's requisitions during the four years of occupation are available. VICEROY'S PROCLAMATION TO THE AFGHANS.

MASSING ON THE FRONTIER.

NORTH RUSSIAN ADVANCE HELD UP.

LENIN ASKS FOR AN ARMISTICE.

VICEROY'S PROCLAMATION TO AFGHANS.

INDIAN RULERS' LOYALTY.

Simla. 15th May. The Mehtar of Ghitral has assured Sir Ross Keppel in spirited terms of the devotion of himself, his Government and people. The Khan of Terai has offered his services to the Indian Government. The Nawab of Amber sent his son to Sir Ross Keppel offering his services, and the Nawab of Dir has expelled all Afghan agents and telegraphed his congratulations on the Bagh victory, with assurances of complete loyalty. The Viceroy, Lord Chelmsford, has issued a stirring proclamation beginning "To brave and honest people of Afghanistan." Steps are being taken by aeroplane and other agencies, to disseminate the proclamation, which recalls the old friendship and alliance of Great Britain and Afghanistan and reminds the Afghans how Great Britain intervened at Amir Abdur Rahnans's request and forced Russia to stop her oppression. After recalling how Great Britain rewarded the late Amirs's loyalty and warning the Afghans against helping the new Amir Amandulla in his mad course, the proclamation asks whether the people are prepared to allow that rash youth to be false to the memory of his martyred father and to bring calamity on the brave people of Afghanistan. It concludes with an assurance that Great Britain's desire is to see Afghanistan again peaceful and prosperous, free and independent. Reuter.

Simla. 15th May. The Afghan Commander in chief has sent a letter to the political agent of Khyber asking for cessation of hostilities.-Reuter.

AFGHANS AGAIN BEATEN.

Simla.—British troops made a reconnaissance on the 16th May and discovered large bodies of the enemy to the West of Dakka. The Afghans followed the withdrawal of the British camp. Early on the 17th the British attacked the ridge and by four o'clock in the afternoon had carried the heights, the enemy leaving three hundred dead behind them. The British captured five Krupp guns. The complete success of the action is reported to have had a dispiriting effect on the Afghans on this front. Good reports have also been received of aeroplane raids on Jelahabad. Troops in close formation on parade were bombed with good effect.

ENTIRE FRONTIER INVOLVED.

Mohmans state that Afghan troops and tribesmen have entered their country. News from other parts of the frontier mentions movements of enemy troops in Khost and on the West Waziristan border.—Reuter.

The India Office adds that this dissemination of Afghan forces along our frontier tends to show that the object of the Afghans is to raise the tribes against us along the entire frontier.

SOME HOME LESSONS FROM BAVARIA.

That Prussian militarism is by no means dead is shown in a letter which has been received in Switzerland from Herr Grelling, the well-known German writer who drew a special and striking indictment of Germany's war guilt in his book "J'accuse."

Herr Grelling, who was in Munich when the Bavarian capital was recaptured from the Communists by Prussian and Bavarian Government troops, gives a description of this latest Prussian feat of arms differing materially from the official Berlin version. He says that after their entry into the city the Prussian troops during twenty-four hours indulged in a veritable debauch of bloodshed, massacring everyone who came in their way, offering violence to women and brutally illtreating even little children. It was Belgium over again, says the writer. In this way hundreds of persons, who had not the slightest connection with Communists, were bayoneted or shot down in the streets. Prussian soldiers even carried their machine guns into private houses and turned them upon the terrified inhabitants, going from flat to flat spreading death and destruction. When carnage had ceased, arrests and executions began. This is not yet over. Many thousands of "suspects" are in prison, among them a great number of intellectuals, professors of Munich university and others. Most of these prisoners are not Communists at all but simply South Germans of the intellectual type who had condemned Prussian militarism and Pan-Germanism.

Anyone known to have been an admirer of "Kultur" or to have admitted Germany's guilt is immediately arrested by the Prussians. The Hoffmann Government is entirely in the hands of its Prussian military helpers and is as much terorised by them as are other Bavarians.

While the German staff realises and admits that Germany is today instructed to renew hostilities against the Allies, and while such a devoted organ of militarism and Pan-Germanism as the Leipzig Neueste Nachrichten confesses that "We have neither men nor guns nor ammunition to fight the Allies" it is evident that attempts to re-establish Prussian militarism in Germany itself are not wanting. The Allies are well advised to take all careful precautions against future surprises. Wireless.

DELAYED PROGRESS IN NORTH RUSSIA.

BRIDGES DESTROYED.

Kem. (White Sea) 23rd May. — The British advance since the capture of Medvyejagova, in which feat our casualties were only two wounded, has been held up owing to the destruction of the bridges and railway. A Russian order has been captured by which it is directed that the place must be held to the last. The Bolshevists continue to offer the weakest resistance and they appear to be undecided about making a serious defence. Russians are joining up in large numbers. Admiral Koltchak is expected to reach Viatka by the 7th July and hopes shortly afterwards to establish contact with the Archangel force, after which the capture of Moscow and Petrograd need only be a question of a few weeks.—Reuter

A Helsingfors telegram says that on the Narva front the Bolshevists have two divisions, comprising seven thousand Infantry, five hundred cavalry twenty heavy and thirty-five light guns, one hundred and fifteen machine guns five armoured motor cars and one armoured train.

The total number of Bolshevists troops on the Southern front is 23,500 Infantry, 12,000 Cavalry, and 350 machine guns, thirty two heavy and eighty light guns, and twelve armoured motor cars. Amongst these troops are six Esthonian, ten Lettish, and thirty-four Russian Bolshevist regiments. In the Gatshina and Oranianbaum districts the population has revolted against the Bolshevists.

LENIN WANTS AN ARMISTICE.

Copenhagen, 25th May. According to a report published at Moscow on the 18th May, received here from the Helsingfors correspondent of the Politiken, Lenin has proposed an armistice to Admiral Koltchak, with a view to the initiation of peace negotiations.

No confirmation of this report has yet been received.—Reuter.

ESTHONIAN ADVANCE CONTINUES.

The Esthonian Press Bureau announces that while the Northern Corps is continuing its rapid and victorious advance along the railway Narva-Petrograd line, its advanced guard having occupied Volosova, seventy-five kilomètres (forty-six miles) east of Narva, on Wednesday, other detachments are pushing along the Peipus shore towards the great railway junction of Pskoff, Where the Bolshevik head quarters are situated. The railway station at Famm and the harbour of Raskopol were captured on Wednesday, a thousand prisoners and twenty machine guns being taken. The Esthonian Peipus flotilla on the same day captured two armed Bolshevik vessels. The harbour of Raskopol is eighty kilomètres (fifty miles) north of Pskoff.—Reuter.

BOLSHEVISTS DOOM MORE HOSTAGES.

NEARING PETROGRAD.

Copenhagen,— The Esthonians have captured Peterhof, twenty-one kilometers from Petrograd.

Stockholm. A Petrograd telegram reports that the Bolshevists in all the big towns have arrested a great number of prominent bourgeois who will be executed if the Soviet troops meet with any serious reverse.

In case of defeat the people's commissaries consider that the only solution will be to leave for the Ukraine and locate the central organisation of the Bolshevists agitation there.

A fresh cholera epidemic has broken out at Moscow, 300 cases weekly being notified.—Reuter.

THE EMPIRE'S REWARDS.

After peace is concluded the Government will propose various honours and grants of money to those who have served the Empire well. Among the anticipated rewards are Earldoms for Field Marshal Haig and Sir David Beatty with grants of 200,000 pounds sterling. It is rumoured, however, that Sir Douglas Haig will hold aloof until he is fully satisfid in respect of security of employment for discharged officers and men.

PRISONERS OF WAR IN GERMANY.

The uneasiness and anxiety felt in Great Britain about the fate of untraced British prisoners of war in Germany will be brought to the notice of the Government in the House of Commons this week. It has been established by those engaged in prosecuting enquiries in Germany that the German War Office records contain a multitude of names which have never been reported to the British War Office. It is being urged that the War Office should send a fully equipped staff to Germany to prepare proper lists, thus setting at rest what it is feared may be a great body of unjustified hope.

FOR ABSENCE WITHOUT LEAVE.

ADJUSTMENT OF PAY.

The provisions of the Army Act as to deduction of pay for absence without leave are amended by an Army-Order just published. The effect of the amendment is that no period of less than twenty-four hours shall count as one day for purposes of forfeiture of pay except where it is proved that the absentee was prevented by his absence from fulfilling his military duty which as a consequence had to be discharged by some other person.

By another amendment no soldier will suffer forfeiture of pay while under sentence of field punishment, except for days on which he is in custody, unless it is so ordered by court martial or summarily.

ARMY CHAPLAIN FINED FOR SMUGGLING.

George Lawrence, described as an Army chaplain, was charged at Folkestone yesterday with attempting to defraud the Customs. A Customs officer stated that on the arrival of a steamer from Boulogne the defendant said he had nothing contraband, but on searching his baggage he found sixteen packets of cigarettes, three tins of cavendish tobacco, and a dox of cigars.

Defendant said that as an officer he had often travelled, and had not been asked to declare before. He was ordered to pay double value and duty, £5 2s 2d.

FRENCH ON CHURCHILL.

In yesterday's instalment of "1914" in the Daily Telegraph, Field Marshal French deals with the question of the Belgian Coast.

It was strongly represented that if the left bank of the Allies rested on the sea much further along the shore, so as to include Ostend and Zeebrugge, naval co-operation would have been simple and the submarine menace greatly minimised. Apprenhension as to the forces available and other difficulties led to the abandonment of the project.

Lord French's pen-picture of Mr. Winston Churchill, the then First Lord of the Admiralty, is an interesting one. He says:

"Winston Churchill had been for several years one of my most intimate friends. I saw much of him during the South African war, but it was not until about 1905 or 1906 that I really got to know him well. His complex character is as difficult to describe as it is to analyse. To those who do not understand him, the impetuous disposition, which is one of his strongest characteristics, is apt to throw into shadow the indomitable courage, tireless energy, marvellous perspicuity, and quick virile brain-power which are the main features of Winston Churchill's extraordinary personality. His experience and knowledge of public affairs must be unrivalled; for, at an age when most men are undergoing the grinding drudgery which falls to the lot of nearly all successful statesmen, lawyers, soldiers, or ecclesiastics, he was holding the highest offices in the Government; and not even his most inveterate enemies can say that he has failed to leave his mark for good on every department he has supervised.

"Possessing a combative nature, he engages constantly in political strife, which is marked by the sharpest controversy, and it is, therefore, perhaps only his intimate friends who know the real manly, generous kindliness of his disposition and his perfect loyalty. The perspective of history will show the part he has played throughout the Great War to have been consistently constructive and of direct value to the nation. His visit to my Headquarters at this time was productive of great good. The Government were getting nervous of the military situation and of the arrest of our forward advance. With his characteristic energy and activity, Churchill visited and examined every part of the battlefield, and what he saw and heard put him in a position to send reassuring information to his colleagues."

SMALL HOLDINGS GRANTED.

An official statement issued by the Board of Agriculture says that a summary of reports received shows that 3,292 ex-service men who applied for small holdings and cottage holdings under the Government scheme have been interviewed and eighty-eight per cent of the applications approved.

The total number of applications to date is 16,841, of which 11,900 are from service and ex-service men. The total area applied for is 206,334 acres. Since December 22,969 acres have been acquired and schemes are in preparation for the acquisition of over 78,000. Ten per cent of this will be acquired by the exercise of compulsory powers.

HUSBAND'S MAGNANIMITY.

Lieut. Harry Cuthbert Collingwood, licensee of the Black Horse, Gomshall, (Surrey) obtained 1400 pounds sterling damages against a farmer who took advantage of Lieut. Collingwood's wife while he was away in the army.

Lieut. Collingwood forgave his wife and assumed full responsibility for the child which was not his.

LARRY LYNX'S OPINIONS.

The will of the late William Lotinga, the sporting journalist who wrote as Larry Lynx, deals with an estate of nine thousand sterling. The document contains piquant allusions to "blackmailing rags published by jealous rivals" and refers to lawyers as "the country's vampires". It also contains advice to his son to steer clear of unscrupulous and dangerous men.

SNATCHED FROM THE ATLANTIC OCEAN.

HAWKER AND GRIEVE RESCUED.

Lloyd's signal station at the Butt of Lewis telegraphed on Sunday morning at 8.25 as follows:

"Danish steamer Mary passing Eastward signalled following: Saved hands Sopwith aeroplane'. The Station immediately signalled

"'Is it Hawker?'

"Steamer replied 'yes'".

The Board of Admiralty announced that it received the above report from the Coastguard Station on the Butt of Lewis at 11 o'clock on Sunday and added that an attempt was being made to intercept the steamer as it passes to the North of Scotland in order to verify the report. Reuter.

The whole world rejoices.

Nothing in recent years has so captivated the public mind. Not all the stupendous happenings of the war nor the momentous problems of peace could focus almost breathless attention to the extent accomplished by the daring attempt to wrest the laurels of being first to fly the Atlantic wherewith to deck the shield of English endeavour.

On Sunday evening the 18th May, two "splendid fools" flung challenging gauntlets full in the face of Fate and, with a jest of farewell to "Tynsides," flew out over the treacherous North Atlantic — for England. They knew the weather was unpropitious but they fared forth. It was their right thus to dare, for they were ready first.

For twen y-four hours the hopes of England were at the ten thousand foot air level, where a wonder of scientific engineering, brought to near perfection through the dire necess ties of war, was battling for peaceful conquest—a fragile construction of six thousand separate but vital parts, con rolled by two virile brains.

Fate, with the flick of a finger, turned the trick. A small piece of spelter sufficed. Not for the first time had Fate played with spelter. Lack of it handicapped Germany during the war, yet by one of tho e utterly inexplicable happenings it intervened on Monday last ove the ocean. Commander Grieve, a Navy man, would call it "Joss."

A little bit of spelter obstructed a water tube and Fate laughed. On Monday imagination was crippled. Nobody knew where to visualise the airmen. Were they lying crushed on an iceflow, or had they passed from ten thousand feet above to ten thousand feet below the stormy Atlantic waters? Were they far from the land and which land? Or, faintest of faint hopes, growing even fainter with the passing of the days, had they been picked up?

Fate, only this time we will call it the long arm of coincidence had flung out a very long arm on April 28th. On that date the Danish tramp steamer Mary left New Orleans bound for Horsens in Denmark, Her skipper was doubtless interested in the preparations for flying the Atlantic, yet he could not have known that he might see the finish of the most daring deed in the history of scientific sport. How could he have known that on the 24th May, four weeks homeward bound, he would be fifty miles off his course, the only vessel in a waste of wild waters and the only vessel which could possibly rescue the two gallant men from a solitary death?

Yet so it fell out, and for six days the British Navy scoured the ocean in vain, and the world waited against hope. For six days the Mary pursued her solitary way until she raised the Northern end of the Island of Lewis in the outer Hebrides. Then a hoist of flags gave the news to the world.

Somehow we like to read of the adherence to principle of the master of the Mary. "Owner first" is the duty of the mercantile marine, and the skipper was not disposed to stop his ship in order to hand over any Hawkers or Grieves to their Motherland. The Admiralty made an effort, however, and the two men who have ousted Lloyd George, Foch, Rantzau, Peace terms—everybody and everything else—from the limelight, set foot on the deck of the Revenge in Scapa Flow.

The juxtaposition of names is rather curious, for the warship Revenge calls to mind that former Revenge of "at Flores in the Azores, Sir Richard Grenville lay." It is at that same Flores that the N. C. 4 is still awaiting completion of the repairs which must be effected before she can start on the second stage of her flight to Europe.

What were the thoughts of Hawker and Grieve when they realised that they had failed, not through any fault of theirs nor any constructional fault of the Sopwith plane, but through a little scrap of soldering metal, which had shaken loose on the inside of a brazed joint?

That they were "up against it" needed no thinking. It was obvious, as they planed down to the surface that they were up against it unless, as must almost of a certainty have been the case, they knew they were not doomed to die. They were only afloat in their frail canoe for ninety minutes before they were picked up, and they therefore must have reached sea level within twenty miles of the Mary.

We hazard the opinion that their first thoughts were of Raynham and Morgan, and their first hopes, as they could not be winners for England, that the Martynside would do the trick. They did not know that the machine lies a wreck in Newfoundland and that Morgan is incapacitated.

REVENGE IS SWEET.

A later Admiralty report stated that Hawker and Grieve arrived in perfect health aboard the "Revenge" in Scapa Flow (Orkney Islands). They were picked up in latitude 50.20 N., longitude 29.30 W. The aeroplane was not saved.

The position given is approximately 750 miles from the coast of Ireland and nearly 1,300 miles from Newfoundland.

The Daily Mail received the following message from Hawker dated Warship Revenge, Scapa Flow, via Aberdeen. 10.35 p. m. Sunday. Machine stopped owing to water filter in feed-pipe from radiator to water pump being filled up with refuse such as solder etc. and shaking loose from radiator. Was no fault of motor. Motor ran absolutely perfectly from start to finish even after all water boiled away. Had no trouble in landing in sea. We were picked up by tramp ship "Mary" after being in water one hour and a half. We are going to London from Thurso at two o'clock on Monday afternoon, arriving in London between 7 and 8 o'clock on morning."

NATIONAL REJOICING.

The dramatic news of the safety of Hawker and Grieve came as a complete surprise, as all hope had been abandoned since Saturday, when twelve destroyers returned to port in the West of Ireland after fruitlessly scouring the seas over an area of three hundred miles.

Special editions of the London papers were eagerly snapped up by excited crowds. The scenes in the streets were only to be compared with an occasion of national rejoicing.

Similar scenes occurred in the provinces.

SPLENDID NAVIGATION.

Experts pay eloquent tributs to the fine navigation of Commander Grieve, as the aeroplane kept on a dead straight line for more then half way across the Atlantic. The mishap is believed to have been of so slight a nature that had the machine been a seaplane Hawker would probably have been able to effect repairs on the water and complete the course.

CONSOLATION PRIZE.

In recognition of the determined nature of the effort to cross the Atlantic the Daily Mail has awarded a consolation prize of five thousand pounds between Hawker and Grieve.— Reuter.

THE RED LIGHT IN THE SKY.

Some further particulars of the red light incident are furnished in the following issued on Saturday by the Wireless Press:

"The wireless operator of the ss. Inventor reports as follows:

A warning of the start of the flight was received by the Inventor on the evening of May 18, in a broadcast message received from St. John's, and relayed from ship to ship eastwards. Later, Poldhu gave the actual time of the start. As the night advanced the wind freshened up to a gale in a direction north by west. The ship was rolling heavily, and there was continuous rain. I listened intently for D.K.A. (the wireless call-letters of the Sopwith machine), but received nothing. At 3.59 a.m. G.M.T. on the 19th the Ninian broadcasted the following message, which it had received from the ss. Samnanger: 'Sighted red Verey light of aeroplane to northward 1.18 a.m. G.M.T., latitude 50.28 north, longitude 39.02 west.' At 6.40 a.m. I finished my watch, having received nothing whatever from D.K.A. A junior operator who followed me also received nothing."

Last night this information was supplemented by the following telegram from Reuter's correspondent at St. John's, Newfoundland:

"The steamer Glendevon, which arrived here last night, reports that at about 1.20 Greenwich mean time last Monday, being then in mid-ocean, 1,060 miles east of St. John's, she heard the steamer Samnanger give the Sopwith aeroplane its position as follows: "Your position is latitude 50deg 28min North, longitude 30deg 0min 2sec West." This message was prefaced by the signal letters D. K. A., which were the Marconi code signals of the Sopwith aeroplane. The Glendevon's captain says he understood from other messages that the Sopwith machine had shown a red light, which was the prearranged signal to denote her position. He saw or heard nothing else on the voyage regarding the airmen."

"SUNDAY IS MY LUCKY DAY."

Mrs. Hawker, the wife of the gallant airman, is a serene optimist. While all her friends were shaking their heads about the fate of her husband, she refused, says the Daily Mail, to be disquieted or discouraged. She had an unquenchable faith that he was safe. On Saturday evening she motored to see some of her friends who live in bungalows on Thames Ditton Island. "She said to us," says one of them, 'You're looking down in the mouth, boys. Cheer up. We shall have some good news to-morrow. Sunday is my lucky day.'" When Mrs. Hawker heard of the glad tidings by telephone yesterday morning she at once motored to see the same friends, and quietly announced that her prediction had proved correct.

THANKSGIVING AT HOOK.

Mrs. Hawker, accompanied by her sister, Miss Petie, attended the evening service at Hook Parish Church last night, which, as announced, took the form of a thanksgiving. The service opened with the Doxology and special Psalms and lessons were selected. The hymns, "Now thank we all our God" and "Praise my soul, the King of Heaven," were sung, and the general thanksgiving made special reference to the "Preservation from the perils of air and deep of Harry Hawker."

The vicar, the Rev. T. J. Wood, selected as his text "For this my son is dead and is alive again. He was lost and is found." Not often, he said, had it happened in the history of this country that a single heroic act had fired the imagination, and excited the admiration of men as had the adventurous flight of Mr. Hawker and Commander Grieve. In conditions so unpropitious they were resolved to win for England the honour of the first flight by air across the Atlantic. An Englishman disputed with Columbus the honour of crossing the Atlantic for the first time, and these men strove to gain another leaf for England's laurel crown. It was such men and such feats that had made England what she was, and had gained her, her name and prestige among the nations of the earth. It was not often also they saw a calling forth of sympathy such as the nation had shown to Mrs. Hawker during the last week.

R.A.F. OFFICER MISSING.

Capt. L. G. Jefferson R.A.F., left Kenley on Monday last piloting an aeroplane which bore despatches intended for Paris. The aeroplane and despatches have since been recovered from the Channel by French fishermen but no trace of Capt. Jefferson has been found.

ENGLAND IN COLOGNE.

There was an amusing article in Vorwärts some days ago entitled "England in Cologne." It starts by allowing that after a taste of what in the way of plunder and arson might be looked for by unoccupied Cologne, the occupation by the British was not unwelcome. But soon there came disillusionment. The Briton, after four years of war—four years in which he had learnad how implicitly the German could be relied on and had received so many effusive, explosive and other marks of Germanic affection—actually remained mistrustful and aloof,-and when the good German did not alter his altitude and accorded him still more considerate sympathy, he became nasty and rough. A change came over the childish dream of conqueror and conquered, lambkinning it together, and the hurt Teuton said to himself "Oh, if you won't, you won't, nor will I."

Up till now, the impression had, apparently, been (an artless people which, never invaded, could not have known, of course) and the accounts of the other peoples, conduct who had occupied Lille, Brussels, Andenne and Louvain did not come home — that these were conquerors who had come amongst them, and that if sufficient sympathy was ladled out, the conquerors lapped it up and cuddled the conquered as a matter of course. But now the people of Cologne suddenly took a new view — an erroneous one also — of the situation. Then there penetrated them the perception that the situation was quite altered and that there was no war any longer, and bitterness ensued, followed by hate. This hate is of a new up-to-date kind, not the old hymn-of-hate sort, but we will not trouble our readers with the definition, since its pungency differs no more than does that of Roquefort from Gorgonzola. To forsake cheeses for our muttons, we are treated to a description of the usual Continental dummy Englishman, unapproachable, proud and domineering, whom we used to see portrayed on the stage arrayed in a loud tartan check suit. This dummy Englishman, according to our author, does not alter his manners to the conquered Germans, treats the Rhinelanders as a refractory race, and every Englishman from officer to private is convinced of his own superiority and of that of his race.

The fact that everyone had to be indoors by nine and now by ten o'clock, is treated as a terrible grievance. How a citizen of Lille, who had to be indoors three or foor hours earlier, would have opened his eyes at this!

We turn up a past proclamation issued at Brussels and find that all celebration of the National Belgian Fête day on 21st July, 1916, is prohibited, no public meetings or processions being permitted; shops and cafés to be closed at unusual hours, and any breach of this rule to be punished by six months imprisonment and a fine not exceeding 20,000 Marks. We find a further order dated 18th November, 1916, in consequence of demonstrations in front of the church of St. Gudule, as a result of which the Germans were insulted by the crowd; all public places of amusement, i.e., hotels, restaurants, cafés and shops were to be closed at 8 p.m., and only those persons possessing a written permit from the German authorities were allowed to be in the streets between 8 p.m. and 4 a.m.

Then we are told that the Cologne maidens have lost all sense of propriety and dignity as German women, and that for the sake of cakes and chocolates, hundreds of young women have been taken from the company of the British Soldiers and sentenced to various fines. Hate without end exchanged for endless chocolates! We hope the quality of the chocolates was better than that of the hate. We do not think that this really represents the attitude or feelings of the people of Cologne, as we are certain it does not do anything but misrepresent us. It is not true of the people of the Rhineland that they are so totally devoid of self-respect or of perception of the situation, or that their maidens are so devoid of self-respect as this writer would have us believe. The real fact of the matter is that this article was probably written by a journalist in Berlin sighing for the Occupied Area. It bears, however, traces of that curious perversion of mind which it will take some years for a certain sort of German to get rid of —a kind of Continental insularity. "I," says the man of this type, "can kill, punish, coerce, mutilate, but you must not do it to me." It is not all Germans who make these assertions—witness the articles which have recently appeared in the Bergische Arbeiter Stimme and elsewhere; and the conversations which we have had with many Rhinelanders show the truth of this. It is a sort of Prussianism which with Prussian "Kultur" has leavened the districts into which both had intruded. Until that leaven has been cast out and Germany recognises that it was her fault that brought the catastrophe upon Europe, we must doubt her sincerity.

We may pardon with a smile the childish gaucherie that admits tacitly the benefits of order and industrial peace which the Army of Occupation has brought to the Rhineland, and blushingly acknowledge the tribute to our chivalry in yielding our seats to ladies in tramcars whilst ignoring the petulance which sulks because we do not rush into the arms of the Cologne citizens. A dignified restraint is all that is called for on both sides, and that, with a few exceptions, is what obtains generally in the relation between the British troops of Occupation and the people of Cologne.

HOW TO GROW HAIR.

An enterprising chemist in Cologne has produced a weird and wonderful handbill which is intended to expound the merits of a patent hair water. The bill informs us that the "reason and profits" of using the tonic are as follows: "Mostly there are made great faults in relation of attending to your hair, without knowing, which prejudices avise by so acting specially for keeping a dense growth of hair. Boldness or bald places etc. are very often its consequence. These evils can avoid every body by employing a refreshing agreeable hair-water, which enlives the bulbs. It consists of the four noblest and best saps of herbs mixed with sprit and oil and is consequently free from any ingredient of the mostly bad effecting chemical preparations. With such a pure hair-water there must be at last a result: Make a trial and you shall find the advantage, This trial will make you to a continual consumer. We don't want special advertisements and think that all things which turn out well are the mostly used. For greasy hair we recommend combination No. 35 and for dry one combination No. 36." The reading of much more in this strain would probably "assist" baldness better than anything!

COLOGNE—BEFORE AND AFTER.

"Germany," once said Lord Palmerston "is a land of damned Professors." That was not the foreigner's first impression of the country in the days before Armageddon. No, it was a land of soldiers. Everywhere the spiked helmet was in evidence. The atmosphere of the barrackyard was everywhere. The very policeman—guardian of civil order—with sword and revolver, offered a marked contrast to the English bobby with his civilian baton. (The baton, however, is an admirable weapon in capable hands.) You saw a platoon of men suddenly begin the Parade-Schritt or Goose Step at the appearance of a senior officer and you were at a loss whether to laugh or weep at this form of Teutonic jiu-jitsu. The eternal salute was everywhere. Now after the Revolution—one of the greatest, if not the greatest, in history—the atmosphere has changed. Formerly, you could have imagined that the German had a ramrod instead of a spine. Now, the ramrod has been withdrawn and the spine has become very flexible and pliant. Had I been told that I should live to see the streets of Cologne filled with English, French and Belgian soldiers, I should have thought the thing impossible. The other day I stood on the Hohenzollern Bridge and surveyed the three Emperors' statues. The first, the second, the third and last! What a fall was there, my countrymen! There is William II bestriding his horse like a Colossus. To-day there is none so poor as do him reverence. I had often seen him address his troops with the traditional Prussian formula, Morgen, Kinder, but the children have rebelled, and the firm of "Hohenzollern und Gott" have retired from business and the whole concern has now been taken over under entirely new and up-to-date management.

I cannot help thinking that a large section of the Germans must secretly regard the Allies as deliverers from the Moloch of Militarism. Herr Teufelsdroek, the child of Carlyle's Crain, was only once seen to laugh when some one suggested a cast-iron king. The cast-iron William II of the Hohenzollern Bridge seems already the relic of a bygone age.

Indeed, the disappearance of the whole phalanx of Teutonic emperor-kings and princes who banished like Falstaff's men in buckram (and they were only men in buckram)—is one of the most dramatic things in history. They seem to have made no fight for their position. They were told to go, and go they did. It cannot be said of the "All-Highest Swashbuckler" himself that nothing in his career became him like the leaving of his office. He bolted, the others followed suit. One cannot imagine the real founder of Prussianism, Old Fritz, making so ignominious a flight. That ruthless warrior who carried poison as an antidote to disgrace would have gone down sword in hand at the head of his men. But the last of the Hohenzollerns was but a Maulheld after all. He came, he spouted, but he did not conquer. For years the German papers were filled with striking comparisons between Rome (Germany) and England (Carthage). "Delenda," they were never tired of repeating, "est Carthago!" The trident was to be struck from Britannia's hand. "Our future" said the founder of the German navy "lies on the water." "Let us take care" said a cynical German, on hearing the Kaiser's speech "that our future does not lie under the water." The warning was unheeded.

Now that the Empire has fallen, never to rise, we may hope that a new Germany, purged of its insensate lust for world powers, may once more resume the peaceful pursuits of literature, science, music and art which were her glory before Prussianism poisoned her lifeblood, and Bismarck, a bully who never met a bigger bully than himself, conceived the idea of uniting the German states by blood and iron. The great debacle will be a warning for centuries to come that ambition divorced from morality can end only in disaster. A.M.

THE OPERA.

FAUST.

Time cannot wither nor custom stak the infinite variety of Gounod's masterpiece. "Das ewig Weibliche," the way of a man with a maid, is the perennial source of human interest, and when the Devil has a hand in it you have all the elements that lead to tragedy. On Saturday night we saw a series of pictures which, aided by expressive music, depicted the poignant story of a man selling his soul for a maid and the tragic results to man and maid. Indeed, the performance was a rich feast both for eye and ear, the stage effects deserving warm praise.

In particular the Oriental gorgeousnes of the Bacchanalian episode, with its lavish colour and voluptuous dancing, was a triumph of scenic display. Where all was good, Herr Gless's Mephistopheles stood out as a masterly rendering of the sinister, mocking friend. There was something uncanny you felt, at times, in the expression of his unholy Schadenfreude, as when he denounces Gretchen from his pillar. And what a rich sonorous voice is his, and how admirably used! What a capital bit of vocal declamation was the "Calf of Gold!"

Herr Schröder, impressive at the outset as the old philosopher to whom life has nothing new to offer, made a captivating lover. Very artistic was his rendering of the aria "All hail! thou dwelling pure and holy." As the guiless maiden warbling about the King of Thule or voicing her girlish delight in the Jewel Song, Wanda Achsel sang and played convincingly. Herr Schorr made a dignified Valentin but why, in the name of tuneful melody, was that gem "Even bravest heart may swell" omitted? Katharina Rohr made the most of her somewhat thankless role as old Marthe. The "Soldiers' Chorus" was warmly received, as it deserved. Indeed the principals were often recalled, and the devil (at least as impersonated by Herr Gless) for once got his due. A.M.

"DER ZIGEUNERBARON."

Those who attended the performance of Johann Strauss's charming Austrian comic Opera on Sunday, spent a very enjoyable "Pleasant Sunday Afternoon." While Sullivan was composing immortal works in England, Johann Strauss was doing the same thing in Vienna. These works are immortal in that thy are the national expression of musical feeling, unencumbered by special freaks and fashions of harmonic and orchestral device, and are good for all time. Strauss had a special genius for waltz element is conspicuous in his operas. Sullivan almost entirely eschews the waltz.

The "Zigeunerbaron" is studded with gems. An especially delightful little match is the duet between Saffi and Szipra before they discover the treasure. The duet between Saffi and Parinkay which follows is also a real gem, and was delightfully sung. These two artists, Frl. Geisler and Herr Clemens who took the respective rôles were excellent throughout the opera. It is a real treat to hear voices used as nature intended, which in this country is only possible in light opera. Herr Robert as Zoupan is an excellent comedian of the German style. The incidental music which accompanies some of the spoken dialogue in the first act is charming, and it seems a pity more use is not made of incidental music, as it helps to camouflage the break between the spoken dialogue and the vocal members. This break was particularly noticeable where Szipra suddenly begins to sing about her dream. Martha's singing of her "past" in "Tiefland" seemed quite natural, following an other musical matter.

The chorus acquitted itself well, but neither dancers nor musicians did justice to the sparkling dance number in the last act, which suffered from the usual German blight. A.P.J.

RAGLAN CASTLE.

The simple announcement in a recent issue of The Cologne Post that the Duke of Beaufort has decided to present this historic pile to the nation, recalls the many stories and traditions which cluster round the ruins of this famous old castle in the heart of Monmouthshire.

In the turbulent days of the middle seventeenth century, when Cavalier and Roundhead waged war amid the hills and valleys and meadows of old England, the unfortunate Monarch, Charles I, found no safer refuge than within the strong walls of this castle, which he frequently visited between the years 1643—5.

Here he was royally entertained by the Marquis of Worcester, at this time well over eighty years of age, but not too old to pour out his fortune, give his servants, and defend his castle in order to restore his monarch to a secure throne. The royal apartments can still be seen, the King's favourite walk still retains its old world beauty, while the ivy covered walls, in some places more than sixteen feet thick, and its wide moat with porteullis and drawbridge, even now enables one to understand how it was one of the last strongholds to surrender to the Parliamentary forces.

The garrison within was one of the last to surrender in the whole land. In recognition of its valiant stand, the men were permitted by the Parliamentarians to march out with colours flying and drums beating. A few weeks after, the old Marquis was on his deathbed and anxious to know where he should be buried. Upon being told he should be buried in the chapel at Windsor he exclaimed "why then, I shall have a larger castle when I am dead that when I was alive."

A welcome addition to the royal exchequer was made by the vicar of a neighbouring parish in a curious way. Knowing the countryside well, he was enabled to enter the castle in spite of the forces of Fairfax which were surrounding the magnificent structure.

"I have brought," said he, as he took it off, "His Majesty my coat." "That is of little use," was the reply. "Then" said he "take my undercoat." This by its great weight gave promise of being at least worth a little investigation of the lining, and so it proved, for upon being opened, several hundred gold pieces were found sewn inside the lining.

Perhaps the most interesting stories are those, which centre around the doings of the young Marquis of Worcester, who achieved fame, before the civil war interrupted his researches, as a scientist, in that period when science was beginning to emerge from the swaddling-clothes of astrology and alchemy, with their vain search for the philosophers stone and aqua vitae. He is credited by many historians and antiquarians with having been the inventor of the steam engine. The claim rests chiefly upon that very rare book, which he wrote "A century of inventions." This contains an account of a hundred inventions and experiments made by the young marquis, one of which describes a machine driven by steam the description bearing a striking similarity to the steam engines of the early nineteenth century. A copy of this exceedingly rare book is still carefully preserved among the treasures of the British Museum. Tradition has it, that Savary a French inventor of that period finding he had been anticipated by the young Marquis in this particular invention, during the civil war and the absence of the author of the "Century of Inventions" through his activity in the Royal cause, bought all the copies he could of this work and burnt them, (hence their great scarcity) so that he might claim to be the inventor. Be that as it may, the marks still remain on the walls of the old castle keep to show where the pipes for steam and water run, by means of which he conducted his experiments and earned for himself the reputation of being in league with the evil one from the superstitious countrymen for miles around.

Such are a few of the stories associated with this famous old castle in the heart of Gwent, as Monmouthshire is called by the Welsh. I have seen some of the castles on the Rhine, but none have I yet seen to compare in this land to Kenilworth, Dudley, Carisbrooke and many other of our famous English castles; and certainly none to compare with this charming old ruin, which still proudly stands through winter's frost and summer's heat, after the destruction of time and the ravages of war ready to reveal to those who care to hear, its stories of the centuries that have for ever gone. T. D.

MULES.

A mule is exactly the same as a woman, for this one reason — they are both beyond the understanding of mere man.

We had a mule once, as docile as an old sheep — to look at. But when one tried to mount him he displayed all the pleasant qualities a decent mule should have.

One day it walked into the lines. It was a dashing young sub, just out, and simple itching for adventure. He got it in the shape of Jimmy. He was walking round with the Transport Officer when he met his fate, otherwise Jimmy.

"What a beautiful mule," he remarked, and certainly Jimmy looked truly magnificent, as he stood there quietly chewing the sleeve of the line orderly's tunic.

"Well," said the Transport Officer, "he looks alright, but he won't allow anyone to ride him."

"Oh! won't he," said our young hero, "I've had some experience of rough animals."

Therefore Jimmy was saddled up, and we turned out en masse to see this wonderful exponent of rough-riding. It was short and sweet.

Strange to say, Jimmy stood perfectly quiet until the Officer was mounted, and even walked a few yards.

What next happened, nobody really knows. What we do know, was that we saw that Officer describing weird somersaults over Jimmy's ears, and then finally landing gracefully on the manure heap.

When he came round, he saw Jimmy surveying him with his large sorrowful eyes, as if apologizing for his deed.

Strange to relate, that Officer is somewhat prejudiced against mules now.

The best way to drive a mule is to try and make him go the opposite way in which one wants to go.

The obstinacy of mules is proverbial.

BARRICADES OF LAGER.

MIDLAND DIV. SIGNAL COY CONCERT AT BRUHL.

A detachment of the 12th Field Co R.E. recently commenced extensive operations in the Beer Garden of the Hotel zur Post, Bruhl, and erected a small stage.

From this strong point fire of variable intensity was opened upon an unarmed and inoffensive audience at 1800 hours and continued with spasmodic bursts until 20.45 hours. The attack was well withstood and the troops, having sought refuge behind barricades of lager in pint pots and flowing Mai Bowlen, displayed admirable self restraint.

At 19.30 hours strong reinforcements arrived from Cologne in the shape of Corpl. Howard Fry and Pte Latham. The former used his splendid baritone voice to excellent effect and the latter received roars of applause for his humorous efforts.

EXCITING FOOTBALL MATCH.

51st GORDONS v. 3rd HUSSARS.

A match, productive of intense excitement, and contested with all the keenness of a Cup-Tie, was played at Duren on Friday night, between the 51st Gordons and the 3rd Hussars. There was a very large crowd, the teams each having a big following. Special interest centred in the game as the A. iv lads hold an unbeaten record. There was a contrast in the heights of the players, the Cavalrymen giving the Scottish Nippers inches. The game opened at a smart pace, and the Scots were one up within a couple of minutes of the start, Cruickshanks being the marksman. Mallis was thrustful on the Gordons right, and gave Williams endless trouble. Lieut. Williams came early into prominence with fine half-back work, and eased the situation for the Hussars. Cox and Wheelan had notable rounds on the right and left wings respectively, and each whipped in a teaser for Grey to dispose of.

A period of severe pressure then exerted by the Gordon boys, led to the inevitable. Mallis, from whom danger always threatened, swung the ball to Russell, who hooked it from a most difficult position, and scored a remarkably good goal. Further successes were like coming to the Scots, when Mallis forced a couple of corners. The Gordons, however, were beaten back, thanks chiefly to the efforts of Hudson and Lieut. Williams, and a few dangerous attacks were made on Grey's charge. Wheelan obliged Smith, with a good pass but unfortunately the latter was offside, although his shot, which defeated Grey, was quite good. Half time; Gordons 2; Hussars, 0.

There was no slackening of the pace during the second half. McNeil came into great prominence. He led the attack in fine style and for a time the tussle was largely between himself and the Gordons goalkeeper. All through this period Lieut. Williams was outstanding for some splendid breaking-up work, also for the fine support he gave to McNeil. The latter at length got the better of Kydd, who had shone in the Gordons defence all through, and after a great sprint from the centre of the field, defeated Grey. The reds were now out to draw, and they succeeded in getting level through Cox, after good work on the right. The last stages of the game were marked by desperate efforts on both sides to get the winning goal. There were exciting incidents in front of both goals, and just on time Sinnamon regained the lead for the Gordons with a very neat header.

Final Result:

Gordons 3; Hussars 2.

GAME STOPPED BY BURST BALL.

3 COY, WESTERN DIV. TRAIN R.A.S.C. v. 2 COY WESTERN DIV.

The above companies played a football match at Breuig under tropical conditions. After a good and fast game half time found 3 Coy 2 goals down.

Upon resumption 2 Coy attacked and scored again, No. 3 Coy were now getting most of the game and kept the home "goalie" busy and Wilkinson scored for 3 Coy.

No. 3 Coy pressed heavily and 2 Coy were in a state of collapse when the ball burst and not having another handy the game was concluded with the score 3—1 in favour of 2 Coy. The feature of the match was the defence of the visitors.

Goal scorers for 2 Coy:—Dr. Brown (2); Gadd (1).
For 3 Coy:— Wilkinson (1).

CUP WINNERS.

D COY; 6th R. W. KENTS WIN INTER-BRIGADE FINAL.

An Inter-Brigade final was played on Friday at Wahn, the teams being D. Coy 6th R. W. Kent Regt. v. B. Coy 4th R. Sussex. Following midfield play, the West Kents forced several corners, which proved unavailing. The Sussex broke away from one of these corners, but could not get past 2nd Lieut. Barrows and Cpl. Bones at back who were very sure.

Play was again carried to the other end, and a case of hands against the Sussex led to the first goal, the free kick being well placed by Cpl. Rose. The Sussex "Goalie" could only manage to get a foot to it, and Slade rushing up scored.

The second goal was scored though Dix neatly passing to Walker who shot from about 20 yards range. Half-time arrived:—

D. Coy R.W. Kent 2; B. Coy R. Sussex 0.

From the kick off the Sussex attacked strongly, but Cpl. Rose and Co. defenced well and relieved the pressure. After about 15 minutes had gone Ayres brought off a wonderful save. Lying on the ground he took the ball from a forwards toe and then got up and cleared. Midfield play ensued. After which Sergt. Marsh (Sussex) put in a lovely shot which Ayres successfully negotiated. No further scoring took place, thus leaving the result:—

D. Coy R.W. Kent —2; B Coy R. Sussex 0.

The West Kent Capt. gave 3 cheers for the losers after the match.

Brigadier General Tudor C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., kindly presented the medals to the winning team, and the roars of applause and cheering might have been heard in Cologne! The winning team were as follows:— Ayres; 2nd Lieut. Barrows and L/Cpl. Bones; Pte. Spencer, Cpl. Rose, and 2nd Lieut. Dimond; Ptes Robinson, Slade, Walker, Dix and Tuckwell.

LE CESTERS v. 185 SIEGE BATTERY R.G A.

Played on the "Robcans" (185 S.B. R.G.A.) ground at Weidesheim in fine weather a good game was witnessed on Wednesday. On the whole 185 had the best of the play and scored freely through Davies (4), Smith (2), and Downs (1), to which the Leicesters could only reply with one goal. The Leicesters played a sporting game but the "Robcans" were too good for them especially the centre-forward who is ever on the alert, 4 of the goals coming off his boot. An exciting game ended in 185 being winners by 7 goals to 1.

MIDLAND DIVISION DERBY SWEEP.

We hear that the "Derby Sweep," which is being run for the Division by the Midland Divisional Train H.Q. is making giant strides. The various infantry battalion pare evincing keen competition as to which shall purchase the most tickets and stand the best chance of picking up the valuable prizes. Tickets may be otained from S.Q.M.S. Handy, Midland Division Train H.Q.

5 WICKETS FOR 12 RUNS.

CAV. DIV. H.Q. A.C., R.A.H. v. CAV. DIV. H.Q.

Played at Berghe'm. H.Q. batted first, but started disastrously, 4 wickets falling for 6 runs. Lieut. Jennings and Pte. Stevens carried the score to 22, Lieut. Jennings carrying his bat for 21. Total 57.

On going in to face this score the R.H.A. compiled 23 runs before the first wicket fell. Dvr. Hornes and Dvr. Bush added 24 before the latter was bowled. Spr. Evans then took a turn at bowling and captured 4 wickets with 7 balls. This made matters most exciting and when the last man went in one run was required to draw. Dvr. Gray hit out and added 17 before being bowled by Evans. Total 74. Spr. Evans took 5 wickets for 12 runs.

EDUCATIONALISTS v. COOKS.

A strenuous football match was played by the 51st Gordons last week when the Battalion Education Staff set out to beat the Battalion Cooks. Unfortunately Capt. Loewe was unable to play for the staff, but his place was ably filled by Lieut. Rose. The first half was a hard struggle, but produced no results in the matter of goals.

In the second half the Education Staff made the first score. This was shortly followed by a goal for the Cooks and the match ended 1—1. The teams were well matched and credit is due to Sergt. Bruce of the Education Staff and Sergt. Anderson, the Master Cook. for gathering together the enthusiastic sportsmen.

IMPREGNABLE DEFENCE.

At Klein Bullesheim on Sunday the 21st Brigade and 79th Brigade R.G.A. played a very fast and exciting game. The 79th were early on the aggressive and soon after the start Andrews opened the scoring with a fast drive. They continued to have the better of the exchanges and during the pressure Davies scored with an unstoppable shot, and before half time arrived Andrews put 79 further ahead.

The second half was a little more evenly contested but try as they could 21st could not pierce the 79th's solid defence in which the right back played a splendid game, not forgetting the outside right. This ended a fast game in which 79 ran out winners by 3 goals to 0.

R.A.M.C. WIN BRIGADE FOOTBALL CUP.

OUR CRICKET CUP.

LEAGUE TEAMS TO PLAY OPPONENTS ONCE ONLY.

The announcement in Sunday's issue of the total number of entries for the Cricket Cup Competition aroused no little interest and there is every promise of a very interesting cricket season.

The numbers have so greatly exceeded the most sanguine expectations of the organisers as to make it necessary to modify the original arrangements, and instead of each team playing a "home" and "away" match, it has been decided that each team will play its opponents in the League once only. This will provide an abundance of cricket until the end of August, and the month of September will be occupied with the Championship League, in which the winners of the different area leagues will contest the possession of the Cup. This Championship League will comprise "home" and "away" matches.

The one match plan will also to a great extent do away with the difficulty which would have arisen through some clubs having no ground. Where both teams have grounds the question of where the matches are played will now be a matter for mutual arrangement between the clubs concerned.

Numerous enquiries have been sent to this office by clubs, asking for the locations of their opponents, and realising the difficulties of Secretaries in getting into communication at the rather short notice given for the opening matches, we have so far as possible given all the assistance we could. It must be pointed out, however, that in future, fixtures will be announced sufficiently far ahead to allow ample time for Secretaries to communicate with each other and it is requested that enquiries for locations should not be sent to us in future.

THE LONSDALE BELT.

TO BE CONTESTED FOR BY SOMMERS AND MARRIOTT.

At last the new Lonsdale light-weight belt is to be put up says "Sporting Life". It will be contested for on June 23 next by Johnny Summers, of Canning Town, and Pte Bob Marriott, A.S.C., who have been signed up to box for £100 a side, the light-weight championship of Great Britain, and, of course, the Lonsdale belt. This will be Summers' second attempt to win the light-weight trophy, after a lapse of nine and a half years, which is a record in itself in connection with the belts, but he holds this further unique distinction—that in the interval between his first cut for light-weight honours, and now he has won the welter-weight belt on two occasions, and, though beaten in a third trial by Basham, had high hopes of making it his own until the war effectually dashed them.

Marriott, Summers' prospective contender for the belt, twice won the A.B.A. light-weight championship, and since joining the professionals ranks has only once been beaten. He has made amends for that defeat by Ted Leister in subsequent contests, and his marked improvement all round, but more particularly in defensive tactics has caused him to be regarded as unofficial light-weight champion. This, therefore, is pre-eminently a "popular" match, and, so far as one may judge, will be contested by the two foremost boxers at the weight in England.

"THE TABS" AT THE APOLLO.

REAL LADIES IN A NEW REVUE.

"Get Busy" has about as much bearing on the performance given by "The Tabs" at the Apollo Theatre, Cologne, as has the average revue title upon the actual show. In other words, it would require the reasoning prowess of an individual even more astute than our old friend Sherlock Holmes to descern the slightest connection between them.

But there is one explanation that may account for the title. It is possible the author was thinking of the orchestra when he christened his revue. Conductor Porter and his capable little band of musicians "get busy" as soon as the show starts, and their efforts are not relaxed until the final note of "The King" is played. In the interregnum, the orchestra not only accompanies practically all the vocal numbers included in the performance, but it plays selections from "The Bing Boys on Broadway" during the interval running well nigh into twenty minutes. Rather strenuous, these warm evenings!

As for the revue itself, the dozen or so artistes who present it, embrace all the qualities that go to make up an excellent entertainment. The recent inclusion in the Company of Miss Hilda Potts and Miss Gladys Norcott has added considerably to its attractiveness.

Boisterous Fun and Tuneful Songs.

When the writer left the brilliant sunshine of the outer world to visit the Apollo a couple of nights ago, a large audience showed every indication of complete enjoyment.

Humour is the keynote of the whole entertainment, albeit there is a pleasing admixture of "straight" numbers in the programme. On this account Ernie Roberts, the principal comedian, occupied the stage for quite a considerable portion of the evening, but his "business" was so distinctly funny that nobody seemed to tire of his presence. He dispensed a fund of bright, pointed humour effectively, his make-up and facial expressions being by no means the least laughter producing possessions of his stock-in-trade.

Bob Norrie assisted in producing many humourous situations and was a facetious butt for many Robert's gags. George Huntley, an old hand at the art of laughter producing, had very little work to do but he succeeded in producing a good deal of fun.

One of the outstanding features of the evening was the quota contributed by Alfred Barker. He is a violinist of undoubted ability and his two efforts evoked extraordinary enthusiasm. His first item, "Hezrecatti" was played with wonderful precision, the harmonics being particularly successful. As an encore he contributed the Intermezzo from Cavallier a Rusticana and was loudly applauded for an admirable rendering.

To that always tuneful number, "For You Alone", Miss Hilda Potts added additional charm by reason of her delightful treatment, while Miss Gladys Norcott sang with brightness and daintiness. The singing of Lieut. Lowe is invariably agreeable and he never fails to meet with a warm reception. He is the possessor of a baritone voice of excellent quality and in a duet with Miss Potts he was especially good. The efforts of Rey and "Maisie" (tha latter is a successful female impersonation) were light and pleasing, while Ernest Franklin told the audience of a girl he possessed in Pekin in the course of a lively little song with a lilting chorus.

All the other artistes were in keeping with the general excellence of the entertainment and the scenery and lighting effects add to its brightness to no small degree.

The Altenburg Polo Club has been inaugurated under the Presidency of Brig.-General Lucas, C.M.G., D.S.O., and made its debut last week on the polo ground at Altenburg. The ground, which is situated amidst most beautiful scenery and near a fishing stream, was in a splendid condition.

About 12 players and a few intending players turned out. As a spectacle of polo much was left to be desired, but first-class play was not expected, and it has been decided that the first few weeks shall be devoted to training of players and ponies, and later it is expected to be able to challenge and defeat any Team in Rhineland.

Polo days are on Tuesdays and Fridays of each week, play commencing at 16.00 hours. For any one wishing to join the entrance fee is 10 Marks with 1 Mark per Chukka. TO-DAY'S BOOK.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE WAR.

"A Short History of The Great World War" by F. Maynard Ridge, frontispiece by Henry J. Ford. demy 8vo, p.p. 256, with twenty-two maps. Price 6s - net, 6s.6d. post free. Published by H. F. W. Deane & Sons, The Year Book Press Ltd., 31, Museum Street, W.C.1.

There are no doubt many of our readers who hold the idea that they know enough about The War and will wonder if there is room for yet another "History". We know enough, maybe too much, of certain sectors of the front but it was impossible for the majority of us to get the comprehensive view obtained by a discerning compiler who was making a special study of all the reports and despatches.

To the Young Guard it should prove invaluable in giving him at once a complete and concise view of the glorious and oft-times horribly tragic events which led to his arrival in comparative safety to keep the Watch on the Rhine. The student will find the few pages of the historical introduction just what is needed to gain a clear view of the developement of the Central Empires to that point where Wilhelm Hohenzollern was unable to make the foolhardy and futile bid for World Empire.

At the present moment we can afford to review that magnificent retreat to the Marne wherein so many of our regiments added to their undying fame. Our author puts it all down each piece in its proper order, each deed recorded without any ornamentation, with a simplicity that brings out the full grandeur of the performance. For the moment, with the enemy at Chantilly and his Uhlans but twelve miles from the French Capital, the outlook was indeed a black one for the Allies. Then came the glorious 6th September and "The Germans were soon recrossing the Marne with all possible haste, closely pursued by the British and French".

We are next introduced to the Russian Front and then the "world war" aspect is concisely illustrated in a sentence in a subsequent chapter. We have now moved over to Chinese Front. A Japanese force was landed at Laochan Bay east of Tsing-Tao "and with them came the South Wales Borderers and a battalion of Sikhs."

Future historians will probably write pages on subjects, such as the "Battle of the Falkland Islands," which are here given but they will scarcely make it clearer.

The book continues through five parts, one for each year and covers all the operations on all the fronts in the same concise manner. A chapter at the end of each part gives an excellent general summary of the situation as it then stood. With such a wealth of events to record there is little space for discursiveness but the mass of fare are strung together in a manner which lightens the reading. This human touch is ilustrated in the account of the heroes of Moeuvres where we learn that Corporal Hunter V.C., who, whith six others of the H.L.I., held a post surrounded by hoardes of Germans for 48 hours, was chiefly concerned lest the "show" might interfere with his leave then due. Then how well the following sums up the situation obtaining at the commencement of November last. "Since July 18th (1918) they had lost 362,000 prisoners, 6000 guns, 3800 machine guns and 4000 mine throwers. No wonder they wanted an Armistice".

The volume is well printed with the subject of each paragraph in heavier type making the work of reference easier. The twenty-two simple sketch maps considerably help the reader in grasping the full significance of the extraordinary pregnant text, and there is a useful list of principal dates at the end.

Such a work should prove of great value to those of us who were too busy fighting on one front to realise all that went on elsewhere; to the repatriated prisoner who missed months of news; to the teacher and the student; and lastly but not least to the innocent German who yet fails to "verstehen" that his country failed utterly and irrevocably in a war which it treacherously created and which it carried on with a ruthless and impreconceivable barbarity. On May 7th, 1915, the defenceless "Lusitania" with nearly 2,000 men, women and children on board was torpedoed and 1,125 lost their lives. The German Government struck a medal and expressed some sort of regret giving an undertaking not to torpedo another liner without warning. This understanding was grossly violated on August 19th when the White Star liner "Arabic" was torpedoed without warning off the south of Ireland, thirty-nine lives being lost. And still the Berlin papers scream that the terms are too hard, that they show a lack of friendly feeling to help a stricken nation and that we are unnecessarily interfering with their shipping.

There was hearty cheering during the prize distribution, Captain Garlick, in particular, having an enthusiastic reception. The Brigadier-General shook by the hand each winner, and in a short speech said that the great thing they had to learn in the Army was to pull together, just as their "B" Company had done that day (applause). This company managed to get more points than all the other companies, and he congratulated them. There would be plenty of sports right through the summer, Brigade sports as well as those of units, and the Brigadier bespoke a very successful season for some of the young athletes.

On the day's sport "B" Coy. ran ont an easy winner with 38 points, "C" being next with 21.

BRITISH EMPIRE LEAVE CLUB.

FORMAL OPENING.

Although the British Empire Leave Club has been functioning in Cologne for the benefit of some thousands of troops for the past fortnight or so, the official opening of the institution did not take place until Saturday last.

The occasion, whether by accident or design, could not have been celebrated on a more fitting and appropriate occasion than Empire Day, and the opportunity to couple with the event the anniversary of which we are all proud was not ost. Practically every rank in the British Army was represented in the proceedings. The few that were absent in person were surely present in spirit, judging bythe sincerity of the messages of congratulation received by Miss Decima Moore, whose capable hand guides the destines of the Club.

Among these messages, that of the Commander-in-Chief, Gen. Sir William Robertson, was particularly happy and applicable. His letter read: "Every good wish for the welfare of the British Empire Leave Club in Cologne. Many thanks to you and your staff for your efforts to provide a British oasis in a German desert for the British Army of the Rhine."

Other messages were from:—

The British Ambassador in Paris, The Earl of Derby: "Cannot imagine a more appropriate day for the opening of the Leave Club than Empire Day. I sincerely trust that the British Empire Leave Club in Cologne will have the same success as a similar one in Paris, and will be of equal advantage to the soldiers from all parts of his Majestys Dominions. I feel its success is assured by having you as its Director-General."

General Price, Commanding Paris Area: "Sorry can't come, wish you all success and heaps of friends."

The Right Hon. Winston R. Churchill, Secretary of State for War. "I am very glad to hear of the proposal to institute a Leave Club in Cologne, similar to the one which has made such a notable contribution to the comfort and welfare of the troops in Paris; and I send you my best wishes for the success of the scheme."

Sir Edward Ward: "I am most interested to hear of the opening of the British Empire Leave Club at Cologne and I feel sure the movement will prove a great success and a tremendous boon to the men.

Pte. H.J. Schlarb, R.A.S.C.: "I have been asked by the ladies of the Paris Leave Club to convey to you and your helpers their sincere good wishes for the success of the Empire Leave Club in Cologne. All in Paris wished to be kindly remembered to you."

Among those present were General Sir J. A. L. Haldane, K.C.B., Commanding VI Corps, General Sir C. W. Jacob K.C.B., K.C.M.G., Commanding II Corps, Generals Fuller, Lawford, and Tulloch, Col Gossett, the Town Major (Major Bles), Major Greenlees, Major Purcell, Major French, A.C.G., Lt. C. H. B. Foxley R.N. and Lt. Nash R.N.R., the Editor of The Cologne Post Mrs. Teiling, Deputy Administrator and other Officers of the Q.M.A.A.C. the Matron-in-Chief of the Army of the Rhine, with several Army Sisters.

The day must have been an extraordinarily happy one for Miss Moore, and the absolute approval of her efforts was evidenced in an unmistakable manner by the warmth of the reception with which her brief but suitable announcement, (accompanied by the reading of the above messages) was greeted by the huge gathering.

The magnificent premises of the Club were suitably decorated for the occasion with multi-coloured flags and fairy lamps, and the effect was full of cheeriness.

A special Empire Day Dance was held for the men from 6.30 to 9. The great feature of which was the Empire March Past, when sixty-four men holding the flags of the Motherland, the Dominions and India, did a grand march round the hall to the strains of "Rule Britannia" and other patriotic tunes. The band of the 10th Hussars kindly lent by Major. E.H.W. Williams., D.S.O. supplied most texcellent music under the able direction of the bandmaster C.O. Atherly, and every one heartily enjoyed the dance. Signaller Thompson, 70th Siege Batty R.G.A. very kindly played the piano for the Maxina which followed the March past.

The less energetically inclined found peaceful and cool repose in the garden, where the Club orchestra entertained the guests with light, dreamy music.

The success of the evening was largely due to Miss Bourne, Controller of Entertainments, and it was owing to her wonderful organization that the whole proceedings went off without a single hitch.

BOLSHEVISTS ROUTED IN SOUTH RUSSIA.

DESERTING BY BRIGADES.

AUSTRIA'S PEACE TREATY READY.

AFGHAN COMMANDER'S IMPERTINENCE.

AFGHAN COMMANDER'S LYING LETTER.

BOMBS AND BOMBAST.

Simla. 13th May. The rulers of Kashmir, Nabha, Indore, Bharatpur, Jind, Karputhala, Dhar and Malerkotla have all offered the services of their troops on the frontiers. Sir Michael O'Dwyer, Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, stated that a meeting of Hindus, Mohammedans and Sikhs offered the most convincing assurances of their intention to support the Government in the present crisis. People are beginning to realise how they have been duped and led into rebellions.—Reuter.

Simla. 15th May. Reports indicate that in the action fought on the 11th May two battalions of the Amir's household troops were engaged. Prisoners captured when Dakka was occupied state that the Afghan commander-in-chief was wounded and the Afghan casualties were very heavy. The Afghan commander's request for cessation of hostilities was contained in a letter wherein he says that British officers began an unlawful war without making a declaration of war by throwing bombs, causing heavy losses among Afghan soldiers and civilians. The letter adds that the King of Afghanistan had received a letter from the Viceroy of India, in consequence of which the commander was ordered to suspend war until a decision had been reached by correspondence between the King and Viceroy. The letter was both mendacious and impertinent. The Amir's violation of British territory was entirely wanton and unprovoked. For days before the outbreak of hostilities the Amir had been endeavouring to flood India with inflammatory literature and to send emissaries into India to arouse disaffection.—Reuter.

GERMAN EX-MINISTER REPROVED.

Herr Helfferich, the German ex-Minister of Finance, has indulged in a characteristic tirade against the Peace treaty, in the course of which he stated that of sixty million inhabitants who will remain over to Germany this Peace simply condemns twenty millions to death. "The modern robbers, England and France," he adds, "might intrude with force of arms into the country and enforce their peace." He called on every Government not to sign.

His diatribe is best answered by his own countrymen. The Freiheit comments on his utterances: "Herr Helfferich is the last person who ought to be indignant at the Entente's demands and the consequences of an oppressive peace. By his false allegation concerning England's capacity for economy which contributed to our experiencing the senselessness of submarine war he helped to prolong the war until the German collapse. He occupies the foremost place in the ranks of insistents on war and he was one of the main participants in the oppressive peace treaties of Brest Litovsk and Bukarest. This man ought to keep his mouth closed at last."

WAR RAVAGES IN FRANCE.

Statistics compiled by a French authority afford a slight indication of the frightful devastation caused by the war. The invaded territories of France contained 1,839,000 hectares of the most productive cultivated ground in the country.

From this area there "disappeared" 841,420 head of cattle; 944,570 head of sheep; 424,370 head of pigs; 358,360 head of horses; 2,600 head of mules; 9,010 head of donkeys; 360,750 agricultural implements and 90,000 sets of harness.

In the department of the Meuse alone there were 59,225 houses in August 1914. Of these only 18,158 are intact and of the remainder 30,526 are completely destroyed.

EMPLOYER SUED FOR CIVIL PAY.

Mr. Justice Bailhache, in the King's Bench Division on Saturday last, awarded judgment and costs to Herbert Kingsley Finn, who sued the London Guarantee and Accident Company, Ltd., to recover £109 as damages for breach of contract, the sum representing the difference between his salary as a clerk in the company's employ and his Army pay for a period of over two years.

It was stated that Mr. Finn enlisted in consequence of a notice posted in the company's premises, and initialled by the general manager, promising to keep in reserve the salaries of all men who joined the Army. The company denied that they put up the notice, and said that if it were posted up it was not binding, as the general manager had no authority to issue it.

"The evidence shows," said the judge, "that a fund was formed for the employees and grew to £25,000, but the directors afterwards changed their mind and decided to reserve it for those disabled in the war and the dependants of those killed."

BOLSHEVISTS ROUTED IN SOUTH RUSSIA.

CUT UP LIKE CABBAGES.

Ekaterinodar, 7th May (delayed). The Cossacks have completely routed the Bolshevik Eighth Army on the Middle Donetz. First accounts state that 5,000 prisoners have been taken and that the pursuit is continuing.

9th May. The Don river flotilla has been affording valuable aid to General Denikin, who is now following up his attack across the Manitch River. The Bolsheviks are retiring north and northeast. Stiff fighting is reported, but no details are yet available. On the Donetz front Bolshevik cavalry has vainly attempted to stay the débacle of the infantry army, flogging the fleeing foot troops with nagaikas. Gun fire has been heard the last few days in the direction of the station of Millerovo in the Bolshevik rear.

Refugees state that severe fighting is proceeding between Don Cossacks in revolt and the Reds who are unable to prevent the southward advance of the former with the purpose of linking up with the Don army.

Don Cossacks mobilised by the Bolsheviks for the purpose of being sent against Admiral Kolchak are joining the rebels.

10th May. The Bolsheviks in the south are getting a bellyful of the Cossacks. The Kubans, Dons, and Tereks all shared in smashing the Soviet Tent Army at the Manitch River. The Communist heroes, who had been boasting they would "cut up the prisoners like cabbages," took to their heels as fast as they could when they saw the Nemesis of cold steel on their flank and rear. In fact, the Cossacks were hard put to it to overtake them.

While Generals Shkuro and Kalinin, following up their successes at Lugansk in the Donetz region, had broken the new Bolshevik front and occupied the railway centre of Redukovo, practically annihilating two Bolshevik regiments, further south, owing to their greatly superior numbers, the Soviet Thirteenth Army, comprising many Ukrainian Bolsheviks, are occupying a large part of the Donetz coal region. It is doubtful whether they will be able to profit much thereby, owing to the lack of transport and to the cutting of the railways in the rear by Anti-Bolsheviks. — Reuter.

BOLSHEVISTS DESERT BY BRIGADES.

Telegrams from Helsingfors say that the number of men attacking Petrograd was doubled after a couple of days fighting owing to the addition of entire brigades of Bolshevists, who turned against their masters. On the advanced positions on the Gatshina front the General Staff of the Red Army was obliged on the Tuesday and Wednesday to throw in their last Red troops, notably battalions composed entirely of students from schools, officers and international battalions. These were nearly wiped out by the North Russian Corps under Colonels Balahovitch and Dersensky.—Reuter.

"DEATH OR GLORY BOYS."

SOLE MUTINY SURVIVOR.

The death has taken place at Bath of ex-Sergeant James Seers, of the 17th Lancers, at the age of 82. His death leaves Field-Marshal Sir Evelyn Wood the sole survivor of the famous "Death or Glory Boys" who sailed for India in the Great Britain (then the largest vessel afloat) in 1857. Sir Evelyn had kept in touch with the old Bath soldier, and in February last, upon the receipt of a congratulatory letter from him upon the celebration of his (Sir Evelyn's) 81st birthday, recalled that they were the last of those who sailed in the Great Britain. In order to satisfy himself that there were no other survivors of the regiment, Sir Evelyn had searched all pension lists and records, and as the result of his investigations he informed Mr. Seers that they were the only two left and the secretary of the 17th Lancers' Association in London confirmed the statement.

SUPPLEMENTARY ARMY ESTIMATE.

A further vote on account for the Army Estimates for 1919/20 shows that an additional sum of fifty million sterling is required.

This amount, with the February vote on account of one hundred and twenty-five million sterling, makes a total estimate for 1919/20 of two hundred and eighty-seven million sterling.

LIEUT-GOVERNOR OF PUNJAB.

Information has been received at the India Office that Sir Edward Maclagan took over the charge as Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab from Sir Michael O'Dwyer on Monday.

ANOTHER WAR TEN YEARS HENCE.

LEAGUE OR NO LEAGUE.

Members of the Old Students Association connected with the Royal College of Science met at the Monico Restaurant last night.

Sir Alfred Keogh, responding to the toast of "The Forces Army, Navy, and Science" referred to the splendid work of the medical service during the war. He said that in his opinion the fact that the Army was not wiped out by disease was due entirely to the scientific men who had studied the various problems which had offered themselves on all fronts.

They had educated the army authorities to a realisation of the fact that contrary to the old idea that the medical officers were the administrators of public health in the army, it was commanding and company officers who were the real sanitary officers. He added that at the height of the war the Medical Service of the army comprised a far larger number of officers and men than the whole of the original Expeditionary Force.

The chairman, Professor Armstrong, said he did not attach a great deal of faith to the League of Nations proposition. In his opinion we should be fighting again in ten years time on behalf of China against Japan and we should need the whole intelligence of the nation to hold our own against the world.

FRENCH AND KITCHENER.

Field Marshal French, continuing his narrative "1914" in the Daily Telegraph, records a meeting held at Walmer Castle towards the end of that year, at which Mr. Asquith and Lord Kitchener were present.

The question of munitions and fear of invasion formed the basis of a long conversation between them. After the meeting Kitchener and French motored to London, and on the way stopped for an hour at Broome, Kitchener's country seat. French says: "With deep sorrow I recall the fact that this was the last of all the many days of happy personal intercourse which I spent with my old South African chief. As a soldier and a commander in the field I had always loved and venerated him; in his capacity as a politican and Minister my sentiments and feelings towards him were never the same.

"I am willing to admit that our differences—which were great and far-reaching—may have been to some extent my own fault; but, be that as it may, our subsequent relations, down to the time of his tragic death, were always clouded by a certain mistrust of one another.

I do not think Lord Kitchener was always credited by the country with the talent for command in the field which I know he really possessed, whilst, on the other hand, a role for which he was not well fitted was thrust upon him. As Commander-in-Chief in France it would have helped him very much to have had a Secretary of State other than himself to deal with. Indeed, beneath that seemingly hard and stern exterior there existed a mighty well of sensitive feeling and even of romance, which it appeared to be the one endeavour of his life to conceal from the observation even of his most intimate friends."

FAMOUS CONTROVERSY RECALLED.

The death has taken place at Southampton of Mr. Albert Durer Lucas, in his 91st year. Mr. Lucas, who was an artist by profession, was a son of the late Mr. Richard Cockle Lucas, a well-known Hampshire sculptor, who fashioned the famous wax bust which was purchased by Dr. Bode, head of the Kaiser's Museum in Berlin for £8,000 in the belief that it was a genuine work of Leonardo da Vinci. Mr. Albert Lucas was instrumental, after a fierce controversy, in proving that Dr. Bode had made a mistake and that the bust was the work of his father.

QUEEN MARY'S BIRTHDAY.

Flags were flown and bells rung throughout London yesterday in honour of Queen Mary's birthday. There was no special celebration at Buckingham Palace. Her Majesty received messages from various parts of the country, particularly from regiments with which she is specially connected. The warships in Portsmouth harbour were decorated.

DEMOBILISED SOLDIER'S FRAUD.

At Middleton yesterday a demobilised soldier named Fred Nation was fined five pounds for obtaining unemployment pay by false pretences. Evidence showed that Nation received money for distributing election literature while receiving the out-of-work donation. On behalf of the Public Prosecutor it was stated that these frauds are increasing throughout the country.

GENERAL IN DIVORCE COURT.

The wife of General J. G. King-King who served at Gallipoli and Salonika, was granted an order for restitution in the Divorce court yesterday. It was stated that his wife wrote appealing to him to give up the other woman but the General refused to return.

Queen Mary, who is greatly distressed by the news of the murder of Nelly Rault, a member of her Army Auxiliary Corps, has sent a letter to the girl's mother expressing sincere sympathy for her daughter's tragic fate.

Countess Kinnoull, widow of the late Earl, was married to Major John Berington R.M.A., in London yesterday.

WORLD'S BIGGEST AEROPLANE WRECKED.

GOEBEN BOMBER KILLED.

A Tarrant triplane, the biggest aeroplane in the world, built by the Royal Aircraft Factory at Farnborough and equipped with six 500-horse power engines, was wrecked when attempting its first trial flight on Monday morning.

Failing to rise, the triplane ran along the ground for a mile, toppled forward and became a mass of wreckage. The crew were quickly extricated and taken to hospital. One of the pilots, Captain Rawlings, was killed and another, Captain Dunne, is in a very grave condition.

The Tarrant triplane was so designed that if used for passenger traffic it could be arranged to carry one hundred persons.

Captain Rawlings was Managing Director of the Tarrant Aircraft Construction Company, and was the man who bombed the Goeben at Constantinople in 1917.

AEROPLANES IN COLLISION

A fatal flying accident occurred at Aldringham, Suffolk, just before noon on Saturday, two aeroplanes colliding in mid-air. Ex-Lieutenant Max Jacobs, R.A.F., lately demobilised, and at Aldeburgh on a week-end visit, was killed, and three others were seriously injured. Deceased, whose parents live at Blackheath, was married, with one little daughter.

Captain Mann and Captain Boyd, R.A.F., were manoeuvring at Felixstowe in a seaplane, and when passing over the pier failed to clear the structure and crashed into it. One of the officers had his collar-bone broken and was taken to the R.A.F. hospital at Landguard. The other escaped with a few abrasions. The crew of a motor-launch hoisted the damaged seaplane on the pier-deck.

LORD READING'S RETURN.

TRIBUTES AND THANKS.

The Prime Minister, Mr. Lloyd George, has sent Lord Reading a letter thanking him for the conspicuous services rendered when acting as ambassador and Minister Plenipotentiary to the United States. The Premier says: "When the time comes for the history of those most critical years of the war to be written, the leading part which you played in co-ordinating the war efforts of the United States and the other Allies, and, above all, in helping to bring about that dramatic movement of the American Army to Europe in the spring and summer of 1918, which contributed so strikingly to the Allied victory in the later autumn, will be understood in its true perspective."

Mr. Balfour, Foreign Minister, has also written to Lord Reading paying tribute to the masterly manner in which unprecedented problems were solved. He wrote: "The difficulties were great; they were without precedent; they were quite outside ordinary diplomatic routine; they involved most complicated questions of finance, shipping, food supply, troop transportation, and armaments. Though they profoundly affected the fortunes of all the Allies, they had to be dealt with in the main between Great Britain and America, and you provided the most important personal link between the two great Associated Powers."

Lord Reading returned to the Law Courts yesterday and resumed his duties as Lord Chief Justice. He was accorded an enthusiastic welcome by Bench and Bar.

AUSTRIAN PLEACE TREATY.

The Austrian Treaty will be completed on the 27th inst., and will be presented to the Austrian delegation probably on the 28th. The military terms were considered yesterday. It was decided that Austria's army of upwards of 1,000,000 men shall be reduced by the Treaty to 15,000 men, and that practically all military supplies and arms shall be surrendered or destroyed, and further military production abolished. The naval terms are similarly sweeping.—Reuter.

RUSSIAN RELIEF FORCE.

It is officially announced that the second portion of the Russian Relief Force will embark at Tyne Dock, South Shields, on May 27, Newcastle Quay on May 29, and at Tilbury on May 31.

WOMEN FOR THE CIVIL SERVICE.

The Committee on Recruitment for the Civil Service after the war has recommended that the whole service be thrown open to women clerks, who are now employed in only a few departments.

Admission would be by examination similar to that for second grade male clerks, but at a slightly higher age-limit.

CRIMINAL ALL THE TIME.

Constantinople, 21st May. — The Times correspondent telegraphs that the Bolshevist tenure of Odessa is insecure. They are threatened by the Army of Rigoreiff, who was once a Ukrainian, then a Bolshevist and now declares himself to be Hetman of Ukraine.

Having taken Elizabetgrad he is massacring the Jews and closing in on Odessa.—Reuter.

Army Council Instruction 323 states that there will be on obligatory training for officers of the Special Reserve of officers during the year 1919 except for probationary training on first appointment.

UNPOPULAR NURSE 'DUCKED' IN BATH.

INFIRMARY "RAG."

The summonses against five probationary nurses at the Bermondsey Infirmary—Florence Couchman, Mabel Bookman, Hilda Lawrence, Mary Martin, and Esther Piercy—for assaulting Emily Russell another probationary nurse at the same institution, again came before Mr. Gill at Tower Bridge Police court on Saturday.

At the last hearing Miss Russell said the defendants rushed into her bed-room, carried her out of bed into the bath-room, and ducked her in a bath of tepid water. She alleged that Couchman held her down by the head, and Martin lifted up her feet, so that her dressing-gown and nightdress washed back. They left her in the bath, and she had to remove her nightdress and go to her bed-room to get a towel. The defendants, through their solicitor (Mr. Percy Robinson), tendered an apology, but Miss Russell declined to accept it, stating that she had been subjected to insulting and disgusting treatment. The case was adjourned in order that she could consider whether she could adopt a more generous attitude, or, if necessary, instruct a solicitor.

Mr. Goode, who now appeared for Miss Russell, directed his examination to show that the bad feeling which culminated the ducking was caused by Miss Russell having reported another nurse for negligence.

Mr. Percy Robinson said before the case opened he made a full and ample apology, and he had never receded from that position. Ragging took place in public schools, but afterwards there were apologies and shakings of hands instead of blazoning the matter into a newspaper case. The guardians had made full inquiries, and there was nothing further from the truth than the suggestion that patients in this institution had been neglected. There certainly was not the slightest justification for this assault, but Miss Russell was a vindictive woman, and she had exaggerated the incidents. If there were a conviction the defendants would not be eligible for training in a Poor-law institution, and he suggested that they should be dealt with under the Probation Act, although that would not justify Miss Russell's appetite for vengeance.

Mr. Gill said the complainant had been subjected to very great indignity, and there was no reason or excuse forthcoming. He could not deal with the case under the Probation Act, because it was not a trivial assault, and there were no extenuating circumstances. He bore in mind that they had apologised, and that the consequences might be serious, and he would order them each to pay a fine of 40s, and 10s costs.

RUSH FOR MOTORCYCLES.

Incredibly high prices were bid for second-hand motorcycles and sidecars at the Government sale at Islington on Saturday. Half an hour after the doors were opened a queue a quarter of a mile long was awaiting entrance, about 10,000 people trying to get inside the building.

Most of the purchasers were dealers who, although paying at double the rate the machines fetched when new, nevertheless hope to renovate them and make a further thirty to sixty per cent profit.

STROMBOLI ON ACTIVE DIS-SERVICE.

Rome. 22nd May. — The volcano on the island of Stromboli became active this evening. At the same time a tidal wave was experienced. Several people were killed and a large number injured. The eruption continues with great violence.—Reuter.

NO "RABBITS" IN AUSTRALIA.

Mr. Mitchell, the new Premier of Western Australia, in the course of a speech detailing his policy, said that the return of her soldiers was Western Australia's great opportunity to utilize the land productively. Returned soldiers would have the preference in all Government appointments.—Reuter.

WOMAN ADVOCATE REFUSED HEARING.

The first lady-advocate appeared in the Law Courts on Saturday in the person of Miss Dorothy Jewson, Organising Secretary of the National Society of Women Workers. She took a seat beside her client, a woman respondent in a munitions tribunal appeal. Mr. Justice Roche declined to hear Miss Jewson as advocate and Counsel was therefore briefed for the respondent.

A POLITE REBUKE.

A scene of the greatest enthusiasm was witnessed at Rochester yesterday, when a troop train stopped owing to the signal being against it. A large crowd assembled round a carriage labelled "Allenby's Own" and heartily cheered the soldiers. One coach was labelled "four and a half years away and never downed tools yet."

RESUMING FOOD CONTROL.

It is understood that the Government has decided to resume control of all imports of bacon, cheese and margarine. This step is in consequence of soaring prices and the necessity for guarding against the threatened serious shortage.

The amalgamated union of operative bakers is opening a new campaign to secure a minimum wage of seventy shillings for a forty-four hour week.

A POINT AS TO RESPONSIBILITIES.

The Germans are apt to disclaim responsibility for the manner in which the war was conducted on the plea that, having got rid of their autocratic Government and having established a new regime based upon democracy and republicanism, they are ipso facto absolved from any share of liabilities which their late Government may have incurred. Now this argument, although it sounds plausible enough, is somewhat disingenuous.

For in the first place the Germans of 1919 are the very selfsame Germans, who, in 1914-1918 rapturously applauded the sinking of the Lusitania, approved the executions of Nurse Cavell and Captain Fryatt, the deportations of Lille, the martyrdom of Belgium, Serbia and Roumania, and unanimously approved the unrestricted U-boat warfare which was to bring England to its knees. They would to-day have been rejoicing in the success of the great offensive of 1918 if it had come off, and the only "sorrow" they feel is that it failed and that they are the vanquished and not the victors.

Moreover, the weakness of their standpoint as to responsibilities, appropriately enough termed Schuld-Frage, (lit. question of debt or guilt) may be appreciated by a consideration of the following:—

1.—If a junior partner in a firm is left to carry on the business after the senior partner has absconded with the booty he has collared, is the junior partner thereby absolved from the firm's liabilities? Even as long ago as in the time of the Roman republic it was recognised that the honest member of the partnership has to suffer for the sins of his associates, the legal point of view being that he should have been more careful in selecting a partner.

2.—When anything was forcibly taken from the owner he had a remedy in an action entitled Actio ex bonorum raptorum, by means of which he could recover the goods plus three times their value. Indeed, the illegal employment of force was so strongly deprecated that an owner who forcibly recovered his own property from another, forfeited thereby his ownership of the property.

3.—In many civil actions a Roman citizen could recover double the amount of his legal claim, if the defendant unsuccessfully resisted such claim.

4.—A fidejussor, or person who guaranteed the fulfilment of an obligation by another, was not only bound to stand by his guarantee, if the principal defaulted or was unable to fulfil his contract, but even the heirs of the fidejussor were also bound by his undertaking.

5.—The heirs to an estate, whether under a testate or intestate succession, were legally bound to satisfy the creditors of the deceased. They could only escape this liability by declining to accept the inheritance.

6.—In certain circumstances a partner was not allowed to withdraw from the partnership if it were clear that he was attempting to do so in order to avoid having to share with his partners an expected private accession of wealth.

German common law being based upon Roman law, we commend these legal points to those Germans who are open to conviction on strictly legal grounds.

THE OPERA.

"THE BARBER OF SEVILLE."

The course of true love, we are told, on high authority, never did run smooth and when a fatuous old guardian falls in love with his ward, and thwarts the lovers' idyll with his unwelcome wooing, and a cunning scamp of a barber acts as go-between, you have the very stuff of a pretty comedy. Such is the dish that Beaumarchais' amusing play presents and when the dish is seasoned with Rossini's melodious sauce, a delicate feast is provided for the musical gourmet. On Monday night, the audience followed Almaviva's storming of Rosina's heart and Dr. Bartolo's counter-attack with amused interest. Käthe Herwig made an arch Rosina, playing the coquette with girlish grace. In the music lesson with her pseudo-instructor, she showed that she had mastered (or shall we say mistressed?) the technique of singing, her aria being an admirable illustration how to sing. The audience showed its appreciation of her vocal gymnastics by a well deserved encore. Herr Krauss as Almaviva made an attractive lover, and the tipsy cavalier kept the house on the grin. As the fatuous Dr. Bartolo, Herr Mertens infused much effective drollery into his rendering. Herr Höttges' Basilio was an original reading of the part, his saturnine humour proving highly diverting. As the immortal Barber, Herr Renner was admirable, alike as to singing and acting, his factotum song being rendered with spirited vivacity. His shaving of the Doctor was a rare bit of comic acting and his fooling tickled the house considerably. The audience was warmly appreciative throughout.

THE NEW DIPLOMACY FROM OVERSEAS.

CANADA'S BUSINESS AMBASSADORS

(BY SYDNEY ALTON).

We know something in this country about the losses of war; it is some consolation for us to remember that there are at least certain great gains to set beside them. The losses, bitter though they be, are largely at the expense of the individual, the gains or a few of them are national and will be lasting. Generations yet unborn will bear witness to changes-vast in their scope and wholly beneficial in their nature-that were actually born of the past few years, could hardly have come into being without them.

Let us consider our pre-war attitude towards the far flung Dominion bounded on east and west by the world's mightiest oceans, on the south by the world's greatest Republic and on the north by territory virgin, mysterious and partly untrodden. Before 1914 we used to think of Canada rather in terms of territory than of Empire. For many an Englishman the country was a remote potentiality, nothing more, and when those who had been there for a few years returned glowing with a real enthusiasm, he simply could not understand it, nor did he care to try. The story of ever increasing material prosperity grew. It became known that the Dominion gave men the birthright that so many overcrowded, overburdened modern civilizations denied them but nobody knew anything of Canada's spiritual growth, of the depths of her passion for the Motherland. It was left for August 4th, 1914, to reveal this.

Almost before we realized what had happened a young, virile, resourceful country was by our side, sending us in their thousands men destined to become a terror to the enemy, coming forward with food, with munitions, with everything in the compass of her gift of which we stood in need. There might have been some honest doubt in English hearts about the attitude of the daughter nations. We know that Germany counted with confidence upon a great secession overseas. In an instant we learned that in the body, as in the spirit, Canada was with us all the way, no matter where it led.

To-day, under the countless battlefields that assumed grim prominence in the four following years, more than fifty-thousand children of the Dominion and Empire lie at rest, but the work to which they consecrated their brave young lives is fully accomplished. Others there are who now and for many a year to come will be all too well able to "shoulder a crutch and show how fields are won." Blood and suffering, grieve though we may about them, make the sort of cement that defies time, and Europe turns to Canada to-day not only with deep gratitude but with something akin to reverence for those of her children who gave all that life held for them to vindicate the Empire in a quarrel forced upon us all.

So it happens that the Dominion is drawn to the Old Country as never before, and the Motherland responds eagerly, recognising that Canada can claim by the right of her sacrifices an honourable share in the task of reconstruction that is now afoot. Her leaders of men understand very fully and very clearly how the forces of disruption and unrest that issue from beaten foes and are apt to spread like a malignant disease, are best countered by commercial prosperity. There is no better antidote. When people have plenty to do and find a return for their labours there comes a wide and deep content. Only where trade languishes and unemployment is rife do people grow antagonistic to the sanities of existing order and believe that any change must bring improvement. That is why business is the very root of reconstruction.

In the old days it sufficed to send diplomats from country to country. Ambassadors, Ministers, Agents General, their status might vary, but one and all were apt to regard commerce as something a little outside the normal calculations of a gentleman. They relegated it to subordinates. To-day we know better. Canada having earned the right to intervene in the rebuilding of Europe and the re-establishment of industry, Canada having a considerable proportion of the world's wealth in raw material of all kind, and having developed her resources steadily and shrewdly for years past, sends her Ambassadors of Commerce to England. She recognises the paramount claims of commerce just as the greatest statesmen of their time, the Doges of Venice did.

Without her extraordinary business sense, the Bride of the Adriatic would never have won her Empiry or have retained it as long as she did. Happily it is as much to the advantage of Europe as of Canada that the latter should enter upon the scene, not merely to sell what she produces but to purchase what we have to sell in preference to what others may have to offer. Her resources are invaluable. Vast forests can supply no small part of Europe's immediate rebuilding needs, the steel production of Canada has gone up by 125% during the war, a ratio of increase far in excess of that of any steel producing country. Her wheat crop should be a record one this year, her argosies "laden with golden grain" will feed those who were our enemies and now faint for lack of food. Her fisheries, her orchards, her young and thriving factories, one and all are at the service of Europe, and they are freely offered but not in a strictly limited commercial sense. The business that Canada's Ambassadors of Commerce are already doing from the corner where Regent Street emerges from Pall Mall has more than the ordinary significance. It tells of new times, of new methods, of ties-once loose and uncertain—now strong as mutual understanding and respect can make them, of the reality of the Imperial bond in which at one time only a few far-sighted men believed. "Visionaries" like Froude, the historian, they are vindicated to-day long after the time when vindication can hold any meaning for them.

Who among those who realised how England might renew her youth in her Dominions dared hope that the truth would be seen and acknowledged so soon? It seems to me that the Canadian Mission in London, a deliberate outcome of the past years of strife and suffering is one of the manifest gains, one of the signposts to great and beneficial change that will follow from the years of struggle.

The Great Fire of London was disastrous but it led to the rebuilding of the City on sound lines. The Messina earthquake cleared away much that the Sicilians would not have desired to keep in perpetuity. Plague and famine in India have brought about great improvements in sanitary science and in transport. The spirit of good in evil things declares itself sooner or later. Here in this great development that brings Canada and the Motherland into more intimate and friendly association than they have ever been, we find that which hints at a deeper meaning and justification of all the little wooden crosses that in lands far off and near mark the Canadian graves.

The task before Canada's business men is one that cannot be wholly divorced from idealism. There is a side of it that appeals to the imagination. A great part of the Europe that Canadians came to save is reduced to ruin and just as in war they were compelled to aid in destruction, so in peace they are coming forward to repair the ravages. All their resources were brought to Europe in war, all will continue to come hence-forward in another form.

Behind this work stand all the power, the authority and the goodwill of the Dominion voiced by the Ambassadors of Commerce who are working, not only to develop business, but to strengthen the ties that bind the children of Empire to the Motherland and make the Union for all time a force beyond the reach of question or of doubt.

THE NEW ERA.

It has been said that the quintessence of human happiness lies in honest work, and yet, true though that is, it seems to be unrealized by many.

We have heard a lot about "class distinction" for many years now, but what does the expression mean? We might try for a long time to explain it, but would in the end be far from the truth. Really there are only two classes of civilized humanity, namely, those who work and those who do not work. Let us take the workers first.

Why do they work? Is it not in order that they may live? In order that they, by the sweat of their brow, may provide for themselves and their dependants the very necessaries of life. And the non-workers — why don't they work? Because they are able to live on the interest of their wealth — wealth acquired in many cases by the labour of other people, and in many cases, quién sabe? Of this, however, we can be certain, that in very few cases has their wealth been acquired by the personal labours of its present possessors.

To live honourably, by your own labour, is to be at peace with the world. To live on the labour of others is not only to make your life false at home, but it is to encroach on those around you, taking from them the means whereby they could obtain betterment of their own conditions of existence, thereby inviting resistance and hostility; and when such a principle of life is favoured by a whole people, that people will not only be in a state of internal strife, but there will assuredly rise up external enemies without its borders, who will seek its destruction

So long as we foster in our private life the "get-rich-quick" spirit, the spirit of greed and grab, with its attendant miseries of sweating and unscrupulous exploitation, so long will our public life lead to the embitterment of nation against nation. Had the governing class of the nations really wanted peace, instead of desiring merely gain during the last two or three generations, we would have had peace. If the Ministers of the Nations have really striven for peace, then their utter uselessness and futility has been abundantly proved; if they did not earnestly endeavour to promote and encourage peace then their lives have been an hypocrisy and a sham, and their deceit is unpardonable.

Whichever is the true reason, the result remains the same — we have been plunged into a maelstrom of blood and suffering, of wanton destruction of life and property because the creed of the Nations and of the individual has been the aggrandisement of self.

If only we could realize that civilization based upon mutual trust is the only form of existence worth while.

By mutual trust, I mean faith in the honesty of motive of one's fellow men. How different life would be if we were honest with ourselves and with all others. We all appreciate the highest human ideals, and really we would like to be, and do the very best with our lives but we are afraid to start. Afraid that were we to let our actions conform more to our ideals, we would lose in the struggle for existence. Yet if men mutually trusted each other — employer and employed, constituent and politican, tax-payer and statesman, nation and nation, people an people, how much easier and happier life would be.

Employers could not let the men who trusted them toil and starve on a pittance whilst they themselves lived in luxury; employees could not rob their employers by waste of time, or labour, or materials, if they knew their employers were trusting them to work for the mutual good. Equally in all phases of intercourse, industrial, political or international, were all men confident of the goodwill and honesty of motive of each other, the spirit of greed would disappear and mutual trust and respect would take its place

However we reason the thing out, if we only follow the path of truth, we come always to the teaching of Christ. Love, in the fullest sense of the word, is the keynote of life — life approaching the ideal as nearly as is humanly possible. Love means everything that is beautiful in life, and if all men accepted and practised the teaching of Christ there could be no more evil.

There would be praise and rejoicing, pleasure and happiness, comfort and contentment in our hearts; so full would we be of all that is beautiful that no evil thing could enter in.

We would not want to "grab" for ourselves, as with hearts full of love, our greatest desire would be for the good of others.

We would not want to keep for ourselves that which we already possess did we know that there was but one needy person in the world with whom we could share. We could not live in idle pleasure and luxury while there was one little child whose life was saddened by want — of care or comfort, and the joy of giving would brighten our lives and strengthen our love.

We have tried other methods of life for thousands of years, all based on material power and we have succeeded in achieving the most appalling cataclysm of history.

When we realise the futility of force as an instrument of progress, and try to follow the teaching of Christ, individually and collectively, then only will we make possible the attainment of the Kingdom of God.

Love is the secret of life. The more we love in thought and deed, the more we are loved of others. The cycle is complete and constant, growing always in intensity as it passes through the generating stations of our hearts, until, when our work is done, we are absorbed into the perfect love of God, unchanging and enternal.

"PRONGS" SUCCESSFUL WEEK.

CROWDED HOUSES AT THE STADT THEATRE BONN.

The tropical weather experienced last week was not the kind to encourage theatre-going, and the Stadt Theatre, Bonn, does not exactly stand in a prominent position in that town, but nevertheless the place was crowded every evening last week, which is ample testimony to the excellence of the show provided by the "Prongs" Concert Party (92nd Bde, R.G.A.) Their show is clean, elevating, and amusing throughout

Edward Bailey joined the "Prongs" direct from the Brussels Opera House, where for several months he played with the now famous "Bundooks" Company. His rendering of Punchenello's passionate song from Pagliacci proves him to be what he undoubtedly is, an artist to his finger tips.

Good, clean, up-to-the-minute humour is provided by those two celebrated comedians, Jimmy Robinson and Bert Rudd. The drolleries and absurdities of the former are guaranteed to keep an audience of Scotchmen in an uproar of laughter, while the latter as "Old Bill" is also, a source of much merriment.

The original idea of organising the "Prongs" was with the object of entertaining troops in their own particular locality, but owing to the tremendous receptions they have received wherever they have played, it has been decided that they will remain a concert party at the disposal of the Rhine Army. Further talent is being absorbed into the party, which for the next three weeks will be resting for the purposes of rehearsing and redressing.

AT THREE DAYS' NOTICE.

SMART PRODUCTION OF 53rd. BEDFORDS HORSE SHOW.

Thanks to the efforts of the Transport Officer, 2 Lieut. Cecil Beeke, who produced at three days notice, a show ground, racing track, and hurdles and fences, out of an empty field, the 53rd. Bedfords Battalion Horse Show on Saturday was voted a great success by all present. There were a large number of spectators including Brigadier General Jackson, D.S.O., who also entered for the jumping competition on his own horse.

In the first three events, which were limber and animal exhibits, the competitors displayed an exceedingly smart turnout, and in the Brigade Horse Show which is shortly due, the 53rd. hold high hopes.

The Jumping Competition was open to all, and the first prize was carried off by Major Blackburn of the Artillery, whose horse cleared all the jumps like a trained steeplechaser.

The first prize for limber driving was awarded to Pte. McGill who displayed great skill in driving through blocks with only a 6 inch margin on each side, at a good trot.

The scream of the afternoon was the V.C. race. The course was over 200 yards, barebacked on mule, no spurs, over one jump. At the end of the course the riders had to pick up a dummy and ride back with it. The mules would persist in going right round the crowds or walking down the course. The riders had only one hand to deal with their mules, and the winner of the race nearly lost because his mule would not go an inch farther than a spot about 2 yards in front of the winning post. It did eventually after a short rest, and then it moved with a very independent air.

There were seven events altogether and 2 Lieut. Becke won three prizes. The band provided music throughout the afternoon, and there was a canteen on the course. Many thanks are due to Lieut. Gudgeon and Major Shearman for their thoughtfulness in providing the canteen.

BILLIARD MATCH IN COLOGNE.

The R.A.S.C. Bakers, Kalk, have at last met their equals or rather their superiors in billiard prowess. The "dough boys" effectively "dusted" the "Emma Tocs", R.A.S.C. as well as the 8th Motor Ambulance Convoy, Bonn, but on Monday evening their flag was lowered by No 1. Sergeants' Mess, G.H.Q., Rhine Army. The details of the match were as follows:—

No. 1 SERGTS. MESS. G.H.Q. RHINE ARMY. Team.	Score.	R. A. S. C. BAKERIES. KALK. Team.	Score.
S.M. Hancock. R.A.S.C.	90	Pte. Askew	100

Match won by 45 points.

COLOGNE CYCLE RACES.

Two cycle races will be contested at the Cologne cycle racing court, Riehler Strasse tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock. The first will be of 10 Kilometres, and the second of 25 Kilometres.

An American house detective, who experienced difficulty in mounting heights, has discovered, according to an American dispatch, that he has two hearts.

An attempt was made on Monday night to bomb the American Legation at San José, Costa Rica. The explosion caused only slight damage, and nobody was injured.

ALLIES' TEAM JUMPING.

FINE DISPLAY BY FRENCH HORSEMEN AT WIESBADEN.

FROM A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.

The programme for Saturday of the 10th (French) Corps Allied Army Horse Show at Wiesbaden consisted of four and five-horse turn-outs and jumping. Of the four-horse turn-outs there was nothing to touch that of the 10th Royal Hussars which consisted of four heavy draft bays. The complete turnout, it is understood, had seen four and a half years war.

The second prize was taken by the 2/1 North Midland Heavy Battery with four lovely strawberry roans whose greatest asset was the extremely able manner in which the horses worked together.

The third prize was given to the R.A.S.C. with four grey light draught horses. It is a pity that the horses were not better trained as if this team had worked well together there is no doubt that they would have been awarded the second place. The five-horse turn-outs were all French, the only outstanding feature being the extraordinary way in which the drivers handled their teams.

The afternoon commenced with team jumping for French officers. The jumps were not big, being small brush hurdles, but the team work was excellent.

The next event was a team jumping display by French N.C.O's. The teams consisted of 16 N.C.O's. The work was of very high quality indeed. To see 16 horses all take off at precisely the same moment and land together was a sight not to be forgotten.

AN OBSTACLE RACE.

The event of the afternoon, however, was the obstacle race for military horse champions on a course of about 1,500 metres and about 15 jumps including pole, gate, wall hedge, and box jumps. To a horse lover the great source of interest of this competition were the different styles of riding.

The Italians went over the course very fast, leant well forward at the take off, and sank back into the saddle as the horse landed.

The Belgians leant forward and remained forward during the whole of the jump.

The French riders, with one or two notable exceptions, appeared not quite to grasp the art of steadying their horse and then giving it its head and letting it go at the jump. On the whole their horses seemed to take off too late.

The outstanding English rider of the afternoon was Major Bale of the R.F.A. who rode a particularly nice jumping chestnut. It is a matter for the greatest regret that there were not more English competitors, for there is no doubt that many horses which have run at divisional races could have put up creditable performances.

"IN BATTLE ORDER."

SERGEANTS, 52ND DURHAM L. I. versus SERGEANTS, 51ST DURHAM L. I.

In response to a challenge issued by the Sergeants of the 52nd Battalion, D.L.I., the 51st D.L.I. Sergeants presented themselves on the Reihl Barracks Parade Ground, on Sunday afternoon, in "battle Order." The 52nd batted first, and in spite of some good bowling by Sergts. Foster and Rawnsley, compiled the useful total of 109, 76 of these were knocked up by Sergts. Chambers 28 not out, Simpson 20, Reynolds 17, and Col. Sgt. Prince 13.

Surprises galore followed when the 51st went in, 37 being all they could muster against the deadly bowling of Sgt. Prince, who accounted for seven wickets for 13.

Tea was provided by the challenging team, after which the 51st batted again, this time with greater success, the opposing bowling being treated with contempt by Sergt. Barnes with 44. Sergt. Edlington 26, and Sergt. Foster 24, the last mentioned's score consisting of six rapid fours. In spite of some fine bowling by Bates, who accounted for five wickets for 20 runs, the 51st easily passed their opponents' total, amassing 141.

This left the 52nd Battalion very little more than 45 minutes in which to score 70 to enable them to win, but surprises continued to come, and their last wicket fell three minutes from time with their total at 40, leaving the 51st victorious, after a very exciting finish, by 29 runs. Col. Sgt. Prince was the only batsman who made any impression on the bowling of Sgts. Foster and Rownsley, who respectively averaged 5 for 5, and 5 for 14.

EPSOM'S GREAT JUNE 4th CLASSIC.

DERBY POINTERS.

BY "JERRY M."

After Lord Basil's poor display in the Newmarket Stakes his chance for the "Blue Riband" seems hopeless. He is evidently one of those horses who fail to reproduce their home form when on a race course, for I know, he was considered superior to "Buchan" by his connections. Whatever his fortune in the great classic I am forced to discard him now.

The Odds offered against "The Panther" are much too short, for the risks in a Derby. Much depends on the position when rounding the famous Tattenham Corner, a good position at this stage in the race being considered equal to 3 or 4 lengths.

In these circumstances I much prefer supporting All Alone (each way) at 100 to 6, than accepting 11 to 10 about the favourite. His trainer, I am assured, has great hopes of his winning and is confident of his finishing in the first three. He won his last two races very easily and has been giving great satisfaction in his home gallops. He conceded weight all round when winning at Catwick on Friday last.

There is still a lot of money for "Grand Parade" who has been steadily supported for the last fortnight from 100 to 6 to half those odds. The easy win of his stable companion "Sir Douglas" in the three-year old handicap draws attention to Stefan the Great, but I am convinced that the latter lacks the necessary stamina.

I am content to rely on "All Alone" each way with perhaps a "saver" on "Grand Parade".

THE OAKS.

I dismiss this with the remark that there appears no danger to "Rosevy".

THE MANCHESTER CUP—(JUNE 12).

The weights for the above are interesting. As anticipated "By Jingo" heads the handicap with 9st. Those that strike me as having been nicely handicapped are "Galloper Light" (3 years), 7st, 8lbs; "All Alone" (3 years) 6st, 6lbs.

There is no doubt that "Galloper Light" would have been a strong order, had not the death of his owner rendered void his entry in the Derby. That he will figure prominently in some of the big Handicaps is certain.

Derby Favourite's Pedigree

CHIRPING CANARIES.

The Canaries, another branch of the original 185 S.B. football team played the R.A.S.C., M.T., at Weidesheim on Thursday. The game was rather scrappy, but after a time "Duck" got through for the Battery, half-time arriving with Battery 1, R.A.S.C. 0.

The second half was more evenly contested and "Ducky" again found the net with his head from a corner kick. Soon after this the R.A.S.C. broke away and scored through the centre-forward.

The Battery was best served by their dashing outside right and "Ducky" at outside left while Parr at left back also gave a notable display.

Result:—

185 Siege Battery 2; R.A.S.C. 1.

SPORTING ITEMS IN BRIEF.

Georges Papin.

Georges Papin, the legitimate lightweight champion of France, is willing to box anyone in his own division in England.

The Panther's Stable Attendant.

The same stable lad that "did" Pommern when Mr. Sol. Joel's colt won the Derby is now The Panther's stable attendant.

Milton And The Derby.

The statement that Milton will not run in the Derby is incorrect, as, providing all goes well with him, he takes his chance in the Epsom event.

Tottenham Hotspurs.

Most of the old Hotspur players have already been signed on, and it is hoped shortly to announce the signing on of several well-known footballers.

Stewards at Epsom.

The Jockey Club have appointed Lord Lonsdale, Lord Hamilton of Dalzell, and Sir John Thursby to act as Stewards at the Epsom Derby meeting next month.

Polytechnic Harriers.

A. G. Hill retained the half-mile club championship at the Polytechnic Harriers' first evening meeting of the season, winning easily from a poor field by 20yds. in 2min. 2⅗sec.

Mr. A. W. Cox's Horses.

An interesting notice in the "Racing Calendar" is the fact that a half share partnership in the whole of the late Mr. "Fairie" Cox's horses has been registered between Mr. A. R. Cox and Mr. W. E. Moore.

A "Gowf" Tragedy.

From an "Agony" columm in the "Times":—"Would the person in the green Tyrolese hat note that, though it may be a custom on his own course to pocket golf balls on the fairway, it is not done elsewhere?"

Barracking at Trent Bridge.

A number of spectators indulged in some ironical cheering at the expense of C. J. B. Wood, the Leicestershire amateur at Trent Bridge last week. Wood scored 50 runs in a hour, and then, because he slowed down a trifle afterwards, the barracking began.

Willard And Dempsey.

Willard and Dempsey will be in the ring at 3 p.m. on July 4, and will box twelve rounds to a decision, as allowed by the boxing law of Ohio. The referee will be named later; the timekeeper will be Joseph Nolan, Sporting Editor of the "Cincinnatti Enquirer."

FINE BOXING DISPLAYS AT BILLIG.

Some fine exhibitions of Boxing were witnessed at the Club-rooms Billig last week. The first bout between Pte Johnson Cpl. Jones ended other abruptly, the former having to retire with an injured wrist. C.S.M. Haygreaves of the R.F.A. won on points in an interesting 8 rounds encounter with L.-Cpl. Smith. In a ten rounds fight Pte Stevens knocked out Sergt. Thomson in the fifth round.

The most interesting fight of the evening was between Cpl.-R. Smithson of the R.H.A. (winner of some contests) and Cpl. J. Hilton of the Yorkshire Regt. (a promising newcomer to the ring). The fight was down to go 15 rounds, in the first of which Smithson used his left to great advantage, and administered some heavy blows to Hilton's chest. The first six rounds were all in favour of Smithson, who rushed in right and left, fighting with great skill and celerity. In the seventh round Hilton assumed the offensive and hit hard on his opponents body and face. Smithson fought, well, but his strenous efforts in the previous round began to tell on him. In the eigth Hilton put his man down for a count of 8, and in the ninth round knocked his opponent out.

The fight was cleanly contested, and Smithson has challenged Hilton to a return engagement, but as yet no return fight has been arranged.

29th BATTALION M.G.C. v. 1/5 DEVONS.

This match played on Monday on the Machine Gunners ground at Dabringhausen resulted in a win for the home team by 3 goals to nil. Exciting play resulted in Armstrong's opening the score for the Machine Gunners after 20 minutes play. Shortly afterwards, Lieut. Curran added another goal to the Machine Gunners score. In spite of the brilliant game played by the Devon "Goalie," a well-centred corner shot gave Armstrong the opportunity for some really clever head work, resulting in his scoring again for the Machine Gunners. On resuming the Devons made repeated efforts to score, but the Machine Gunners defence was sound, especially Charman's play at right back. In the last few minutes, both sides strove to score, without success.

The game throughout was keen, sporting and interesting.

B.E.L.C. OUTDOOR TRIPS.

The women Guides at the British Empire Leave Club have been kept very busy since the Club opened on May 12th. They have conducted parties round the Cathedral, Rathaus, Picture Gallery and Museums and the trips have been very popular.

Day trips to the country on Motor Chars-a-banc, and Steamer Trips on the Rhine have proved a great success. The Controller, Guides wishes it made known that all the trips are open to non-residents at the Club, as there may be many men working in Cologne who would like to avail themselves of the opportunity of going to the Country, or down the Rhine.

A plan of the trips will be found at the British Empire Leave Club, where men should give in their names. All trips are free, but non-residents must bring their rations with them.

145 S.B. v. ESSEX HEAVY BATTERY.

The match was played on the ground of the 1/1st Essex H.B. at Cuchenheim on Wednesday. In the first half 145 pressed continually but due to the excellent goalkeeping of the Essex "goalie," were only able to score twice through Colley and Capt. Robson.

The second half proceeded on much the same lines as the first, but notwithstanding the great efforts of the Essex "goalie" 145 added four more goals through Capt. Robson (2) and Lemans (2). The Essex scored one goal through Harcombe putting the ball into his own goal.

Result:— 145 S.B. 6; 1/1st Essex H.B. 1.

COLOGNE RACES AT GRUNEWALD NEAR BERLIN.

Stop and Think!

TWENTY, thirty, or forty years on the road of life—it is time for you to stop and think seriously as to what your position may be ten or fifteen years hence.

TO DAY, in the height and strength of your manhood—you may be doing well—happy in your life—strong and eager in your work. But who can tell how long your good fortune may last, or when your carefully considered investments may go wrong—as investments do—or when your wife and family may be left to face the world without your aid?

What Then?

WHY not start now to make certain provision for your retirement, for your wife, family or dependents by means of Endowment Assurance?—an investment providing benefits which no other form of investment or saving can offer. Say you are now 40 (you can start at any age) you may effect a profit-participating policy for £1,000, or any sum you choose, to be payable to you ten or fifteen years hence, together with substantial profits. During this time should you unfortunately die the full amount of £1,000, plus profits due at the time, would be paid to your wife, family, or dependents without any deduction or future liabilities. And you have the security of the "British Dominions" the All-British Insurance Company, whose funds exceed £16,000,000, invested mainly in British Government securities.

This is a proposition every man and woman should seriously consider. It is a duty you owe to yourself and your dear ones, and it is well to remember that the earlier you take up a policy the lower are the premiums.

Send a postcard to-day and obtain particulars of this advantageous form of investment.

PARCELS FOR CIVILIANS.

In a recent issue we made the announcement that uninsured parcels containing articles, such as foodstuffs, clothes, boots etc., for the personal use of the addressee, but not parcels sent for commercial purposes, can now be accepted for civilians in all parts of Germany in Allied occupation at the following rates of postage: For a parcel not exceeding 3 lb, 1s 4d; over 3 lb and not over 7 lb, 1s, 8d; over 7 lb and not over 11 lb, 2s.

The above announcement does not, of course, affect the regulations already in existence re parcels for the troops from home, which may be sent out as usual.

A GOOD RECORD.

53rd N.F.'s WAR SAVINGS.

During the period 8th to 16th May 1919, War savings amounting to 32,949 Marks were subscribed in the 53rd Northumberland Fusiliers, "A" Company on one day subscribing 11,568 Marks. The men in the various companies are quite keen on War Savings and "A" and "D" are running each other very close at present.

LECTURES ON ARCHITECTURE.

Lectures as under will be given at the Army General and Commercial College, Cologne, by Mr. G. A. T. Middleton (past Vice President of the Society of Architects):—

6 p.m. Friday, May 30th. "Westminster Abbey."
6 p.m. Tuesday, June 3rd. "Some Buildings that have suffered in the War."
6 p.m. Friday, June 6th. "Great Buildings of Egypt, Greece, and Rome."

AN "OLD SCOUTS'" CLUB.

In the Rhine Army, there must be many young soldiers who have been connected with the Boy Scout Movement, either as scouts, patrol-leaders or scoutmasters.

It has been suggested that an "old scouts' club" should be formed, and to this end a meeting will be held in the Y.M.C.A. at Lindenthal (VI. Corps Soldiers' Club — take cars 1 or 2 from the Cathedral and get off at the park) on Friday evening next, May 30th, commencing at 6 p.m. All old scouts, and those interested in the movement are earnestly invited. Those unable to attend the meeting but who wish to join, are asked to communicate with Mr. R. H. Percival, Y.M.C.A. Headquarters, Rhine Army.

It is hoped that as many as possible will respond to this appeal, and that some happy and profitable gatherings during the next few months will be the outcome.

A SUCCESSFUL INNOVATION.

Last Sunday afternoon, the first of a series of afternoon teas was held in the Y.M.C.A. grounds at Lindenthal (VI Corps Soldiers' Club.)

Eighty invitations (which will be extended to different units every week) had been sent out, and at 5 p.m. the assembled company sat down to an appetising repast which consisted of stewed fruit and biscuits, and some delicious tea different from the usual "Y.M." stuff inasmuch as it contained a double portion of sugar.

Small tables, daintily arranged with paper tablecloths, real cups and saucers, tastefully decorated grounds, and the orchestra of the 52nd Northumberland Fusiliers which delighted all with its tuneful airs these contributed materially to the success of the gathering.

A short fifteen-minute service at which attendance was optional, brought the proceedings to a close. Rev. A. Jarvis (the leader of the club) and Mrs. Jarvis, are to be congratulated on this successful innovation, which was due in no small measure to their ceaseless and untiring efforts.

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

PRUSSIAN MILITARISM STILL EXISTS.

Dr. Richard Grelling, at one time a prominent and influential member of German society, and author of J'accuse — a book written in Switzerland and denouncing in plain terms the policy of the German Government during the war — was interviewed recently by a representative of Le Journal, the Paris "daily."

During the interview, Grelling was asked whether Prussian militarism had been crushed or not, to which he replied in the negative. At the present time, he said, there is springing up within our country a kind of omnipotent oligarchy, much more powerful than the Ebert-Scheidemann government, and maintained by the assistance of the military caste and an army of hirelings.

This army is well-disciplined, well-fed, and well-paid, he further remarked. The officers receive a fantastic salary and completely govern the troops.

Grelling then referred to the weak attitude of the government—too weak to resist the demands made by those generals who, because they cannot rid themselves of the civilian leaders, merely tolerate their presence.

"Affairs in Germany are turning out to be most serious. The military party may issue its dictum at any moment and though it cannot be said that this party intends to restore the monarchy immediately, one cannot with ease think of the probable forthcoming. Every true republican trembles as to the future of Germany."

"And what do you think is the attitude your Government will finally adopt with regard to the terms?" the interviewer asked.

"Assuming that the Allies will make some advances, our government will sign," he replied.

"I hope that later on, when one or the other of the terms will have proved to be impracticable, and when the Germans have shown repentance by ridding their country of those responsible for the greatest crime history has ever recorded, the Allies will consent to certain mitigations and thus pave the way to a really new and pacifist Germany."

GERMANY'S COUNTER PEACE PROPOSALS.

LET US START AFRESH.

KABUL AND MOSCOW CONSPIRACY.

BOLSHEVIST THREAT TO CAPITALISTS.

GERMANY'S COUNTER PROPOSALS.

THE STATUS QUO ANTE!

The Counter Proposals of the German Government form a booklet of sixtyeight pages, which has been issued broadcast in Germany before being presented to the Peace Commission by Count Brockdorff-Rantzau.

The proposals are colossally German!

This document opens with a preamble reminding the Allies of the fourteen points and of Secretary Lansings' note of the 5th Nov. 1918, immediately preceding the Armistice.

Germany asks for immediate admission to the League of Nations.

She declares her willingness to disarm at once, on condition that the Allies disarm after three years.

She is willing to surrender the entire navy instead of the proportion laid down by the Allies.

She objects to losing any provinces without consent of their population, and demands a plebiscite in Alsace and Lorraine.

She demands evacuation of Occupied Territory within six months and is willing to give guarantees and securities in lieu.

She demands return of her Colonies.

She protests against the extradition of the ex-Kaiser and to his trial by a non-German tribunal, suggesting that two German and two Allies and a president elected by them shall constitute the tribunal.

As regards the economic clauses Germany wants absolute equality of rights and the application to herself and her subjects of the most-favoured-nat on clause.

She demands the right for Germans to establish themselves anywhere, without let or hindrance.

She wants all her patent rights restored to her and continued for five years.

She is willing to deliver 30 million tons of Benzol and chemicals and medicines as stipulated, also 20 million tons of coal annually.

She is not willing to surrender her tonnage but is willing to pool it in a Commercial World-Association.

She wil undertake to build 100,000 tons in the first year, 200,000 tons in the second and 300,000 in the third.

She refuses to build the railways and canals stipulated by the Entente.

In short, she is willing to forget all about the war!

GERMAN DELEGATES ON LEAVE.

It is expected that the greater proportion of the German delegation will leave Versailles and return to Germany for about ten days, during which the Allies will consider the counter proposals.

PETROGRAD BOLSHEVIST THREATS.

CHINESE LOOTERS.

Stockholm 20th May.— A Viborg telegram says that a heavy bombardment has been heard during the last few days in the direction of Kronstadt and Petrograd from the sea. Refugees from Petrograd state that the Bolshevist leaders are panic stricken and many have already absconded with State funds. The city is controlled by Chinese, Letts and Finnish Red Guards. Heavy street fighting occurred quite recently and workmen barricaded their quarters in order to prevent pillaging by the Chinese.

Bolshevists have posted placards throughout the city threatening to execute all capitalists if they are compelled to leave the city.—Reuter.

FOOD RELIEF FOR PETROGRAD.

Reuter understands that every arrangement has been made by the Allies to revictual Petrograd after the expulsion of the Bolshevists. Details are in the hands of Mr. Hoover, and it is hoped that relief will be in the city within thirty six hours of the withdrawal of the Bolshevists.

NEW GOVERNMENTS RECOGNISED.

The Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs states that the Government has definitely recognised the Governments of Czecho Slovakia, Poland and Finland.

Provisional recognition has also been granted to the Esthonian National Council and Lettish National Council as de facto independent bodies.

STOLEN ARMY PAY ORDERS.

AN ARREST.

Cecil Hall, a demobilised soldier, was arrested at Tooting yesterday and charged with stealing Army Pay Orders to the value of nearly ten thousand pounds from the Army Pay Hut at Dover.

AFGHAN AMIR'S PERSONAL DUPLICITY.

TEXT OF LYING LETTER.

The official account of the facts concerning the tissue of lies concocted by the Afghan Commander-in-Chief was issued by the India Office on Tuesday. It runs as follows:

"With reference to the statement that has appeared in the Press to the effect that the Afghan Commander-in-Chief appealed for a cessation of hostilities, the facts are as follows: In telegraphing on May 15 to the Secretary of State on the military position, the Government of India incidentally mentioned the receipt of such an application, but without appearing to attach much importance to it. The Secretary of State at once telegraphed for further particulars, and asked whether the request could not be made the basis of negotiation. In reply the Government of India telegraphed on May 18 the full text of the Commander-in-Chief's message, which was addressed to the Political Agent, Khyber, and ran as follows:

'Sir—As regards the outbreak of war between Afghanistan and Britain. I have the honour to inform you that British officers commenced an unlawful war without any declaration of war on any side, and by this aggressive step inflicted heavy losses on the civil population and army of Afghanistan by throwing bombs from aeroplanes. I am informed by his Majesty—the King of the independent kingdom of Afghanistan—that his Majesty has received a letter from his Excellency the Viceroy, and in consequence of that I am ordered to suspend war—thus unlawfully begun by your side—until further orders. You are accordingly informed that war has been suspended until a final decision has been reached by correspondence between his Afghan Majesty and his Excellency the Viceroy.'

"The Government of India added that this insolent message was obviously devised to gain time—an explanation to which the Afghans themselves gave currency among the frontier tribes—and that they had instructed the Political Agent, Khyber, to reply that he was not authorised to answer the message, and that if the Amir wished for peace he should address the Viceroy through the officer in command of the British forces. To this invitation the Amir so far has made no response, and offensive preparations continue to be made by the Afghans along the whole frontier.

"It need hardly be said that the allegations made in the message as to aggressive action by British officers were entirely without foundation.

"The Amir's reply to the Viceroy's letter protesting against the Afghan proceedings has now been received. It is defiant in tone, and leaves no doubt as to Amanullah's personal complicity."

AFGHANISTAN AND RUSSIAN AIMS.

DETERIORATING MORAL.

Last night the India Office issued the following further information from the Government of India up to May 26:

On May 22 air reconnaissance reported no movements of importance east of Jelallabad. Afghan troops on the Dakka front were reported to be having difficulty with their rations supply, and local Lashkars to be disinclined to concentrate for the same reason. Attempt to get the local tribesmen to attack Dakka are reported to have failed owing to the difficulties of supply.

Amanullah is said to have visited Jelallabad but to have returned to Kabul.

The tribal gathering in Gandao, in the Mohmand country, is said to be increasing. General Nadir Khan is reported as still vacillating in Khost. Our propaganda is believed to be having a good effect in Ningrahar, and the moral of the Afghan troops is said to be deteriorating. Tribesmen generally are still holding aloof.

ONE SENSIBLE CLAN.

May 25.—The Zakka Khel Maliks have brought in, without ransom, two airmen, Lieutenants Hoare and Barker, who were forced to descend in the Bazar Valley, i. e., tribal territory.

From Jelallabad it is reported that great confusion was caused there by the air raid of May 21. Several Government buildings were set on fire, and the town is reported as practically deserted. On May 23 the general position was unchanged, and all the frontier districts were reported quiet. Great activity as regards military preparations was reported in Kandahar on May 21.

A BOLSHEVIST DREAM.

The India Office also says that the following message has been despatched by Russian wireless, apparently from Kushk: "Pursuant to telegram from Moscow, No. 1,473, according to official advice from Kabul, the new Government of Afghanistan is endeavouring to rally mountain tribes of frontier with a view to securing an exit to sea and to gain possession of port of Karachi."

DEATH OF A BRIGADIER.

Brig.-General Lovett C.B., commanding the Yorkshire Coast Defences, and formerly in command of the 1st Gloucesters, died at Scarborough yesterday.

INQUEST ON MURDERED W.A.A.C.

MILITARY EVIDENCE.

The coroner's inquiry into the circumstances of the death of Miss Nellie Florence Ruby Rault Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, who was found murdered in Wilstead Woods, near Haynes Park Camp, Bedford, on the 12th inst., was resumed in the recreation-room at the camp, which is a signaling depôt of the Royal Engineers. The deceased girl was stationed at Haynes Park, and left camp in the afternoon of the 9th inst., stating she was going on the river at Bedford with "the sergeant-major." Nothing further was seen of her until her body was found in the wood three days later bearing knife wounds in the chest. Sergeant-major M. O. K. Hepburn, R.E., who has been remanded at the local police-court on a charge of murder, was again present in court.

Dr. William L. Garner, who gave evidence last week concerning the injuries sustained by Miss Rault, was recalled and further questioned. He said that the abrasions on Miss Rault's forehead and upper right eyelid could have been caused by a fall on hard turf, and the scratches on her face might have been caused by her falling on some brambles. If she had been in a kneeling position when the wounds in the chest were inflicted, he would have expected to find her falling with her legs under her. It was possible she might have survived a minute or two after the wounds had been inflicted. There would not necessarily be any spurting of blood from the wounds, and the wounds could have been inflicted without the assailant getting blood on his clothes. As to the bruise on the girl's right wrist, it could have been caused by being gripped.

The inquiries made in the camp when Miss Rault was reported missing were then spoken of by several witnesses.

SERGEANT-MAJOR'S SCRUPLES.

Regimental Sergeant-Major Charles Mepham said about eleven o'clock on Sunday morning, May 11, Miss Hickson, the W.A.A.C. Administrator, spoke to him about a sergeant-major, whom she described as a little dark man wearing black leggings. Witness failed to recognise anyone of that description at the time, but in the evening when in the sergeant's mess, he heard Hepburn's name mentioned, and he came to the conclusion that Hepburn was the man mentioned by Miss Hickson. Witness did not see him or ask him whether he was the man. Later he met Miss Hickson on the way home, and told her the only man he could find answering her description was Sergeant-Major Hepburn. Witness further pointed out that he told Miss Hickson that Hepburn was a most unlikely man to make an appointment with a girl, as he had never seen him with a girl, and he did not think he went to dances. In fact he said he did not believe Hepburn knew the girl. He could not have told Miss Hickson that Hepburn had said he did not know the girl, as he had not seen Hickson.

The Coroner: Do you go to dances? — No, sir. I do not believe in married men going to dances.

Continuing, witness said he could not remember how Hepburn's name came to be mentioned in the sergeant's mess. He could not think of another sergeant-major in the camp who wore black leggings. Hepburn was not often in the mess. He was a teetotaler, and usually went to the Y.M.C.A. He had seen Hepburn wearing black leggings.

Sergeant-major Currie, R.E., who occupied the same hut at the camp as Hepburn, said on May 9 he went to bed about nine o'clock. Hepburn was not in then, but later, when he awoke, Hepburn was there and the lights were out. He could not remember whether Hepburn's nose was bleeding.

PUTTEES OR LEGGINGS.

Sapper Alfred James Love, R.E., who was recently employed in the demobilization hut at the camp, spoke to Hepburn leaving the hut for five minutes soon after three o'clock in the afternoon of May 9. At five o'clock Hepburn left for tea, and witness did not recollect him coming back. Hepburn was wearing puttees that day.

The Coroner: Did you notice that particularly?—Yes. He very seldom wore puttees. He used to wear black leggings.

Lieut. Colonel Phillips, commanding the Signal Depôt, described the efforts made to trace Miss Rault after she was reported missing.

STATEMENT OF ACCUSED.

Superintendent Underwood, Bedford Constabulary, produced the following statement made by Hepburn:

"On the evening of May 9 I attended a dance at Haynes Park Camp, where my partner for the most part of the evening was the deceased. During the evening she said there was a lorry leaving the camp next day between 3.30 and 5.30, and mentioned that she intended to accompany the same, and asked me to go too. I promised to do so. Between 3.30 and four the next day I left the demobilization hut for my quarters, and on the way up passed the deceased, whom I informed I would catch up while proceeding on the lorry, which had not then arrived. She agreed, saying she would walk. At five the lorry left me, and I kept a sharp lookout all the way to Bedford, expecting to see the deceased. As I did not see her I went on the river at Bedford alone, hoping that I might meet her at the boathouse on the way. I returned by cycle and lorry to Haynes Park at 9.30, and as I did not see her on my return I concluded she had remained at Bedford or on the way with some friends. Afterwards, when nothing further was heard, I concluded she had taken French leave, as she had done before, I was informed."

Hepburn further said he hired a bicycle in Bedford, but had a puncture at Elstow and a lorry picked him up. He added:

"I left the demobilization hut about 3.30. When I got on the road I saw the deceased passing towards the wood. I spoke to her, and told her to walk on and I would pick her up in the lorry. I then went to my quarters and had a wash. From there I went to the sergeants' mess and had tea. I left the camp about five minutes to five."

Witness asked Hepburn about the scratch on his nose, and Hepburn replied, "I did that when washing myself. If you suspect me you are wasting time, as I know nothing about it." He denied having a jack-knife, but produced a pocket-knife. Upon Hepburn's kit bag being searched a white handkerchief with slight blood stains upon it was found. Hepburn explained that his nose had been bleeding. On the top of his blanket was a newly-washed undervest, on which was discovered a spot of blood in the centre of the back. Hepburn said it must have come from his nose as he had used the vest as a sort of pillow.

Superintendent Purser said when charged, Hepburn replied:

"I quite realize my unfortunate position and your justification for my arrest, but I am innocent, and shall be able to prove it. If they say I was wearing black leggings it is a mistake. I was wearing puttees. The black leggings I left in London about a week previous when I was on leave."

The inquiry was again adjourned.

ATLANTIC LINER SCRAPES AN ICEBERG.

MIRACULOUS ESCAPE.

St.John's, 25th May.—The S. S. Cassandra has just arrived with a hole in her hull. She has had a miraculous escape, having evidently shaved the side of an upstanding iceberg. The hull is only slightly damaged.

Ordinarily icebergs have underwater projections and the impact of a ship would be extremely liable to bring the whole mass down upon the vessel, sending her to the bottom with everyone aboard.—Reuter.

FRENCH AND THE SHELL SHORTAGE.

"THE END OF MY CAREER."

In the Daily Telegraph Field Marshal Lord French devotes the concluding chapter of "1914" to the shell shortage. He says:

"From the beginning of the Battle of the Aisne up to the close of the Battle of Loos, at the end of 1915, the scanty supply of munitions of war paralysed all our power of initiative and, at critical times, menaced our defence with irretrievable disaster. Great anxiety on this subject overshadowed all my direction of military operations, and deep concern at the failure of the Government to appreciate and remedy our difficulties from this cause dominated all my work. In this chapter it is my object to make known some of the efforts I made to awaken both the Government and the public from that apathy which meant certain defeat. I exhausted every effort, by urgent official demands to the War Office and personal appeals to Lord Kitchener and such Cabinet Ministers as I came in contact with. When these efforts got no response, I gave interviews to the Press and authorised public men who visited me to urge this vital necessity on their addresses. Nothing less than my deliberate conclusion, after all these measures had failed and nine months of war had elapsed, that the Empire itself was in jeopardy, forced me to act in May, 1915, as I did. I was conscious before taking this step, which meant the overthrow of the Government, that it also meant the end of my career in France, with all the hopes and ambitions that only a soldier can understand. But the consciousness of the great results achieved in this upheaval has been my reward, and I trust that a recital of my difficulties may, if occasion arises in the future, protect the British Army in the field from the recurrence of any similar situation."

LONDON POLICE UNREST.

The utmost secrecy was observed at the Police mass meeting at Westminster on Monday. Vigilant officers posted on the staircase minutely scrutinised every card of admission. The meeting, which was largely attended, lasted three and a half hours.

A member of the executive, interviewed subsequently, intimated that no decision had been reached, adding, "only direct action will bring the Government to its senses and we shall take it before long.—Reuter.

1914 AND 1915 MEN.

In the House of Commons, in reply to questions about the approximate date of demobilization of troops enlisted before 1916, Mr. Forster said he regretted he could not give any approximate date. He could assure the House, however, that the demobilization of these men is proceeding as rapidly as the exigencies of the Service permit. In cases where they are temporarily retained as part of the machinery for demobilization they are being replaced as rapidly as possible by men who are not eligible for demobilization. The question was by no means a simple one. Mr. Churchill was giving the subject his personal attention and doing everything he could to expedite matters.

"SOUL SICKNESS" TRAGEDY.

A man and woman were found dead at a Kilburn flat on Monday. They had committed suicide by inhaling coal gas. Their respective names are Kaye and Heiser, and both were connected with the Labour movement. They had written letters saying they were overwhelmed with mental and soul sickness. It is stated that Kaye was the assumed name of the man, who was an University undergraduate belonging to a well known family of multi-millionaires.

Sir Auckland Geddes called a conference yesterday to consider the advisability of placing Government lorries on the streets to relieve the traffic.

HAWKER'S TRIUMPHANT JOURNEY HOME.

DETAILS OF FLIGHT.

On landing at Thurso Hawker and Grieve were accorded a civic reception and entertained to lunch by the Provost.

Hawker was interviewed by the Daily Mail Thurso correspondent and gave a graphic description of the flight. He said "the sky was quite clear during the first four hours of the flight. Then visibility became bad, heavy cloudbanks were encountered and eventually we flew into a heavy storm with rain squalls. At this time we were flying well above the clouds at an altitude of fifteen thousand feet. After five and a half hours we were forced to descend several thousand feet an account of the filter choking. After this was cleared everything went well for a few hours when the circulation system again choked and the temperature of the water in the radiator rose to boiling point. Then we realised that until the pipe was cleared it would be impossible to rise higher without using a lot of motor power. After twelve and a half hours the circulation system was still bad and we realised that we could not continue.

FOUR HOURS ANXIETY.

We therefore decided to change our course and we began flying diagonally across the main shipping route for two and a half hours. With great relief we sighted the Danish steamer Mary. We at once sent up Verey distress signals which were promptly answered. Then we flew another two miles, descending to the water just ahead of the steamer. The sea was exceedingly rough and despite the utmost efforts of the Danish crew one and a half hours elapsed before they succeeded in taking us off. It was only at great risk to themselves that they eventually succeeded in launching a small boat.

Owing to the North-Easterly gale it was impossible to salve the machine. Before being picked up we had been fourteen and a half hours en route.

H.M. the King invited Hawker to Buckingham Palace yesterday.

SCENES EN ROUTE.

Hawker and Grieve had a remarkable reception at Perth when their train arrived from Inverness at 5 a.m. At Edinburgh, crowds rushed the barriers and carried Hawker shoulder high to the hotel where he breakfasted but Grieve escaped from the station unnoticed. The two airmen are to have an aerial escort from Grantham to London where arrangements had been made for a great welcome at King's cross.

Arrangements are being made for a great air festival at Hendon on Saturday and Sunday next, in which many famous pilots, including Hawker, will participate.

N.C. 4 ON THE SECOND LEG.

Ponta Delagada, 27th May. The N.C. 4 started at 9.20 this morning. It was flying splendidly and expects to reach Lisbon early this afternoon. At 3.40 p.m, British Summer time, the N.C. 4 was halfway to Lisbon.—Reuter.

DEMONSTRATION BY DISCHARGED SOLDIERS.

MOUNTED POLICE CHARGE.

After a mass meeting of discharged soldiers and sailors in Hyde Park on Monday, the demonstrators started for the House of Commons. The procession was stopped by a police cordon in Parliament square. Mounted police in Whitehall charged the crowd and several were injured. Stones and paving blocks were thrown.

The speakers at the meeting were hostile to the employment of girls and women while there were ex-service men unemployed. A resolution, which was carried unanimously, demanded immediate work at trade union rates or alternatively unemployment pay at twenty-nine shillings weekly.

In the House of Commons Mr. Adamson referred to the Whitehall disorders. Mr. Shortt, replying, said the disturbance was not due to lack of work but to the men getting under the control of hot-heads instead of their own leaders. The Hyde-park meeting, despite the advice of the leaders, decided to march to Buckingham Palace. The police did their utmost to disperse them tactfully but were assaulted with paving stones and other missiles. Many policemen were injured and finally they were obliged to charge.

DEMONSTRATOR FINED.

At Bow Street Police Court yesterday, Dennis Fanning and Arthur Popjoy were charged with disorderly conduct in connection with the disturbances at Westminster the previous evening.

Fanning denied throwing a brick at a mounted policeman and was discharged, the Magistrate remarking that there might have been a mistake.

Popjoy, however, who flourished a stick and shouted "Come on boys, we fought the Germans and we can fight this lot", was fined two pounds.

WAR TROPHIES REFUSED.

The Machynlleth (Montgomeryshire) Urban District Council have refused the offer of a field gun and carriage captured from the Germans by the men of the 38th Welsh Division, offered to them by the War Office, at the express wish of the commander of the division. The council also declined a captured gun offered by the Lord Lieutenant of the county, and previously they had returned to the Armoury, Welshpool, a captured German gun which had been sent to them. Newtown, Montgomeryshire, have refused a tank and other war trophies.

From the 9th June the Zeeland Mail boats will call at Folkestone instead of Gravesend. The crossing will thus be considerably shortened.

"THE THINGS THAT ARE MORE EXCELLENT."

What are they? Have we missed them? If so, why?

To the first question, perhaps many different replies would be given off hand; but reflection would almost certainly approximate them more and more. For there is a kinship in man, a profound similarity in the roots of his desires and his aims, which has given us those common human agreements known as religion, law, conventions of behaviour.

Probably, most, if they spoke with absolute candour but with little reflection, would name money as the first and most obvious thing to be desired. But why? Not as an end; with the negligible exception of a few monomaniacs, no one wishes to accumulate money without some more or less definite idea as to using it. As a means then? Yes; but to what end? Obviously if money is but a means, then the thing procurable by money, and not endangered thereby, or too highly paid for by the process of obtaining and waiting for the money, — it is clearly this that, au fond, is regarded as the Thing More Excellent.

Years ago, we knew a man whose wife was practically a widow, his children to all intents and purposes fatherless; because though, as he admitted to us, he had more than enough not only to keep them living in the comfort and even luxury they enjoyed, but to provide for contingencies and to ensure the children all possible advantages in education and a competent start in any career, he wanted to make as much as possible more for them. They lived in his beautiful house near the sea; he spent his time in a distant and dismal town, returning only for occasional Sundays, and then too tired to make friends with and enjoy the society of his family, to whom he was practically a stranger. For the doubtful advantage of extra money, the wife paid by having no husband's society and comradeship, the children by missing for ever the incalculable happiness and benefit of a father's love and guidance. That is an example of paying for money a higher value than it can possibly be worth. How many cases we all know of missing the best of life, and life's experiences and appreciations, in the eager quest for more of the means to get those very things we are for ever passing by!

Money then may be a path, or may smooth the path, to things that are More Excellent; or it may hinder and befog the way. In itself it is not of them.

Other answers might include power, fame, rank. Power, if usefully employed, one must admit as honourable and desirable; for it is the expression, and the opportunity of expression, of the man — an absence of cramping disabilities which kill so much in most men; so much that is their finest worth. But fame and rank — worthy rewards though they may on occasion be as a recognition of service rendered to the community — they are, after all, based on that desire to see ourselves admired by others, on that same instinct of snobbishness which causes the schoolboy to be anxiously critical of his parents on speech day lest he be depreciated by them in the eyes of his fellow small boys; and which causes half the men and women of England to live with an anxious sidelong glance, to see how he or she is being regarded by others, who are probably equally nervous.

No, let us see what are really the Things That Are More Excellent — the things which, after all, though we may consciously seek less, we should all actually regret to lose more than money, power, or fame.

First of all life's joys and glories is Love, the love of relatives, the love of passion, the love of little children, the love of a friend. I think no one of us will dispute this, nor hesitate to admit that life is not life at all nor all its rewards of any value without this incomparable Excellence.

Then let us take self-respect. The man who retains this cannot be really unhappy. Much, and unduly, as we regard the opinions or imagined opinions of others, the man who is arraigned and condemned at the bar of self-judgment can find no real happiness in the expressed approval or admiration of his fellows. He who retains his self-respect has one of the Things That Are More Excellent.

And next we would put the gift and habit of appreciation. He who consciously enjoys, not alone the presentations of formal art, but the sudden glow of colour in a sky, the harmonies of the woods, the fine turn of an apt phrase, the music of a passing voice, the warm and fragrant softness of a spring breeze, the laughing light in a child's eyes, the graceful strength and balance of a fine building, the magnificent terror of a tropical storm, the clear thought finely expressed, the whisper of the wind in the trees, the curves of a lovely statue, the overpowering thrill of concentrated life in a London street, or the skill of a late cut to the boundary — who sees, hears, recognizes, sympathizes, appreciates all the time — he truly lives more than any other, and he possesses one of the greatest of the Things That Are More Excellent.

Knowledge, too, we may claim for our list. The wise man is always seeking to add to his knowledge The finest epitaph we know was placed on the tomb of a man of seventy — "He died learning." We may recognise its value and the satisfaction it gives even as an end. But knowledge is, after all, more a means than an end. It gives power, it aids appreciation. But we would sooner have a great gift of appreciation with little knowledge, than great knowledge and scant appreciation.

The consciousness of being useful, the habit of kindliness — these, also, we will not omit from the greater excellencies of life. Few things give more real pleasure than, in Kingsley's words "Helping, when we meet them, lame dogs over stiles."

Sang the poet:—

Life is mostly froth and bubble;
Two things stand like stone,—
Kindness in another's trouble,
Courage in your own.

The final three lines we shall all agree about. But I take exception to the first line. Life is emphatically not mostly froth and bubble — even in the Army of the Rhine. Life is a very serious, and an absorbingly interesting proposition. It holds many things that are of transient value, of overrated importance, of trivial necessities; but it contains, and it offers us, the Things That Are More Excellent than they. Shall we have them? For it is noticeable that these may all be had for the choosing, while many of the Less Excellent demand hard work, continued concentration, repeated sacrifice. The man who, as the result of a bet, offered sovereigns for a penny each all one long day on London Bridge sold not one. Scepticism fooled the crowd. You remember Browning's words? "'Tis only Heaven that is given away, 'Tis only God may be had for the asking."

The Things That Are More Excellent (and how much more!) are quite certainly ours if we will take them.

THE MUZZLE PUZZLE.
BY R.E.P.S.

Once again the decree has gone forth from those who sit on high and fiddle with the Scales of Justice. Given under their hand and seal is the order that throughout the length and breadth of our land, our well-beloved friends of the canine tribe must have their forward portion, that is to say, the part that leads, so to speak, to the inner dog, adorned by a wire cage, yclept, a muzzle. To paraphraze, at some considerable distance, the famous poem, thusly:

It matters not if morn or e'en:
Or east, or north, or south,
Our faithful Fido may be seen,
With shackles on his mouth.

It may be taken for granted that the above attempt at versification applies equally to the dog of the female persuasion. She cannot hope to escape shackling process on the plea of sex, in imitation of her prototype of the human kind. No! The he-dog and the she-dog are in the same kennel in this respect; they are forced to roam abroad arrayed in a contraption which gives them the appearance of being a cross between a baseball player and the Zoological Gardens.

The possibilities of the muzzle are wide and far-reaching, and why the system should affect the denizens of dog-land only is a mystery, the solution of which can only be left to conjecture. What of our Bolshies, and their second cousins, those of the fiery neckwear; and others of a similar brand who would provide us with a new heaven and earth in ten minutes; not to mention others whose cure for all the evils that affect civilization is akin to that famous cure for toothache, viz., that of taking off the head of the sufferer! Have they not a stronger claim?; or is it because the authorities are laying low until the rope-making industry is on its legs again, so as to enable them to take the above-mentioned undesirables off them? But there is a far more serious aspect of the matter in hand. Complaints have recently come to hand from certain quarters, that young lovers "roaming in the gloaming," and others wishing to commune alone with nature, "far from the madding crowd," have been snapped at by wild rabbits, and it has been stated that here is another excellent use to which the muzzling order could be applied with good effect. But critics aver that notwithstanding the fact "you must first catch your hare," the outlay of public money would be colossal, (not with a "k," Mr. Printer) and one suggests a far simpler remedy, i. e., that of fastening the ears of the rabbits under their jaws with safety pins. Crude as it may seem, it is apparent that the idea would "catch on," and should be given due consideration by those municipalities affected.

From a perusal of our journals, and press matter of the lighter view type, it would appear that not only dogs are affected by what are known as the "dog days." The position of our unfortunate canines has brought grist to the mill of many a Fleet Street hack-writer, penny-a-liner (pre-war), and others who write to boil the pot. Quips such as, "I sing thee songs of A(rabies)" and many others too numerous to mention, are making the evergreen gag "Should clergymen take in washing?" look as if it had strayed from home. Reams of matter are being foisted on to a long-suffering reading public as humour but which, if placed in its proper sphere, would adorn the library of any lunatic asylum. According to reports from home, the old adage, "its an ill wind etc." seems to have come to its own. The Gilded Youth of London are falling over each other to provide for their doggies gold and silver muzzles, studded with precious stones, "don't you know"! And the "posh" jewellers are in "Tom Tiddler's Ground," picking up gold and silver.

Oh! this terrible armistice! R.E.P.S.

THE EPISTLES OF PETER BIRSE. JUNIOR.

A TRIP TO BONN.

Dear Maister Editor,

Consultin' yer weather repoart in accoardance wi' m' eeswal custom fan contemplawtin' a jaunt, A reesolv'd th' ither day tae tak' a trip tae Bonn, a curnie miles farrer up the river. "Never professee unless yer shure" is a worthy adage as venerawble as it is true, but yer meeteorogickal expairt, whether he's shure or nae, is unco skeely in forecastin' the weather, in fack his skeel is veritawbly uncanny. An there's nae rubbitch aboot his remaurks sic like's "fair or weet, some rain, shooers at intervauls, win' noarth tae' sooth."

On the day A set oot for Bonn, he professeed a bonnie day an' a richt braw day it was; nae a clood presentit itsel abune th' horeeson, ba'my zeefers blew frae an easterly direcksaun, the sun poor'd doon its refuljint rays on girse an' tree, on floo'er an' promisin' crap. Man himsel' an' a' his dirty warks bask'd i' the matuteenal glory o' the early simmer sin.

THE SNAIL'S TUBE.

Daunerin' doon tae the watter-side naith the shaidow o' the late unlamentit Keezer, Weelum the Secon,' A moontit a fite cawr boond for th' Universaity toon 'at boasts o aboot ninety thoosan' howls. Sittin' marr or less m' leen A was ackostit b' a conducktor in his fite simmer breeks, wha blether'd something aboot me takin' the snail's tube on th' opposit' line o' railwye.

"Na, na," says I, very promptly an' firmly, "nae snail's tube for me. Ony loiterin' A 've time for 'll be dune in Bonn."

Subsekintly, A learn'd that the snail's tube was ackwally th' exprais, (German Schnellzug), but A didna fash masel ower muckle aboot that, for eiter a' A was on pleesher bent wi' bags o' time at my disposal. Exeminin' the kwintra-side creetickally frae the kerridge windiek, sic like's A've dune mony a time on the Buchan seckshun at hame, A cudna help but think 'at 'at micht hae been twa or three richt gweed gowf-coorses wi' bunkers an' a' thing were comptcetly spoilt b' crops an' freet-trees, tho efter the late protrackin struggel the sojurner i' the Faitherlan' canna be ower parteeklar.

In little mair gin an 'oor A reach'd the picktteresk toon, an' mon, A was winnerfu' weel plais'd wi' the first kursory inspeckshun. If ye can combine the quate acksdemic repoas' o th' Auiton in Aiberdeen wi' something o' the seelvan byouty o' Elgin an' Forres, the mateerial attrackshuns o' Roathsy, an' the dimenshuns o' Leith ye'll be nae far oot wi m' estimawshun o' Bonn.

EX-CROON PREENCE'S PREEVAT' APAIRTMENTS.

"If ye hevna seen Bonn, ye hevna seen Jairmany," say the fowk o' th' univairsity toon, but of coorse ilka Jairman toonie says the same aboot itsel'.

M' first objecktiv', as oor intellijens offisher ees'd tae say, was the preevat apairtments o'th' ex-Croon Preence o' Jairmany tae see gin he'd left a drappie in ony o' th' "empties" or secreetit a gowd watch an chaun m' gweed-brither drappit ae dark nicht i'the brewry in Polkapell. In this A was unfortinat'ly unsucksessfu,' tho A took a gweed look o' a' th' hooses i' the Convict Strussy, an' a' sartin Frowleen, an' auld mistress o' the Preence, wha micht hae direckit me tae the shanshun o' her former loard an' maister was eekwally eeloosiv. Twa or three littlins i' the Keezer Strussy lookit richt like the gaik t-lookin' "Little Wully," but A refrain'd on secon' thochts frae speerin' far their faither, the grait shent o' nan' profeesor bade fan he was at th' universaity. B' a' accoon's this notoryous spreeg o' the Hohenzollerns pintit the toon reid; th' hale kwintra-side was leeter'd wi' his wild an' preeneely oats.

A discover'd, hoever, the palaishial hottel far his faither pit up fan he attendit a fawmus faimly gaitherin' in Bonn i' the middle o' the waur, an' admeetit, nae doot reluckantly, 'at he micht hae 'tae gie up the croon an' saipter an' tak' tae croon an' anker.

It's a puir toonie 'at canna boast a' a celeebrity or twa, an' the name o' th' hero gyean offen begins wi'the same letter as the toon. Khartoom has its Kitchener, Gushetneuk its Gibb, Mecca its Mahommet, Bon-Accord its Birse, an' Bonn has its Beet-oven. It's nae b'acciden', I'se warran', 'at things like that come aboot, tho' as Serjint Mc. Gurk said fan he creepit doon the stair o' a Jerry dug-oot, A dinna believe in gaun ower deep into meesteries o' that kin'.

A BONNIE PROSPECK.

Ane o' the bonniest spoats i' the toon is undootidly the balkony facein' the river, far the turtle-doos o' th' human spashius congregawt in bourachies an' the vyon i' the distance is subleem. M' fella kwintra-man, Geordie Gordon, Loard Byron, has sung the byouties o' the neeberin' hills:—

The castled crag of Drachenfels

"TIGER PIPS" AT LECHENICH.

LEICESTER PIONEERS POPULAR CONCERT PARTY.

Critics, we feel sure, will not resent the claim of the "Tiger Pips," the popular concert party of the Leicestershire Pioneers, to rank with the best the Midland Division can produce in the way of amateur entertainment. They achieved another distinct success at Lechenich on Monday evening, when they paid another return visit to the delight of the Brigade troops stationed there.

This was all the more creditable for the troupe has parted company with an old friend and backer in Captain H. M. Raleigh, the Adjt. of the Brigade, to whom much of the success in the past has been due. Under the guidance of Lieut. Steljes and Sergt. Higgott, however, the high reputation of the party is not likely to suffer. New "shows" are in course of rehearsal and troops in the Divisional area are promised a full evening's pleasure wherever the "Pips" are billed to appear.

The Two W's.

Many of the old favourites were heard at Lechenich. With "The Two W's" (Ptes Whitbread and Whitehead) in possession of the stage the audience is kept rocking with laughter. The humour is never forced, the witticisms have the merit of being topical — the Cologne Post does not escape — while the songs easily catch on, and the audience is induced to share the choruses. Whitbread gets his chance in the absurdity "Handstep" which he shares with Pte. Abbott, and which paved the way for the fall of the curtain, but whether in song or dance he is essentially a funny man of distinct ability. In "The Old Dun Cow" he has a popular number. — His partner Pte. Whitehead has two songs after the liking of his audience in "Bully Beef and Biscuits," and "When I Get my Civvies on Again," numbers which establish him as a favourite apart from his funniosities and cross-talk.

An Attractive Girl.

In different vein we have Cpl. Hammond and L/Cpl. Benjamin in a pretty duet "Come Dance with Me." The first-named is an attractive "girl" in correctness of his make-up and winsome manner. He is a success in all departments. L/Cpl. Benjamin scores a success with "Californian Girl" and "Some Sunday Morning" and dances well. Hammond also joins Pte Abbott in "Toddle Along," an amusing production.

Abbott has another good selection in "The Fact Is." The parody, "We Men Ought to Combine," sung by Sergt. Higgott, Cpl. Hammond, L/Cpl. Benjamin, and Pte. Whitehead savours of "Theodore & Co," with the merit of being topical from a military point of view. Sergt. Higgott specialises in ragtime and is easily a favourite. There was little to choose between "The Dark Town Strutters Ball" and "Every One Loves Their Little Old Home," both of which he sang with his old time skill. Pte. Senior is another valued member of the troupe, and sings "My Devon Girl" and "Morning glories."

Few pianists earn applause for individual effort, but Pte. Butterworth, the Party's accompanist soon established himself and was heartily applauded for his contribution to the evening's pleasure which the "Pips" gave.

WHIST, MUSIC, AND BILLIARDS.

"THREE-STRIPERS" SUCCESSFUL GATHERING.

Distractions there are in Cologne, without doubt: but, far from our Motherland amid foreign, and be it said enemy customs and manners of enjoyment, it comes as a tonic draught of our own sea breezes to pass an evening in the company of a bevy of fair and gracious English women, without using the word English to the detriment of Scots or any other women whose native tongue is English.

The occasion was the second whist drive of No 1 Sergeants Mess of Headquarters Staff, which was graced by the presence of nineteen ladies from the Military Governor's Staff, the Y.M.C.A., and the Church Army.

Alas! for the poor unfortunate scribe, who, arriving at the interval, was condemned to play billiards in such close proximity to the "flirtation" table that it both spoilt his game and marred the conversation.

Fortunately he arrived just in time to hear the delightful singing of Sergt. Howard Fry, R.A.S.C. a gifted artist with a real voice, a common sense temperament and a future, who was sympathetically accompanied by Miss D.J. Clark of the Military Governor's Staff. Felicitations to both artistes.

The Prize-Winners.

As regards the whist drive, the handsome prizes donated by Mrs. Connil were worthily won as follows:—

Ladies:— 1, Lady Mabel Egerton 104 points; 2, Miss Woodroffe. 103; Booby, Miss Stables 78;

Gentlemen:— 1, Corpl. Hindle 109; 2, C.Q.M.S. Hodgson, 104; Booby, S.S.M. Cameron, 174: Seeded prize, Mr. Ladlow, Y.M.C.A.

For the amenities of the evening the Mess Committee—C.S.M. Whittaker, S.-Sgt. Kent, Sgt. Lyons, Sgt. Thompson, and the Mess President S.Q.M.S. George Siddall—were responsible, the universal expression of approbation voicing appreciation of their efforts. George Siddall, when he leaves on Sunday next for an appointment in "Blighty", will carry with him fragrant memories of his last function in Cologne, and will of a certainty often think of the social river trips, picnics, and similar summer arrangements which an enthusiastic mess is projecting—always provided that the ladies will be pleased to accept the invitations which will surely be extended.

"THE GREEN JACKETS."

On Tuesday last the Green Jackets (18th K.R.R.C.) gave the usual weekly concert at the Leave Club. Quite the feature of the evening was a number by Walter Cross entitled "Impressions". A concerted item "Day after Day" by Bob Bayliss, Leslie Overton, Walter Cross, and Leslie Young was loudly applauded. Fred Bannister and William Vernon played the female parts, while William Bateman and Clarence Bennett also contributed to the evening's enjoyment.

BISLEY DAYS RECALLED.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S RIFLESSHOOTING COMPETITION.

The Q.V.Rs. (9th London Regt., Light Division) held a regimental shooting competition at Niedermaussen on Saturday afternoon. Teams of four competed in a mixed programme, and some excellent shooting — reminiscent of pre-war Bisley — resulted. H.Q. Officers team, consisting of Lieut.-Col. Day, Lieut. Hamilton, Lieut. and Q.M. Snelling, and Lieut. Skinner came out first. Of the Company teams, "B" Coy. secured the prize through the steady shooting of C.Q.M.S. Johnson. Sergt. Garrett, Cpl. Bouchard and Lce. Cpl. Aslett.

COLOGNE POST CRICKET CUP.

MATCHES STARTED.

The opening matches in "The Cologne Post" Cricket Leagues took place yesterday, but all the fixtures were not decided, owing in some cases to grounds being hardly ready, and in other cases to clubs not getting into touch with each other in time.

It may be pointed out that there is no objection to matches being played on a date other than that published, provided fixtures are not allowed to get into arrear.

HAT TRICK AT HARFF.

LIGHT DIVN. H.Q. SIGS AND D.R's.

This match, played on Sunday on a very indifferent wicket at Harff, ended in a win for the Headquarters. Owing to the state of the wicket many weird things happened, but Pte. Phillips bowled well and Hartley for the losers performed, the "had trick."

ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL.

WESTERN v. MIDLAND DIV. SIGNALS.

Played at Bruhl on the Divisional H.Q. Ground and resulted in a win for the visitors by 2—1.

Midland quickly asserted themselves and pushed vigorously during the first five minutes. Unfortunately, this effort seemed to tire them and the Western frequently broke through. Goals were saved on many of these occasions by the right back, Dvr. Cooke. Western's splendid forward combination enabled then to score.

Goals were scored by C.Q.M.S. Cheal (2) for Western, and Spr. Jolliffe for Midland.

Teams:

Western:— Dr. France; S. and C.S. Wilson, Dr. Barratt; L/Cpl. Cookson, Sergt. Gibson, L/Cpl. Baker; Dr. Crouch, Barnard, C.Q.M.S. Scheal, Dr. Nathan, Lieut. Holdsworth.

Midland:— Spr. Best, Spr. Wallace, Dr. Cook, Dr. Marlindale, Spr. Anderton, Dr. Barker; Spr. Catchpool, Spr. Jolliffe, L/Cpl. Farley, Dr. Kenyon. Lieut. Gardner.

SPORTING ITEMS IN BRIEF.

Miss C. Leitch.

The late Tom Ball, as long ago as 1910, gave Miss Leitch a half over Blundell-sands, and was beaten on the final green.

Rugby Football Union.

The financial statement issued by the Rugby Football Union shows a debit balance on the last five years of £1937 odd.

Five Catches in The Slips.

The Rev. F. H. Gillingham brought off five catches in the slips in the Surrey-Essex match at Kennington Oval on Saturday.

119 Consecutive Cannons.

Falkiner made no fewer than 119 consecutive cannons on Saturday evening in the match of 16,000 up with Newman at Thurston's.

England's Left-Handed Bowlers.

It is a moot point as to who is the best slow left handed bowler England has ever had (says the "Times"). Peate, Peel, Rhodes, and Blythe all have their admirers.

"Goalie" Rescued From Drowning.

In the Cambridge University v. Richmond water-polo match on Saturday the net defended by the Light Blue goalkeeper suddenly fell on him and kept him under water. He was saved from drowning at practically the last moment.

New Yacht Racing.

The committee appointed at the recent annual meeting of the Yacht Racing Association to draft rules for new national yacht-racing classes has made a provisional report in which they declare for restricted as against one-design classes.

POLO—WHITNEY CUP TOURNAMENT.

There was heavy scoring in the match at Hurlingham on Tuesday between the Freebooters and the Magpies when the former won by 13—8. It was a tie in the first round of the Whitney Cup Tournament.

At the Roehampton Club in the same tournament the Pilgrims beat the Foxhunters by 4 goals to 3.

SWEEPSTAKES IN ENGLAND.

ENORMOUS SUMS SUBSCRIBED FOR STOCK EXCHANGE.

Derby sweepstakes in England and elsewhere appear to be evoking no less degree of public interest than those being organised among the members of the Rhine Army. A Reuter telegram states that the colossal proportions of the Calcutta sweepstake is causing the promoters some anxiety, and it is likely that steps will be taken to ensure that this year's stakes will be smaller than hitherto.

As is customary, the Stock Exchange is taking a lead in the organisation of sweeps and this year, three distinct ones have been arranged. Two of them already total 5,000 sterling and the members of the third have subscribed nearly 3,000 pounds. Of the first of these, ten per cent. of the proceeds will be devoted to St. Dunstans, and of the second, ten per cent will be given to the Star and Garter.

Since no limit has been placed upon the number of shares purchaseable, it is anticipated that the Royal Automobile Club will collect no less than 5,000 pounds.

NEW HEAVY-WEIGHT CHAMPION.

GODDARD BEATS JACK CURPHEY IN TENTH ROUND.

The fight for the Heavy-weight Championship of Great Britain, at the National Sporting Club between Frank Goddard, the ex-Life Guardsman, and Jack Curphey, of Salford, resulted in a victory for Goddard, who beat Curphey in the tenth round. The latter's skill was no use against the strength of Goddard.

INTERESTING EVENTS AT RAUSCHENDORF.

"B" COY., 51st MANCHESTERS' SPORTS.

These sports, which took place on Saturday at Rauschendorf, proved very successful and some good running was witnessed in nearly all the events, Lieut. Learson doing exceptionally well in both the sprints and longer distance races.

There was a fine finish in the 100 yards final, Sgt. Maxwell just getting home 6 inches to the good of Lieut. Learson.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

Thursday, May 29, 1919.

Wind Northerly 5—10 miles per hour. Weather continuing fair, hazy and rather cool. Indifferent visibility.

DERBY OWNERS.

MANY NEWCOMERS FOR THE EPSOM RACE.

The Epsom classic in days gone by was almost farmed by certain notable stables patronised by peer or time-installed commoner, but not one of the hardy Epsom annuals is likely to be represented with a winning chance in the great classic when we return to the downs next week after four substitute events at Newmarket (Says "The Scout" in the "Daily Express."

In the very unlikely event of Lord Derby running Glaciale or Lady James Douglas sending Bayuda and of Sir Edward Hulton bobbing up with Avatar, we will find a Derby of many newcomers. In fact, not one of the most likely owners has ever won a Derby before, and the majority have never been represented in the Epsom race. The death of Mr. "Fairie" Cox and the automatic barring of Manilardo put the last nail in the coffin of precedent.

Landmarks Unrepresented.

The King, Lord Rosebery, the Duke of Westminster, Lord Falmouth, the Duke of Portland, Mr. Bower Ismay, Mr. Raphael, Colonel Hall Walker, Sir John Thursby, the brothers Joel—here are just a few "landmarks" that will not be represented. Against these we will focus attention on The Panther's Grimsby owner, Major Astor—the owner of Buchan and Lord Basil and a more lavish patron of Manton than in pre-war days—Lord Glanely, who has aspired to classics ever since his plating days as Mr. Tatem, and is likely to take a double chauce with Grand Parade and Dominion, Messrs. Clark and Robinson (Stefan the Great), Sir Walter Gilbey, who seems prepared to stake the Pantheon on Paper Money being placed, Lady Torrington (All Alone), Mr. J. A. de Rothschild (Loamer), Mr. C. T. Garland (Milton), and Sir William Nelson (Tangier).

All Alone's Chance.

For a few strides in the course of the race at Gatwick All Alone seemed to flag, but he soon recovered his stride, and for some distance from home the result was never in doubt. Easily as he won here it is impossible to believe that the son of Royal Realm and Canidia can have any sort of chance at Epsom (says The Times.) though his owner has made an effort to claim the services of Donoghue, who is, however, engaged to ride Paper Money for Sir Walter Gilbey.

Lord Basil And Buchan.

I am informed that Major Astor has decided to run Lord Basil for the Derby in addition to Buchan (writes "Hotspur" in the "Daily Telegraph.") This plan may, of course, undergo a change, but it would appear at the moment as if the owner of these horses is still in doubt as to which is the better on a racecourse. Should Lord Basil run he will be ridden by Childs. The scratching of Stefan the Great is, I believe, solely due to the hard ground and the disinclination of owner and trainer to go on with him in these circumstances. At Newmarket last week his owner, Mr. Lionel Robinson, told me that the horse had done very well, but he is one that it might be dangerous to risk on ground as it is at present. The decision to scratch him was arrived at during the week-end. I much regret his exit from any cause whatever. For a time not long ago he was actually first favourite for the Derby. That was after The Panther's defeat in a trial.

With regard to the candidature of Grand Parade, I understand on the best possible authority that he is considered to be only a few pounds behind He. Is that good enough to win the Derby? Paper Money, it will be recalled, was 20lb and half a length behind He (as demonstrated on a racecourse), in spite of which Sir Walter Gilbey still fancies his horse. Obviously, if Grand Parade's trial can be relied on, he must have an undeniable chance at Epsom, but I think if Manser were asked as to how The Panther would fare with He at this juncture that he would have faith in his horse's ability to beat him at level weights. Lord Derby is to be represented in the Derby by Makepeace. There was a nice fall of rain at Newmarket on Monday, and the Limekilns was only open for galloping.

BRITISH EMPIRE LEAVE CLUB.

DERBY SWEEP.

The B.E.L.C. sweep has proved enormously successful, long queues of would-be winners crowding to the club to chance their luck. Entries will close with the last post on Saturday. The draw will take place on Monday next and the names of those who draw horses will appear in The Cologne Post on Tuesday next.

EDUCATIONISTS v COOKS.

SUMMER WEATHER FOOTBALL.

The cooks and the Education Staff of the 51st Gordon Highlanders, after playing a drawn match the previous week, met in a return game at Duren on Monday night. The encounter, if not particularey exciting, was interesting. Play was fairly well divided during the first period. The Education forwards moved with rather more method than the opposing quintette, but there was a tendency of the inside men to play themselves offside. Henderson made ground often on the right but finished rather poorly. Anderson strove to steady the van of the Cooks but Carmichael was rarely troubled although once he should have been, when Munro got past the backs but failed to clinch a grand opportunity. Riddell had a creditable try for the teachers from good range and after good work by Fairweather for the same side, Davidson scored, the first goal. Russell and Chapman pulled well together at times, but although both had frequent runs they could make little or nothing of the teacher's defence, in which Taylor was most outstanding.

The Cooks made an excellent start on resuming. A free kick granted for a foul against Taylor was only partially cleared by Carmichael, and Munro, seizing the opportunity this time, equalised. The exchanges were equal for a time but the teachers gradually asserted their superiority and Petrie twice cleverly mastered the defence and Scored a couple of goals. Best for the teachers were Taylor, Riddell, Fairweather, Petrie and Henderson and for the cooks Hogg, Faichnie, Anderson, Russell and Chapman.

Final:— Education Staff 3; Cooks 1.

BLINDED SOLDIERS' TRAINING.

ST. DUNSTAN'S FINE RECORD.

The demand on the resources of St. Dunstan's Hostel for Blinded Soldiers and Sailors is heavier than it has been at any other time, and the work goes on at full pressure. Sir Arthur Pearson, who established the institution in March, 1915, states in his fourth annual report that to St. Dunstan's have come very nearly all of our men who lost their sight in the war, practically all of the men from the Overseas forces, and a small number of French and Belgian soldiers. The total of 1,483 comprises seventy-five officers, 249 non-commissioned officers, and 1,159 privates. Of these 690 have completed their re-education as blind men, and already have been established in the business they have mastered, and 740 are still making their brave fight against difficulties in the class-rooms and workshops. The remainder, representing under four per cent. of those men who have lost their sight in the war, were, for reasons connected with ineradicably bad habits or seriously impaired mental or physical health, incapable of making good in the world.

Unfortunately, there are a great number of men who have lost one eye or whose sight has been in some way affected, and for whom the training given at St. Dunstan's will sooner or later become necessary. That is a tragic fact (says the report). There are various degrees of blindness. About two-thirds of the men who have come to St. Dunstan's are totally blind; of the remaining third the majority are merely aware of the difference of the darkness of night and the light of day, some have a glimmer of sight, and a small number are still able to see in a way that is partially useful.

Occupations in which the blinded man can hope to excel are limited. At St. Dunstan's men are trained for eight definite openings: (1) Massage. (2) Office work, including shorthand and typewriting. (3) telephone operating. (4) Basket making. (5) Mat making. (6) Cobbling. (7) Joinery. (8) Poultry farming.

Among the men who entered at St. Dunstan's 448 were married before they lost their sight and 227 were married while they were learning to be blind, or shortly after they had mastered the lesson, "and often it has happened that they have found a partner from among the devoted women who in some way or other were helping them in their re-education." The Blinded Soldiers' Children Fund, which is designed to pay a weekly allowance up to the age of sixteen for every child born to a blinded soldier after his discharge, and therefore not coming within the Government pension scheme, has progressed very favourably, and allowances are now being made every week on account of children.

"THOSE SHORT STORIES."

"Gippa" was frantic, walking about sometimes in a trance and at other times in a state of marked excitement. Members of the Mess thought him "petty," and seriously tapped their heads in a knowing fashion as though to confirm their thoughts. Only the more intimate friends of Gippa knew what was wrong. Had he not on the 20th May read in The Cologne Post of a competition for those aspiring to literary fame? Was he not on the Battalion Education staff and able to write freely and forcibly? Had he not at various time written paragraphs for his local paper, and better still, supplied paragraphs for The Cologne Post, which is read by every soldier on the Rhine? Surely then he would be able to write a short story and compete for those 250 Marks.

All day long he would quote to himself catchy phrases which he had read and for which he had searched through innumerable books and magazines, but the fear of legal proceedings for stealing other authors' ideas made him realise that he would have to develop a phrase of his own to give his story a dramatic start.

From actual experience he had seen nothing about which to write a story, though he did remember once hearing two inebriated soldiers in hot conversation when one of them remarked "I always thought you were a pal of mine but now you've knocked my head against the wall, you're not." But that would have to be a humorous story, and he did not feel confident enough to muster humour for a short story.

However, "Gippa" has now cooled down, and whether he will reap the reward of his frantic efforts remains to be seen when the results are published on 15th June.

Still, we wish him luck. D.J.B.

NOT THE BRITISH WAY.

"You extorted a confession from this boy by a threat," said a solicitor to a young police officer who gave evidence in Grimsby Children's Court yesterday against three boys, the eldest 10, who were charged with office breaking.

"Did you not put fear into his heart by showing him the cells and telling him that was where you would put him if he did not make a confession?"

"I showed him the cells to get at the truth," said the policeman.

The Bench dismissed the case.

BEER HOARDING.

LONDON WORKERS' PROTEST.

The shortage of beer at home is causing discontent among the workers.

Workers' delegates from Hackney, Wood Green, Tottenham, Stamford Hill, Stoke Newington, Clapton, Kingsland, and Edmonton met on Saturday at Clapton to protest against the shortage of beer, and to consider what steps should be taken to compel publicans who were known to have beer in their cellars to deal alike with all classes. Several members of Labour clubs suggested that each consumer should help himself to what he required and tender legal payment for it.

Mr. Walter Morgan, who presided, said the workers were not high-handed, and respected the law, but the publicans who hoarded beer for special customers and denied it to the working man were acting wrongly. The brewers were just as bad as the publicans. The higher the price of beer the more self-important became the man behind the bar. (Laughter.) The barmaid followed suit. (Laughter.) The charge of 4d. for a pint of ale, or what was called ale, was preposterous and left a profit to the brewer and publican of 400 per cent, to "wangle" between them.

There was little excuse now for the shortage, for 6,000,000 barrels additional were to be brewed, but the price of 4d. a pint should come down. As the matter would come before Parliament early next week he hoped the local members would be there.

Mr. D. Talmage said the workers should not vote for any candidate who did not pledge himself to reduce the price of beer.

On Friday in the House of Commons Mr. Roberts, the Food Controller, said it had been decided to increase the barrelage from 20,000,000 to 26,000,000 standard barrels, which at the present gravity of 1040 would give approximately 35,000,000 bulk barrels.

The Manchester Liberal Federation on Saturday defeated by an overwhelming majority a resolution in favour of the State assuming control of the manufacture and supply of intoxicating liquors.

IN FRANCE AND FLANDERS.

WORK OF TRACING SOLDIERS' GRAVES.

The number of soldiers' graves now identified and registered in France and Belgium is 373,351. The number of other burials reported is 154,821. In many of these cases the burials took place under such conditions that subsequently the graves were never found, and in others all markings have been destroyed by shell fire. During the last month, however, 2,125 such graves have been identified and registered, and it is hoped that a considerable number more will be traced.

The staff of photographers was greatly reduced by demobilization, and, on this account as well as owing to the shortage of motor-cars, the work of photography has been much hampered. Steps are being taken to obtain the services of additional photographers, but some considerable time must necessarily elapse before all requests for photographs can be met.

In the forward areas the concentration of isolated graves is in progress, and while this work is being done it is necessary to close the localities. The work has also been hindered by difficulties arising from demobilization, and from the lack of transport, but special steps have been taken to provide the necessary requirements so that more rapid progress may be made.

The present situation does not permit of a general permission being given to visit graves. Hitherto permits have been given only in very special cases, as, for instance, when relatives are returning to Australia or Canada. The difficulties of travelling in France and Belgium are very great, and there is little accommodation for travellers.

MR. SPEAKER'S CURE.

Bath is having the biggest season of its history. Twice within the present month the Hot Mineral Baths Committee of the corporation have had to report to the council that the week has exceeded all previous weeks, either before the war or during the enforced war-time rush to the home spas.

The young people are coming with the invalids, and a record number of patients have undergone the cure, with the result that the actual amount of the financial takings at the Baths office has proved a record.

On a recent Sunday there was in the same queue the Speaker of the House of Commons, a Roman Catholic priest or two, clerics of the Church of England, and officers and men of all sections of the forces.

There is a "desirable" house at Kensington, "five minutes from High-street Station," to be let at a rent of £50 a week, or if taken for two weeks at a rent of £75. "The week" for which the house will be available is the official Peace Week—when it comes.

IN DEFENCE OF HER HONOUR.

PRIEST'S STATEMENT AT THE FUNERAL OF MURDERED SCHOOL TEACHER.

The funeral of Miss Jane Shannon, the murdered school teacher, of Waltham Cross, took place on Saturday morning. There was a Requiem Mass at St. Joseph's Church, where Miss Shannon was formerly organist. The service was conducted by Father Bronsgeest, Father Browne, and Father Dunford.

In his address to the congregation Father Browne said their departed sister had throughout her life given honour to her faith. If she had chosen to compromise her honour she would have been alive to-day. If a young girl came to him and said she was offered the unlawful attentions of a man who threatened to murder her unless she yielded to him, what was she to do? He would reply without hesitation: "If by the grace of God there is no other choice be or you, then die."

The interment was in Enfield Highway Cemetery, and a vast concourse of people lined the route from Waltham Cross. The children whom Miss Shannon taught at St. Joseph's School took part in the procession.

IRISH AIR SERVICE.

BELFAST TO FOLKESTONE IN SIX HOURS.

The Belfast to Folkestone experimental commercial air service route was again successfully tested on Saturday by Mr. Clifford B. Prodger, who flew a giant 1,600-h.p. (four Rolls-Royce engines) Handley Page Atlantic type aeroplane, making a non-stop flight of nearly 520 miles in a little over six hours. The machine, which is intended for Continental mail and passenger traffic, is of the same type as those used for the cross-Atlantic flight.

The machine left the aerodrome at Belfast at 5.45 a.m., landing at Hawkinge Aerodrome, Folkestone, at noon. It carried five passengers and their luggage, and during the voyage the mechanics in charge slept in turn, comfortable accommodation being provided in the engine-room. At a height of 5,000ft, a straight course was steered for Carlisle, which was crossed at the same altitude. The course was then altered south by east for London, which was crossed at 11.10. Breakfast, consisting of hot cocoa and sandwiches, was served between Carlisle and Harrogate.

Although at times the speed was over 100 miles per hour, the main part of the journey was carried out with the motors throttled down to cruising speed, and the speed averaged nearly 90 miles per hour over the whole journey. A machine is being prepared for Mr. Prodger for the cross-Atlantic flight, and if this can be completed in time an entry may be expected from him within the course of the next few days.

NEW ZEALAND'S MEMORIAL OF THE WAR.

The Anglican Church authorities in the diocese of Wellington, New Zealand, propose to build a cathedral as a memorial to the New Zealanders fallen in the war. It is proposed to erect, in connection with the cathedral, a military chapel, dedicated to St. George, which will contain the colours of the Allies and regimental flags. Its great windows will symbolize all the Allied nations who have fought in the war.

The walls of the chapel will be panelled in white marble tablets, on which the names of all New Zealand soldiers, sailors, doctors, and nurses who have fallen in the war (irrespective of creed or denomination) will be inscribed in letters of gold.

There are some 17,000 from New Zealand who have lost their lives in the war, and it is felt that thousands in Great Britain who have relatives and friends in New Zealand, will count it a privilege to take part in the building of the chapel. Subscriptions may be paid into the Military Chapel account at the Bank of New Zealand, Queen Victoria-street, London.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Hall, of Groombridge, Sussex, who have celebrated their golden wedding, were married in the church in which they were both christened, and have lived in the parish all their lives. They had six sons, four daughters, and 22 grandchildren. Five of the sons served in the war, two being killed.

THE S.A. INSTITUTE AT SOLINGEN.

The Salvation Army Band was again "out" on Sunday, arrangements having been made for the Band to take part in the evening service at the S.A. institute at Solingen. This building was previously a magnificent casino, and the spacious concert hall proved an ideal room for such an occasion.

Prior to the service, which was conducted by Staff-Captain Hinsh (the Officer in charge of S.A. work with the Army of the Rhine) the band played for half an hour, the items rendered including "New Zealand" "Rock," and "Silver Spreads." Captain (Miss) Peat also favoured with a pianoforte solo. In the service, the selections "Redemption" and "Jerusalem my Happy Home" were given as well as vocal items by the Quartette Party, and Captain Peat and Miss Haines. The excellent address of Staff-Captain Hinsh was much appreciated by the large crowd of men who had gathered for the service.

The kindness of the military authorities in placing the necessary transport at the disposal of the band was greatly appreciated.

Captain Mrs. Johnson and the Officers in charge of the Institute at Solingen are kept constantly busy serving the many "Jocks" who make each day a "bee-line" for the casino.

Y.M.C.A. READING CIRCLE EUSKIRCHEN.

On Monday evening, the 26th, a small but appreciative audience listened to the Rev. J. D. Carnegie, who set the ball rolling with the first of a series of discussions and papers by the Reading Circle.

His topic, as a fitting "send off," was "What shall I read?" and was treated in a thoroughly intellectual and masterly manner, evoking quite an animated discussion.

Following up this excellent start, the Rev. A. Mansfields, M.A. took for his subject last evening, Shakespeare's "As you like it"; which was highly appreciated by all present. On Monday, June 2nd, Mr. Hornung (the author of "Raffles,") who is entertaining the troops in Cologne with intellectual talks on authors and books, is to give an evening in the Large Hall.

Already the Circle shows great promise of developing a lofty standard, the programme including papers on Sir Walter Scott, Charles Lamb, H.G. Wells, and George Eliot, in addition to prunings and cuttings from other authors.

"LAUGHING GAS."

TWO DEATHS WHILST UNDER ANAESTHETICS AT LONDON HOSPITALS.

The death of a man whilst undergoing an operation at the London Hospital was inquired into on Saturday. It was stated that Julius Robinson, 28, a cabinetmaker, of Wentworth Buildings, Aldgate, went to the hospital to have an operation performed for the removal of an abscess on the jaw.

The surgeon who performed the operation said that it only lasted a minute, and immediately afterwards the patient ceased to breathe. Artificial respiration was resorted to, and strychnine and oxygen administered, but without result.

The Coroner said the anaesthetic used was nitrous oxide, commonly known as "laughing gas," which dentists used to administer without even the assistance of a doctor. He did not think he had ever had a case of death while under the influence of laughing gas before. A verdict of "Death from misadventure" was recorded.

The City Coroner held an inquiry into the death of Hilda May Laggat, aged 17, of Queen's Head-passage, Newgate-street, who also died whilst under an anaesthetic in St. Bartholomew's Hospital. She was given a mixture of alcohol, chloroform, and ether. When the surgeon was proceeding to operate the patient showed signs of failing. The usual remedies were applied, but without success. Dr. Spilsbury said the anaesthetic used was quite appropriate, and the Jury returned a verdict of "Death from misadventure."

HER DADDY.

"Who can give the name of a great man who fought in the war?" was a question put by the vicar of Chertsey to the infants in Empire Day examinations. "My Daddy," came the prompt reply from a smart five-year-old!

SERGEANT: Your 2nd driver has gone to Hospital with a trench mouth.
1st. DRIVER: Blimey! 'e must have been eating sandbags.

GREAT BOLSHEVIST DEFEATS IN RUSSIA.

REGIMENTS ANNIHILATED.

AFGHAN TRIBESMEN DESERTING.

NEW TERRITORIAL COMMANDS.

HEAVY BOLSHEVIST DEFEATS IN SOUTH RUSSIA.

REGIMENTS ANNIHILATED.

The War Office states that in South Russia a volunteer army has completely defeated the Bolshevists in the Manich area. The booty included 3,500 prisoners, 1,500 rifles, 13 guns and over 50 machine guns.

On the 10th May two entire Bolshevist Regiments surrendered. The Tenth Bolshevist Army has been heavily defeated along the whole front, losing about 10,000 prisoners, twenty-eight guns and over 120 machine guns. General Shkurro has destroyed two Communist Regiments at West Rodakova.

In the Donetz basin, after heavy fighting, the volunteers have been driven from the Makyenski salient, and the Bolshevists have now captured pratically the whole of the Donetz basin. — Reuter.

Reuter learns from Omsk that Siberian troops are storming Orenburg. In the Kazan direction their offensive is developing along the river Viatka one hundred miles from Kazan.

GENERAL MAYNARD'S NARROW ESCAPE.

TRAIN DERAILED.

Kem, North Russia. 27th. May. — The inhabitants of the Shunga district, in the peninsula South East of Petrozavodsk, have risen against the Bolshevists, killed the commissaries and dispersed the bands of Red Guards.

General Maynard's train, while proceeding southwards from Kem, had a narrow escape this morning near Maesarga. Nine coaches in the rear of the train were derailed, but no serious injuries are reported. — Reuter.

IMPENDING CAPTURE OF PETROGRAD.

BOLSHEVISTS PREPARE TO LEAVE.

A manifesto has been addressed to the people of Petrograd assuring them that General Yudenitch is coming as their liberator from the tyranny of the Bolshevists, that a constituent assembly will be summoned and that there is no intention of re-establishing a monarchial regime.

Pskoff, the most important strategic point on the Esthonian front, was captured by the Esthonians on Monday. The Bolsheviks have lost their most important base for the Western front and a formidable barrier on the road to Petrograd from the South West.

Trotsky, who is in command of the defence of Petrograd, has brought strong reinforcements from Moscow to meet the advance of the Northern Corps along the Narva railway. Nevertheless the advance continues and the Reds are suffering defeat after defeat. Fugitives from Peterhoff state that the Bolshevists at Petrograd have placed hundreds of machine guns on the churches, the former Winter Palace and all public buildings. Every bridge on the Neva is mined. Throughout Sunday big explosions went on at Kronstadt and in the Petershoff region.

As British warships were not in action it is thought that Bolshevists were blowing up their magazines in readiness for flight.—Bruis s wireless

Copenhagen. The Bolshevists offered a tenacious resistance in the fighting preceding the fall of Pskoff. Forty machine guns were captured.

The town of Pskoff is the junction of five railways and is the strategical backbone of the Bolshevist campaign against Esthonia. Its capture indicates that a decisive stage has been reached.—Reuter.

VOLCANO DESTROYS 16,000 LIVES

Amsterdam. Telegrams from the Dutch East Indies report a violent eruption of the volcano Kloet, on the island of Java. Over a score of villages were wiped out and the number of the dead is estimated at sixteen thousand.—Reuter.

Java is one of the most volcanic regions in the world, there being at least forty active volcanoes. In 1883 there was a terrific series of eruptions, beginning with the frightful explosion of Krakatoa, in the Straits of Sunda, between Java and Sumatra. Krakatoa literally burst open, casting up inconceivable quantities of lava, rock, and débris. The whole air for fifty square miles was darkened, and new volcanoes appeared; the lighthouses in the straits were wrecked, a huge tidal wave destroyed villages, and about 40,000 lives were lost. The dust from Krakatoa was carried right round the world, and caused extraordinary sunset effects as far away as London.

THE KING'S BIRTHDAY.

THE SITUATION IN AFGHANISTAN.

DESERTERS COMING IN.

The India Office states that the following further information has been received from the Government of India:

Up to May 24 the general situation remained unchanged and the tribal attitude good. From Chitral it was reported that some Afghans were holding a position five miles above Arnawai (forty miles south of Chitral, on Kunar River). A small Afghan force is still in Gandao (in Mohmand country). Our patrols on the Mohmand border were fired on, and our aeroplanes in this area were fired on by small Afghan guns.

A reliable report stated that no Afghan troops had left Kandahar up to May 21.

On May 25 the Mohmands are reported to be behaving correctly, and the Afridis to be in a submissive mood. The latter are surrendering rifles taken away by deserters from the Khyber Rifles. The Afridis are reported to have looted a large number of rifles and artillery ammunition from Jelallabad when it was deserted after our air raid.

In the Kurram Valley a party of Militia has been fired on by an Afghan picket. The Militia returned the fire, killing three of the picket.

UNIQUE CAVALRY CHARGE.

The cavalry charge at Dakka was unique in the annals of frontier warfare. The Afghans attempted the same tactics as when the 21s Lancers charged at Shabkadar. Some ran. The horsemen descended on them, but large numbers stood their ground, kneeling to fire, while others fired standing. The shooting, however, was wild and erratic. Nor did the Afghans form any kind of line or mass to withstand the charge, but stood in small groups or alone. The result was that our men got in amongst them and did great execution. A feature of Afghan fighting is that, contrary to the customs of the border tribes, the enemy make no attempt to remove the bodies of the dead, with the result that it is far easier to arrive at an estimate of his casualties. The Nawab of Dir has offered the services of his eldest son on the frontier.—Reuter's special Service.

AFGHANS AND BOLSHEVISTS.

Simla, 24th May.— Fresh evidence of the Bolshevist sympathies of the present regime in Afghanistan is afforded by a striking wireless message transmitted from Moscow by Bolshevists at Tashkent on the 20th May. It announced the receipt of two letters from Kabul dated 7th May addressed to the "President of Russian Republic." In one of these the Amir declared that Russia, by raising the standard of Bolshevism, had earned the gratitude of the whole world, and offered the "honoured president" of the Russian republic the friendly greetings of his friend Amanulla. In the other letter Mahmud Tari, the Amir's commissary for foreign affairs, expressed his hopes that permanent friendly relations between the Bolshevists and Afghans would now be established.

POLAND AND RELIGIOUS FREEDOM.

The Council of Four has approved and presented to Poland the draft of a treaty, consequential to the treaty with Germany, for the protection of racial and religious minorities. The preamble recites that Poland, desiring to promote the principles of liberty and justice and to give guarantee to all inhabitants over whom she is assuming authority, recognises that the protection of minorities is an obligation of international concern over which the League of Nations has jurisdiction. Of her own free will she agrees that all bona fide inhabitants of the State of Poland shall become citizens of Poland and guarantees to all of them full protection of life and liberty without distinction of birth, race, nationality, language or religion. The Treaty provides that there shall be no discrimination in such matters as public employment or exercise of functions, distribution of honours or freedom in professions and industries, that all racial religions and linguistic minorities shall if they so desire possess and control their own schools, charitable institutions and the like and freely practise their religion and use their own language. No special privileges are granted by the Treaty to any minority but to each the fullest protection is afforded. Thus one of the Articles designed to protect the political rights of Jews provides that no elections shall be held on the Jewish sabbath or on any religious feast day of the Jews and full protection is guaranteed for Jewish schools and the use of the Yiddish language.

The same applies also to Ruthenians, the establishment of an official Polish language notwithstanding.

It is further proposed that provisions safeguarding the rights of racial, religious and linguistic minorities shall be specially placed under the protection of the League of Nations and that the consent of the Council of the League of Nations shall be required for any modification.

Similar treaties will be presented later on to Czecho-Slovakia, Yugo-Slavia and Rumania but these treaties will be consequential to the Peace Treaty with Austria.

EAST HAM FOUR FOLD MURDER.

TRIAL AND VERDICT.

The trial of Henry Perry, alias Beckett, 37, for the murder of Mr. and Mrs. Cornish and their two daughters, Alice and Marie, opened on Tuesday, before Mr. Justice Darling, at the Old Bailey. Prisoner, previously described as a soldier, was now entered in the calendar as a slater. Perry was defended by Mr. H.C. Fox-Davies.

Mr. Percival Clarke, in opening, said he was able to reconstruct the crime largely from the long statement made by the prisoner himself. He was a slight connection of the Cornish family, and he went to their home at 13, Shakely-road, and was welcomed as a friend, and stayed there a fortnight. On April 28 he went there whilst Mrs. Cornish was alone in the house, and he himself had described what happened. "She gave me one or two rough words. I lost my temper, and knocked her down with the kitchen poker." Counsel described how Perry then carried her insensible body to a shed at the bottom of the garden, there killed her with a blow from a pick-axe, and afterwards, to make certain she was dead, fetched a carving fork from the kitchen and plunged it into her throat. Afterwards he waited in the house for the two girls to come home from school, Alice, aged 14 and Marie, aged 6. He killed them, and cast them into the cellar. Mr. Cornish came home later, and while he was getting his supper prisoner struck him on the head with the axe also, but he got away, though he afterwards died in hospital. Prisoner then became frightened and ran away.

WAR'S AFTER EFFECTS.

Before he went he took some money from the house and a wedding-ring from Mrs. Cornish's finger, which he had previously cut off. He was captured after a hue and cry some days later in East Ham, wearing two military decorations to which counsel did not know whether he was entitled or not. He had been a prisoner in the hands of the Turks, and when the British advanced on Constantinople he was handed over to our authorities. "The war has done great good for some persons," said counsel, "it has taught them discipline, and made honest and honourable men of people who started badly. But the brutalities of war may have made more vicious a person who was vicious before." With regard to prisoner's antecedents they were not concerned. If it was urged there was no motive for the murder and that he was insane, counsel suggested that his motive was robbery, and robbery only.

Inspector Neil agreed that confessions were not always true, and said where they were not as a rule the person was found to be insane. No one but a man who knew all about the crime could have given the details that Perry had given.

LUNACY EXPERT'S OPINION.

Mr. Fox-Davies, for the defence, called expert medical evidence to prove that prisoner was insane at the time he committed the crime.

Sir Robert Armstrong Jones, consulting physician on mental diseases to the military forces, said he had two interviews with prisoner at Brixton Prison. He found him detached in manner, sullen, and morose, and did not think he realised his position. The only time he showed emotion was in describing his dreams in which he committed horrible deeds in the presence of his mother. In relating these he wept bitterly. He said he had no knowledge of his act for two days after it happened, and that he was "put up to it" by voices. He was of opinion that prisoner was irresponsible and insane, a congenitally unstable person, suffering from aural hallucinations, which were dominating, tyrannical, relentless. He did not think him capable of appreciating the nature of his act.

While Mr. Percival Clarke was making his final address to the jury, and referring to Perry taking the ring off Mrs. Cornish's finger, the prisoner, who had sat quietly during the trial, interrupted with the words: "It is false."

The jury, after an absence of ten minutes, returned a verdict of guilty.

Asked if he had anything to say, prisoner shook his head.

Mr. Justice Darling, in pronouncing sentence of death, said he had never heard a case tried in which the circumstances of the crime were more horrible.

Prisoner received the sentence calmly.

AN APOLOGY.

In our issue of the 16th May we reported a double tragedy at Lambeth in which a professional wrestler named Channels had committed suicide. The report added: "Channels, it is stated, won the world's light-weight wrestling championship in 1909 under his professional name of Relwysko."

This statement, which was telegraphed to us from England, was untrue and although we corrected the error in our next issue, we desire further to make the correction more widely known. We tender our apologies to Mr. Relwysko, with our sincere regrets that we wrongfully coupled his name with such a distressing case.

Mr. Relwysko, the champion wrestler, is, we are glad to learn, alive and well.

LLOYD GEORGE TO VISIT AMERICA.

Mr. Lloyd George is understood to be favourably considering a proposal which has been made by the American delegation in Paris that he should visit America in October in order to attend the first meeting of the League of Nations at Washington. It is thought that the whole trip could be carried out within three weeks.

Captain Dunn, the pilot of the Tarrant triplane which crashed on Monday last, succumbed to his injuries in the Cambridge hospital, Aldershot, yesterday.

DISCHARGED AND RE-ARRESTED.

CURIOUS CASE.

The action of a military escort in detaining a soldier after he had been acquitted on a charge of being a deserter was severely criticised by Mr. Biron at the Marylebone Police court. The soldier, Oliver Blake, of the R.A.S.C., was before the Court on Monday on the charge of desertion, and in view of the fact that he was in possession of demobilization papers the magistrate discharged him. Lieutenant J.E. Mirano, of the 793rd Horse Transport Company, R.A.S.C., now attended the court and asked that the man should again be brought before the magistrate as a deserter, mentioning that since his discharge the previous day he had been detained by the escort and taken back to barracks.

The magistrate remarked that, in fact, he was re-arrested after being discharged. It was very unsatisfactory, and in his view unjustified. The whole object in bringing the man before the civil court was to obtain the decision of the Court, and when that was given it was ignored.

The lieutenant pointed out that an Army Order allowed that.

"Not when the man has been discharged," said the magistrate, "otherwise what is the good of bringing him before the Court at all? Most unsatisfactory! I cannot help the man being charged again, but I do not see much object in charging him if the decision of the Court is to be disregarded."

The soldier having again been placed in the dock, Lieutenant Mirans said he illegally absented himself from Douai in France on Dec. 30 last, and was sent home in error from France after being in hospital. He had therefore been arrested on the instructions of the Major-General Director of Personal Service, Woolwich Dockyard, and witness asked that he should be handed over to the military to be sent to Southampton for trial by court-martial.

In the end the magistrate said he was not satisfied that the man was a deserter and discharged him again, adding, "It does not seem to matter very much what my decision is: it seems to be disregarded by the sergeant of the escort."

Lieutenant Mirans: It will not be this time.

VICTORY MARCH OF LONDON TROOPS.

MEN ELIGIBLE.

The King has intimated to the Lord Mayor that he has chosen Saturday, July 5. as the date of the Victory march of the City and County of London Territorials. His Majesty has selected a Saturday, so that men who have been demobilized may more easily leave their employment in order to take part in this march, and that the best opportunity may be given for a great welcome by Londoners to their own troops. The hour of parade will be notified later.

Those eligible to take part are officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the specified units who enlisted into, or were appointed to commissions in, and who also served overseas in one of these units.

Men eligible desiring to join the parade should send in their applications immediately. No applications can be received after June 12. They may be addressed to the Organising Officer, Parade of London Troops, Mansion House, E.C. Full details of unit should be given with each application.

THE MURDERED W.A.A.C.

Sergeant-Major Montague Cecil Keith Hepburn, R.E., made another formal appearance before the Bedford County magistrates yesterday on the charge of murdering Nellie Florence Ruby Rault, the young W.A.A.C. stationed at Haynes Park, R.E. Signal Service Depôt, on May 9.

Great interest was taken in the proceedings. Locally, a crowd endeavouring to rush the police in order to gain admittance to the court. The proceedings were adjourned without the hearing of evidence until Friday, by which time the coroner's inquiry will have been concluded. The counsel representing the Director of Public Prosecutions will then open the case against the accused.

THE CASE OF PIVOTAL MEN.

The Ministry of Labour has issued a statement regarding demobilization. It says that most of those eligible for demobilization are now released and the military authorities are doing their best to hasten the release of those temporarily retained.

The Ministry is not prepared to enquire into individual cases except those of men registered as pivotal prior to the 1st February or men who are in the opinion of the Ministry of outstanding industrial importance.

The term "pivotal men" refers only to the limited number registered as pivotal by the Ministry prior to the 1st February and does not apply to men considered as pivotal by the men themselves or by their employers.

Applications for release on compassionate grounds should not be addressed to the Ministry, but must be made in writing to the officer commanding the applicant's unit.

ATLANTIC HEROES' AMAZING RECEPTION.

KIDNAPPED BY 'AUSSIES.'

When Mr. Harry Hawker and Commander Grieve arrived in London on Tuesday evening their welcome home provided one of the most astonishing scenes of enthusiasm the capital has ever witnessed. A vast multitude thronged King's Cross station and when the train carrying the airmen drew in, the barriers were thrown down and the station was stormed by soldiers and civilians eager to greet the airmen. An amazing series of carefully prepared coups followed, in which Australian soldiers played the leading part.

It was intended to have had a civic reception at King's Cross. The Mayor of St. Pancras was present at the station, also a large number of distinguished officers and civilians. The Australians, however, declaring that it was the Australians' Day took the affair entirely into their own hands. Hawker and Grieve were seized by a body of Australian "diggers," carried shoulder high into the Euston Road, and crowned with slouch hats, an Australian custom conferring the highest popular honour. The huge crowds in the Euston Road at first failed to recognise the airmen in Australian hats but when they were discovered in such an unexpected manner they received a tremendous ovation.

The airmen were eventually placed in an open car and an attempt was made to proceed to the Royal Aero Club. The crowds in the streets were the densest since Armistice day. Solid masses of people prevented the cars from moving along the thoroughfare, and Hawker descended from his car and mounted a constable's horse. In this way, riding bareheaded on horseback, the journey to the Aero Club was completed.

Australian soldiers acted as escort, linking hands and clearing a way by main force.

Similar scenes of enthusiasm were enacted along the whole route via Portland-place, Langham-place, and Regent-street to the Club. Dominion soldiers used the lamp standards throughout the route as seats. In New Burlington-street Hawker was lifted from the horse and carried shoulder high inch by inch into the club. Commander Grieve was likewise carried on the last stages of this extraordinary journey.

Hawker and his party were uproarously welcomed at the Sopwith Aviation works at Ham, where they arrived during an employés concert.

The audience rose en masse, seized and dragged the car to the platform which Hawker ascended and made a speech. Hawker was then towed two miles in his car to Kingston whence he motored to his home at Hook where a firework display greeted him. He was carried shoulder high into his house and had to make a speech from the window.

RESCUE EXPERIENCES.

The Daily Mail interviewed Messrs Hawker and Grieve, who declared that their start was due to the Americans' flight to the Azores. The Sopwith got away splendidly. Shortly after they left the airmen ate one sandwich and a piece of chocolate and drank four cups of coffee each. Hawker ate nothing more for seventy-two hours owing to sea sickness. He says that flying between the low clouds and rough water was like being in a small motor boat in a heavy sea.

At the outset of the flight they expected a North Easterly wind for a short time, then a North-West wind. Actually they encountered a strong Northerly wind and ran into a depression which had worked up from the Azores but the weather was no hindrance. The flight would have been accomplished but for the boiling water trouble. The wireless was not a great success. Grieve sent out calls every thirty minutes but no reply was received. Later he signalled the S.O.S. every fifteen minutes but the wireless was not sparking. At 1.30 a.m. Grieve found they were one hundred and fifty miles south of their course, owing to drift, so they turned northwards with a view to reaching the track of ships.

Hawker used one hundred and seventy gallons of petrol out of the three hundred and forty carried.—Reuter.

When they alighted on the sea they were knee deep in water and big waves occasionally dashed right over the upper plane. Meanwhile their little boat which was afloat alongside the machine, was dancing like a cork. They were picked up at 7.30 p. m. Greenwich time, having been flying for fourteen and a half hours and in the water for ninety minutes. Hawker declared that "when we started we felt it was a certain 100 to 1 on". The machine floated well.

DECORATED BY THE KING.

Hawker and Grieve visited Buckingham Palace yesterday morning and related their adventures to the King and Queen and the Prince of Wales. His Majesty decorated them with the Air Force Cross. Neither of these orders has yet been gazetted, but Hawker and Grieve are the first recipients.

Two thousand people assembled outside the Palace but failed to recognise Hawker in a silk hat and Grieve in naval uniform. The crowd made no mistake, however, when the airmen left.

CONSOLATION PRIZE.

Subsequently Hawker and Grieve were entertained to luncheon by the Daily Mail at the Savoy Hotel, when the 5,000 pounds consolation prize was presented to them.

A large number of guests were present, including the Lord Chancellor, General Seely, the Marquis of Londonderry, General Sykes, and Mrs. Hawker, who was the only lady present.—Reuter.

THE SOPWITH SALVED.

St. John's, 27th May. The liner Sachem has arrived and reports receiving a wireless message from the American steamer Lake Charleville that she has found Hawker's aeroplane in mid-Atlantic. She salved the mail aboard the aeroplane and part of the machine itself and is taking them to Falmouth in England.—Reuter.

N.C. 4 AT LISBON.

The American seaplane N.C. 4 has reached Lisbon from the Azores and may possibly attempt a further stage of its flight to Plymouth today.

THE FINAL DECISION.

The time has now come to state in plain and unmistakable terms to Germany that it must sign the peace terms or take the consequences. The statement made by the Council of the allied and associated powers on May 21st fairly covers the ground of the German counter-proposals and amendments. With cold and pitiless logic the objections of Count Brockdorf-Rantzau are subjected to a calm and dispassionate analysis which admits of no refutation. The extent of the punishment is to be measured by the enormity of the crime committed against European civilization. A great majority of Germans scarcely appear to be aware that they have committed any particular crime whatsoever. Occasionally, however, some of the more progressive German papers appear to have a glimmering of the light in which they are viewed at the judgment bar of history.

When the Germans complain of the impossibility of the Allied terms it is instructive and illuminating to see what claims they themselves adduced in the heyday of their victories. In a recent article we referred to the resolutions of the six leading industrial unions, which was sent in on May 20th, 1915. Now these resolutions by no means represented merely the noisy or Pan-German element alone. The petition sent in by the six unions represented the leading German Industrial Associations, viz:—The Agricultural Union, the Central Association of German Manufacturers, the Union of Leaders of Industry, the German Peasant Association and the Imperial German Middle Class Union. This memorandum, addressed to the Imperial Chancellor, and to which at a somewhat later date the signatures of the so-called flower of German intelligence were attached, viz., of Professors Schäfer, Seeberg, Onken and Schumacher, a democrat, Friedrich Meinecke and General-Direktor Kirdorf, owed its origin to the rumours which were in circulation with regard to the opening up of peace negotiations. It hailed with approval a declaration by the official Nord-Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung according to which no one capable of forming any judgment could possibly think of abandoning a military situation favourable to Germany or of a premature conclusion of peace with its enemies. A significant sentence was added: "Even a more unfavourable or a more uncertain military situation ought not to have any influence upon this decision if we are not to lose sight of the aims as set forth by His Majesty, the Emperor, at home as well as abroad."

With regard to the objects aimed at at home which probably included the sinking of internal differences and politics styled Burgfriede nothing very drastic was proposed, so much more clearly were the objects set forth which were to be attained abroad, and which precluded any premature or lukewarm peace. This peace could only be constructed upon a far-reaching weakening of the industrial and military position of the enemy. After going into the details of what this peace entailed, the memorandum gives a prominent position to the demand for a Colonial Empire which was to correspond fully to the vast industrial interests of Germany. The Professors in a supplementary draft give clear expression as to what this entailed — Central Africa alone, so they stated, was not sufficient. This would undoubtedly give Germany a large extent of territory, the value of which however would not be in proportion to its size: hence stress was laid upon a permanent connection with Islamism. Even if this was not openly expressed, it was nevertheless perfectly clear that this Mohammedan world was to be more or less attracted within the orbit of the German Colonial Empire.

The annexation of Belgium was accepted as a matter of course. This was expressed in such terms as to place Belgium under the complete military and industrial control of Germany, including its Customs Union; in addition, the mintage, banking system and postal administration were to be subordinated to German Imperial Legislation; Railways and inland water transport were to be incorporated with the German Traffic Control, moreover the Government and the administration of the country were to be so conducted as to prevent the inhabitants from exercising any influence upon the political destiny of the German Empire.

As regards France, the possession of the coast line bordering on Belgium to about the Somme, thus affording access to the Atlantic Ocean, was stated to be a question of life and death for German shipping. The Hinterland thus acquired was to be treated in such a manner as to ensure the complete exploitation of the Channel Ports acquired from the industrial and strategic point of view. The annexation of the iron ore districts of Longwy and Briey was, of course, demanded together with that of the mining areas of the departments of the Nord and Pas de Calais.

This, then, was the scheme of annexation based upon industrial and political considerations. This was by no means all. Military and strategic questions were also to be considered and the statement was brought forward, that, in order to secure the German frontier, the fortresses of Verdun and Belfort, together with the intervening western slopes of the Vosges were under no circumstances to be left to France. This was also stated by the Berliner Morgen Post, the most widely read paper in Germany. These demands, together with that for the incorporation of Belgium, figured, not only upon the programme of the six associations, but also of the Vaterland Partei, of the Conservatives, the National Liberals, and until 1917, of the Progressives and of the Centre. A clause was inserted as regards France similar to that which applied to Belgium, whereby the inhabitants of the regions to be annexed were to be deprived of political rights. In addition it was stated that the existing industrial resources in these regions, including the larger properties, were to be transferred to German possession in such a manner that France would have to compensate their owners and take them over.

The lust of acquisition in the east bore an equal proportion to that of the west. Thus the memorandum stipulated for a considerable extension of the frontiers of the German Empire and of Prussia by the incorporation of at least portions of the Baltic Provinces and of the districts lying south of them. Western Prussia, Posen and Silesia were to be secured by an extension of various districts, whilst the Russian War Indemnity would continue to be exacted throughout the widest extent of territory.

With regard to War Indemnities, the six associations had, on the whole, rather less to say in their main memorandum, but they dealt with this question all the more thoroughly in a complementary memorandum set out by the intellectual leaders of the German nation. In this it was stated "that if we were ever in a position to exact an indemnity of war from England no sum could ever be sufficiently high." But in the first place attention was directed towards France "We ought not by a false leniency hesitate to lay the heaviest burden upon this country." The payment of a considerable portion of the War Indemnities must be made by such securities, the possession of which would strengthen Germany's Industrial position in those countries which contained its political friends.

This is only a small selection taken from the plan as sketched out by people, who were able to exercise the strongest influence upon the German Government and German policy, and who made use of their position during the war in order to enrich themselves in the most shameless manner at the expense of the general community. Their balance sheet was kept very secret, and was only known to a very small circle in Germany. These boundless claims, however, were well known to the Entente, and they constructed their War Policy in accordance. They were also fully informed as to the extent to which the leader of industrial combinations and of the agrarian associations, held the reins in influential Government positions. They knew that it was not merely a case of the employment of paper and a couple of printer's "devils" but that those who drew up this memorandum were in reality the secret rulers of Germany, and if they had any doubt upon the subject as to whether the German Government would be ready to fall in with their mad proprosals, they were able to find complete justification in the peace of Brest Litowsk, which in reality went far beyond the programme of May, 1915. Have the originators of this programme, and those who are in agreement, any tittle of right to be angry as to the conditions imposed by the Allies? Have the "Intellectuals," who at that time were

PHOTOGRAPHY.

WILLIAM R. PATERSON, F.R.G.S., etc.

The study of the capabilities of a camera is more interesting than many people suppose.

There is always a wide field for experiment. One may take, for instance:—

(1) Ordinary photographs (views and portraits); (2) Photographs through a microscope; (3) Photographs through a telescope; (4) Colour-photographs.

The latter are extremely pleasing, not only as gifts but as souvenirs.

The process of taking a colour-photograph is a delicate one; the exposure is much longer than is usual for ordinary plates and the development rather quicker. In the Lumière process a glass plate is covered with small grains (potato-starch) of the three complementary colours, green, violet and orange. (The primary colours are red, yellow, and blue.) These grains are as minute as flour-grains and are distributed over the plate; a thin actinic or sensitive film is set over them. The plate is then placed in the sheath with the film towards and with the glass facing the lens. The object of this is to produce a positive upon the same plate.

In an ordinary negative the right of the view is always on the left of the picture and vice versa; the top and bottom are also reserved. The light reflected from objects of different colours passes through the lens of the camera, through the glass of the plate, through the small coloured grains before it reaches the film that itself only is effected by light. Only certain grains let certain colours pass; the film, therefore, when developed shows only those colours of which the rays have been permitted to come through. The grains in the Lumière process are so exceedingly small that blue sky appears wholly blue, a red bonnet wholly red, and a piece of moss upon a wall in its natural green, without any tinge of alien hue.

There are now several different processes by means of which one may obtain colour-photographs, but that of Lumière (the French film) certainly produces most delightful results. Such plates are, of course, expensive in comparison with the ordinary light and shade ones. I presume they may cost perhaps ten times as much, but the pleasure lies in their artistic value. These pictures become positives by a second development, and give most beautiful effects when projected by lantern upon a screen.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Lieut. (60th Brigade R.G.A.) The figures you mention indicate the strength of the lens; that is to say, the amount of light it is capable of allowing to pass. A diaphragm is useful when you have the opportunity to take a photograph of an immovable object; say an interior and by having its diameter reduced it helps to give better detail, because the sensitive film of the plate is naturally not so quickly effected and the shadows have time to develop in intensity. The word Tessar is merely a term employed by the firm of Zeiss, but the British are also grinding anastigmat lenses and are well advanced in this industry.

TIT FOR TAT.

How the feud commenced I cannot definitely state. The officer declares it was due to a mutinous spirit in the men. The men declare it was due to the overbearing manner of the officer. Sir Roger de Coverley would probably say "Much might be said on both sides." For myself, I am wise, and express no opinion.

After several minor skirmishes, the O.R.'s made the first decisive attack. It was during a morning march. The officer was leading his section, when a member of the staff was seen approaching. No sooner did the O.R.'s catch sight of him, than, not hearing the order "Eyes front!" they broke into a popular chorus. Imagine the Staff Officer's surprise, and the sub's mortification as they saluted each other to a popular refrain.

Fortunately the Staff Officer was a "sport." He turned away his head to hide a smile while the sub. blushed redder than the other's tabs.

But the sub. was not to remain without revenge. A few days later when his section were on physical drill, he addressed them as follows:—"Now, you men, I'm going to make you a sporting offer. I want you to run to the market place at X—" here he waved his arm vaguely in the direction of the road, "and any of you who arrive there before me will receive a prize of fifty marks. The only condition is that we all proceed on foot, and as I fancy myself, I'll give you all five minutes start. Now, one, two, three, off!"

At the word, all but the sub. started along the road to X——, a distance of five kilos. The sun was hot, they panted and sweltered, but doggedly on they went, secure in the fact their officer had not overtaken them, and with the promised fifty marks as a powerful spur.

But alas! They had forgotten Euclid's definition of a straight line. While his men followed the meandering road, the sub. steadily trotted the single kilo that divided him from X—, and smilingly greeted his exhausted warriors as they staggered in. Once more they were formed up and marched, sweating and swearing, to their billets.

A truce exists at present between the combatants. As honours are even, I hope peace will be declared.

To conclude, for those whom it may concern. Just as "All that glitters is not gold," so "All that flows from a writer's pen is not the truth." "Compree?"

C.M.B.

publishing appeals in the names of "Science, Art and Religion" alleging that a policy of "Kultur" unsupported by one of power was impossible, and called in quotations from the Bible to their aid in order to give moral support to their frivolous claims, any right to figure amongst the leaders of those making protests against the peace terms?

A people with any self-respect, and who truly desired to prove that they had broken with the past, ought to make a clean sweep of the advocates of such a policy who are still to be found amongst their supporters. Until the German people have completely disavowed these suspect supporters, who are still to be found in their midst, the Entente find it hard to believe that Germany is sincere in her professions of contrition, and is willing to tread the path of renunciation and adopt a new outlook.

THE LENA ASHWELL CONCERT PARTY.

BIG ATTRACTION AT THE DEUTSCHES THEATRE.

By way of a change — and a particularly pleasant change, too — the management at the Deutsches Theatre this week presented the Lena Ashwell Concert Party. The success of the party is undoubted. Despite the critical proclivities of the Cologne audiences — due to the high standard in entertainment fare set by local amusements caterers in general — the show was voted a big success and everything went with a swing.

Miss Kate Coates at the piano showed that consummate art, that graceful ease, which called for one's sincere admiration. Her rendering of the accompaniment of her own composition, to Miss Esma Church's "Chanty of the Emden" and "Rilloby Rill" was exquisite.

A Fairy Fantasy.

Miss Esma Church, the elocutionist, in her diversified character studies proved a great favourite with the boys. In her execution of "Rilloby Rill," a delightful little fairy fantasy, by Sir Henry Newbolt, one easily recognised the sublime subtleness of her art.

Miss Winifred Clark (contralto) sang, we think, more encores than any artiste there, which speaks well for her popularity. She has a charming voice, and a fascinating manner, and her rendering of "Mate of Mine" was loudly applauded.

Miss Marjory Verel played the violin with much charm, her presentation of "Romance" and "Because" affording full scope for her prowess.

"Nursey Rhymes."

Miss Adelaine Rind created quite a furore of applause with that old favourite, "Songs My Mother Sang", and was encored repeatedly. Her singing, in conjunction with Miss Clark, in "Nursery Rhymes", was distinctly captivating.

Miss Peggy Skelton was in quite a class of her own. Those amusing little rhymes which she sang to her own accompaniment, were—naturally—greatly appreciated. How can such titles as, "Men", "Perhaps", "Cousins" etc., fail to attract?

Since their inauguration we have seen several Lena Ashwell Parties, but one can say unhesitatingly that the present combination is quite the best. Moreover, it is the first Lena Ashwell Party to perform in the Occupied Territory.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S RIFLES.

"B" COMPANY DEFEAT THE TRANSPORT AT FOOTBALL.

An interesting match between the Transport and "B" Coy. of the Q.V.R.'s (9th London) took place at Niederaussem on Tuesday. In the first half, play was fairly even until Wells, of "B" Coy., put in a hot shot which Handley, the Transport-goalie, saved but failed to clear. This was converted into a goal by Lce. Cpl. Stevens, leaving "B" Coy. one up at half time. In the second half the supporters were roused to demonstrative enthusiasm through the vigorous play of their respective teams. The Transport-forwards, notwithstanding some good shooting, were beaten each time by "B" Coy's goalie (Brown) and Holman from a good pass by Lce. Cpl. Colley secured the victory for "B" Coy. by 2 goals to nil.

KALK CUP FOOTBALL COMPETITION.

23rd ROYAL FUSILIERS MEET 124th SIEGE BTY. R.G.A. IN SEMI-FINAL.

This match played at Overath on Monday proved a most exciting game. The play was exceedingly fast, both sides diplaying wonderful combination. The first goal was scored by 2 Lt. Marrable being a beautiful shot from outside the penalty area over the heads of several players right into the corner of the net.

In the second half the Gunners for a time had most of the play but could not make any appreciable headway. The second goal came from Lce./Cpl. Pearson and was the crowning effort to the nicest bit of combined play one could wish to see.

Final:—

23 R.F. 2 goals; 124 S. Bty. 0 goals.

"REAR" HEADQUARTERS R.A.F., v. 11th CHESHIRES.

The versatile cricket XI of Rear H.Q. R.A.F. opened their season on Sunday last on their own pitch with the 11th Cheshires as their opponents. In spite of the fact that the pitch was hard and tricky, which made runs very difficult to obtain, the game proved of a very interesting character and resulted in a close win for the homesters by 10 runs. The Cheshires who batted first could do little against the bowling of Watson and Webb, and the whole side were dismissed for the total of 33. The R.A.F. side likewise found the bowling of Crowther and Dawson who led the Cheshires' attack, very trickity, and were all out for 45, their most successful batsman being Cpl. Montgomery who scored 9 which included two hits for 4. Three of the side were sent back bowled with their initial ball.

The second innings again saw low scores, the Cheshires being dismissed for 30, and the home eleven for 37, which left the latter winners by 10 runs. Thorne for the R.A.F. found his form and after making 16 which included 4 hits for 4 succumbed to a beautiful fast break ball by Dawson, which took his middle stump. The R.A.F. capt. with 13 to his credit was also dismissed by the same bowler. The R.A.F. side who have a very interesting fixture list should prove a formidable eleven with a little more practice, and more should be heard of them.

TO-DAY's MATCHES.

Lancashire play Essex at Leyton to-day, while at Brighton Nottinghamshire are engaged to play Suffolk.

STREET INTERVIEWED.

TAUNTON DECIS ON TO COME BEFORE THE M.C.C.

Street, the Umpire responsible for the famous Taunton decision, interviewed on Wednesday denied that both Captains were willing to continue the match. He said they disagreed and appealed for Street's decision which was given unvindictively, the players subsequently agreeing to the decision.

It is correct, Street declared, that Heygate's delay constituted a refusal to play by Sussex, who therefore legally lost, but could not, because the match was already a tie. The question who won will be decided by the M.C.C. on Monday first.

SECOND CAMBRIDGE TRIAL MATCH.

The second Trial Match at Cambridge ended on Wednesday in a win for Mr. Naumann's side by six wickets.

In the first innings for Mr. C.R. Browne's side A.G. Douggart carried his bat for 107, and for Mr. J.H. Naumann's side, G. Ashton also reached a three figure total.

The scores were as follow: Mr. C.R. Browne's side—1st. innings 317; 2nd innings, 205.

Mr. J.H. Naumann's side—1st innings, 434; 2nd innings, 89 for 4 wickets.

"CHARLIE CHAPLIN" AND HIS MULE.

LIGHT D.A.C. SPORTS MEETING AT KLEIN TROISDORF.

A very successful Sports Meeting was held by the light D.A.C.—Commander, Major V.E. Costellan, O.B.E., R.F.A., (T.F.)—at Klein Troisdorf on Saturday.

The rendezvous was an ideal one, with plenty of space and pleasant surroundings and the weather was perfect. All the events were carried through without a hitch.

Much amusement was caused by the comic turn-outs, one of whom, a life-like imitation of Charlie Chaplin, the "Movie" Star convulsed the spectators by his devoted attention to a mule which possessed in an unprecedented degree, the virtue of patient endurance. Whether standing erect on the mule's back, or caressing its sleek neck, "Charlie" was ever imperturbable and always "Killingly" funny.

The Tug-of-War events, which were open to the Divisional Artillery, were exceptionally good, while the High Jump, Flat Races, Obstacle Race were all well contested. An unusual and striking feature was the Wrestling Competition for Indians. During the afternoon, the Band of the 6th London Regt. (by kind permission of Lieut.-Col. T.B. Brady, D.S.O.) rendered an excellent musical programme.

There was a large gathering on the Limekilns the other morning in anticipation of seeing The Panther gallop the Derby distance, and it was generally thought that a gallop in the Newmarket Stakes would have been equally serviceable.

Cooper rode him with Munser, on Leandros, and Jack Role for companions, and, starting on Water Hall, he finished at the cottage at the top of the Limekilns.

Leandros, who was carrying most weight gave him a good stretching out in the last quarter of a mile, and when pulled up The Panther neither sweated nor blew much.

Dodd has hitherto been named as the favourite for this open event.

Howard played an excellent innings for 41.

The 1/4 York and Lancs. opened their innings with Capt. Dixon and Pte. Robson, but they seemed unable to stand against Cpl. Beebee's and Pte. Best's bowling. The wickets fell rapidly until Colonel Headlam, C.M.G., D.S.O., came in. He showed brilliant style, and held his bat for the rest of the game, scoring a well-played 21.

FOOTBALL AT BURSCHEID.

"B" COY., 52nd DEVONS V. REST OF THE BATTALION.

As the result of "B" Coy. challenging the Rest of the Battalion at "Soccer", the match was played on Monday.

The "Rest" were the first to score through the play of Sgt. Budd "B". Coy., playing in excellent style, soon equalised from a hot by Cpl. Buckingham. Shortly afterwards the "Rest" again succeeded in scoring from a well-placed corner kick by Shamey. Before the whistle blew at half-time "B" Coy. again netted the ball, making the score 2—2.

During the interval, "B" Company's Jazz Band, under Sgt. Gerrish, marched around the pitch, much to the amusement of everyone present.

When the game re-commenced the "Rest" did not play in such good style, and Scott scored again. "B" Coy., proving themselves to be the better team, attacked their opponents' goal very hard. Their efforts were soon rewarded by another goal from Scott. The game ended by "B" Coy. winning 4—2.

For the Coy. Lt. Cairns, Sgt. Pearce, and Pte. Scott made themselves conspicuous, while for the "Rest" Lt. Martin and Shanley played a rattling good game.

INTER-COMPANY FOOTBALL FINAL.

51st ROYAL SUSSEX REGT'S EXCITING MATCH AT LOHMAR.

At Lohmar on Saturday some exciting football was seen, when the final of the intercompany football competition was played between "W" and "Y". These two companies are old rivals, being the leaders for the Battalion Sports Cup.

Amidst bugle, blasts, and general uproar, Taylor equalized with a splendid shot. Excitement now rose to fever heat and both teams were seen to their best advantage. Y Company broke away again, and owing to a misunderstanding between the backs of "W" Coy. and their goalie, the ball was once more netted by "Y" Coy., a quarter of an hour before time. No further score was added and after an exciting battle the game resulted in a win for "Y" by 2—1. This brings them into the running for the Battalion Sports Cup.

TRAFFIC IN SOVEREIGNS.

Allegations are made that certain "underground jewellery manufacturers" are offering as much as £1 17s. 6d. for a golden sovereign.

"It is known in the trade," said a London jeweller, "that small, unscrupulous manufacturers are ready to melt down sovereigns—which are 18 carat gold—and manufacture cheap 9 carat gold brooches from them.

"As much as 37s. 6d. is offered for a single gold sovereign for this purpose, and it is calculated that from seven to ten brooches can be made from the gold in one coin. These are sold whole ale at 17s. 6d. each, so a handsome profit is realised.

"The excuse offered is the extreme scarcity of gold ingot in the country."

"MAY WEEK" AT CAMBRIDGE.

Writing from Cambridge a correspondent informs us that "May Week" gives every promise of beating all records this year. The crews are practising very hard, the coaches are screaming themselves hoarse with rage or delight, and every day sees the banks of the Cam crowded with enthusiastic supporters and amused spectators. There promises to be a huge influx of the American element and prices for lodgings are showing soaring propensities equal to those of the "Camel" of Sopwith fame. Twenty guineas the week for two or three rooms, thirty pounds for a small furnished house, four pounds a day or twenty pounds the week for a punt, all indicate that the Cambridge landladies, etc., are out to make up for some of the lean years they have endured since 1914.

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

A NEW REVOLUTION.

The Kölnische Volkszeitung makes one or two interesting remarks about the drastic actions which the Communist party intends to take in order to bring into being the Bolshevist regime in Germany. Not as before, in puny upstarts, does this party intend to work, but there is being organised, states the paper, one huge general revolt. All classes of people are being influenced and incited in a most audacious manner. This revolt is timed to commence on the signing or refusal of the peace terms, and the Communists hope to instal successfully their own particular and heinous mode of goverment.

The present government and the parties it represents, states the Volkszeitung, are looking forward quite calmly to any development, and the majority are determined to oppose the new movement by every possible means. "If all the members of our Fatherland," it says in conclusion, "are animated with the same firm determination, we shall succeed in mastering this projected attack of the Bolshevists. But we shall need more than a few flaming words. Everywhere strong counter-measures must be taken immediately. The Spartacists must be shown that the majority of the German people will not be subjugated by the terrorists. The Russian 'blessings' and the recent hideous experiments of Munich are sufficient for the people of Germany."

Ants delivered by Bolshevism.

Dr. Wilhelm, who is at present with the German delegates at Versailles, likens his countrymen unto a swarm of ants enclosed in a glass case over the outlet of which is placed a hand to restrict the free passage of air. The ants, instinctively scenting the approach of danger, become more and more excited and, not being able to come into touch with the outer enemy, in their desperation they attack one another. "If we are really similar to the ant hill?" states the Kölner Tageblatt, "we can only be saved by the force which smashes the cage or pushes away the hand. Bolshevism aims at the former, but Wilhelm evidently implies that we should do the latter."

An interesting Proclamation.

The Prussian Government recently issued a proclamation to German officials and schoolmasters in those areas which will be threatened in case of a refusal of the terms, exhorting them to remain faithfully at their posts and carry out their duties in such a manner as to show a good example to all the others. In return the State gives a vague promise that their families and possessions will be protected to the utmost degree possible and that, whatever may happen, their future will be secured.

The reason for this proclamation in obvious. The German Government foresees, just as do we, what will happen to those threatened areas, and it will be amusing to note how the State administers promised help, when the time and need arrives.

BRITISH EMPIRE LEAVE CLUB.

DANCING LESSONS.

So many requests have come for dancing lessons that it has been decided to hold two classes, for beginners only, on Tuesdays and Fridays, in the Leave Club, from 5 to 6 p.m.

As the room will be limited, only a small number can attend.

Those wishing to join please give in their names at the Information Bureau.

The Controller of Entertainments will be very glad to have the help of a violinist to play for one or both of the afternoon classes. L/Cpl. Heather is kindly instructing at the classes.

To all lovers of music the concert given by the 9th (Queen's Royal) Lancers (by kind permission of Lt. Col. Brocklebank) was a great treat. The bandmaster, Mr. Gibson, was a master of his art, and kept the audience of over 400 people enthralled. The programme opened with the march, "Le Regiment de Sambre et Meuse," which was warmly applauded, and next came Gounod's "Mirela." Signaller Bert Evans gave his inimitable songs at the piano, (by permission of Major Brotners), and his rendering of popular songs was much appreciated. Bandsman H. Hodges' cornet solo, "Roses of Picardy" evoked great enthusiasm, and as a second piece he played "The Rosary." After the "Valse Triste," and a Selection from "Chu Chin Chow" (always a favourite), Miss Hanbury Williams gave great pleasure by her songs "I know a lovely maiden" and "Strawberries," and was much applauded. The suite from the ballet "Coppelia" and Dream Pictures by Middleton followed, and then came the success of the evening, songs by Major Greenlees, He was encored again and again, and every one heartily enjoyed his excellent performance. The band then gave an excellent selection from "Faust." Q.M.S. Keysall's bassoon solo evoked an outburst of cheers, and the splendid programme was brought to a close with the popular fantasia "Victory Land," a collection of all the well-known songs, which left the delighted audience feeling that the band had well earned its reputation as one of the best in the A.O.R.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

The Editor, in publishing letters from Correspondents, will use his own discretion, and if necessary limit the publishing of correspondence on any subject whatever. It must be understood, however that he is not responsible for the views stated.

All communications for this column should be brief and to the point, and preference will be given to those which bear the writers' signatures for publication. No letter will be published unless accompanied by rank name, and unit of sender, which are needed for the purpose of reference.

Many letters of a perverse nature have reached the office, and the Editor wishes to point out that these only cause waste of time both to the writer and the Editor himself. Letters of this nature will not be published.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir — Reference the account in your issue of a recent date of the formation of the above in Cologne, I have no doubt that many officers who are at present with the Army of Occupation, awaiting early demobilization, etc., will be much interested in the above, and no doubt many of them, who are either managers or partners in business firms of repute in England, would welcome an opportunity of meeting representatives of the firms mentioned as already out here with a view to endeavouring to arrange for them to take an additional agency work, thereby producing the mutual co-operation and benefit which is so much needed to enable us to successfully compete out here.

Expenses are cut down, and in many cases an agent's time is only partly occupied, and he would welcome a chance of earning more commission.

OFFICERS' CLUB.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.—It was gratifying, in a recent issue of your paper, to read of the opportunities for recreation and refreshment now provided in the various officers' club in parts of the "occupied area," and much as we appreciate the successful efforts already made in this direction for those fortunate enough to be stationed in, or near, Cologne, we do not want the treatment of "Cinderella" to be meted out to other areas. When, may I ask, can we at Bonn look forward to the happy day when something of the same nature may be provided for us here? It would be a real pleasure to break away occasionally from the Battery Mess (or perhaps even a Headquarters Mess) and "dine out." The change of food, as well as of company would materially add to one's joie de vivre, and I hope that, through your valuable influence, you will be able to stir things up a bit in Bonn. "Gunner."

OPEN AIR BAR FOR TROOPS.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.— Whilst appreciating the fact that the Army authorities are working hard for the general amusement and comfort of the troops forming the Army of Occupation, I would like to forward the following suggestion.

We are fully conversant with the fact that the average soldier enjoys nothing better than a quiet sit down in a bar, and a drop of good English beer.

Here in Cologne the wines offered for sale to the British soldier are generally admitted as being putrid and wretched stuff. Could not open air or English style bars be opened for the soldier who loves his glass, at which place he might obtain good English beer? I realize that the Unit wet canteen meets this suggestion to a certain extent, but not sufficiently. For (1) the average wet canteen is a small place where the soldier may obtain a pint of beer usually in his mess tin, and (2) the wet canteen is located at, or very near, the soldier's unit and billet. Therefore it is that the wet canteen does not spell "comfort" to the soldier. What he wants is an outside place, where he may sit down and feel himself free to enjoy his glass.

I am confident that if such places could be formed, they would be highly appreciated by the troops, and further, they would rid many soldiers from the immoral temptations to which they are at present exposed.

Staff Sergeant.

A SLIGHT ERROR.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post

Sir.— With your kind permission I shall make a reply to the report in the football match published in The Cologne Post recently, 5th Lab. Coy. v. 180th. The reporter pleads that his team is below strength owing to men being on leave, which accounts for defeat. Perhaps that is so, but what was the matter a few weeks ago when the 5th drew with 180th? Surely he can find some excuse for that. I admit that the former had most of the first half, in spite of facing a brilliant sun and gained many corners. Shortly after the interval, the 5th did not score, neither did they ever look like scoring after the penalty. The ball entered the net but twice during the whole game, and once the goal was disallowed for hands against Stevenson (180th). It is hard on the referee for him to say that the 5th scored. As the ball was at the least two yards from goal when the full-back handled, it would be very difficult to say, if the reporter were at the other goal. Even when the 5th got a penalty the 5th goalie failed to score and failed miserably, too, for he tried three times, twice from rebounds. But rather than the reporter admit that, he would have it that the 180th goalie saved luckily. The latter is impossible, for there are but two things to hit, providing the ball is between the sticks, namely the net and the goalie, and he hit the latter. Perhaps the one who kicked the penalty intended to carry the keeper through with the ball to the "music" of the pipes. This would have been an interval. He goes on to say that it was anybody's game. Did not the 180th press the 5th defence continuously from the time of the penalty kick to the finish? It was only the good play of the 5th full-back and keeper that kept the score low. It appears to have annoyed the 5th Lab. Coy. to suffer defeat. But perhaps they will challenge us to another game when all their players get back from leave. It is good practice to play with your betters.

How I improved my memory in one evening!

being the amazing experiences of Victor Jones, one of the 114,000, who last year took

The ROTH Memory Course

The Popular Course at a Popular Price

"Of course, I know you! Mr. Addison Clark, of Hull.

"If I remember correctly—and I do remember correctly—Mr. Burroughs, the timber merchant, introduced me to you at the luncheon at the Automobile Club three years ago this May. This is a pleasure indeed! I haven't seen you since that day. How is the grain business? And how did that amalgamation work out?"

The assurance of this speaker—in the crowded corridor of the Hotel Metropole—compelled me to turn and look at him, though I must say it is not my usual habit to eavesdrop even in a hotel lobby.

"He is David M. Roth, the most famous memory expert in the world," said my friend Kennedy, answering my question before I could get it out. "He will show you many more wonderful things than that before the evening is over."

And he did.

As we went into the banquet-room the host was introducing a long line of the guests to Mr. Roth. I got in line, and when it came to my turn, Mr. Roth asked, "What are your initials, Mr. Jones, and your business and telephone number?" Why he asked this I learned later, when he picked out from the crowd of 60 men he had met two hours before, and called each by name without a mistake. What is more, he named each man's business and telephone number accurately.

I won't tell you all the other amazing things this man did except how he called out, without a minute's hesitation, long lists of numbers, bank clearings, prices, lot numbers, parcel post rates, and anything else the guests gave him in rapid order.

When I met Mr. Roth again he rather bowled me over by saying, in his quiet, modest way:—

"There is nothing miraculous about my remembering anything I want to remember, whether it be names, faces, figures, facts, or something I have read in a magazine.

You can do this just as easily as I do.

"My own memory," continued Mr. Roth, "was originally very faulty. Yes, it was—a really poor memory. On meeting a man I would forget his name in thirty seconds, while now there are probably 10,000 men and women, many of whom I have met but once, whose names I can recall instantly on meeting them."

"That is all right for you, Mr. Roth," I interrupted. "You have given years to it. But how about me?"

"Mr. Jones," he replied. "I can teach you the secret of a good memory in one evening. I have done it with thousands of pupils. In the first of seven simple lessons which I have prepared for home study I show you the basic principle of my whole system, and you will find it not hard work, as you might fear, but just like playing a fascinating game. I will prove it to you."

He didn't have to prove it. His Course did: I got it the very next day from his publishers.

When I tackled the first lesson I was amazed to find that I had learned—in about an hour—how to remember a list of one hundred words so that I could call them out forward and backward without a single mistake.

That first lesson stuck. And so did the other six.

Read this letter from C. Louis Allen who at 32 years became head of a £200,000 concern, the Pyrene Manufacturing Company, makers of the famous fire extinguisher:—

"Now that the Roth Memory Course is finished, I want to tell you how much I have enjoyed the study of this most fascinating subject. Usually these courses involve a great deal of drudgery, but, this has been nothing but pure pleasure all the way through.. I have derived much benefit from taking the course of instructions, and feel that I shall continue to strengthen my memory. That is the best part of it. I shall be glad of an opportunity to recommend your work to my friends."

Mr. Allen didn't put it a bit too strongly.

The Roth Course is priceless! I can absolutely count on my memory now. I can recall the name of almost any man I have met before—and I am getting better all the time. I can remember any figures I wish to remember. Telephone numbers come to mind instantly once I have filed them by Mr. Roth's easy method. Addresses are just as easy.

The old fear of forgetting (you know what that is) has vanished.

Perhaps the most enjoyable part of it all is that I have become a good conversationalist.

I can recall like a flash of lightning almost any fact I want just at the instant I need it most. I used to think a brilliant memory belonged only to the prodigy and genius. Now I see that every man of us has that kind of memory if he only knows how to make it work properly.

I tell you it is a wonderful thing after groping around in the dark for so many years to be able to switch the big searchlight on your mind, and see instantly everything you want to remember.

My advice to you is, don't wait another minute. Send to the National Business and Personal Efficiency Department 47a, of the Standard Art Book Co., Ltd., for Mr. Roth's amazing course, and see what a wonderful memory you have got. Your dividends in INCREASING EARNING POWER will be enormous.

VICTOR JONES.

A few testimonials just received.

"After the second lesson I had my money's worth, and would not part with what it has done for me for many times its cost. It is simplicity itself." —

J. M., M.D.

"The course has been of real value to me. The small amount of time required and the simplicity of the method will appeal to any busy business man." —

Ford Motor Company.

"Can truthfully say that it is the best investment I have ever made." —

J. W. CAPEK, Branch Manager.

SEND NO MONEY.

So confident are the publishers of the Roth Memory course that once you have an opportunity to see in your own home how easy it is to double, yes, treble, your memory power in a few short hours that they are willing to send the course for free examination.

DON'T SEND ANY MONEY. Merely write a letter, and the complete course will be sent at once. If you are not entirely satisfied send it back any time within three days after you receive it, and you will owe nothing.

But if you are as pleased as are the 114,000 other men and women who have taken the course, send only 30s. in full payment. You take no risk, and you have everything to gain, so post the letter now before this remarkable offer is withdrawn.

Answers to Correspondents.

[The flow of correspondence, since the Cologne Post was instituted, has been enormous, and the Editor would like to point out that only a certain number of the innumerable questions can be answered in each issue. Should any inquirer find that his question has not yet been answered, he can have the assurance that it will receive attention in due course, and the answer will appear accordingly. Many questions have been received which could be answered much easier by the Adjutant of the unit concerned, and all such cases which affect the unit commander must be taken to him and not sent here. — Ed.]

J.E.—We will do this as soon as possible.

H.C.—The true meaning of the word fraternize is "brotherly affection." The meaning intended in Orders is "intimacy" with Germans.

H.E.—Apply to your District Directorate, Ministry of Reconstruction.

Inquirer.—Not yet. The matter is a weighty one but is, we believe, being earnestly considered. Much will undoubtedly depend upon the nature of the ratified terms.

W.Y.W.—Yes there are Catholic services in Cologne. See our announcements on page two of to morrow's.

A.C.—Sorry we cannot give you instructions, but if you wish to rid yourself of the goods you mention, send them along.

Interested Tommy.—Thanks for your letter. The subject is being dealt with already by others.

T.R.—Write a letter to your Adjutant or officer-in-charge, and give the same facts as those you sent to us. You can claim demobilization on compassionate grounds.

A. to C.—A.T., 197653, Turf and others. The Derby runners will be published as soon as they are available. The list will be known in ample time to make your draw.

J.T.B.R.—No, the M.G.C. do not own the title "Royal".

R.R.—Not necessarily, but it is a custom.

185. S.B.—These are the four largest counties in England:—Yorkshire, 3,872,899 acres; Lincoln, 1,705,233 acres; Devon, 1,658,995 acres; Norfolk, 1,303,570 acres.

C.E.R.—A guard on duty over a General's Headquarters will pay compliments to the General whether he is in uniform or civilian dress.

A.G.—Write to your Record Office.

T.P.—Twelve years is the qualifying period for the Territorial Force Efficiency Medal.

M.A.—Yes, as you were serving in a theatre of war before December 31, 1915, you are entitled to the 1914-1915 star.

24612.—A man serving on a regular engagement receives the one pound a year in addition to his war gratuity.

N.C.O.—The rate of bonus, paid to men of the Army of Occupation is:— Sergeant, 14s. per week; corporal 12s. 3d. per week; private, 10s 6d. per week.

16 L.F.R.S.—Your question is vague as there are so many records, such as time, distance, endurance, etc. The Lands End to John o' Groats record (about 900 miles) is held by H. Green, who cycled the distance in 2 days 19 hours 50 minutes, in 1908.

RELIEF FORCE ARRIVES AT ARCHANGEL.

PURSUIT OF BOLSHEVISTS.

PREPARATIONS FOR AFGHAN CAMPAIGN.

GERMAN-RUSSIAN INTRIGUES.

AFGHANISTAN PUNITIVE EXPEDITION.

METHODICAL PREPARATIONS.

Quiet and methodical plans are being made to continue the war. Miles of laden camels, bullocks, and carts are now passing through the Khyber Pass, in addition to motor convoys and despatch riders, the whole presenting a wonderful and romantic sight. Snipers are lurking in the Bazar Valley, but are afraid to approach the pass.

All is quiet on the Datka front. There is a gathering of tribesmen in the Mohmand country, two marches from Shabkadar, under Mir Jan Badshah, and a few Afghans are blowing bugles and making martial noises on the Peiwar Kotal on the Kurram side, but no importance is attached to these demonstrations. The situation is unaltered in the direction of Wano, where we are fully prepared.

It is impossible to ascertain definitely the fate of the Amir's brother, Nasrullah Khan, who was reported to have been imprisoned for life as the instigator of the murder of the Amir Habibullah. Frontier opinion inclines to the belief that he died a few days after the new Amir's accession. The Afridis, on the other hand, believe that he is still alive, and it was stated among them the other day that the Amir had sent for Nasrullah and offered him the throne, saying that he himself was going to fight on the Khyber front in the uniform of a common soldier. Nasrullah refused, on the ground that Inayatullah, the late Amir's eldest son, should have had the offer made to him. The Amir is also reported to have offered Nasrullah the command of the Khost army, which the latter refused. Anyway, the Amir is staying at Kabul, and is unlikely to proceed to Jelallabad while that city is subject to air raids.

BOMBS ON AMIR'S PALACE.

Simla. A telegram reporting the aerial attacks on Jalallabad says that these bombing raids have been highly successful. In a night raid Captain Carbery dropped four small bombs on the Amir's Palace. In a day raid four bombs were dropped amongst 2,000 infantry on parade, inflicting about fifty casualties. The infantry scattered into the barracks, which were bombed in the next raid. Six direct hits were obtained, and all the bombs were dropped in the town, which is much damaged. Fifteen machines took part in the raid, and nearly two tons of bombs were dropped.—Reuter.

It is reported that parties of Afridis and other tribesmen arrived at Jelallabad after our aerial bombardment of the fortifications and barracks on the 21st and freely looted the almost deserted city. The troops fled panic-stricken, and the looters helped themselves liberally to the unprotected army stores. The Nawab of Dir repeats his congratulations on the British successes, and declares that he is confident of the Amir's ultimate ruin. The leading Maliks of the important Achakzai tribe in Chaman have given assurances of their loyalty to the Government.—Reuter.

AFGHAN FRONTIER FORT CAPTURED.

Peshawar, 27th May. Hakka front is quiet. The Afghan General Nadir Khan, who has arrived at Madum, is now beginning to show signs of activity.

A mixed force of Khost tribesmen and Afghan regulars has advanced down the Kaitar river and crossed our border in the direction of Spinwam. Our small frontier post there has been safely withdrawn.

The general officer commanding in Beluchistan reports the capture of the Baldak fort.—Reuter.

RIGA ADVANCE CONTINUES.

Stockholm. A report form the Baltic national force at Riga says our losses at the taking of Riga were small. The majority of the Bolshevist garrison were taken prisoner and our troops are still advancing. Indescribable misery prevails. The population is overjoyed at being freed from the Bolshevists. News of the arrival of the American commission with forty railway waggon loads of flour was enthusiastically received.—Reuter.

NEW EGYPTIAN MINISTRY.

General Allenby has reported that a new Ministry was formed in Egypt on May 21 composed as follows:

Prime Minister, and Minister of the Interior—Mohammed Said Pasha.
Public Works—Ismail Serry Pasha.
Finance—Yusef Wahba Pasha.
Education—Ahmed Ziwar Pasha.
Agriculture—Abdel Rahim Sabry Pasha.
Justice—Ahmed Zulficar Pasha.
Wakfs (Pious Foundations)—Mohammed Tewfik Nessim Bey.

Mohammed Said Pasha preceded Rushdy Pasha as Prime Minister: Serry Pasha, Wahba Pasha, and Ziwar Pasha were Ministers in the last Cabinet.

The House of Lords, by sixty-nine votes against twenty, has passed a motion which the Government opposed demanding a judicial enquiry into the dismissal of Miss Violet Douglas Pennant from the Royal Air Force.

GERMANS AND RUSSIANS INTRIGUING.

RANTZAU AND SCHEIDEMANN.

Stockholm, 27th May. The Russian-Scandinavian Information Bureau here has received the following communication from Berne:

"Negotiations between Germans and Russian Bolsheviks are in full swing. They are being conducted secretly through the well-known Socialist, Parvus, who is at present living in Switzerland. Parvus is keeping up intimate relations with Herr Scheidemann and Count Brockdorff-Rantzau, who are both old friends of his. As he also has good relations with the International Socialists, Parvus has lately entered into communication with the Hungarian Bolsheviks, in order to organize a common front.

"The task of making an agreement with the Soviet Government has been entrusted to Parvus, owing to his intimate connection with Trotsky and other leading Russian Bolsheviks, together with whom he organized the famous 'Council of Workmen's Deputies' at Petrograd. If Germany refuses to sign the Peace Treaty a plan to organize Bolshevik movements on a large scale in most European countries, including Turkey and the Balkans, is being elaborated. It is rumoured that Parvus is trying to establish, as the basis of a Russo-German agreement, the complete abandonment of terrorism and its substitution by a real democracy. It is interesting to note that Parvus is a shareholder in all the leading German Social-Democracy papers, and is intimately connected with Vorwärts." — Reuter.

RISING IN KURDISTAN.

A serious rising has occurred in South Kurdistan, where the gendarmerie have been defeated. The wires are cut and it is feared that British officers and troops have been taken prisoners. The movement is considered to be due to intrigues of the Turkish Committee of Union and Progress. The necessary steps have been taken by the Mesopotamian Army to overthrow the tribesmen by disciplined force.

BOLSHEVIST TRANS-CASPIAN SUCCESS.

The Bolshevists success on the 20th May occurred in the trans-Caspians twenty-eight miles North East of Merv, an achievement which was facilitated by the fact that several hundred Armenian troops deserted to them.

The Bolshevists have gained a footing in the Merv oasis just when the crops are ripening and when they have every facility for provisioning and maintaining a large force there.

On the Eastern shore of the Caspian Sea the Bolshevists have occupied Alexandrovisk.

The British Caspian squadron encountered an enemy squadron on the 18th May and sank a number of barges containing coal and wood and captured the crews.

RELIEF FORCE REACHES ARCHANGEL.

It is officially announced that the Relief Force commanded by General Grogan, V.C., has arrived at Archangel. It was formally received on the 27th May by the Governor General, the Commander of the Russian Troops and representatives of public bodies.

H. M. the King has telegraphed to General Ironside and General Maynard congratulating them on the endurance and achievements of the troops during the long Arctic winter.—Reuter.

PURSUING THE BOLSHEVISTS.

Copenhagen, 28th May. — The Troops which took Riga are continuing their advance into Livonia. According to reports received by the Lett Information Bureau here, they have captured the station and the famous bridgehead of Uexkuell on the Dvina, eighteen miles east of Riga, which is the strategic key to Riga, and also the station of Rodenpois (Ropashi) on the Riga-Pskoff railway. The pursuit of the Bolsheviks is continuing.

The official Esthonian Press Bureau issued the following communiqué to-day: "The Esthonian Army Headquarters' report for yesterday announces the capture of the town of Volmar, a railway junction sixty-two miles to the north-east of Riga. The hasty retreat of the Bolshevists is continuing uninterruptedly in the eastern sector of this front, the neighbourhood south of the town of Verro having been cleared of them."—Reuter.

ANTI-BOLSHEVIST INSURGENTS.

The War Office states that the Anti-Bolshevist insurgents on the Upper Don consist of an independent mounted infantry brigade 2,500 strong, five divisions each four thousand strong, fourteen field guns and one howitzer. The insurgents, who are suffering from lack of officers, ammunition and medical stores, hope soon to join General Denikin. The morale of the insurgents is excellent and that of the Bolshevists bad. The latter are committing atrocities and mutilating women and children.—Reuter.

INQUEST ON MURDERED W.A.A.C.

CORONER'S SUMMING UP.

The Bedford coroner yesterday concluded his inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the death of Miss Ellen Florence Ruby Rault, the young W.A.A.C., who was found murdered in Wilstead Wood on May 12, after she had been missing from the Haynes Park R.E. Camp, close by for three days. The jury's decision was as follows: "We find that Nellie Florence Ruby Rault was brutally murdered by being stabbed in the heart, and we return an open verdict."

Company Sergeant-Major Hepburn, R.E., who has been remanded on a charge of murder, was again present in court when the inquiry, which was held at the camp, was continued. He was asked by the coroner whether he wished to enter the witness-box, and he replied, "Not to-day, sir."

STATEMENTS AT VARIANCE.

The coroner, addressing the jury, spoke of the evidence given by Bray and Lewis, the Bedford Modern schoolboys, as to the hard breathing and the cracking of dry bushes in the woods. He did not know what the theory was, but if it was that the murder was committed, and that the cracking of the dry brushes accounted for the murderer walking away, it was very strange that Private Rush, who was walking along the road and passed that identical spot only a second before the boys left there, heard nothing to attract his attention. Sergeant-Major Hepburn's written statement, his answers to Superintendent Underwood's question, and the evidence given by Sergeant-Major Smith as to Hepburn's movements on the afternoon of May 9 were entirely at variance. The coroner also pointed out the differences in the evidence as to whether or not Hepburn was wearing black leggings or puttees on May 9, and, proceeding, commented on the fact that Hepburn made no report to anyone until he volunteered to make a statement to the commanding officer.

THEORY OF THE TRAGEDY.

On the Sunday he went to have tea with Mrs. Spiller at Ampthill, and in the course of a conversation with her he said the girl he was dancing with on the Thursday was missing. He added, "The funny part is they asked me if I knew where she is. I know nothing about her." Somebody had evidently asked Hepburn on the Saturday if he knew something about the girl, and it was curious, said the coroner, that he had made no inquiries or reports, considering he had undoubtedly an appointment with her on the Friday afternoon. Reconstructing the crime, the coroner said there was a theory that the girl went to the gate of the camp to meet someone whom she must have known very well indeed. It had been stated that she was a lively girl, and it might be that she teased her lover, who lost his temper and seized her by the wrist. That would account for the bruise on the wrist. "She struggled," surmised the coroner, "and ran into the wood, where she fell over the undergrowth and cut her face on something hard such as turf and scratched and bruised her face. The individual followed and stabbed her in the back twice. She gets up on her hands and begs her assailant to spare her. What does he do? He stabs her three times in the chest and once through the heart."

MURDERER'S MOTIVE.

What was the motive? The jury had heard deceased had been in the habit of keeping £2 10s in notes to enable her to return to her home in case of emergency. The wallet was found on her body, but there were no notes in it. In the pocket of her dress they found some silver. If the motive had been robbery would her assailant not have gone through the pockets of the girl as well as taking the notes from the wallet? Anyway, the money in the wallet could not be found. The crime must have been committed in broad daylight within fifteen yards of the camp gate, and was it probable or likely that any tramp or stranger would commit such a crime for robbery within that distance of the camp? Two pounds ten in notes were found upon Hepburn, but, said the coroner, that might have been a coincidence, and therefore he did not attach much significance to that fact.

After deliberating for half an hour the jury returned the verdict stated, the result being received with applause in court.

TRAINING FOR WIVES AND FIANCEES.

In the House of Commons the Minister of Labour was asked if, under the proposed scheme for the free training of unemployed women applicants had been informed that wives and fiancées only could be trained in domestic work, and that training for factories and workshops was confined to young registered unemployed women; and why fiancées, whose position might be precarious, should be penalised.

The reply was that there is no intention of confining the training of wives and fiancées to domestic work. The special scheme for wives and fiancées is intended to apply to those women who do not wish to enter industrial life, but who wish shortly to set up a home of their own.

At what period does walking out appear in the training? asked a member.

I must have notice of that, replied Mr. Wardle, amid laughter.

Lieut.-Colonel Sir F. Hall then asked: What would be construed as a "precarious position" by the Government?

"That is a hypothetical question," was the reply.

CITY FREEDOM FOR PRINCE OF WALES.

"I FOUND MY MANHOOD."

A most brilliant scene was enacted at the Guildhall yesterday when amid all the ancient pomp and ceremony of the City Corporation, the Prince of Wales was admitted to the freedom of the City of London. The banner hung hall formed a multi-coloured canopy to the distinguished gathering, while the befurred robes of the aldermen and the resplendent uniforms of the City officials mingled with the khaki worn by many famous generals and made up a picturesque spectacle. Those present included the Duke of Connaught and other members of the Royal family, Lord Curzon, Lord Crewe, Lord Burnham, Sir John Fisher, Admiral Wemyss, General Birdwood, Sir A. Currie, the Maharajah of Bikamir, Lord Sinha, General Sykes, Earl Ampthill and Mr. Lloyd George. The Lord Mayor, Sir Horace B. Marshall, presided, seated on a raised dais, and in a gilt chair next him sat H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.

After the usual ceremonial the City Chamberlain in the course of his speech expressed the most cordial welcome on behalf of the City and reminded the Prince that he was of the fourth generation of the Royal Family who had been made a Freeman. He then proceeded to outline the Prince's career up to the present, especially emphasizing the gallant part he had played in the war, (prolonged cheering) and concluded by requesting him to accept two handsome pieces of plate.

The Prince, who wore the uniform of the Grenadier Guards, on rising to reply spoke in clear and confident tones. He heartily thanked the gathering for their splendid reception and expressed his gratitude for the honour conferred upon him. He devoted a large part of his speech to extolling the four London Divisions and paid an eloquent tribute to their magnificent work throughout the campaign. At the conclusion of the ceremony luncheon was held at the Mansion House.

His speech was characterized by happy phrases. One of the most striking was when, acknowledging the references to his period of service at the front, he said "In these four years I mixed with men; in those four years I found my manhood. When I think of the future and of the heavy responsibilities which may fall to my lot I feel that the experience gained since 1914 will stand me in good stead."

THEFT OF ARMY PAY ORDERS.

PAY CLERK CHARGED.

Cecil Hall, 35, accountant, of Trinity-road, Wandsworth Common, was charged at Tower Bridge yesterday with stealing between January 21 and February 2 from a locked cupboard at the Huts, Buckland, Dover, 50 demobilization postal drafts of the negotiable value of £700, the property of the War Office. The drafts form part of a number stolen from Dover value £10,000.

Detective-Inspector Cornish, of New Scotland Yard, said that on Monday when told he should be arrested on suspicion of stealing Army money orders Hall denied having them. The witness then said, "Four of the stolen drafts were found in a cab at Waterloo Railway Station after a man had alighted from it, and I am satisfied you are the man." On the way to the police station Hall said he was demobilized from Dover, where he was a clerk in the Pay Corps. "I remember now about those four drafts found in a cab," he added, "and I can tell you how I got them." Hall made a statement at the station and signed it, but the witness would not read it until the next hearing. In a locked box in Hall's bedroom were bank notes and Treasury notes worth £101.

A remand was ordered.

THE CHURCH MILITANT.

HAIG'S SIMILES.

Field Marshal Haig and General Horne, who visited the Church of Scotland General Assembly at Edinburgh yesterday were received by a guard of honour of chaplains.

Addressing the Assembly Sir Douglas urged the establishment of a General Staff for the Christian Churches of the Empire analogous to the Imperial General Staff in military organisation. The only means of securing a permanent peace was to develop the spirit of brotherhood born of the war, to which end the active help of a vigorous National Church was necessary. A beginning should be made by forming an United National Church in Great Britain, after which a great Imperial Church should be formed to maintain the determination of the peoples of the Empire.

In this connection Sir Douglas rejoiced to see the movement towards the Presbyterian Reunion in Scotland and what Scotland hoped to gain for herself she must help the whole Empire to achieve.

CONCESSIONS TO LONDON POLICE.

In the House of Commons, replying to questions, Mr. Shortt said that he was aware of the unrest in the Metropolitan police. It was partly due to outside influence and partly to genuine grievances. As far as the genuine grievances are concerned the Government is taking all necessary steps to meet them.

A committee is enquiring into the pay and conditions of service and a ready enough is known to enable the Government to say that there will be a substantial increase in pay, which will be made retrospective as from the 1st April, and there will be substantial improvements on conditions of service.

The Government is arranging that the right of the police to their own internal organization for protection of their own interests shall be put on a regulation basis. The present Police Union will not be recognized.

THE MEN WHO RESCUED HAWKER.

RAYNHAM ASKS FOR GRIEVE.

Horsens, Denmark, 29th May. An interesting account of how Hawker and Grieve were saved in mid-Atlantic was told to Reuter's correspondent by the captain and second mate of the steamship Mary, which arrived at Horsens in the early hours of this morning.

The second mate had the watch, when suddenly at six o'clock on Monday morning they sighted an aeroplane which soon came down in the water by the Mary's bow. They at once set about launching a lifeboat. It was only with considerable difficulty that the boat was launched and it took one hour to get the airmen aboard.

Hawker and Grieve were at first very exhausted but they soon recovered when they got aboard for they had not been long in the water. They were very sleepy; so sleepy in fact, that they declined the food that was offered them.

They were very disappointed that they had not succeeded in completing the flight and winning the prize and throughout their six days stay aboard were very troubled because they were unable to let their families know that they had been saved.

St. John's, Newfoundland, 29th May. Raynham has invited Commander Grieve to navigate the Martynside on its Trans-Atlantic flight, replacing Captain Morgan who was injured in the crash when taking off. Raynham's machine is being repaired and will possibly make a trial flight this week but Raynham will require a new engine from England before starting for Ireland.

Hawker's machine has arrived at Falmouth on board the s.s. Lake Charleville, and is being brought to London as soon as possible. It will be exhibited on the roof of Selfridge's.

R 34's ADVENTURES.

The R 34, the gigantic airship which it is anticipated will attempt the Atlantic flight very soon, was taken over by the Admiralty and left Glasgow on Wednesday night for the aerodrome at East Fortune, Haddingtonshire.

It had an adventurous voyage owing to fog and low clouds. The crew of thirty-one discovered at 10 p.m. that they were lost over the North Sea. Later they made the aerodrome and cruised overhead all night long in the hope of landing in the morning but were prevented by fog. They travelled in the daytime as far as Yorkshire and eventually at 3.30 in the afternoon landed at Berwick Law, near the aerodrome. All were exhausted, as they had been twenty-one hours in the air without food, it having been calculated that the trip would only occupy two hours.

General Maitland, Director of Air Ship Services, and Colonel Hicks were aboard.

OIL FLOW IN ENGLAND.

For the first time mineral oil of high quality and in considerable quantity at the first flow has been discovered in England. For some months past, owing to the enterprise of Lord Cowdray, head of the great firm of Weatman and Pearson, experimental borings have been made near Chesterfield in Derbyshire.

Oil was first struck on Tuesday night at a depth of approximately three thousand feet. The oil rose to the height of fifty feet and yesterday stood in the bore at the height of four hundred feet.

American drillers describe it as a very fine show. The surface of the oil bearing sand has only been scratched as yet and it is hoped that deeper drilling will increase the flow. The oil, which is flowing at considerable pressure is being tested. It smells strongly of paraffin and benzine.

GERMAN DELEGATES' FAREWELL CELEBRATION.

Before leaving Versailles for Berlin yesterday, a number of subordinate members of the German delegation, realising that their work was over, indulged in a riotous night, with much drink. Long after midnight the quiet of Versailles was disturbed by the strains of the "Marseillaise" shouted lustily by a band of rejoicing Germans, who also cried, "Hurrah for France!" "Hurrah for Germany!" "Hurrah for peace!" Their celebrations occasioned sharp disciplinary measures by Count Rantzau, and accelerated the departure of a number of the participants for Berlin.

Nothing has yet developed indicating definitely what the German Commissioners will do in case the Entente adheres firmly to its original project. Reuter.

COMPENSATION FOR INTERNED CIVILIANS.

Mr. Harmsworth says that the possibility of obtaining from enemy Governments compensation for British subjects who were interned in enemy countries is under consideration. Those who desire to claim compensation should—if they have not already done so—notify their claims to the Foreign Claims Office, S.W. 1.

NEW OPERATIC STAR.

The young Irish soprano, Marguerite Sheridan, made her debut at Covent Garden on Wednesday and scored a triumph as Mimi in La Boheme. The critics describe her as a singer of rare distinction.

Flight-Lieutenant Casale, of the French Army, in a Série machine, yesterday attained a record height of 9,333 mètres (30,612 ft).

Subscriptions to the latest Victory Loan amounted to 5,250 million dollars. The loan was oversubscribed to the extent of 750 million dollars, which amount will be refused.

OUR NATIONAL ASSET.

"Tis not in mortals to command success;
But we'll do more, Sempronius, we'll deserve it.'

The whole of the English speaking world today thrills with joy at the return to England of two of her great heroes. Not only England and her dominions, but America, France, and other sympathetic nations rejoice with us that Hawker and Grieve have been saved from what appeared to be an inevitable doom.

There is little reason to dwell upon the facts of this daring effort of the two Britishers to cross the Atlantic by aeroplane. These particulars are well known. It will be remembered that America led the way in this great attempt on the 16th May, with her seaplanes N. C. 1, N. C. 3 and N. C. 4. Hawker and Grieve on learning these facts decided to make a dash, despite the adverse conditions of the weather which they knew would add considerably to the already great risk.

These two brave men realised that the conditions were unfavourable; they realised, too, that there was but little chance of their reaching this side in safety. But they knew that the Americans were making a bold bid to gain for their country the honour of the first trans-Atlantic flight, and there was only one means of wresting from them the laurels. Thus did they begin the flight, the accounts of which filled us with mingled fear and hope for more than a week.

Hawker and Grieve were our representatives, and every Britisher looked to them with confidence for the winning of an additional glory to our Empire's proud record. They did not fail us, though we should have preferred them to descend from the clouds on to the appointed ground in Ireland, rather than have to drop in mid-ocean.

But the attempt is one of which every Britisher can be proud. It is one more example of that true spirit of daring and enterprise which ever has been associated with our great Empire.

No effort is needed to recall to mind the glowing accounts of heroism and patriotism of our forefathers.

In peace and in war, throughout the whole history of England, one can discern the same steadfastness, chivalry, devotion, and self-sacrifice of Britains' subjects for their country, and these qualities alone have enabled us to reach to our present and glorious position.

In October, 1415, at the outset of the Battle of Agincourt, when matters were proving to be serious, one of the knights asked Henry whether he would not prefer more resources. The gallant King replied "I would not have a single man more. If God gives us the victory it will be plain that we owe it to His grace. If not, the fewer we are, the less loss of England." And this simple yet strong devotion resulted in a glorious victory.

Again, nearly four hundred years later, Napoleon, observing that internal conditions of England were very favourable for his attack, intended to invade our country and made an alliance with Spain in order to destroy our fleet so that he might get his troops across. But what happened? Dissension amongst our political parties ceased forthwith, a rush to join the forces followed, and Trafalgar brought us another splendid triumph.

"England has saved herself by her courage," said Pitt in what proved to be his final remarks, "she will save Europe by her example."

Many may be astonished that so much enthusiasm has been aroused in this recent act of gallantry. For more than four years we have been witnessing similar actions almost every day. The splendid bravery of our old army at Mons in August 1914; the heroic actions of the Australians and our Territorials at Gallipoli a year later; the splendid steadfastness of the new soldiers during the retreat of 1918—these are only isolated examples of the fortitude and valour which brought us victory, and which serve to show that the Empire of to-day has maintained and is maintaining her excellent heritage.

But not only in war have we gained such brilliant achievements. The whole of the civilized world is indebted to England for her scientists, her pioneers, her writers; to such as Darwin, Tyndall and Huxley for their theories, to Livingstone, Drake, Scott, and Shackleton for their discoveries; to Harvey and Jenner for their medical research; to Watt, Stevenson an Arkwright for their inventions; to Shakespeare, Carlyle, Macaulay and Dickens for their writings.

And what of the future? To the young soldiers of the Rhine Army this magnificent attempt to belaurel further the Homeland should serve as a splendid example.

We own a rich inheritance of which we can be justly proud. But that heritage must be maintained, and we must be willing and ready to keep high our flag of endeavour, enterprise, and chivalrous daring.

Our work has not finished when we throw off the khaki. To-day, more than ever before, does the Empire need men of grit, force, and keen insight into the world's politics.

Power of concentration is necessary, too, for in this we have the secret of strength in the controlling of human affairs. No man can be efficient unless he possesses this quality, neither can any nation make advancement without this most essential element dominating the lives of all its citizens.

Our self-sacrifice for the benefit of the nation—as exemplified by the attempt of Hawker and Grieve—is a duty we owe to the Empire; it is a tribute we must pay to the memory of those who have gone before; it is a precedent we must make for those who are to follow.

TO HAWKER AND GRIEVE.

The whole wide world rejoices and is glad
To know that you are saved — for efforts frantic
Were made to find you, and 'twas feared you had Become the victims of the vast Atlantic.

Although you failed (through no fault of your own)
To reach the hoped-for goal of your ambition,
For good old England you have gained renown,
To history made a valuable addition.

The bard may well be quoted at this hour,
(His name, I have no doubt, you will recall, sirs)
'Tis better to have tried and failed, by far,
Than never to have made the flight at all, sirs.

Oh, splendid fools, take from a grateful nation,
Their heartfelt thanks and lasting admiration.

THE QUESTION OF TONGUES.

V.

WILLIAM R. PATTERSON F.R.G.S. etc.

I am extremely glad to find that my articles on the encouragement of language-study by the British have induced many readers of The Cologne Post also to contribute articles and publish letters relating to the importance of such study. A writer recently contributed a valuable letter advising us to learn the Spanish tongue for purposes of South American trade. There could be no better advice given to you sturdy young Britons who are with us here in the Occupied Territory, for, later on, many of you will undoubtedly seek your welfare in western climes, just as many have done before you. As an engineer you may, by sticking to your work, become successful there. As a planter you will find ample scope for advancement. As a representative of a British firm or as a rancher you may do equally well. If you are not an expert in some such trade or profession you will need of course to accept a subordinate position but if you have already a fair knowledge of the Spanish language your chances of a good post on arrival are greatly increased. This is, supposing you go out on prospect; if you are sent out as a representative or agent that is another matter. In either case, the better your acquaintanceship with the colloquial by so much the more will you gain. The foreigner, whoever he may be, is generally willing to give preference to British goods; let us meet him half-way therefore and study his idiom. We are a business nation; we must be so; we have so many colonies and we are experts in manufactured goods; we invent, we discover, we expand. But there are other business nations, and the existence of so many brings competition. It is generally the agent who speaks the language of his customer who is most successful in commerce for, since time is money, the customer will prefer not to prolong negotiations. Yes, by all means learn Spanish!

* * *

Great Britain sorely needs linguists, now, more than ever before. We all have an equal chance in this branch of education, and one is never too old to learn.

THE RUCKSACK.

In beautiful Britain, the rucksack has always been considered a thing enshrouded by a subtle glamour of adventure and romance. Its very name holds an enchanted world—a world of bewitching loveliness wherein care is forgotten and the heart sings with the joy of life.

But here, in Germany, the rucksack falls from its high estate and becomes somewhat ordinary and prosaic—a thing to be associated with cities and toil and commerce rather than with blue skies and lone heaths, It is possessed, so it would seem by every German, including children; whilst in the average English town it is an object of unstinted curiosity.

To a Britisher, beholding for the first time, this unceremonious use of his sacred rucksack, it comes as a bitter shock, a disillusion, a shattering, as it were, of cherished memories.

The Rucksack first claimed attention at the close of last year when, after the Armistice, numbers of men and boys of France returned from exile—a roughly made contrivance set upon the shoulder of slaves freed from bondage.

It was seen again in Belgium where it was used largely by women for carrying goods of various descriptions.

But, in Deutschland, the rucksack, in its proper form, appears on every hand, striking a discordant note in well nigh all streets of the busy city at almost every hour of the day. It has become vulgarised and disgraced.

Yet these people are hardly to blame; the principles upon which the rucksack is constructed are excellent; heavy loads can be borne with a minimum of fatigue. It is a convenient, sensible method of portage, allowing unrestricted use of the arms.

However, after all, even here in the Fatherland, the rucksack also fulfils its proper rôle. It plays its part in the Kingdom of Romance, and rises to the poetic heights upon wich it has ever been placed by the Englishman.

For the rucksack fittingly graces the back of the German wanderer exploring the ancient villages historic castles and solitary forests of the Rhine valley; it tones with the picturesque garb of the Deutsch angler and harmonises with the costume and spirit of the nomadic musician.

In German art, too, the rucksack figures conspicuously. Its presence may be noted in many a picture or on a daintily coloured postcard or the cover of a wander-book. So faithfully has the German artist portrayed the true spirit and sentiment of the nomad, that it is difficult to realise that this people has, through the ages, been held relentlessly under the iron fist of militarism.

Perhaps, to the Englishman—at least, the Englishman fired with wander-lust—the rucksack means very much more than to the German. In no way whatsoever does the islander connect it with the turmoil of city life but only with the quietude and contentment begotten of leafy lanes and vast open spaces. It reminds him of Britain—that beautiful land in whose defence no sacrifice can ever be too great. It sets him sighing for Walt. Whitman's "long brown path" and for the loneliness of the purple mountains.

Furthermore, the rucksack suggests a glorious way of spending that "twenty-eight-days-leave," which will happen sooner or later. How intoxicating to tramp once more, with a congenial companion, across the fertile soil of old England! But this companion must be a kindred spirit—a wander-mate who can fall in with the mood of the moment and who knows instinctively when speech is irreverent. For, sometimes, in solemn silence only can the beauty of certain scenes be fully appreciated and admired.

It will hardly be imagined that the ex-soldier will undertake an expedition as arduous as Belloc's "Path to Rome," despite the charm of adventure involved in such a journey—the nights under the stars, the mystery of the dark hours, the cafés, the wines and the fascination of strange peoples, No! it must be something less strenuous, and above all British. But Belloc also knew a more tranquil "path"—the trail across the Sussex downlands and, elsewhere, amid the sleepy villages and shady woods of Blighty.

Perhaps the quiet, gay philosophy of Stevenson at the sincere enthusiasm of Hazlitt might better suit the returned warrior, who has not yet quite forgotten the hardships of war. For him, the shorter journey, the joy of arrival, the cosiness of the old-world inn, the tastiness of the evening meal, the peaceful smoke out of doors in the moonlight, the anticipations of the morrow—by such a "path" he attains happiness and rest.

No man loved Nature more passionately than Richard Jefferies. What his studies of the open-air world failed to tell of this burning passion, his extraordinary book, "The Story of my heart," revealed to the very depths. The fields of waving grasses, the green trees, the snowy blossoms, the breezy hills, the rivers murmuring between flower-bedecked banks, all seemed to be part of his very life. And no man was ever more fitted than he to wear a rucksack.

—Moorlander.

THE DAWN OF HOPE.

The night of dark despair has passed,
The night of hideous pain;
The anguish of four years is cast,
And Peace peeps through again.

Oft in the gloom our stumbling feet
By tortuous pathways trod,
But now to us the joy is sweet
To see the Heavens broad.

The thunder clouds begin to clear
And, from the eastern slope,
More glorious and bright appear
The smiling rays of Hope.

To Her we lift our weary eyes
Some comfort to behold —
She bids our drooping spirits rise
And greet the dawn of gold.

But still in that bright firmament
A few black patches lurk,
For Hate does not yet rest content
With all his dev'lish work.

See even now his sullen shade
Expanding slow but sure,
And deep his sombre schemes are laid
The brightness to obscure.

Still must our faith remain steadfast
Towards the rising red;
And so may Hope's warm rays at last
O'er all Creation spread.

"THE OWLERS."

79th R.G.A. BRIGADE'S SUCCESSFUL OPENING PERFORMANCE.

The Concert Party of the 79th Brigade R.G.A. gave their first performance, since coming to the Rhine area, on Saturday evening at the Cuchenheim Theatre, when they were enthusiastically received by a crowded house.

The troupe has been strengthened by several new-comers, amongst whom are Bombdr. W. Pawson and Driver W.C. Fulton, late of "The Bundooks." The former, a ventriloquist of more than average ability, is well known under another name, on the music hall stage, and the latter has recently appeared with considerable success at the Palais d'Ete and Gaiety Theatre, Brussels. Other new comers are Lieuts. Palin and Oxberry; Ptes Greenburg, Brown and Gnr. Fletcher who have all had considerable stage experience.

Old favourites remain in Bombdr. Broome and Davison, Ptes Evans and Corner. The entire show was well staged and the various items were rendered with artistic finish. "The Owlers" will visit the Casino, Euskirchen, for four nights, commencing June the 4th.

THE GAY "GREEN DIAMONDS."

9th D.L.I's CONCERT PARTY AT CENTRAL Y.M.C.A.

The concert party of the 9th D.L.I., the "Green Diamonds", enhanced their reputation by their performance at the Central Y.M.C.A. hall on Thursday evening. An audience of nearly 2,000 were entertained by a show that never lagged. The party displayed an excellent camaraderie and their programme was both clean and refined.

Cpl. Davis was a coquettish "Molly," and the footwork of her "admirers" added zest to "her" item, "The Man I love." Pte. Milburn's tenor solo "I'll sing to you" received hearty applause, whilst Cpl. Dimpleby's effort "I'm learning a song" was in the best style of humour. Pte. Bowers' step-dancing was a good turn, and Pte. Ryder's interpretation of "Légende" shows that he is a musician "born not made." Cpl. Greatham made a good light comedian in "Nightmares."

Pte. Stevens was a finished elocutionist in his monologue "The Colonel," whilst Cpl. Davis's "Annie" was popular with the audience, who helped "her" in the chorus. 2nd Lt. Emberson, who acts as chaperon to the party, pleased the audience with his subtle humour in a topical talking turn. The lighting effects were excellent in "My Moon," sung by Sig. Harris assisted by the troupe, who formed effective tableaux. The orchestra discoursed sweet music during the interval.

Harry Tate's "Motoring."

The pièce de résistance of the evening was Tate's "Motoring," in which the party showed their great capacity for humour. Cpl. Greatham as "Harry Tate" was highly reminiscent of the original, whilst Pte. Stevens was a perfectly precocious prattler. Sig. Harris as the "Chauffeur" was at his ease, and Pte. Bowers' "Urchin" was delightfully ludicrous, leading "Tate" scope for his talent in a lot of "business." The sketch provided a good climax to the concert.

Mention must be made of Sig. Harris's sterling work at the piano, where he was ably assisted by Sig. Chapman, who also played the female parts with a grace and charm that rendered "her" popular with the audience. Cpl. Rutter showed that he is a stage manager of some considerable experience.

G.H.Q. CLERKS' CONCERT.

G.H.Q. Clerks' Mess No. 1 was the venue of a very enjoyable concert on Wednesday when various members of the celebrated "Tabs" concert party together with several G.H.Q. clerks submitted a really tip-top programme.

Pte. C.H. Huntley and Cpl. J. Morgan amused the audience with their double turn "The Officer and the Raw Recruit," and several other single items. L/Cpl. Greatorex, better know as 'Rex', Pte. Rob. Norrie with his wonderful monologues, and Sgt. E. Franklin, an excellent Light Comedian, also contributed to the evening's success.

The star turn of the evening was that most talented violinist gunner, Alfred Barker, who held the audience spellbound whilst rendering his solos.

Other artistes who rendered notable assistance were Cpl. E. Mahrer who attracted much attention in his female attire, and Cpl. J.H. Williams, Spr. A.E. Hutchings, Pte. R. Saerbourne, Cpl. H. Moore, Pte. Jock Limond Cpl. Curran, the last named all being G.H.Q. Clerks.

The M.C. of the evening was Cpl. A. Hanna. All credit for the admirable arrangements made is due to Cpl. H. Saunders who carried out the duty of stage manager, etc.

DERBY SWEEPSTAKES.

70,000 MARKS SUBSCRIBED BY VI CORPS OFFICERS' CLUB.

The VI Corps Officers' Club, Cologne, Sweepstake had resulted up to last evening in the enormous sum of nearly 70,000 marks being subscribed, and it is stated that the sweep of the X Corps Club at Bonn has also been subscribed to with enormous enthusiasm. Practically all the events, of which quite a large number have been organized in Rhineland, will close to-day.

Organizers who wish the results of the draws to appear in "The Cologne Post" should send the information along as early as possible.

"Deutscher Sport" reports that the Union Club is going to protest against the decision of the British Jockey Club, to exclude all Germans from English races.

On account of the political situation at Munich, the two racing days fixed on 29th of May and 1st June have been postponed.

Baha, the winner of the Austrian Derby and Criterium 1919 has won over 200,000 marks, the highest sum ever won on the continent by a 4-year-old.

JUDGES NEARLY KNOCKED OUT.

13th BATT., "THE KINGS" (LIVERPOOL REGT.) BOXING TOURNAMENT.

A very interesting Boxing Tournament was held by the above Battalion at Beuel on Monday evening, when some excellent fights were witnessed, especially the final bout of the "Feather-weights" between Ptes. Reardon and Robinson (both of "C" Coy). Although Robinson received a great deal of punishment in the 1st and 2nd rounds, he still gamely stuck up to his opponent until the referee stopped the fight in the last round. He was congratulated at the close by the Commanding Officer (Col. Potter C.M.G., D.S.O.) on his very plucky fight.

The blindfold exhibition bout between Ptes. Bradley and Thomas proved both exciting and amusing. On more than one occasion the judges came very near being knocked out for the count of ten.

The following are the results in the different competitions:—

Bantams:— Pte. Hughes ("D" Coy) disposed of Pte. Boardman in the 2nd round, Pte. Griffith receiving a Bye.

UPPINGHAM v. REPTON.

FIRST IMPORTANT PUBLIC SCHOOL MATCH.

At Uppingham on Thursday, Uppingham School outplayed Repton, dismissing them for 141 and finished no fewer than 188 runs ahead. Uppingham owed most to J. A. C. Chapman, the Uppingham captain, also rendered his side fine service, obtaining three wickets for 30 and making 51. Dorman, with 53, was the other chief run-getter for the home side. Kemp, not out, 27; Potts, 28; and Hewitson, 20, were the best scorers for Repton. Uppingham had six members of last year's eleven and Repton five. Totals: Repton, 141; Uppingham, 329.

Satisfactory progress has been made in playing off the opening League fixtures, and clubs which have not yet met are requested to get the first match decided as soon as possible so that the fixtures may be kept up to date. In the case of clubs which have no ground, it will save much time and trouble if the Secretaries inform their opponents of the fact in good time, so that a ground can be arranged.

CLOSE GAME AT HURLINGHAM.

In the semi-finals of the Whitney Cup Tournament at Hurlingham on Thursday the Melton team beat the Pilgrims, who had 3 goals start, by six goals to five.

The Freebooters won decisively in the semi-final round of the Whitney Cup Tournament at Rochampton, beating Cowdray, who had 5 goals' start, by a margin of 3 goals.

4th FIELD SURVEY BATTN. (H.Q.) R.E. (1); 13th MOTOR AMBULANCE CONVOY R.A.S.C. (18); played at Muhlheim on Wednesday; L Cpl. Terry (12) and Sapper Power (23) batted well for Maps, as did Sgt. Wiggins for the Convoy; Sapper Howell finished off the Convoy's innings by taking the last four wickets in two overs, for 4 runs; Sergt. McCauley bowled well also, taking 3 wickets for 7 singles. The bowling honours for the Convoy were carried off by Pte. Talbot, who took 3 wickets for 7. The fielding of the 13th M.A.C. was exceptionally smart.

153 SIEGE BATTERY (43) v. 1/1st NORTH MIDLAND HEAVY BATTERY (35); played at Gusterath; a keenly contested game in which the bowling was superior to the batting.

R.H.A. (39) v. 9th BATTALION D.L.I. (47); at Bergheim on Wed scoring 41 for their first wicket the R.H.A. made a capital start, but a rot set in, and 9 wickets were down for 66 owing to the good bowling of Capt. Gibson and Lieut. Archer. The last wicket, however, carried the score to 89, before Grey was well held by Smith. The Durhams except for Cpl. Murray and Capt. Gibson never gave much trouble, and in 3¾ of an hour they were all out for 47, Marshall at point making two very fine catches. Turner had the good average of 4 wickets for 14 runs. For R.H.A. Holmes Scored 23.

CAVALRY DIVISION H.Q. (152 for 9 wickets) v. 24th VETERINARY HOSPITAL 22. This match was due to be played on the "Vets" ground, but this being out of the question, it was played at Quadrath. Chief Scores:— Cav. Div.:— Spr. A.E. Bennett (34); Cpl. B.F. Adams (20); Cpl. Tolley (not out 19); Spr. Dearnly (19); Sgt. Keevil and Spr. Evans simply played havoc with the ball, the former taking 6 wickets for 10, and the latter 4 for 6.

EASTERN DIV. H.Q. (102) v. 51st KING'S LIVERPOOL REGT. (45) on the ground of former at Siegburg; for 51st Drakeford was run out for 15, and for the Eastern Div. Capt. Carroll scored 23, Capt. Groom 23, Spr. Thomson 14, and Capt. Morgan, 13; Olegg (51st King's) performed the "hat-trick."

51st King's (Second Innings) All out 73; Result:— Eastern Division H.Q. won by 57 runs.

"THE BLUE RIBAND."

DERBY JOTTINGS BY "JERRY M."

The racing public will appreciate Mr. Robinson's action in scratching "Stefan the Great" from the great classic. After his show in the Two Thousand Guineas it was fairly obvious that he would not "stay" the Epsom course. And yet his name has appeared in the so-called "London Betting" as having been supported at prices round about 100 to 7 for substantial sums.

So whilst one has genuine sympathy with the owner of such a good horse as "Stefan the Great," because of the impossibility of running him with any chance of success, one admires his sporting action in striking his name out of the race.

The Manton Puzzle

Now Major Astor! Put an end to this "Manton Puzzle." Why mystify the public by keeping two horses such as "Buchan" and "Lord Basil" in the race with no indication as to which is the stable selected?

One remembers the Guineas when up to the last moment "Lord Basil" was stated to be the only runner from Manton. Then "Buchan" was sent, but it was understood would run untaxed and unsupported by the stable. "Buchan" finished second, a neck behind "The Panther" with Lord Basil unplaced. Many bitter remarks were to be heard in "The Ring," and had Buchan won I cannot imagine a more unpopular victory. I remember very well at Newmarket a certain well known horse's victory being received with hoots and groans. One hopes this will not occur at Epsom.

What crowds there will be on the historic "Downs" this year, and should a popular fancy win how they will cheer!

Popular Winners of the Past.

Which was the most popular Derby winner? I should unhesitatingly plump for "Minoru." What a tremendous ovation he received as he passed the Post! And when the late King Edward came out to lead him in, the public were frantic in their joy, the cheering was continuous for nearly twenty minutes, and it was with the greatest difficulty that the police were able to clear the course for the next event.

Other popular wins that come to mind are "Lemberg," "Sunstar," "Rock Sand," and of course "Flying Fox."

The disappointments include such horses as "Sceptre," "Bayardo," and "Craganour." Will the favourite win this year? We shall see. Certainly "The Panther" is having the way cleared very well for him. With such good colts as "Golloper Light" and "Manilardo," whose entries were rendered void by the death of their owners, and "Stefan the Great" scratched, his way is made so much the easier. But the unexpected does sometimes happen. I have received a glowing account of "All Alone's" last win and I am told his trainer is confident he will prove a thorn in the side of the favourite on Derby Day.

GYMKHANA AT ROMER HOF.

SUCCESSFUL FUNCTION OF MIDLAND DIV. TRAIN.

Considerable interest was displayed in the Midland Divisional Train Gymkhana and Sports Meeting held at Romer Hof on Thursday. The weather was beautifully fine and the best use was made of a rather scattered course by carefully thought out ground arrangements. Considering the depleted railway facilities, due to the public holiday observed in Germany, the attendance was numerically satisfactory. In both the mounted and dismounted events, the sport was keen and thoroughly interesting.

Musical Chairs:— 1, Captain Chamier; 2, Lieut. Everitt.

Band Boot Race:— Pte. Marshall.

SEVERAL JOCKEYS DISMOUNTED.

The going was very hard, and as most of the course is hidden from view, a description of the races is out of the question. Two or three of the winners were much too good to compete in such conditions, and they simply made hacks of the others. I thought that most of the Jockeys could have improved their chances by riding about 6 holes shorter. In the Champagne stakes Jack's jockey unfortunately was thrown early in the race, but he was apparently unhurt. Later on, Captain Shipp came off rather heavily owing to the girths being loose and the saddle slipping. He was happily not seriously injured although severely shaken, and was removed by the R.A.M.C.

Tea was provided in marquees and the band of the 2/4th Duke of Wellington's Regiment, by kind permission of Colonel Francis, played delightful music during the afternoon.

The following are the races:—

Libiar Stakes. 1, Sergt. Clarke's Ch. M. Jennie (Donaldson); 2, Driver Capps's The Pony (owner).

"HOW CAN I RESTORE LOST NERVE FORCE?"

Weakened or Exhausted nerves are brought about by the gradual "starvation" of the Nerve Cells, principally those of the Brain, through the "wearing out" effects of Worry, Anxiety, Insomnia, Over-work, etc. In such conditions medicines and "tonics" which only STIMULATE and do not NOURISH are worse than useless—they are harmful.

The only Permanent Restorative to Health is DR. MULLER'S NUTRIENT, the new scientific discovery for nervous people, an extraordinary valuable nerve cell food which is assimilated by the impoverished nerve centres and restores them to their former strength and vitality. In due course this potent preparation revitalises the whole system.

The Benefit is Certain. The Brain becomes more active, the Mind more cheerful, and the Memory stronger. The stamina and energy of the body increases, and distinclination for effort (a common symptom of exhausted nerves) disappears.

REBUILDS AND REVITALIZES THE BRAIN AND NERVE CENTRES.

AN INCIDENT AT BONN.

Mr. Bottomley yesterday asked whether recently the Church Army canteen kinema at Bonn was closed for eight days to soldiers of the Army of the Rhine in order that the Germans might have their usual Bach festival. Mr. Bottomley also wanted to know who was responsible for the orders.

Mr. Forster said a report had been called for on the matter, and the result would be communicated to Mr. Bottomley.

TECHNICAL CLASSES.

ARMY GENERAL AND COMMERCIAL COLLEGE, COLOGNE.

Numerous questions have been asked by readers of The Cologne Post as to the holding of special classes in various educational subjects. Enquiries at the Army General and Commercial College have elicited the information given below.

The following classes have just commenced: Workshop Arithmetic, and Building Construction, Mondays and Thursdays, at 2 p.m.; Machine Drawing, and Applied Mechanics, Tuesdays and Fridays at 2 p.m.

Then, provided that that there is a sufficient number of applicants, the following evening classes will be held on days and at times to be announced later.

Naval Architecture, Surveying, Higher Pure Mathematics, Geodesy, Geodetic Astronomy, Architectural Drawing and Designing, House Planning (and drainage), and Architectural Design.

Applications to join these classes should be sent at once to Capt. Bassford, Education Officer, G.H.Q. Troops, Army General and Commercial College, Cologne.

CHAMBER MUSIC AT THE LORELEI HALL.

It is desired to draw the attention of officers and men to the exceptional opportunities afforded by the Lorelei Hall, Y.M.C.A. Central, Friesenstrasse, for the practice and performance of chamber music. This Hall is available every morning and afternoon, and is ideal for the purpose. There is a first rate Grand piano, and stringed instruments are provided. A room is also set apart for practice in the evenings. It is proposed to give concerts of chamber music, etc., at an early date and instrumentalists are kindly invited to co-operate. Further information can be had from Mr. A. F. Jones at the Hall.

There is also an orchestra which meets every Friday evening at 6.30.

Y.M.C.A. READING CIRCLE EUSKIRCHEN.

With mushroom-like growth, the newly-formed Circle gathered on Wednesday evening to hear the Rev. A. Mansfield, M.A., talk on Shakespeare's "As you like it," and were well rewarded with a delightful hour.

Well selected extracts, forming the basis of vivid pictures, enlivened by the lighter portions of the play, laid out the whole plot with a brilliance and beauty born only of a long and intimate aquaintance with the works of the dramatist.

From start to finish, the speaker held his audience in wonderful fashion, as only a master of his subject can.

It is hoped that the high standard so well begun will be maintained, and that even more men will enter into the life of the Circle, the primary intention of which is to foster a mutual spirit of fellowship amongst book lovers, and to be a common ground for meeting in search of the "Sermons in stones: books in the running brooks, and good in everything." BRITISH EMPIRE LEAVE CLUB.

WHIST DRIVE.

A very successful whist drive took place in the garden of the British Empire Leave Club on Thursday. Lt. Halley and Lt. Shelley kindly gave valuable assistance in running the proceedings. A great many players wished to take part, but only the early birds caught the worms, as the 40 tables were filled immediately.

The 1st. gentlemen's prize was won by Pte. Matthews with a score of 150; the first ladies prize by Pte. Dixon with 160. 2nd prizes were won by Pte. Wright and Pte. Buckhurst, and thirds by Ptes. Cavil and Beaumont, and the booby prize was given to Pte. Norris with a score of 112. The duties of Master of the Ceremonies were ably carried out by Pte. Price.

A QUAINT CUSTOM.

The ancient stipulation that a boy should stand on his head whilst portions of a will were being read was duly observed at Leighton Buzzard during the Rogationtide celebration of Wilkes charity. Thomas Wilkes, the founder, a prosperous London merchant in the early part of the 17th century, left ten almshouses to the town and various properties for their maintenance. Funds for beating the bounds were left by his son Matthew, who specially provided for plum rolls and beer for the youthful acrobats. The beer has for some time been dispensed with, and at this year's celebration there was neither beer nor rolls. The town crier, who was armed with a floral wand, held the boy's legs aloft at each point where extracts from the will were to be read.

TRADES UNION CONGRESS AND "CONCHIES."

The Parliamentary Committee of the Trades Union Congress, at a meeting on Wednesday decided not to accede to the request of the Triple Alliance for the holding of a special Trades Union Congress to compel the Government to withdraw British troops from Russia, to abolish compulsory military service, and to release conscientious objectors, and, failing this, to consider the taking of drastic industrial action.

The Committee had an interview with Mr. Bonar Law on the questions raised by the Triple Alliance on Thursday last, and, after considering Mr. Law's reply, the Committee decided that the holding of a special conference was altogether unnecessary. It was agreed to issue, as early as possible, a verbatim report of the interview with Mr. Law to the trade unions, so that the affiliated organisations may have the fullest information regarding the subject and the policy of the Government thereon.

A RESULT OF WAR.

THE WOMEN OF TO-DAY.

Mr. Justice Darling, in the course of a case at the Old Bailey yesterday, remarked that the harm the war had done on the morals of the people of this country was far beyond any material damage that had been done. In nothing had it done more harm than in the relaxation on the part of the women of this country. It had now reached a point that it could be seen in a walk along the street and seeing that they differed by the width of heaven from what their mothers were.

WAHN ARTILLERY RANGES.

SAFETY PRECAUTIONS.

For the information of troops in the vicinity of Wahn we publish the precautions which must be rigidly observed when practice is in progress.

1.—It is forbidden for any unauthorized person to enter the danger area on Wahn Ranges while practice is in progress.

2.—While practice in is progress a "Basket" will be hoisted on the flag pole on the Water Tower East of Wahn Camp, and all roads leading into the danger area will be closed by barriers.

3.—Some battery positions exist between the Northern boundaries of the Wahn Ranges and the Rath-Forsbach Road. On occasions when batteries are firing from these positions, picquets will be placed on roads to prevent traffic passing into this extended danger area

4.—Practice will begin on June 2nd, and is liable to take place daily from that date onwards except on Sundays. It will begin usually at 9 a.m. On the conclusion of the day's practice, the barriers will be opened, and the "Basket" on the Water Tower will be hauled down.

5.—It is forbidden for any unauthorized person to handle any unexploded shell or fuze found on or off the range.

FOODS FOR ENEMY COUNTRIES.

The Board of Trade have issued a general license under the Trading with the Enemy legislation authorizing persons in England to send to persons in enemy countries through the agency of the Emergency Committee for the Assistance of Germans, Austrians, and Hungarians in Distress, of 27, Chancery-lane, London, W.C. 2, gifts of food, clothing, &c., of a weight not exceeding 11lb in the case of any one parcel. All persons desirous of sending such gifts to particular persons in enemy countries should therefore apply to the hon. treasurer of the above committee for information.

A GOOD BEGINNING.

CORONER'S FIRST INQUEST — A SKELETON.

Mr. J. B. Conroy, the new coroner, held his first inquest at Galway on Wednesday on a skeleton found in a shrubbery at Muroruga, Kenmore. A pair of slippers were found on the remains. Mrs. Boyle, employed by Miss Blake, stated that a cook in the service of Miss Blake disappeared twelve years ago, and no trace of her had been found since. On two previous occasions she had disappeared, hiding herself on the first occasion in a hay loft, where she remained four or five days without food, and on the second in the bushes at Bushy Park, where she had remained six days without food. Upon her return on these occasions she had waxed as usual. She was 65 when she finally disappeared, wearing a pair of slippers bought for her by Miss Blake.

The jury returned a verdict that the remains were those of the cook Mary Connelly, a native of Ballyconnelly, Clifden, and that she met her death by starvation, having hidden herself away.

EPSOM OR WESTMINSTER.

M.P.s. "DERBY DUTY."

The Government resisted recently a beseeching appeal by Mr. Bottomley that the House of Commons should rise two days earlier at Whitsuntide (on Derby Day, June 4) in order that members may have an opportunity of going to Epsom to "study the social problem among the people," and also the possibility of raising revenue by a tax on betting and racing.

"I was aware of the carnival," said Mr. Bonar Law, in allusion to the Derby; the Government could not vary their programme, however.

"But if the House loses for the day the services of some of its most useful members," urged Mr. Bottomley, setting members chuckling.

"Then members must decide between two duties," Mr. Bonar Law held grimly.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

PERSONAL AND OTHER ENTERTAINMENT ITEMS.

The enormous success that recently attended the presentation of "Man and Superman" by the Rhine Army Dramatic Company, completely disposed of the criticism as to the advizability of staging a Bernard Shaw play in Germany. The Deutsche Theatre, Cologne, was packed for each of the six performances. Thus encouraged, Lieut. S. E. Percy proposes to revive the play in the near future, when the vivid and famous "hell" scene will be introduced.

* * * *

In the meantime, the Company has been busy rehearsing "The New Sin" which is to be the attraction at the Deutsche Theatre next week. The author, Macdonald Hastings, in his introduction to the book says, "The author dedicates "The New Sin" to the dramatic critics with the hope that they will not, at any rate, accuse him of committing an old sin. Whatever may be the verdict of Cologne audiences next week, they will undoubtedly agree that the play at least has the merit of originality. When "The New Sin" was produced at New York, its reception was probably unequalled in point of enthusiasm.

* * * *

Miss Kate Coates, the leading lady of the Lena Ashwell Concert Party, which is delighting large audiences at Cologne this week, tells an amusing story of a meeting she had with a Sergeant at Dieppe. "One dark evening" she relates, "I was uncertain of the way to my billet. Meeting a Sergeant, I made enquiries, and it so happened that he was going in the same direction. I gratefully accepted his offer to escort me and when I was leaving him I said, "Thanks so much; I hope we may meet again. Imagine my surprise when he replied, "Sorry Miss, but I've two girls waiting for me in England!"

* * * *

How many people have recognized, in the rather elderly acrobat who performs in the German al fresco entertainment near Liblar, a member of a well known brace of knock-about gymnasts, popular in pre-war days at the London Music halls? It must surely be something of a blow to his pride that this undoubtedly clever artiste should have had to degenerate into an out-of-door snowman, relying for his rewards upon the generosity of whatever crowd of spectators he may collect. But apparently he finds this method of earning a livelihood more profitable that performing at the German music-halls.

* * * *

At the Hotel wherein several members of a certain army concert party are staying, the occupants were rather alarmed a few nights ago when the floodgates of harmony were suddenly opened close on midnight. One of the members of the said party had an inspiration and, awakening his confreres, they all sallied forth into the music-room, briefly to rehearse the new idea. The proceedings had not long been in progress when an irate officer made his appearance and made remarks more varied and vigorous than polite. His presence was ignored, and so ear-tickling was the chorus that it soon held him in its grip and in a very few minutes he had joined the pyjama-garbed vocalists in its rendering.

* * * *

"Billy" Haywood, the versatile manager at the Deutsches Theatre, Cologne, in addition to nearly three years managership of the 2nd Army Theatre, has seen plenty of scrapping. He has been wounded twice, and has lost the sight of his right eye with gas. Before the war he was a veterinary student, but one is inclined to think that had it not been for the army, he would have missed his vocation. Having been in France, Belgium and Italy with the Army Theatre, and to succeed with a staff comprised mainly of civilians speaking different tongues is indeed a creditable achievement. In Cologne he has been particularly successful and since the opening show, "Dick Whittington," on January 18th, his energies have been tireless.

A TOWN FOR SALE.

SHAFTESBURY AS ITS VERY OWN.

The "mountain town" of Shaftesbury, as Thomas Hardy calls it, is being offered for sale by auction piecemeal to the inhabitants. The sale is being conducted on behalf of a syndicate of three of the principal townsmen, who, when the estate came into the market last autumn, determined that it should be dissolved by local and not outside hands. Shaftesbury has been practically in one proprietorship for the thousand and more years since King Alfred founded his abbey.

As one result of the first day's sale nearly £35000 was realized. The buyers of quite three-quarters of the lots were the tenants. Working men bought their cottages, shopkeepers their shops, the well-to-do their houses and beautiful old gardens, and, as the mayor said, "In some cases this has happened after generations of these people had paid rent for the same property."

Rows of houses and many shops filled the list for the morning sale. Bidders were not pressed unduly, and a large number of tenants became owners often amid applause from the spectators. One row of five cottages sold for £180.

Mr. William Fox, the auctioneer, announced amid cheers that the vendors had made arrangements by which "Castle Hill for practically all time will remain the wonderful view-point that it is," and also a definite agreement had been entered into to give Park Field to the town.

The Abbey House, which contains much ancient oak panelling, the dining-room with a famous 17th-century plaster ceiling, and an underground passage leading to a distant part of the town, realized £980. The auctioneer remarked that half the money could be got back by selling the panelling.

ENGLISH PROPERTY IN LILLE.

Sir Herbert Dixon at Manchester yesterday said the French cotton mills in Lille were damaged during the German occupation of the town, but before many months all would be running again. The position of the English cotton mills in Lille was different. These mills had been almost completely cleared of every machine and it would be a long time before they could be got working again.

Two large otters, dog and bitch, have been caught by a Chithness gamekeeper in the parish of Watten. Each measured 44 inches.

Out of 260 towns in the country which were offered Tanks in recognition of efforts for the war savings movement, there have been only eight refusals.

BOLSHEVIST TRAINING MANUAL.

AFGHANISTAN TROUBLE SPREADING.

FRONTIER POSTS WITHDRAWN.

The latest statement of the India Office relative to the rising in Afghanistan is as follows:

Further information has been received from India showing that up to May 25 the position along the frontier was satisfactory, the Afghan forces being either stationary or retiring all along the front, the tribes being in a satisfactory frame of mind. The more important tribes along the northern section of the frontier, viz, the Afridis, Orakzais, Mohmands, and other tribes farther on the north, were reported to be adopting a very satisfactory attitude, which had been maintained up to the time of the latest information received.

In the southern section of the frontier, however, owing to General Nadir Khan having developed an offensive on May 26, it has become necessary to withdraw the garrisons of the small advanced posts in the Tochi Valley, and this has in turn necessitated the withdrawal and concentration of the garrisons of the advanced posts in the Gomal Valley. A concentration of these small scattered garrisons on the general line Thal-Idak-Murtaza has accordingly been carried out. The abandonment of the small posts in the Tochi and Gomal Valleys has resulted in Mahsud and Wazir lashkars joining the Afghan forces which occupied the abandoned territory.

The latest information received, which is dated from Simla, on May 28, reports no change in the situation in the Khyber area and to the northward, but that the main strength of the Afghan forces in Khost, under General Nadir Khan, are operating against Thal, which was being shelled from the right bank of the Kurram River on May 27, large concentrations of the enemy being reported within three miles of the fort. Reinforcements are being despatched to Kohat to deal with the situation in this area. General Nadir Khan was reported to be endeavouring to get into touch with the Orakzai and Zaimukat tribes, whose attitude, however, remained satisfactory.

Earlier information than the above dated from Simla, on May 27, shows that the garrisons of Spinwam (eighteen miles north-west of Bannu, on the Thal-Idak road), Shawa, and of the posts in the Upper Tochi Valley were withdrawn on May 25, and that General Nadir Khan had advanced down the Kaitu Valley with a mixed force of regulars and Khost tribesmen, and had occupied Spinwam. On May 26 his advanced troops were reported within seven miles of Idak. Information had also been received that a lashkar from the Upper Tochi Valley and a Wazir lashkar were advancing on Mir Miramshah (thirty miles west of Bannu, in the Tochi Valley). In the Gomal Valley area the garrisons of Wano and Sarwekai, together with the small posts of Nili Kach and Spinkai, were withdrawn on May 26 and 27.

A report from Kalati-Ghilzai speaks of general talk of a Jehad (Holy War) after the Fast of Ramazan.

A successful action has been reported from Chitral, where the Chitral scouts and Mehtar's bodyguard attacked the Afghans holding the line of the Bashgul stream, and gained all objectives, capturing four guns and a quantity of arms, ammunition, and stores. Enemy dead were estimated at 250, and our casualties are reported to be slight.

BOLSHEVIST TRAINING MANUAL.

A report recently received on the reorganisation of the Bolshevist army shows that strict discipline has been re-introduced. The manual of garrison duties is an exact copy of the regulations in force in Czarist days and the manual of internal discipline is also modelled on the old regulations. Discipline is maintained by constant threats of severe punishment.

The saluting of officers, paying of compliments and wearing of badges has also been introduced. The greatest handicap is lack of subalterns and under-officers. Training schools have been formed for officers who, however, are quite useless, being illiterate and undeveloped.

On the Eastern front fighting has broken out again along the whole front of Gaida's army. The Bolshevists claim slight gains North of the Perm-Vyatka railway. Siberians are driving the Reds back to the junction of the Kilmej and Vala rivers. In the Orenburg area fighting is proceeding along three sides of the town.

PRISONERS RELEASED BY BOLSHEVISTS.

The Foreign Office announces that as a result of the negotiations for the exchange of prisoners carried on with the Russian Bolsheviks the following British subjects have arrived safely and in good health in Finland from Russia, and will be returned to this country in due course: Major Goldsmith, Major Cyril Fraser, Captain Dewar Burie, Captain Gracey, Captain Nash, Captain Scott, Lieut. Batch, Sub-Lieut. MacBryde, Sergt. Muspratt, Sergt. Price, Corpl. Douglas, A. B. Copestake, A. B. Howarth, Pte. Hobson, Pte. Struthers, Pte. Collins, Vice-Consul Howe, Mr. Brelby.

FIGHTING NEXT WINTER'S PLAGUE.

PREVENTIVE MEASURES.

With the purpose of devising a plan to combat the epidemic of typhus which has reached serious proportions in Southern and Eastern Europe, the Supreme Economic Council has appointed a committee of British, French and Italian representatives to confer with representatives of the League of Red Cross societies to prepare a definite scheme for submission to their respective Governments. The Director General of the League has been in conference with the Supreme Economic Council regarding the situation and the absolute necessity for immediate action on a large scale.

Typhus is epidemic in Poland, where 100,000 persons are reported to be actually down with the disease. It is also epidemic in Hungary and in a number of other countries of South-Eastern Europe. It is feared that if measures to control the plague are not taken at once it may spread to other parts of Europe next winter. The Supreme Economic Council are fully prepared to give all the assistance in their power. Although the League of Red Cross societies was officially organized only three weeks ago by representatives of the Red Cross societies of England, France, Italy, Japan and the United States, it has had under consideration methods of dealing with the present typhus epidemic. These were approved by the leading scientific experts, who met at Cannes in April at the invitation of the founders of the League.

The primary purpose of the League is to co-ordinate and stimulate the efforts of national Red Cross societies in preserving the health of the world and in relieving the suffering which invariably follows epidemics, famines and other disasters. It is a striking demonstration of the need for such co-operation in securing extension of relief and preserving public health that the League is so suddenly called upon to perform a service to humanity greater in extent and more difficult of execution than any single society or any nation could perform.

Reports from Poland and other afflicted parts of Eastern and Southern Europe picture the appalling extent of suffering there as beyond comparison. Thousands are dying from lack of medical care and there is a serious scarcity of all medical necessaries. Besides the present ravages of typhus an epidemic of cholera is to be feared in Europe, and the Red Cross League will be consulted in regard to this feature of its programme.

Sir David Henderson, Director General of the League, stated yesterday "If the Red Cross League is charged with the serious responsibility of protecting public health in this crisis, the peoples of the various nations must realize that the fight is their own and that the League is merely acting as their instrument. The League will be put to the severest test at the very beginning of its existence. We believe that with the aid of Governments and voluntary national societies we can control and limit the spread of this epidemic so that Europe will be saved from the disasters that would surely follow the general spread of such disease.

"The League has no thought of over-riding national societies. On the contrary it seeks to co-operate with them and to develop and stimulate them. The Red Cross League is non-governmental non-political and non-sectarian. It is a purely voluntary league of peoples working together for the common good."

GERMANS AND THE BALTIC.

Berlin, 29th May. Colonel Nudant, replying on May 25 to Herr Erzberger's note of May 8, announcing Germany's intention of withdrawing her forces from Lettland and Lithuania, stated that the Entente Governments had decided that Germany must keep all her forces there. Herr Erzberger then sent the following note: "The German Government cannot recognise any instructions to keep German troops on the spot. It must adhere to the standpoint that it can withdraw behind the German frontiers according as it judges fit all German troops which are still on territories formerly belonging to Russia." —Reuter.

This note of Erzberger's is in direct defiance of the Article 12 of the Armistice of Nov. 11, 1918, which expressly stipulates that German troops then within the territories which before the war formed part of Russia must return to within the frontiers of Germany (as defined in the Armistice) "as soon as the Allies shall think the moment suitable, having regard to the internal situation of these territories."

BRITISH SOLDIERS KILLED IN TRAIN ACCIDENT.

Charleroi, Friday.—A train containing British demobilized soldiers ran off the rails here yesterday evening between the stations of Marchienne-au-Pont and Luttre. Three coaches were overturned, as the result of which seven soldiers were killed, and a score seriously injured.—Reuter.

MYSTERY OF MURDERED W.A.A.C.

C.S.M. HEPBURN DISCHARGED.

Company Sergeant-Major Montague Cecil Keith Hepburn, R.E., was brought before the local magistrates at the Shire Hall, Bedford, yesterday, to answer a charge of murder in connection with the death of Miss Nellie Rault, the young W.A.A.C. who was found fatally stabbed in Wilstead Wood, near the Haynes Park R.E. Camp, on May 12.

The coroner's jury, when they completed their inquiry at the camp, returned an open verdict, and yesterday, immediately upon the Court assembling, Mr. F. G. Sims, on behalf of the Director of Public Prosecutions, intimated that no evidence would be given against the prisoner.

Hepburn was accordingly discharged, the result being received with loud cheers in the crowded court, and Hepburn received a great ovation from his friends when he appeared outside the hall following his release.

WOMEN ELIGIBLE FOR THE KING'S PRIZE.

BISLEY INNOVATION.

Lord Cheylesmore presided yesterday at the spring general meeting of the National Rifle Association, in the ward room of the British Small Arms Co., Pall-mall, S. W. He announced that the Prince of Wales, the president, had intimated his intention of presenting the prizes at Bisley this year. Referring to the new conditions relating to the King's Prize, he said any lady who had worn his Majesty's uniform and belonged to any unit mentioned in the Navy and Army lists would be eligible for the competition. "It would be a great pleasure to us," he added, "to see a lady carried triumphantly round the camp in the historic chair." (Laughter.) The Ashburton Shield would be shot for on Friday in the first week of the meeting. On the suggestion of the War Office the competition for the Army on the Rhine would be called the Entente Cordiale competition. Entrance fees had been reduced, as for instance in the case of the King's Prize, from 25s to 10s.

M. P.'S SYMPATHY FOR BOLSHEVISTS.

In the course of the debate on the Army Estimates, a lively exchange of repartee took place between Mr. Winston Churchill and Col. Wedgwood, the Independent Labour Member. Mr. Churchill said:

The experience of this war has taught us how very dangerous it is to speculate as to the future. I deprecate altogether exaggerated hopes being formed. Just as things have turned out so much better than we had any right to expect four months ago, so they may now turn out three months hence very much worse than it seems reasonable to hope now. Within the last three weeks a considerable set-back has occurred in the southern sector of Admiral Kolchak's front.

Colonel Wedgwood: Hear, hear.

Mr. Churchill: The hon. and gallant gentleman really ought to go out and help the Bolsheviks (Prolonged cheers.)

Colonel Wedgwood: If it is going to be a class war that is my side.

Mr. Churchill: I hope there is going to be no class war of the kind carried on in these islands: so if my hon. and gallant friend is burning to engage in the struggle I am afraid he will have to make a sea voyage. (Laughter.) I am quite sure the Bolsheviks would gain a gallant fighter, but I am not sure that Mr. Lenin might not have some anxiety as to whether his political discretion would be quite equal to his military ardour. (Laughter.)

UNION OF SCOTTISH CHURCHES.

The Church of Scotland General Assembly, after a heated and prolonged debate, approved by an overwhelming majority, the report of the Union Committee recommending that the presbyteries shall report before the 30th November whether they approve or disapprove the draft of the articles of union with the United Free Church.

A further resolution directed that a Commission of Assembly should be held in December for the purpose of authorizing the Union Committee, in the event of a majority of the Presbyteries approving the articles of Union, to approach the Government with a view to the necessary legislation being enacted.

LITTLE WILLIE'S GONE.

The Times Hague correspondent states that the ex Crown Prince unexpectedly left Wierengen for an unknown destination on the 28th May. He first proceeded to Van Ewycksluis in North Holland, where a motor car was awaiting him.

FISHERMEN ON STRIKE.

Pending the Government revision of minimum prices to fishermen for herrings, the Peterhead and Fraserburgh fishing fleets have stopped fishing. For some weeks the fishermen have complained that the price fixed by the Government is too low.

RECORD WEEK FOR WAR BONDS.

Sales of National War Bonds continue satisfactory, last week's amount being 6,499,422 pounds sterling. This constitutes a record of the present series. The total issue in sixteen weeks is 73,356,030 pounds sterling.

THEFT OF A CONFIDENTIAL CIRCULAR.

WAR SECRETARY'S WARNING.

It will be remembered that despite overwhelming acceptance by ballot of the Sankey award in the mining industry, the "Triple Alliance" attached further conditions to their recommendation to the Federation and openly talked of further strikes with the avowed intention of dictating to the Government over the Army Service Bill.

The pretext for this was furnished by the publication by the Daily Herald of a secret war office circular.

In the debate on the Army Estimates in the House of Commons, Mr. Winston Churchill animadverted on the action of that newspaper as follows:

A STOLEN DOCUMENT.

. . . That is all I have got to say about the circular, but I have a word or two to say about the method of its publication. It was a confidential document. It has been stolen—(cheers)—and it has been published by a newspaper with the deliberate object of causing trouble and mischief in the Army and among the workmen. (Cheers.) The whole intention of this newspaper is to provoke an outbreak in the form of a mutiny or a general strike, or preferably both together, in the hope that a general smash up and overturn of society may result. Whether discharged soldiers, or the police, or soldiers retained with the Colours, or workmen, the object of this paper is perfectly plain—it is to weave them together in order to arouse a general overthrow on the Russian model. (Cheers.) I think the case should be plainly stated.

I am asked. "Why didn't you prosecute this revolutionary organ?" The answer is simple. We believe that the structure of British society is sufficiently stable and solid to enable us to allow, even in present circumstances, this unbridled license to continue. We know the paper has a feeble circulation. We know the doctrines it puts forward are singularly repulsive to responsible leaders of labour throughout the country and trade union opinion. We are very anxious to preserve in this country a greater measure of free speech, and even of unbridled speech, than exists in any other European country. I do not say we are prepared to go on with that indefinitely, but at the present time we are prepared to run some risks in this connection. We may be right in general but wrong in particular instances. Although the great majority of the nation is indifferent and even unconscious of such mischievous incitements, the day may come when local or partial disturbances may lead to serious loss of life. In that case I trust that the instigators of the crime will take their places by the side of those they have misled. (Cheers.) I feel, however, that the improvement in our affairs has been so steady and continuous that we can view coolly the efforts which are being made to stir up strife.

GENERAL CRITICISES LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

Members of the Cadet Officers' Institution dined together at University College on Thursday night on the occasion of a welcome to their new president, Lieut.-General Sir Francis Lloyd. In response to the toast of his own health, and speaking of the possible need of the auxiliary forces in the future, Sir Francis declared his personal opinion that the League of Nations was absolutely worthless, and that it was all nonsense to talk about the lion lying down with the lamb when dealing with a nation which had torn up solemn treaties in the past, and he saw that the possibility of the British force having to march into Germany was now being discussed. His advice was to prepare, in spite of all promises of universal peace, for any eventualities that might arise, and he ventured to suggest that in this connection there was room for the Volunteers, the Territorials and for the Cadet Force.

TRIUMPHAL MARCHES REFUSED.

Recently it was decided at Chelmsford, the county town of Essex, that triumphal marches of demobilized service men should be held throughout the country, various districts being grouped to formulate and carry out the arrangements.

When the question came up for confirmation at the Billericay Rural Council yesterday, various members stated that the men seemed determined to have nothing to do with the proposals. One member stated that the Brentwood branch of the "Comrades in the Great War Association" had unanimously rejected the proposal.

It was decided to await further information from the men's representatives.

THE THREATENED POLICE STRIKE.

The Commissioner of Metropolitan police has issued an order that any officer or man absenting himself from duty will be dismissed from the Force and will not be permitted to rejoin. Any such dismissal will result in the loss of all service counting towards pension.

R. A. F. CASUALTIES.

From the armistice to the 25th May the fatal casualties for home and overseas among officers of the Royal Air Force numbered 374, and the number of fatal casualties among other ranks up to April 30 was 848. The figures for non-fatal casualties are not yet available.

Mrs. Selous has presented her husband's collection of big game trophies to the British Museum.

FUTURE OF THE RHINE ARMY.

MAN POWER PROBLEM.

In the House of Commons discussion on the Army Estimates Mr. Winston Churchill foreshowed the possibility, owing to the favourable situation, of the withdrawal of foreign troops from North Russia by the end of the summer. The five great powers had decided to make any further support and formal recognition of the anti-Bolshevist Governments in Russia conditional upon their undertaking that their victory will be immediately followed by summoning the constitutional Democratic Assembly (cheers).

As soon as peace is signed the Rhine Army can be reduced from ten to six divisions and still further reduced when the peace terms are being carried out effectively. If peace is signed in June it is proposed to send back home all 1914 men for relief by the end of June from all theatres of war except India. Similarly by the end of July it is proposed to send back all 1915 men, again excluding India. Derby men will be relieved according to the months in which they enlisted but no promise can be made to relieve them immediately peace is signed.

Mr. Churchill concluded by saying that the problem of man power is at its greatest strain. Owing to anxieties in India, Afghanistan, Egypt, Turkey and Ireland, all leave from the Rhineland is stopped.

A Labour amendment to reduce the estimates was rejected by 143 votes to 47. The estimates were adopted.

MISS DOUGLAS-PENNANT'S CASE.

CHARGES AND COUNTER-CHARGES.

A Government White Paper was issued yesterday containing voluminous correspondence relating to the dismissal of Miss Violet Douglas-Pennant from the Royal Air Force.

In a final letter last Saturday to Miss Douglas-Pennant Mr. Churchill said the Secretary of State concluded that the case constitutes an insufficient basis for a public inquiry. The letter continues "The Secretary of State would willingly have ordered an inquiry on the subject of the widespread rumours that your dismissal was brought about by persons in immoral relations with each other who resented refusal on your part to connive at their malpractices, but the Secretary of State is glad to see that nothing of this kind is suggested by you in any of the letters you addressed to him. You, on the other hand, have not hesitated to make extremely disagreeable accusations and insinuations against a number of persons which might be tested in the Courts if you chose to repeat the charges without the privileges presumably attaching to this correspondence."

As to Miss Douglas-Pennant's case, which she summarises in a five thousand word letter to the Air Secretary, she accuses various people "of taking steps to bring about my dismissal because I would not be a party to the jobbery and inefficiency prevailing in the W.R.A.F. I heard rumours of serious scandals and found I was being deliberately misled in order to prevent any action being taken.

I found that the Officers' Selection Board was passing unsuitable women. On asking how such mistakes had arisen the officers concerned told me that it was usual to appoint candidates bringing recommendations from officers and others connected with the Air Ministry. I was also forced to refuse to take over very expensive accommodation for women which certain officers had taken on behalf of the Government. Some of it was accommodation which no private individual in their senses would take. I was warned that intrigue was on foot to get rid of me because I was too just and straight."

SOME STARTLING WAR COSTS.

A White Paper published yesterday gives figures regarding the stupendous cost of Naval and Military operations during the war and of expenses incurred for measures taken for the security of the country, the assisting of the food supply and relief of distress, promoting the continuance of trade and industry and the maintenance of communications.

The report of the Comptroller and Auditor General on expenditure states that for the year ending 31st March 1918 the total expenditure amounted to 2,431,900,000 pounds sterling as compared with the estimate of 2,450 millions. Payments charged to Votes of Credit from the commencement of the financial year in 1914 to March 1918 amounted to 6,115,215,578 pounds sterling. Loans to Allied powers during these four years amounted to 1,208,642,054 pounds sterling and the amount loaned to the Dominions was 192,160,750 pounds sterling. One huge item is that for the purchase of meat during the four years, namely, 133,069,740 pounds sterling.

HAWKER'S RESCUERS TO BE REWARDED.

His Majesty the King, on the recommendation of the President of the Board of Trade, has been pleased to award the Silver Medal for Gallantry in Saving Life at Sea to each member of the crew of the boat of the Danish S.S. Mary, which rescued Mr. Harry George Hawker and Commander Kenneth Mackenzie-Grieve, R.N., in the North Atlantic on 19th May.

The Board of Trade, with the approval of his Majesty, have also awarded pieces of plate to the master of the ship and to the person in charge of the rescuing boat, and sums of money to the rest of the boat's crew.

The Naval base at Cromarty will be closed to-morrow. His Majesty's ship Thalia, which is at present stationed there, will be paid off on the same date, and all the ranks and ratings remaining on her books will be transferred to his Majesty's ship Mars.

WAR AND ITS EFFECT.

Industrial unrest is the inevitable consequence of war; revolution is the unavoidable reward of the vanquished, Britain by her strength and courage, has been spared the latter, but has succumbed to that former unwritten law of nature. Five years ago we were drawn into the greatest conflict the world has ever known. Even at the very commencement we knew that the struggle would be a very bitter one, that the test would be very severe, and that the whole resources of our country would be needed to cope with the necessities of a prolonged war. Kitchener told us at the outset that we should be fighting for at least three years; he plainly hinted at the great self-sacrifice every patriotic individual would be called upon to make. And the nation did not shirk.

We very soon had a great fighting army, with the prospect of its efficient upkeep; we rapidly increased our output of munitions and war machinery; and incidentally we were able not only to feed our own army with the necessary equipment, but also France and Belgium had a free use of our resources. But, perhaps though we did not notice it in the whirl and turmoil of those earlier days, a revolution was taking place in Britain. The whole of our interior organization was being re-constructed to vie with the new demands. Our workshops and factories were suffering drastic alterations. Our places were being taken by women and girls who willingly left their normal occupations in order to keep up, and if possible increase, the output of our industries. Meanwhile we were fighting—oblivious to the fact that such a great re-modelling of our country would bring us trouble at a later date.

And yet what other can one expect? These organizations which have worked successfully through a period of war cannot claim to guide the nation in peace. Once more must they be re-constructed. Our industries must be re-shaped to suit the newer and calmer demands, and just as in war the whole country was united to reach one glorious objective victory, so must we still remain united in order to reinstate the great industrial and commercial prosperity of our Empire.

The present is the most critical period of our history. We have achieved a victory, but it has been at an enormous cost which has left us weak. The slightest mis-government now will throw to the winds any good effect resulting from this brilliant achievement on the battlefield. It is not sufficient to be valiant in war. Certain it is that our country is strengthened thereby, but only by the addition of a crude force, which if not delicately handled will only bring disaster upon our own heads.

The old empire of Greece fell because it could not bring to a full use the resources it had gained. The mighty Roman empire likewise succumbed as a direct result of the conquests made by its valiant leaders.

The question comes to us: "How can we obviate a similar fate?' In theory the answer is given at ease, in practice we meet untold difficulties; and we can only maintain the position which victory has secured for us if every individual of the State resolves to do his very utmost (not by covering these obstructions, but by cool, deliberate and powerful crushing of them) to help to solve the great problem of reconstruction which at present besets our path to prosperity.

To-day the Empire has reached a stage in her career when her policy must be purely and definitely one of peace. Outward expansion is in the background, and our great task is to secure a complete harmony within. The war has brought us into a close touch with our Dominions which was impossible hitherto, and now that the strengthening of our relationships has been effected we must be sure to derive the full advantage which could accrue therefrom. The inexhaustible resources of our Empire, lying dormant in the far off colonies and as yet only visualized by the eyes of our scientists, must be utilized. Never before have we been confronted with problems of such great proportions economical, political, social and personal; but never before have we had such a grand opportunity of settling them if we will but concentrate our energies in the right direction.

* * *

There is a great yearning to-day amongst our soldiers to return to civilian life, despite the fact that 408,000 disabled and discharged soldiers are already on the unemployment list.

There is a greater unrest among the demobilized. They are now realizing that the free and easy life of the civilian is not what it seemed when they were in khaki. Many of them cannot find work, they cannot obtain their gratuities so hurriedly as they expected. A soldier's federation has been organized to help the discharged men—and now this is nothing more than an insigator of further unrest. What might have been an institution of far-reaching benificence, working in conjunction with the Ministries of Labour and Pensions, has become a cul-de-sac.

Why?— because the men have succumbed in the whirl of excitement and unrest; because instead of a courageous patience they preferred an ignominous impetuosity.

It takes a man not more than half-an-hour to join the Forces; but to leave the army must of necessity take a considerably lengthier period. It is ignorance of this important factor which has caused so much diffidence and unrest.

Sir R. Horne, Minister of Labour, in Parliament recently pointed out the steps that had been taken to re-settle the soldiers, and said that 81 per cent of those demobilized have been re-absorbed into industry. Considering that over two millions have been demobilized since the Armistice this is a good record, and calls for our admiration.

With regard to the future work of the Government, the Minister of Labour said that within a short time the Government would be providing work on a larger scale than any previous one had done. The housing scheme which involves the building of 300,000 houses during the next two years, is now in progress; the Road Board had made grants of 7,500,000 pounds for the repair of roads, and other schemes already sanctioned and costing over 17,000,000 pounds, were being put into operation.

Thus we can see that our Government does not intend to ignore the vital question of the soldier's future; but it must be clearly impressed that all these arrangements and plans need time for their complete formulation. Let us, then wait patiently.

Out of the deep and awful shadow there will arise a new country — a brighter, richer, more glorious Empire for those who have passed safely through the fire.

RELIGION.

EVERY MAN IS RELIGIOUS.

(BY A CORRESPONDENT.)

It is quite possible that the majority of men will be inclined immediately to challenge the statement that every man is religious. Men may, and indeed very often do refuse acceptance of religion as particularly expressed in orthodox Christianity, and may even vehemently denounce the claims made on behalf of the practice of religious faith. Men by the exercise of the power of choice, with which they are endowed, may curb all their the natural and instinctive religious bias, and withhold their allegiance to any sort of religion. They may moreover assume a definitely negative attitude towards religion, so far as they are able to understand its meaning, and openly declare themselves to be irreligious. "Religion is not in my line' declares one; "I am an atheist" glibly says another; "I am a free-thinker" a third may affirm. Mere professions of such a character do not necessarily represent the serious convictions of thoughtful men, but nevertheless, they imply the possibility of the presumption that religion as commonly understood can be dispensed with. Such presumption may be due to an imperfect knowledge of human faculties and instincts, or to a refusal to consider them in their relation to religion. Were it possible for man to eliminate from his store of acquired knowledge and inherent experience all that pertains to religion he would still have left a persistent religious instinct which he cannot wholly eradicate or explain away. To try to do so would merely be to his own detriment in the loss which he suffers from leaving undeveloped one side of his nature. This persistent religious instinct, Descartes, the philosopher, describes as an innate idea—"not acquired by men, but born in them".

Now the word "religion" is derived from a Latin word which means "to bind"; and all forms of religion whether Christianity, Buddhism, Mohammedanism, Brahminism, Zoroastrianism, continually assert the binding connection and interaction between conduct and thought, faith and works, the known and the unknown. "Religion is an effort to produce a complete harmony between conduct and thought." When a man declares that he is not a Christian, he does not imply that he is not religious; the same man may acknowledge the wisdom of living rightly, and in all his conduct may endeavour so to live. Religion may, perhaps, imperfectly be described as the effort to express all that is implied in a right way of living. Men in all their reasoned conduct, necessarily act according to a presupposition of certain convictions about the nature of the universe, convictions about matters which are beyond their own knowledge and experience. They may live rightly and apply those convictions without ever trying to express them, without ever being aware of them. They may even consciously refuse the attempt to express them, denying to them the possibility of expression and affirming that such are sure to

"WIND-UP"—AND WHY?

A QUIET TALK TO OUR YOUNG GUARDS.

BY THE WANDERER.

"Wind-up" as a military expression needs no explanation but it may be interesting and edifying to consider for a few minutes the outs and ins, causes and effects, of this fearful thing which so often threatens our joy in "winding up the watch on the Rhine". I feel sure that "Wind-up" would be a rare complaint if men only took time to think things out quietly. It is born of one thing—fear! We are afraid we may not do the right thing at the right time, and we invariably fulfil that fear. This condition unnerves the most efficient lad on parade. It saps the confidence of the smartest man on parade because it throws him off his mental balance. There is only one cure for "Wind-up" and that is confidence—fearlessness. A very shrewd philosopher once wrote, "Man is a divinity in disguise, a God playing the fool"! The more confidence a man has, the less likely is he to "play the fool". I think every young soldier on the Rhine ought to read the essays of that clever philosopher whose name is Emerson. I cannot conceive anyone who knows his Emerson getting the "Wind-up".

* * *

I know it is easy to write all this about "Wind-up", away from the parade ground and those fearful men in whose presence you feel like water. I am coming to that! I have served in the British Army for fourteen years—in India, West Africa and France. I know what it is to stand in the presence of men like the late Lord Kitchener and other great generals. I know what it is to feel that "nervy" feeling, and to stand bereft of speech. I know therefore I can fully sympathize with you as you stand before your platoon or company officer and wish yourself in the Rhine. I conquered that terrible thing called "Funk", and I am going to try and help you to gain self-confidence. "Wind-up" can only be mastered by self-mastery. Realize that you are, in essence, a Man! You possess powers within you that might well astound the world if you only cared to develop them—power of speech, power of thought and power of mastery over everything that menaces your peace of mind or your mental developments.

You must conquer or be conquered! There is no other way out. You may possibly think I am digressing, but not so. "Wind-up" has far reaching effects and must be assailed in all directions. It breeds ineptitude and lack of initiative. Daily I see likely lads who would make splendid N.C.O's being kept back, hindered, because of this vile ailment. How many of us know the agony of "Wind-up" at examination? We've been grinding for months, we know we've got it in us—but "Wind-up" comes along, and down we go!

* * *

Fear nothing, but your own inefficiency, and conquer that! There is a good motto to take on the Rhine with you—"Fear nothing". When I say this I do not mean to say that you are to stare your officer out when he looks you in the eye, or to assume the attitude towards your superiors that you are "it". No! You have a dignity to maintain—the dignity of self-respect and self-control. You must learn to create an atmosphere of quiet and cheerful confidence wheresoever you may happen to be. "Wind-up" is, after all, very much a matter of "atmosphere" —a rushing wind—man caught "off his balance", making him incapable, inept, and an object of pity.

There are many courses advertized these days guaranteeing mental efficiency and increased earning powers. There is only one course worth having—the education you give yourself, and it is based on systematic thought and study. Perhaps if the Editor permits I may be allowed to give in these columns a few hints on mental culture as practised by one who, on enlistment was classified as "illiterate". That, by the way.

I will now close this article by giving my young friends, the Rhine Guards, a message. It is this: "Know your own worth, but be worth something—and never get the "Wind-up"! Remember when your officer speaks to you that he is, first and foremost, your friend. It is more to his own interest to "be friends" with every man in his platoon than it is for you to be friends with him. Remember that, and

NEVER GET THE "WIND-UP"!

TO MY LADY OF THE WOODS.

My dainty Ladye's grace
The woods espy;
They love that radiant face
Which makes a holy place
Where she is nigh:—
But I am far away: I can but sigh.

The sunbeams trickle through
Between the leaves
To seek the maiden, who
From all that's sweet and true
Enchantment weaves:
And the spells reach to one whom absence grieves.

The little, lovely things
That live and play
Around her, — fur or wings —
Each her dear praises sings:
I, more than they,
Join love, and prayer, and longing, ev'ry day.

O. Wynott.

lead them into error. But religion makes the attempt and in making it assumes that the convictions implied in right living can be expressed; and that if rightly expressed, they are true even about matters beyond the knowledge and experience of man.

Religion also makes this assumption about right living; that what is right is not to be discovered by observation and experiment alone, but that men have a power of recognising it, and a desire for it, as natural as their appetites; and that this power and desire grow in proportion as they live rightly. To religion, this power of recognition and this desire are the most important of all facts: Sabatier philosophically concluded that "man was a religious animal" and so he is. He has the power of recognising what is right, and an instinctive desire to do what is right, and that power and that desire constitute his religious faculty. The question which men are called upon to answer is not "Am I religious?" but rather "What religion do I accept?" There are several religions offered for acceptance, and for one in particular—Christianity—it is claimed, that it has expressed convictions which can satisfy all the religious yearnings of men and be the best prescription for that living which can claim for itself the attribute of "Right".

THE STARLIGHTS.

OPENING PERFORMANCE IN Y.M.C.A. CONCERT ROOM AT BEDBURG.

The 3rd Light Divisional Concert Party gave their maiden performance before a crowded audience in the Y.M.C.A. concert room at Bedburg on Monday evening.

The opening chorus at once created a favourable impression of the troupe as a whole. Rifleman Chivois was a strikingly realistic "girl" and revealed a voice as extraordinary in a boy as it was melodious. Pte. Legget also made a good "lady." The comedian Pte. Humphreys kept the audience laughing all the time.

There is apparently no position in which Private Lord cannot play his violin, or rather violins, for he can manage two at once quite easily. Rarely has one seen better concerted dancing than that provided by Riflemen Hughes and Cottam. Other members of this talented band, Gunners Lifford and Bowman, Rifleman Cox and Bandsman Houchin also contributed entertaining items.

An exceedingly enjoyable programme was brought to a close with an amusing sketch depicting the after-war eccentricities of one Major Sir Bingo Binks, this part being portrayed by Lieut. H. Warburton, who kept the hall in one prolonged roar of laughter. The "Starlights" ought to have a series of distinct successes before them.

"PROFESSOR ROBINSONIO'S ORATORIO."

TIP-TOP CONCERT BY THE "ODDITIES" AT ALTENRATH.

A splendid concert was given the other evening in the Dancing Hall, Altenrath, by the "Oddities," by kind permission of Lieut.-Col. V.T.R. Ford D.S.O., 1/5 West Yorkshire Regiment. The orchestra of the 51st Royal Sussex, under R.S.M. Blake rendered some excellent music. The programme opened with an overture, "Raymond" by the orchestra, followed by the opening chorus of the "Oddities" which went with a swing. A song "Warrior Bold" was well rendered by Pte. Binns who gave as an encore "Asleep in the Deep."

Lieut. Robinson next obliged with a humorous song, "The Cologne Post," which was very amusing. "Mr. Rubinstein," by Pte. Barker, was a popular item, while Sergt. Francis brought down the house with his patter and song, "Sing a Song of Sixpence." "The Picaninnies' Paradise" by Pte. Whitely, and a dramatic monologue by C.Q.M.S. Wellington were also much enjoyed. A burlesque "Oratorio," in which "Professor Robinsonio" assumed command and R.S.M. Blake was relegated to the post of drummer concluded the first part of the programme.

Father's Got The "Wind up."

The second half opened with a song "Ideal Home" by Lieut. Robinson, which was very amusing. Pte. Rayan next obliged with "Father's Got the Wind up." A double turn by "Gus and Harold" evoked roars of laughter, their cross patter being screamingly funny. Pte. Fieldhurst rendered "Priceless Percy." "A Country Girl" by "Madame Fifi," whose grace and feminine charm, captivated the audience was received with enthusiasm. A concerted item "Fed Up" followed, and then C.Q.M.S. Wellington obliged with an original song, a parody on "Where the Black eyed Susans Grow." A very pretty rendering, in duet form by Madame Fifi and Partner, of the song "Just Look in my Eyes" was uproariously received and the "house" insisted on these artists returning and singing the chorus again.

The concluding effort of a really tip-top show was a concerted number "A to Z."

On Monday evening a similar concert was given at Donrath, and on Tuesday again at Seelscheid.

THE QUIET GAME.

A CHALLENGE TO ALL DRAUGHTS EXPERTS.

The many correspondents who have written to this journal on the subject of draughts challenges and tournaments will now be able to satisfy their ambitions in the way of organised games. A definite challenge is issued, and it is not beyond the bounds of possibility that Bdr. Drake, if tactfully approached, may be persuaded to organise a tournament or two. The following communication has been received at this office:—

"Bdr. Drake and Sergt Yates are willing to meet all comers in the 'quiet game' and take this opportunity of issuing a challenge to all players in the Rhine Army.

"Will anyone accepting the challenge please communicate with Bdr. C.K. Drake, No 2 Water Tank Coy., A.S.C., Cologne."

BRITISH EMPIRE LEAVE CLUB.

To-day, the band of the 17th Lancers (by kind permission of Major W.G. Nicholls) will play in the theatre; songs will be interspersed and an address will be given by Rev. Gower Rees from 5 to 6.

On Monday, from 6-30 to 9, there will be a practice dance and on Tuesday, a concert will be given. Other forthcoming events will be published in our issue of Tuesday.

WILL THE DERBY BE RUN?

Should the threatened strike of Metropolitan police take place next Tuesday it is possible that the Derby will not be run.

The movement, however, is not likely to be unanimous and the Government has made arrangements to deal with the situation.

RACING RECEIPTS FOR RELIEF OF RATES.

The financial benefit to the ratepayers of Chester out of the record receipts of the recent Chester race meeting was announced this week by Alderman John Jones, who said that the gross receipts of the meeting were £38,718, an increase on those of the year 1914 of nearly 160 per cent.

The corporation, as owners of the racecourse, will get as their share of the receipts and for relief of rates £4,229.

WITH THE "BOOKIES."

SMALL CHANCE NOW OF A MARKET SPRINGER.

The most interest attaching to the Derby for the moment is on the part of big backers, who are coquetting with the club layers as to the fractional price against The Panther. While 11 to 10 is offered, 6 to 5 is wanted, but one reckless course layer launched out at Both to the extent of £1,500 to £1,200. The only wonder is that it was not accompanied by another adverse rumour!

There seems no chance now of a market springer writes "The Scout" in The Daily Express) In fact, the best business of late has been little Buchan for a place whenever 7 to 4 was procurable. Although the elimination of Stefan the Great has meant a good deal of dead money for the books, they are very heavy indeed against the favourite, who fluctuated at times between 7 to 2 and 7's. Lord Basil was hardly in the betting long enough to be a very good friend—unless he wins.

None of the running this week is likely to affect the situation.

BAR MISADVENTURE, A CERTAIN WINNER.

In view of the widespread public interest in the welfare of the Derby favourite, I believed it would serve a useful purpose if I revisited Newmarket for a few hours and pass on my impressions of The Panther's last strong mile and a half gallop before going to Epsom to contest the Derby (says "Hotspur" in The Daily Telegraph) The gallop duly took place on Thursday morning, and now that it is over and the horse is as fresh and well as ever he was, I have not the smallest doubt that, bar misadventure, he will certainly win the Victory Derby.

The Panther showed not the slightest sign of tiring, and when he pulled up he was, comparatively, just as fresh as when he started. He did not blow—of that I took care to make quite certain—and I am satisfied that he is an absolutely fit horse. When I reflect how he went away from Leandros and Jack Role, I consider the gallop was an extremely satisfactory one, and even better than when the same horses finished lengths closer to him in the good gallop he did on the Tuesday of the Newmarket Stakes week.

The Derby favourite has a most equable temperament. He made no fuss either over the preliminaries or when he was being sheeted after it was all over, and he just rejoined his companions for the walk home in the most unconcerned way.

FOOTBALL AT BRUHL.

WEST YORKS v. 73rd. ARMY BRIGADE R.G.A.

On Monday evening, a match was played at Bruhl between the West Yorks and the 73rd Army Brigade R.G.A. For a short time there was general play about the middle of the field until the Brigade's outside right ran up with the ball and put in a shot which resulted in a corner being awarded. At half time no goals had been scored.

Seizing his opportunity in a tussle round the West Yorks goal during the second half, the Brigade's inside left put in a clean shot which achieved its object and proved the deciding score of the match. During the remaining 20 minutes of the game play was even, each team made repeated and determined attacks but in every case the defence was sound so that when the whistle sounded for 'Time' the score was 73rd Brigade 1 goal; West Yorks Nil.

In teams remarkable for general excellence one would like especially to congratulate the wings, the centre half, and the right back of the West Yorks, and the centre half and backs of the Brigade.

INTER PLATOON FINAL.

4 v. 12 PLATOONS—53rd MANCHESTERS.

At Mendon on Tuesday. Much feeling was introduced among both players and spectators shewing the amount of enthusiasm created by the inter platoon competition, but producing a very adverse influence on the standard of play "C" Coy relied too much upon their two Battalion players, Chadwick and Donley, whose superior ability was nullified by the poor support from the remainder and the determined vigilance of "A" Coy's halfbacks.

"A" Coy were a better team all round and "Dumplings," the outside left, scored a nice goal after a brilliant run along the wing. A few minutes afterwards "C" Coy equalised with a soft goal. A penalty for a doubtful offence against Donley put "A" Coy ahead and the result was a win — 2 goals to 1 for A Coy.

For the winners Sergt. Wilde and Sergt. Pye were the most prominent players while Chadwick and Donley played well for the losers. The winning platoon now qualifies for the Brigade Platoon Championship.

ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL.

"B" COY 52nd BEDFORDS v. "D" COY 4th SUFFOLKS.

Played at Birk on Wednesday. The Suffolks assumed the aggressive and were the better team in the first half. They invaded the Bedfords territory time and again, but were unfortunate in their efforts at goal, with the result that the score sheet was blank at the interval.

Upon resuming, the Bedfords came into the limelight, and proving far more enterprising in front of goal, were enabled by the dashing effort of Lce.Cpl. Ough, who scored a brace, and Pte Onions, to run out winners by three goals to nil.

AN UNBROKEN RECORD.

51st S.W.B's. WIN THE BRIGADE CUP.

The 51st South Wales Borderers were to have met the 3rd Brigade H.Q. in a Soccer encounter on Wednesday but the latter failed to fulfil the engagement, perferring to concede the points. On the same day the 53rd S.W.B's defeated the 52nd S.W.B's by the odd goal in five and so the 51st Bn win the Brigade League with a total of 11 points out of a possible 12, and an unbroken record.

In the six matches they have obtained 25 goals against 4 by their opponents the result being:—

v. 53rd Bn H. W. 4—0
v. B.H.Q. H. W. 10—0
v. 52nd Bn A. D. 1—1
v. 53rd Bn A. W. 5—1
v. 52nd Bn H. W. 5—2
v. B.H.Q, A. Points conceded.

The Cup will be presented at a later date.

NOBLE v. CRIQUI.

Tommy Noble, the bantam-weight champion, has signed articles to box Eugène Criqui a return contest of twenty rounds at the Cirque de Paris.

The American boxer Drabek has succumbed to a blow dealt him in a boxing match at Le Mans by his French opponent Crideville.

SPORTING ITEMS IN BRIEF.

3-year Old Drops Dead.

M. Vanderbilt's Silver Beach, a three-year-old by Maintenon—Silver Streak, dropped dead after his gallop last week.

More riflemen assembled last week on the famous ranges of the National Rifle Association at Bisley than have gathered there since the outbreak of war.

Damage At Compiegne.

The July meeting at Compiegne will not take place, the damage done by the Germans not having yet been repaired, but it is hoped there will be racing there in August and September.

"Who is Zemla?"

"Who is Zemla?" lawn tennis players inquired when they saw that this representative of Czecho-Slovakia had defeated Decugis in Paris by 3 sets to 1, and had then taken the first set from Patterson. Zemla comes from Bohemia.

"Chip Of The Old Block."

Chelsea have signed on Stuart Macmillan for next season. Before joining the Army he played occasionally at inside-right for Derby County, with which club his father, Johnny Macmillan, gained a reputation before becoming manager of the Glossop team.

Ranelagh War Cup.

The Ranelagh Club's new War Cup tournament, instituted this season for a gold challenge cup presented by the Ranelagh committee, has closed with an entry of eight teams composed of officers of the Imperial Forces who have served during the present war. It will be played next week.

Runner For One-legged Cricketer.

Replying to a request from Northamptonshire for a runner for Denton, who lost a leg in the war, the Captain of the Lancashire C.C. team says, "If any fellow who has been in the war and who has lost a leg wants to play he is good enough for me. He can have 30 runners."

International Champions.

The "Liége Gazette" has promoted a football tournament for June 8 and 9. Among the competing clubs will be the Olympique Lillois (champions of France), the Union St. Gilloise (champions of Belgium), and an eleven representative of the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg, winners of the Coupe des Régions Liberees.

DIXIE KID KILLED.

KNOCKED OUT IN CAFE BRAWL BY U.S. OFFICER.

The "Dixie Kid," the celebrated negro boxer, was killed on the terrace of a café on the boulevards in Paris on Sunday night.

He had been drinking heavily, and got up from a table on the terrace and staggered against an American officer. The latter remonstrated, and the boxer made an insulting reply, which enraged the officer, who struck the nigger with his fist and sent him reeling. The "Dixie Kid" rose, and the officer knocked him out.

When he was picked up the negro was dead. He was forty-five years of age.

The "Dixie Kid," whose correct name was Aaron Brown, defeated among others Johnny Summers, Jack Goldswain, and Johnny Matheson, the "fighting Scot," all of whom he knocked out. He was an extremely clever boxer, but could not always be relied on to give of his best.

BRITISH EMPIRE LEAVE CLUB.

On Friday, May 30t , Col. Anderson, A. C. G., gave a most interesting lecture on Italy and her part in the war, describing some of her past history, from the days when Rome was the centre of the world, and her armies went forth to conquer, and her fleet sailed from Venice to bring merchandize from the Far East. In the middle of the nineteenth century Napoleon came to invade the country, and it was left to Garibaldi and Cavour to save their native land and form a united Italy. In the present war Italy has shown the same spirit, and her soldiers have performed great feats of bravery in the cause of justice and liberty. The lecture, which was heartily applauded, was followed by the Ladies' Club orchestra, which gave a most enjoyable performance. The programme consisted of Intermezzo, (Mascagni), cello solo (Squire) Miss Somers Cocks, piano solo (Chopin) Miss Richmond, selection from the Contes D'Hoffman.

The programme gave great pleasure to the audience who applauded warmly. The most popular item was, no doubt, the well know—n Barcarole.

The performance concluded with a most amusing duologue, given by Miss Maxtone Graham, and Miss Hanbury Williams, entitled. "Miss Honey's treasure." Miss Maxtone Graham's rendering of "A Scotch Slavey" was inimitable, and brought the house down with laughter and applause.

SUMMARY OF AUSTRIAN PEACE TERMS.

FINANCE POSTPONED.

AN EMPIRE ON THE SCRAP HEAP.

COMPLETE NAVAL DISARMAMENT.

Little did Austria foresee in 1914 that by its ultimatum to Serbia on July 24th 1914, followed on July 29th by an Austrian bombardment of Belgrade, it had struck a death blow to the Habsburg Monarchy and to the Austrian Empire. For many years it had been tottering, and although the war, in which Austria was but a catspaw, held the Empire together for a time, the oppressed communities, dominated by archaic rulers, anticipated the end which was already in sight in October 1918. The Austrian Empire died and with its death vanished the German plans for a Germanic Middle Europe.

The Austrian capitulation in the field on November 3rd 1918, after a battle in which they lost 5000 guns and 300,000 prisoners, — the greatest capture in history — had been preceded by the collapse of Turkey.

The effects of these capitulations were enormous. One million troops became available for direct operations against Germany through Bavaria and Saxony, for instance.

On the Western front the final phase began on the 1st November with great Allied attacks in three regions. On the 7th four envoys of the new "democratic" German Government set out to receive the Armistice terms from Marshal Foch and actual fighting ceased at 11 a. m. on the 11th November.

The Terms of Peace for Austria obviously differ in great degree from those imposed on Germany though the same principles are applied.

There is hardly anything left of Austria save the name.

The conditions of peace of the Allied and Associated Powers, with the exception of the military, reparations, financial, and certain boundary clauses, were handed to the Austrian plenipotentiaries at St. Germain yesterday. Those clauses which are not yet ready for presentation will be delivered as soon as possible, the Austrians in the meanwhile having the opportunity to begin work on the greater part of the treaty in an effort to facilitate a final decision.

The Austrian Treaty follows exactly the same outline as the German and in many places is identical with it except for the change in name. Certain specific clauses which applied only to Germany are of course omitted and certain new clauses of particular applicability to Austria are included, especially as regards the new states created out of the former Austro-Hungarian Empire.

Austria is left by the Treaty a state of about 6,000,000 people inhabiting a territory of between 50,000 and 60,000 square miles. She recognises the complete independence of Hungary, Tchecho-Slovakia, and the Serbo-Croat-Slovene State, and cedes other territories which previously in union with her composed the Empire of Austria-Hungary with its population of over 50,000,000 and its area of 261,259 square miles.

Austria agrees to accept the League of Nations Covenant and the Labour Charter, to renounce all her extra-European rights, to demobilize all her naval and aerial forces, to admit the right of trial by the Allied and Associated Powers of her nationals guilty of violating the laws and customs of war, and to accept detailed provisions similar to those in the German Treaty as to economic relations and freedom of transit.

In the following Summary part I, containing the Covenant of the League of Nations and part XII, containing the Labour Convention, are identical with those in the German Treaty and are therefore omitted. Part VI, dealing with Prisoners of War and Graves, and Part X, with aerial Navigation, are identical, with the substitution of Austria and Austrian for Germany and German, and are also omitted. Similarly Part XIII of the German Treaty containing guarantees of execution is not included in the Austrian Treaty.

PART II.

THE FRONTIERS OF AUSTRIA.

The Northern frontier facing Tchecho-Slovakia follows the existing administrative boundaries formerly separating the provinces of Bohemia and Noravia from those of Upper and Lower Austria, subject to certain minor rectifications, notably in the regions of Gmund and Feldsberg and along the river Morava.

The Southern frontier facing Italy and the Serbo-Croat-Slovene State is to be fixed by the principle Allied and Associated Powers at a later date. In the eastern part of the line, passing just east of Bleiburg, crosses the Drave just above its confluence with the Levant and thence will pass north of the Drave so as to leave to the Serbo-Croat-Slovene State Marburg and Radkersburg just to the north of which latter place it will join the Hungarian frontier.

The Western and North-western frontiers facing Bavaria, the Western frontier facing Switzerland, and the Eastern frontier facing Hungary remain unchanged.

PART III.

POLITICAL CLAUSES.

EUROPE.

The High Contracting Parties recognise and accept the frontiers of Bulgaria, Greece, Hungary, Poland, Roumania, the Serbo-Croat-Slovene State, and the Tchecho-Slovak State, as at present or as ultimately determined. Austria renounces in favour of the principle Allied and Associated Powers all her rights and titles over territories formerly belonging to her, which, though outside the new frontiers of Austria, have not at present been assigned to any State, undertaking to accept the settlement to be made in regard to these territories.

THE TCHECHO-SLOVAK STATE.

Austria recognises the complete independence of the Tchecho-Slovak State, including the autonomous territory south of the Carpathians, in conformity with the action already taken by the Allied and Associated Powers. The exact boundary between Austria and the New State is to be fixed by a Field Commission of seven members, five nominated by the principal Allied and Associated Powers, and one each by Austria and Tchecho-Slovakia.

Tchecho-Slovakia agrees to embody in a Treaty with the principal Allied and Associated Powers such provisions as may be deemed necessary to protect racial, religious, or linguistic minorities, and to assure freedom of transit and equitable treatment for the commerce of other nations.

THE SERB-CROAT-SLOVENE STATE.

Austria similarly recognizes the complete independence of the Serb-Croat-Slovene State, and renounces her rights and titles. A similarly appointed Field Commission, including a member nominated by the Serb-Croat-Slovene State, is to fix the exact boundary.

The question of the basin of Klagenfurt is reserved.

The Serb-Croat-Slovene State agrees to a similar Treaty for the protection of minorities and freedom of transit.

ROUMANIA.

Roumania agrees to a similar Treaty for protection of minorities and freedom of transit.

RUSSIA.

Austria is to recognise and respect the full independence of all territories which formed part of the former Russian Empire. She is to accept definitely the annulment of the Brest-Litovsk Treaty and of all other Treaties or Agreements of all kinds concluded since the revolution of November, 1917, with all Governments or political groups on territory of the former Russian Empire. The Allies reserve all rights on the part of Russia for restitution and satisfaction to be obtained from Austria on the principles of the present Treaty.

GENERAL ARRANGEMENTS.

Austria is to consent to the abrogation of the treaties of 1839, by which Belgium was established as a neutral State, and her frontiers fixed, and to accept in advance any convention with which the Allies may determine to replace them.

Austria adheres to the abrogation of the neutrality of the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg and accepts in advance all international agreements as to it reached by the Allied and Associated Powers.

Austria accepts all arrangements which the Allied and Associated Powers make with Turkey and Bulgaria with reference to any rights, privileges, or interests claimed in those countries by Austria or her nationals and not dealt with elsewhere.

Austria accepts all arrangements which the Allied and Associated Powers make with Germany concerning the territories whose abandonment was imposed upon Denmark by the Treaty of 1864.

PROTECTION OF MINORITIES.

In a series of special clauses Austria undertakes to bring her instutions into conformity with the principles of liberty and justice, and acknowledges that the obligations for the protection of minorities are matters of international concern over which the League of Nations has jurisdiction. She assures complete protection of life and liberty to all inhabitants of Austria, without distinction of birth, nationality, language, race, or religion, together with the right to the free exercise of any creed.

All Austrian nationals, without distinction of race, language, or religion, are to be equal before the law. No restrictions are to be imposed on the free use of any language in private or public, and reasonable facilities are to be given to Austrian nationals of non-German speech for the use of their language before the Courts. Austrian nationals belonging to racial, religious, or linguistic minorities, are to enjoy the same protection as other Austrian nationals, in particular with regard to schools and other educational establishments; and in districts where a considerable proportion of Austrian nationals, of other than German speech are resident, facilities are to be given in schools for the instruction of children in their own language, and equitable share of public funds is to be provided for the purpose. These provisions do not preclude the Austrian Government from making the teaching of German obligatory. They are to be embodied by Austria in her fundamental law as a Bill of Rights, and provisions regarding them are to be under the protection of the League of Nations.

PART IV.

AUSTRIAN RIGHTS OUTSIDE EUROPE.

Outside Europe Austria renounces all rights, titles, and privileges as to her own or her Allies' territories to all the Allied and Associated Powers, and undertakes to accept whatever measures are taken by the principal Allied Powers in relation thereto.

The clauses as to Egypt, Morocco, China and Siam are identical, after the necessary modifications, with those of the German Treaty, except that especially in the case of China, there is not need for so great detail.

PART V.

MILITARY, NAVAL & AIR CLAUSES.

The military clauses are reserved.

NAVAL.

All Austro-Hungarian warships, submarines, and vessels of the Danube flotilla are declared to be finally surrendered to the principal Allied and Associated Powers. Twenty-one specified auxiliaryc ruisers are to be disarmed and treated as merchant ships. All warships and submarines under construction in ports which belong or have belonged to Austria-Hungary shall be broken up, the salvage not to be used except for industrial purposes and not to be sold to foreign countries. The construction or acquisition of any submarine even for commercial purposes is forbidden. All naval arms, ammunition, and other war material belonging to Austria-Hungary at the date of the Armistice shall be surrendered to the Allies. The Austrian wireless station at Vienna is not to be used for naval, military, or political messages relating to Austria or her late Allies without the assent of the Allied and Associated Governments during three months, but only for commercial purposes under supervision. During the same period Austria is not to build any more high-power wireless stations.

AIR CLAUSES.

The Air clauses are practically the same as in the German Treaty except for the 100 seaplanes and their personnel which Germany is allowed to retain till October to search for mines.

GENERAL.

Austria agrees not to accredit or send any military, naval, or air mission to any foreign country, nor to allow Austrian nationals to enlist in the army, navy, or air service of any foreign Power.

PART VII on Penalties is identical with the German-Treaty, except for the omission of any provision similar to that calling for the trial of the Ex-Kaiser of Germany.

PART VIII on reparations is reserved.

PART IX.

The Financial Clauses are reserved.

PART X.

ECONOMIC CLAUSES.

These are, except in certain details such as shipping, similar to those of the German Treaty. Special provisions are added, however, for former Austro-Hungarian nationals acquiring an Allied Nationality, similar to those in the German Treaty relating to the inhabitants of Alsace-Lorraine. Their contracts are maintained subject to cancellation by their Governments. Austria undertakes to recognise any agreement or Convention made by the Allies to safeguard the interest of their nationals in any undertakings constituted under Austro-Hungarian law which operate in territories detached from the former Austro-Hungarian Empire and to transfer any necessary documents and information in regard to them.

PART XI.

FREEDOM OF TRANSIT.

The clauses as to freedom of transit are the same in the Austrian as in the German Treaty, except for the omission of provisions affecting Germany alone and the insertion of specific clauses granting Austria transit privileges through former Austro-Hungarian territories, in order to ensure her access to the Adriatic.

PART XIV.

Miscellaneous provisions are, after necessary substitutions, virtually identical with those of the German Treaty. The Treaty is to come into force when signed by Austria and three principal Powers, and to be effective for the individual State on the deposit of their specific ratifications.

BRILLIANT FEAT OF ARMS IN AFGHANISTAN.

MANY ENEMY KILLED.

Simla, 27th May.—An enemy column from Khost, under the command of General Nadir Khan, the Afghan Commander-in-Chief, has begun operations against Thal. It is stated that these Afghan regulars have rations, whereas the camp followers are subsisting by begging food from the Waziris. The enemy has occupied Spinwam. The withdrawal was carried out satisfactorily. Reports from the Upper Kurram say that some Afghan tribesmen attacked Chapri yesterday, near the Paiwar Kotal, and were driven off by the local militia, who killed a number of the assailants without sustaining any casualties themselves.

The British troops at Chaman have captured the Afghan frontier post of Spin Baldak.

On May 26the forts were subjected to a thorough bombardment, after which the towers on the ridge commanding the forts were assaulted and taken. The main gate was blown up, and the capture completed by the assaulting troops, who scaled the walls where they were breached. The garrison stubbornly resisted, and the bulk was either killed or captured. No change is reported from Dakka.

In conformity with the Government's policy in the Upper Tochi, the exposed militia posts in South Waziristan have been withdrawn.—Reuter.

Peshawur, 27th May.—Arms, followed by British rupees, have had a wonderfully pacifying effect in the occupied territories on the Khyber front. The local peasantry, who at first fled, are now fast returning, and are getting busy with an almost record harvest. Supplies are arriving freely. The peasants naively remark that if we promise not to tax them they will welcome British rule. In the meantime peace reigns on all the front.

The Fast of Ramazan, which commenced on May 31, prevented the enemy from engaging in active fighting. During the recent fighting bombs were freely used in turning the gunners out of their shelters and clearing the brows of the hills. There is little doubt that bombs will form the essential weapon in future mountain warfare.

METROPOLITAN POLICE TROUBLE.

CITY POLICE LOYALTY.

When the result of the police ballot on the question of a strike is known, it is believed that an overwhelming majority throughout the country will be in favour of a strike, including two-thirds of the London force.

Nevertheless signs of reaction against the adoption of extreme measures are observable as a consequence of the Government announcement of increased pay and threats of dismissals.

A meeting of City of London police yesterday passed a resolution protesting against the action of the Executive Union and its supporters in "causing an unsatisfactory state of affairs amongst members of the Union which has been done for no other purpose than as a political move to cause a revolution in the country."

The resolution also declared that the ballot of the members was carried out in a very unsatisfactory manner.

The police-sergeant who presided was interviewed and said that the majority of the men are determined to remain at their duty at all costs.

The London Trades Council to which the Police Union is affiliated is backing the policeman, but the Triple Alliance does not intend to intervene. The ballot of the police showed 10 to 1 in favour of a strike but it was carried but before the increased wages were announced. There have been many resignations from the Police Union throughout the country. Sir N. Macready, the Commissioner of Metropolitan Police, has issued another order in which, after describing further advantages in the shape of pensions and insurances now secured to the men, he says that his previous order was sanctioned by the Government and would be enforced at all costs. There is now little anxiety regarding the running of the Derby, which undoubtedly will be attended by the greatest crowd on record.

POLICE STRIKE WARNINGS.

The Birmingham Watch Committee has issued a notice to the police warning them of the consequences of strike.

The Chief Constable states that a large majority of the local force have no association with any Union and he has the utmost confidence in the men. A ballot of the Union members, however, reveals a majority in favour of a strike.

At Manchester and Portsmouth the Watch Committees have ordered that policemen absenting themselves from duty will be dismissed and not permitted to rejoin.

WAR RECORD OF THE POST OFFICE.

STUPENDOUS FIGURES.

An interesting story of the work done in France by the Post Office was told by Mr. H. Pike Pease, M.P., Assistant Postmaster-General, at the annual dinner of the Head Postmasters' Association in London. Generals Haig, Munro, and Allenby, he said had, all spoken in the highest terms of the splendid accomplishments of that department. The telegraph business also had been magnificently organised. He expressed the gratitude of the Postmaster-General for the way in which the whole service had responded during the years of the war.

He noted with regret that of the 82,000 employees who joined the Army and Navy, 9,000 made the supreme sacrifice. They had to pride themselves, however, in the fact that distinction was won by 1,780, including V.C.'s, and that from the ranks of women workers 1,000 did actual service with Q.M.A.A.C.'s. Since the signing of the Armistice upwards of 30,000 of their males had returned after demobilisation.

As instances of the great achievements of the postal departments Mr. Pease mentioned that up to the time of the Armistice about twelve million letters were sent each week to the British Expeditionary Force, in addition to 600,000 weekly deliveries of parcels. They had supplied 40,000 miles of cable for use in the trenches, and 200,000 miles of overhead wire, the insulators used reaching an immense figure, somewhere between four and five millions. The system of voting and the canvassing of troops in the last General Election were responsible also for the handling of over 6,000,000 addresses of candidates and 2,882,000 ballot-papers.

Sir Robert Bruce, Controller of the London Postal Services, pointed out that on the Admiralty list there were 14,000 ships, and letters for these ships had simply been addressed "care of G.P.O., London," and the rest of the work in connection with their distribution was done by the Post Office for four and a half years.

EIGHT MILLION WAR MEDALS.

Answering a number of questions relating to the issue of war medals, Mr. Forster states in the Parliamentary papers that approximately 1,300,000 of the "1914-15 Star" will have to be issued. It has not yet been possible to begin the general issue. The rolls for the "1914-15 Star" have not yet been completed, but every endeavour is being made to expedite matters and to issue the stars as quickly as possible.

So far as the British war medal is concerned, it is estimated that approximately 8,000,000 will be required. The design has been selected, and arrangements for manufacture are now being made. Five hundred thousand yards of the medal ribbon are required for the preliminary issue, and, though, the orders for nearly 2,000,000 yards have been distributed on the widest possible basis amongst seventeen firms, the necessary preliminary quantity has not yet been fully delivered. As the orders have been placed at competitive rates it is not desirable that these rates should be published.

FIRST LONDON LORRYBUS.

The first lorrybus was seen in London on Saturday in the shape of an Army lorry painted green and transformed into a conveyance to seat twenty-seven passengers.

N. C. 4 COMPLETES ITS JOURNEY.

THE NEW PILGRIMAGE.

The American seaplane N. C. 4 arrived at Plymouth at 2.26 p.m. on Saturday. The weather was fine with a slight haze when the N. C. 4 alighted at Plymouth.

Commander Read and the crew were taken off by a motor launch and taken aboard the American cruiser Rochester, where they were received by the American Vice-Admiral, the Mayor of Plymouth, and Government representatives. The airmen were subsequently welcomed at a public reception by the Mayor who spoke from the Mayflower Stone, and later were entertained at luncheon by the Air Ministry.

At a civic reception to Commander Read and the crew of the seaplane, the Mayor of Plymouth referred to the sailing of the Pilgrim from the same spot. Mainly out of that small beginning, he said, the mighty American people had sprung up and to-day in the most dramatic fashion their descendants had crossed back to us in a way never dreamt of by our forefathers. The feats they were celebrating to-day, he added, were but the precursors of further great developments.

The N. C. 4 covered the five hundred miles from Ferrol to Plymouth in four hundred minutes. It was sighted off its destination at a height of one thousand feet and was escorted landward by three British seaplanes, being met on arrival by numerous river craft. Sirens were sounded and thousands on the Hoe heartily greeted the approaching American seaplane.

The seaplane's actual flying time from America was thirty-five hours for the three thousand miles. H.M. the King sent his congratulations to the American Ambassador. The flight was handicapped by fog and occasional rain storms, especially in the neighbourhood of Brest. Her descent at the mouth of the Mondego river after leaving Lisbon was due to a leaky radiator. The greatest height attained in the flight from Ferrol was one thousand feet, but the level was mostly between fifty and a hundred feet owing to fog. The Channel was crossed at a height of two hundred feet.

HAWKER FLIES AT HENDON MEETING.

The first flying meeting since the war took place at Hendon on Saturday afternoon. Hawker and his wife flew to Hendon on a Sopwith machine and later on Hawker gave an exhibition flight on a monoplane. The opening of the meeting was unfortunately marred by an accident. An aeroplane carrying two men and two women crashed. Nobody was killed, but the pilot, Robertson, an ex R.A.F. flier was seriously hurt.

After a spirited auction a Leeds lady paid sixty guineas for the privilege of making the first flight with Hawker.

WOMAN TO TRY ATLANTIC FLIGHT.

In connection with her attempt to fly across the Atlantic Miss Ruth Law, the famous woman aviator, says that she will use a new Curtiss biplane, which is now being constructed, and is to be equipped with two 400 h.p. motors. She will be accompanied by Mechanician James Lamont, and the course will probably be the same as that attempted by Hawker. She expects the United States navy to give her every assistance, and is confident that she will be the first woman to fly the Atlantic. Miss Law is America's only lady aviator, and has proved her skill as a pilot by many exhibition flights here. She has recently been engaged in flying in France and the Orient. —Wireless Press.

R.A.F. DOG SMUGGLERS.

OFFICIAL WARNING.

An official of the Board of Agriculture declared on Saturday that information has recently been obtained which has convinced the Board that many officers of the R.A.F. are flagrantly disregarding orders and are smuggling dogs into the country from France and Belgium.

Such offenders will promptly be dealt with by Court martial which will probably have a salutary effect. A smart sentence carrying with it loss of gratuity would stop the present reprehensible practices.

KUT PRISONERS MISSING.

Mr. Forster states in the Parliamentary papers that there are in all 155 men not so far accounted for in consequence of the evacuation of Kut. Of these, definite evidence has been received, showing that eighty men were captured as prisoners of war, but have not yet been repatriated. In the cases of the remaining seventy-five no information whatever has been received other than they were presumed to have been taken prisoners of war when Kut was evacuated. It is feared that none of the prisoners still unaccounted for can have survived their captivity.

SAVINGS' BANK DEPOSITS.

In the Post Office Savings' Bank the balances to credit of depositors on Jan. 1, 1914, were £187,950,000, which on April 30, 1919, had increased to £257,000,000. They also held at present £200,000,000 in stock or bonds of Government issues, as compared with £26,500,000 at the outbreak of the war. The subscriptions received to issues for the purposes of the war amounted to £177,000,000, and gratuities advised to the Savings Bank for crediting to accounts of discharged and demobilized men of the Navy Army, and Air Force numbered 2,850,000, equal to the sum of £44,250,000.

GERMANY AND A CHANGE OF HEART.

What we are looking for from Germany is a change of heart. So far we have looked somewhat in vain. Violent denials of having committed any particular crime against European civilization, counter-charges of war-mongering and militarism fill the air, until we ask ourselves in bewilderment whether, after all, it was really we who provoked this war of aggression, or Germany?

The Peace Terms have evoked in Germany a storm of indignation, sorrow and bewilderment; the sorrow is justified, the bewilderment at least comprehensible, but what about the indignation. Let us endeavour to answer this question in as objective a manner as possible by asking the question "Has German mentality altered in any degree, so that her former sins may be forgiven." It is impossible to return an answer entirely in the affirmative to this question..

A great deal is made of the annexation of the Saare district, Upper Silesia and so forth. If Germany had been victorious, an overwhelming majority of the people would have entirely approved of a most far reaching annexationist policy. Accordingly, Germany has lost any right to complain about annexations made at her own cost. The mere fact that a people which, during the first years of the war at least, were filled with lust of annexation now complain about annexations carried out at their own expense, shows that the mentality continues. People can take up the point of view that Polish annexation is to be condemned, one's own as well as that of foreign nations, and, in that case, they are certainly justified in passing judgment upon a foreign policy of annexation, or they can adopt the standpoint of "I take what I can get, but then I cannot condemn those who do the same thing", but to be an annexationist yourself and then to be indignant at the annexationism of others is mere hypocrisy. How many Germans are there who were undeniably and consistently against the annexation of Longwy and Briey throughout the whole war? Moreover, the basin of the Saare is not to be annexed at all, as Edward Bernstein has clearly explained, it is simply hypothecated to France for a term of years in order to provide compensation for the destroyed coal mines of northern France.

The German hypocritical attitude can be viewed then, at least if not as free from blame, at all events as human, but it is not a conscious but rather an unconscious hypocrisy, and its roots are to be found in German self-conceit. The Germans considered that they were a "kultur" people superior to all other nations; elaborate treatises were written in favour of this theory. For instance, Heydebrand laid down the view "He who ceases to be a German ceases to be a human being." Fischer preached the doctrine that German kultur is the highest in the world. German Professors, such as Messrs. Ostwald and Haeckel, indulged in fantastic dreams of Germany's claim for world domination, and one could find endless samples of the crazy megalomania of the Pan-German elements, for whom it was an impossibility to grant the same right to others which they demanded for themselves. This mentality, far from having vanished, is still to be found in fairly wide circles in Germany. In this connection we may ask ourselves the question "Do the Pan-Germans really represent the vanishing minority in Germany?" An answer to this question cannot be returned wholly in the negative. The number of the official hallmarked Pan-Germans is certainly not large, but one-tenth of the German electorate have cast their votes for the German National Party, which has a Pan-German leaning. A further one-twentieth is in favour of the German People's Party, which is also impregnated with Pan-Germanism.

Concealed Pan Germans are to be found among the adherents of the Majority Social Democrats. The whole Corps of officers is more or less dominated by Pan German ideals; the body of students is preponderently Chauvinistic as are the boys of the gymnasia. Accordingly the party which is taking up the intransigeant attitude is sufficiently powerful in Germany, and so guarantees that Germany will not again become warlike are not to be relied upon.

They are taking up the attitude at present that Germany cannot live if the Peace Conditions are translated into actual facts. Now Reventlow, Tirpitz, Traub, Westarp and those of similar opinions have been telling the world for years that Germany could not exist without the Flanders coast. As, however, even the Pan-Germans do not expect the Paris Conference to consent to the incorporation of Belgium with Germany, their country, according to their own assertion, is already dead and buried. Now one cannot be dead more than once, and so the whole of this German outcry becomes a mere absurdity, the logic of which cannot hold water.

Is there then no solution to the apparent impasse that confronts us? — do the Peace Terms contain nothing advantageous for Germany? As we have already pointed out, it is a changed outlook and the real repentance that we are looking for on the part of Germany as much as indemnities and material guarantees. If once Germany signs the Peace Terms and gives proofs of her intention to abide loyally by her decision, we are convinced that ways and means for her to work out her own salvation will be forthcoming. We propose in a further article to offer a few suggestions upon the subject.

COLOGNE.

FROM A POEM BY HEINE, THE ANTI-PRUSSIAN POET.

The Rhine flows calmly and widely,
And, mirrored deep in the flood,
With her Cathedral holy,
Cologne for ages, hath stood.

The Dom enshrines a painting,
Wrought bravely on leather in gold,
Still, o'er my life's rough desert,
It shines as it shone of old.

Still hover roses and angels
The Mother of God above:
Her eyes and her features, her features her tresses
Are those of the maiden I love.

HABITS.

We were sitting in the club one evening chatting on various subjects. The conversation came round to the various little weaknesses which we all have and the difficulty of eradicating them.

"A confirmed habit is a terrible thing" said my neighbour. Take the case of poor old Wilkins He was an example of the average prosperous, middle-aged man with no particular vices, but he had one weakness—tobacco. First thing in the morning, almost before his eyes were opened, he'd make a grab for his pipe, and start puffing away, keeping it there till he went to bed, except for meals, and he always seemed to grudge the time spent on them.

"And he didn't seem any the worse for it either—used to boast about it, in fact. 'Look at me' he would say puffing out his chest. 'I smoke two ounces of tobacco a day and have never had a day's illness in my life. Kills the germs, my boy. Why are non-smokers always unhealthy? Because their lungs are full of bacteria.'

"Well, one day he came across one of those advertisements about will-power. You know the sort of thing — a picture of a square-jawed young man with piercing eyes looking scornfully at you, and saying "Are you your own Master? Write for our booklet, and develop your will-power a thousand-fold etc, etc." He wrote for the booklet, and conscientiously a tempted various mental exercises, which involved doing unpleasant and, to my mind, quite useless things every day. But he became very enthusiastic about it, and used to bore us by his airs of superiority, and references to our weak-mindedness and lack of self-control. Until one day we got fed up, and suggested that he should give up his own favourite habit, namely, smoking. He was somewhat taken aback, but there was no way out of it, and he had to accept the challenge.

"I have never seen such a change in a man. Before that he was a bluff, good-natured sort of chap, always ready for a chat or a drink and very fond of company. But from that time on he seemed to avoid his pals, and went about with a hangdog air, as if life weren't worth living, which probably it wasn't for him, poor man. I found him, now and again, sneaking away to puff guiltily at a cigarette, and when taxed with it he would say that breaking a habit was a gradual process, and could not be done suddenly without danger to his health.

"He confessed to me that he had tried chewing-gum as an alternative but it gave him no satisfaction and upset his digestion, so that he had to give it up. He tried various patent remedies, but they had no effect except to make the craving worse, and he would find himself smoking without any conscious recollection of having filled and lighted his pipe.

"Things became so bad that eventually we sent a deputation to him, releasing him from his promise. We were afraid he would waste away or be driven to suicide. But he was stubborn and swore to go on with it. He used to leave his pipe and tobacco at home when he went out, but round taut the bills for new pipes and tobacco pouches became so large that his income would not stand the strain.

"The crisis came when he decided that the only cure was to be sent to gaol where he would be absolutely prevented from smoking. So one morning he picked out a burly-looking navvy, and made an unprovoked assault upon him. The navvy, after having entertained an interesting crowd for five minutes with an exhibition of uppercuts and right hooks to the jaw, remarked to someone who suggested fetching a policeman, "What! 'ave 'im put in quod? Why, I love 'im like a brother. I aint 'ad such a time since I found a "copper" kissing my best girl two years ago," and lovingly carried his late assailant to the nearest butcher's shop, where he superintended the application of raw beef to the injured parts of his anatomy, with practised eye.

"This experience finally broke down Wilkins' attempts at self-denial, and as soon as his jaw had sufficiently recovered to allow of it, he was smoking away in a praiseworthy effort to make up for lost time. He burnt the book on Will-Power, and in a week or two was once more his old, cheery self.

"All the same, he is now a confirmed non-smoker—goes to meetings and denounces Nicotine as the curse of the present generation, and so on!" He paused, awaiting my surprised interrogation. Why? "Oh, he got married shortly after. One of those quiet, determined sort of girls. Doesn't say much but gets what she wants. She let him alone until after the honeymoon, and then one day she launched forth about his filthy habit, and said he must choose between her and it. Of course the poor creature hadn't a chance. If it had occurred before they were married, his answer might have been different, but as it was he gave in at once. I saw him sitting in the park the other day. He had a bag of acid drops beside him, and his attempts to persuade me that they were a perfect substitute for a pipe would have been funny if they hadn't been so pathetic. Well, goodnight. I'm off to bed," and he left me to meditate on the moral, if any, of his story.

THE OPERA.

"CAVALLERIA" AND "PAGLIACCI."

"What men call gallantry and gods, adultery,
Is much more common where the climate's sultry," says Byron, a high authority in such matters. So under the blue Italian sky, we followed with tense emotion the developments of the grand passion in the bosoms of peasants (Cavalleria) and of strolling players (Bajazzo) who love not wisely but too well and bring on themselves the inevitable tragedy of unholy desire. Before the curtain rose on the Sicilian village, we heard Turiddu (Herr Krauss) unbosoming himself of his infatuation for Lola, with true artistry. Then we find ourselves in the Sicilian village, following Santuzza's (Sofie Wolf) hopeless love, turning to hate. Herr Liszewsky made an admirable Alfio, and made a palpable hit with his aria, "Rossestampfen, Peitschenknall." Gertrud Bender made a seductive Lola. The too-familiar Intermezzo, though barrel-organed to death, was delightfully rendered. In "Bajazzo," Herr Höttges (Tonio) declaimed with much vocal and histrionic skill, the prologue, so beloved of baritones. Then we found ourselves among the peasants following Bajazzo's (Herr Menzinsky) passionate jealousy as his wife, Nedda (Johanna Geisler) repulses Tonio (Herr Höttges) only to abandon herself to Silvio's (Herr Renner) solicitation. Herr Menzinsky was entirely admirable throughout. Alike in repelling Tonio's unwelcome adresses and encouraging those of Silvio, Johanna Geisler fitted the part like a glove. Herr Vogellied was a treat of the first order. She was gracefully coquettish in the clowns' theatre, as the object of Harlequin's adoration. Herr Wolf's Serenade, by the way, was one of the tit-bits of the feast. The Italian atmosphere was, in both pieces, most artistically conveyed.

A. M.

A "FISCHY" STORY.

We are anticipating a great boom in the German classes in our Battalion. Hitherto we have been able to carry on satisfactory conversation with the inhabitants by means of such phrases as "Nix goot" and "Sanfairyang", but the recent adventures of four of our officers in Cologne have awakened us to our shortcomings and we are out to redeem ourselves.

In the beginning there was a schloss; around the schloss was a moat emptying its waters into a lake well stocked with large and succulent trout. Then came to the schloss a B.H.Q. Officer's Mess. At once everybody who possessed the energy to cut an ash branch and find a line and float, prepared to fish. The old hands beguiled the evenings with tales of their past achievements, and the C.O., fired with enthusiasm, determined to justify his position. Finding that three officers purposed spending a day in Cologne, he commissioned them to buy him a trout rod with its accessories of flies red, blue and multicoloured. These officers, the Padre, the Q.M., and the M.O., taking feverish counsel together, discovered with dismay that not one of them knew the German for fish, let alone trout. And because the C.O. was a new one and they desired to impress him with their zeal and efficiency, they resolved to take the Education Officer with them (as a matter of fact he knew still less German han they did) anticipating from his presence a great moral effect.

Arrived in Cologne, they spent the whole of the morning thirstily tramping the hot and dusty streets in the burning sun, looking in vain for a shop with fishing rods displayed for sale. Over lunch the Padre, the Q.M., the M.O., and the Education Officer brought all their wits to bear on the problem. Fortified with strong waters, they summoned the porter. After much imitation of the throwing of a trout-fly, and excited shouting of the word "fisch" (which really looks German spelt like that) he directed them to a shop in the Hohestrasse. They quickly found it. It was a large, imposing building, a young Harrod's in fact, and the hearts of the Padre, the Q.M., the M.O., and the Education Officer were filled with hope.

On the first floor the Padre took up the tale. For a full minute he threw imaginary flies and called for imaginary "fisch"; when at last he paused and pathetically asked, "Verstein?", the smiling girl at the counter answered "Ya, ya," and helpfully directed them to the floor above. They were getting warmer, their hearts beat with hope, and joyfully the Padre, the Q.M., M.O., and Education Officer trooped upstairs. The Q.M. next advanced to the attack. In spite of his increasing corpulence he devotedly waved his arm and cried "fisch." Once more the reply, "Ya, ya," and the obsequious shopman pointed to a door on which was plainly painted "Room No. 5." Renewed hope, for so far they had been wandering through spacious halls filled with mysterious garments, interesting to the Q.M., M.O., and Education Officer perhaps, but certainly not suited to the Padre's eyes. Now they saw footballs and other sports gear, and the M.O., went through his performance assured of success at last. The last stage was reached, they were sent to a counter at the far end of the room.

"Now it is up to me" said the Education Officer, "to show you the value of education in the Army, nobody seems to realise it much yet." With the grace of a practised fisherman he threw his imaginary flies, and with a light heart he called for his imaginary "fisch." The girl's face was illuminated. With great speed she darted away, she returned with a small box. She opened it. She spread out before the astonished eyes of the Padre, Q.M., M.O., and Education Officer, who had all clustered excitedly round her—six small celluloid fish with little rings in their mouths, and two little sticks completely equipped to catch these dangerous beasts with a few inches of string and a bent pin.

I can quite credit the remarks made by the Q.M., M.O., and Education Officer, but the Padre's effort surprised me.

Since writing this I have discovered that the Education Officer has gone on leave to "Blighty," presumably to recover from the blow to his prestige; while yesterday evening I saw by our famous lake a disconsolate figure walking moodily under the trees and gazing wistfully at the well fed trout feeding peacefully in its crystal depths.

ANOTHER PARABLE.

Once upon a time there was a man who went into a far country and there he saw many new and impressive things, indeed so great was his astonishment that he wrote to The Cologne Post about it.

He was an intelligent man and he says that "Even to follow the main roads of the Rhineland, is to have one's eyes opened," and when his eyes were "opened" this is what he saw, (at least he says this). "The German, spite his self vaunted culture, is but a primitive creature when seen in comparison with the British farmer and gardener. His ideas of development and advancement with the times appear to have stopped short some eighty to a hundred years ago."

With his eyes "opened" he saw rough and primitive wagons, carts drawn by oxen, a wooden narrow, and a roll made with the bole of a tree. Harness, farmer, and entire turnout is out-of-date. The farmer has failed to awaken and is stagnant, out-of-date and painfully slow.

Another man visits the same country and as he goes along the main roads of the Rhineland his eyes are also opened, and he also saw things which filled him with astonishment and he likewise writes to The Cologne Post.

This is what he saw, a system of land tenure far in advance of the English system; co-operation to an extent never dreamed of at home; an advanced system of cultivation by which the maximum output of the soil is obtained, and manuring on a scientific scale.

In the villages he sees an elaborate system of small holdings and allotments. Every inch of ground is cultivated and turned to the best advantage. He also has seen the oxen at work, but does not consider it a sign of stagnation to use the best material you have or can afford. With the wooden harrow is also seen the most recent type of iron harrow, plough and drills. He has seen in small villages electricity doing the work of many men, cream separators, churns, and butter workers, crushing machines, chaff-cutters, turnip slicers, pumps and patent unloading hay pitchers all worked with the greatest ease, by electric power.

He is glad that his eyes have been "opened", he wants no dust thrown in them, he wants to see things that are really there, that he may, without praise or favour, learn all that German agriculture can teach him, and on his return take with him something to benefit him for his sojourn in a far land. That his eyes may remain open, in a retentive, observant, intelligant and unbiassed degree is the desire of "Agriculturist."

THE PERFECT DAY.

WEEKLY DANCES AT THE COLOGNE SPORTS CLUB, LINDENTHAL.

An ideal spot for a dance is the Cologne Sports Club, Lindenthal. One can dine either in the Club House or out of doors, dance on a good floor, sit out under the trees and cool woods or on the cricket ground. What country house could provide better? The opening dance of the season took place on Saturday. There are no two opinions as to its success and everyone was glad to see a notice during the evening announcing that there will be a series of dances during the summer months given weekly on Tuesdays.

The first of these is to-night. The Expeditionary Force Canteens are responsible for these entertainments and also for all the catering of the Club, luncheons, teas and dinners being served every day at the usual Officers Club prices.

The Club House, though in the midst of absolutely rural surroundings, is very accessible from Cologne. Tram No. 8 deposits you at the Raschdorf Strasse and in five minutes you are there.

It is also quite close to the Lindenthal Lawn Tennis courts. How could you better spend a hot Cologne day, and there will be many, than watching a cricket match or playing tennis after an outdoor lunch—tea to follow—and dinner, to bring the end of a perfect day.

"THE DISORDERLY ROOM."

LAUGHABLE SKIT IN "THE RHINE-DROPS" PROGRAMME.

The "Rhinedrops" continue to enjoy the marked success their first few performances promised.

People are beginning to lose that natural prejudice which a mere Battalion Concert Party brings, and to realise that this little Troupe can produce a show equal to the greater majority of Divisional shows we saw in France and Flanders.

A special performance was given on Saturday last at the Theatre at Duisdorf under the patronage of Major General E. P. Strickland, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., Commanding Western Division.

An enthusiastic audience from all Units of the 2nd Infantry Brigade was treated to selections by the Divisional Band, and to a new programme by the Troupe.

New numbers included an original skit entitled "The Disorderly Room." This kind of thing we have seen before, but never on the same amusingly original lines as this.

The acting throughout was excellent, and particularly did the perfectly and nicely modulated part of Capt. Stoggit, the Adjutant, by Mr. S. J. Needham do much to assist Capt. A. W. Fish as Lt.-Col. Pastit, K.C.K., B.F., R.I.P., in rendering his "Harry Tate" Colonel in such a manner as to leave the house rocking with laughter. His conversation with a Staff Captain on the telephone and his decision to use Lewis Guns as flower pots for the Company gardens, together with his amusing treatment of defaulters, (best of whom was Pte. Troy), were but a few of the outstanding features in a hilarious performance. Pte. Brains as Orderly Room Clerk by Mr. F. W. Moorsom was a great piece of dumb show and Mr. T. Postlethwaite as R.S.M., and Ptes. Troy, Whitehouse an Pitt as defaulters well filled their parts.

The Old Stockpot.

Another comedy item "The Cookhouse" found Mr. S. J. Needham as "Transport Jim" and Capt. A. W. Fish as "Cookhouse Joe." This was an extremely clever and original parody on the well known number from "Tails Up" — "The old Bran-pie." This became "The Old Stockpot" and these two artistes proceeded to discover extraordinary things in a dixie of stew.

First rate musical numbers were supplied by Mr. K.F.C. McIver, Mr. T. Postlethwaite and Pte. Whitehouse.

In the interval, the Major General, assisted by Lt. Col. J.R. Minchull Ford D.S.O., M.C., presented a cup to "B" Company as winners of the Battalion Boxing, and medals to winners of various weights. In a well-chosen speech he congratulated the "Rhinedrops" on an excellent show and the 52nd Battn The Welsh Regiment on producing such a troupe.

The "Rhinedrops" will commence a tour of other Units, commencing with the 53rd Bn. The Welsh Regt., at Alfter this evening.

A Battalion Whist Drive was held at Rauschendorf on Thursday and was well attended by N.C.O's and men. The prizes were presented by Lieut.-Col. H.F. Watson, C.M.G., D.S.O. and were won as follows:—1, (Silver Wrist Watch) Pte Catlow (Signaller); 2, (Safety Razor in case) Sergt. Instr. H.C. Smith; 3, (Cigarette Case) Sergt. Mason, B. Coy; Hidden Number (Fountain Pen) Pte Freestone, H.Q.; Booby Prize (Biscuit) Pte Robson, H.Q.

The duties of M.C. were performed by Sergt. H.C. Smith, Education Staff.

At the close of the proceedings a vote of thanks was given to the Col. for his attendance and his interest in the proceedings. It is proposed to hold Battalion Whist Drives at frequent intervals in future.

KEEN FOOTBALL AT MENDEN.

A very interesting game was played between the L.N. Lancs and the Signal Section of the 53rd Manchesters at Menden on Friday and half time came with a score of one each.

The commencement of the second half provided plenty of spectacular football. Towards the end the North Lancs began to press and not long after they secured a winning goal. The final score was 2—1 in their favour.

SPORTING ITEMS IN BRIEF.

Inter-Varsity Sports.

There is just a possible chance that the Oxford and Cambridge sports may be revived this summer.

Bradford City's New Trainer.

J.W. Sutcliffe, who represented England in international matches under both codes, has been appointed trainer to the Bradford City F.C.

"Crossing The Sun."

In the Oxford v. Australians match last week several bad hits were only stopped from being catches owing to the ball "crossing the sun" at the crucial moment.

Pal Moore v. Jimmy Wilde.

The return match between Pal Moore and Jimmy Wilde has been fixed by Mr. Cochran to take place at Olympia on July 17—exactly one month after the Goddard-Beckett clash.

Signed For Derby County.

Harold Wightman, the centre half and backbone of the Notts Forest defence, has followed Burton's example and signed League forms for Derby County.

Arnaud Massy.

Arnaud Massy, the British and French open ex-champion, has arrived from France at the North Berwick Links, and had a game last week over the West Course.

Leicester Fosse Professionals.

Leicester Fosse have added to their list of professionals by signing on G. Douglas, H.A. Bown, and W. Thomson, the Scottish half-back, who was on the books of the club prior to the war.

Opposed To Olympic Games.

On the subject of Olympic games, a letter signed jointly by, P.J. Baker, the Cambridge Blue and A.N.S. Jackson, the greatest miler Oxford has produced, appears in the Times.

The letter states their views, which are opposed to any idea of holding games next year.

Hendren's Strength.

Hendren's advance to fame as a batsman has been steady, but he has never looked back, while the form he has been showing this season is exceptional. His strength, as well as his value to his side, lies in the fact that he can not only play two games (the defensive and the powerful), but that he can combine them.

£10 Per Week.

The Southern League provincial clubs are experiencing great difficulty in obtaining the signatures of players owing to the exorbitant demands that are being made. Players that before the war were content with £3 or £3 10s, are now asking for £10 per week during the playing season.

THE DERBY TO BE RUN.

ADEQUATE ARRANGEMENTS WHETHER POLICE STRIKE OR NOT.

The Derby is to be run, whether the police strike or not, says Sir Nevil Macready, and adequate arrangements will be made for the protection of the public at Epsom.

Owing to the large crowds which are expected to attend the races this year, the public are invited to give the police every assistance possible.

AIRCRAFT AND THE DERBY.

GOVERNMENT PROHIBITION.

The Air Ministry makes the following announcement:

"It has been decided, in the interests of the public, to prohibit the navigation of aircraft of every class and description over the grand stand on the racecourse on Epsom Downs, Surrey, and the lands surrounding it to a distance of two statute miles in all directions from its boundary, during the period from twelve midnight, June 2-3, to twelve o'clock midnight, June 6-7.

"This precaution has been taken to obviate any interference which might be caused to the racing, and also such accidents to the public as might possibly occur owing to the sudden movement of great masses of people occasioned by the action of aircraft overhead."

LAWN TENNIS.

MIDDLESEX CHAMPIONSHIPS CONTINUED AT CHISWICK.

The Middlesex Championships were continued on Saturday at Chiswick.

In the final for gentlemen's singles, Raymond beat Norton 6—2, 6—1, 6—2. The winner was much the superior player, his best shot being a fast forehand drive to his opponents corner. The games were exhilarating throughout.

Miss Ryan, in the ladies singles (final) beat Mrs Beamish 6—2, 4—6, 6—4.

The gentlemen's doubles final resulted in Doust and Prebble beating Dixon and Ritchie, 6—1, 6—2.

RACING MOTORISTS KILLED.

CARS TURN TURTLE, CAUSING THREE DEATHS.

Reuter's Indianopolis correspondent wires that during the Liberty Motor sweepstakes race, for automobiles, on Saturday, three men were killed and one seriously injured in the first 250 miles of the race. Louis Lecocg and his mechanic, Bandini, were burned to death as a result of the car in which they were racing, overturning and bursting into flames. Arthur Thurman's car also turned turtle and he was killed instantly, his mechanic being seriously injured. Another casualty was Jean Chassagan, whose car dashed into a wall. The driver narrowly escaped being killed.

In the course of the race, all track records up to 250 miles were beaten.

Fourteen of the cars were forced to withdraw through various causes.

Smithfields beat the Wanderers 5—4 at Barnes.

The first Life Guards beat the New Australian team by 10—3 at Hurlingham.

At Ranelagh, the Magpies beat Thornby by 4 goals to 3.

JEERING AT BOXING CONTEST.

A boxing contest at Mountain Ash, on Saturday night, between Frank Rossi and Jim Driscoll resulted in a draw.

The decision was received with jeers, 6,000 spectators believing that Driscoll was the winner.

THOSE 52nd D.L.I. OFFICERS AGAIN.

COMMISSIONED v. NON-COMMISSIONED OFFICERS AT CRICKET.

A fortnight ago, the officers of the 52nd Bn. Durham L.I. met their sergeants at cricket, and defeated them by nine wickets.

On Sunday a return match was arranged, but the officers fielded a strong team, and won even more easily—this time by an innings and 40 runs.

Batting first, the officers knocked up 155 before being dismissed. Lt.-Col. Frizell, D.S.O., M.C., the commanding officer, compiled a good 39 by nefty smiting all over the field, and Lieuts. Willey and Allison made a good ninth wicket stand, scoring 18 and 15 respectively. Lieuts. England, Waters and Harding scored 13, 12 and 12.

For the sergeants, Sergt. Prince accounted for 7 wickets for 48 runs.

Battle, vengeance and various other virtues shone in the eyes of the sergeants as they marched forth to open their innings, but Sergt. Peel was the only batsman to reach double figures, scoring 10. The whole side were disposed of for a mere 31 runs, Col. Frizell taking 6 wickets for 15, Lieut. Harding 4 for12, and Mr. "Extras" totalling 4.

After tea provided by the sergeants had been partaken of, the sergeants batted a second time, but fell short of their opponents' total by 40. Opening the innings for his side, Sergt. Bacon witnessed the fall of seven wickets before he himself was caught by Lieut. Allison after a very steady 46. No other member of the sergeants' team reached double figures, Sergt. Peel being second highest scorer with 9.

Col. Frizell this time obtained three wickets for 34 runs, and Lieut. Brown 2 for 14.

Perhaps in the dim and distant future, a third match between the sides will be arranged, and it may even be that, one day the officers will have to play second fiddle to their N.C.O's.

SOUTHERN DIVISION RACES.

EARLY LUNCH FOR INTENDING SPECTATORS.

Dame Rumour has been busy again, and her justification is no less unfounded than usual. There is absolutely no truth in the report that has been going the rounds that the Southern Division Race Meeting, announced to take place on the 6th and 7th June, at Merheim, Cologne, is to be postponed.

Extensive preparations are being made to ensure that the "going" will not be excessively hard and there is every likelihood of the meeting being a great success.

The announcement that the 6th Corps Club, Cologne, has made arrangements for the provision of early lunch for the convenience of intending spectators will be received with considerable satisfaction. Lunch will be served at the Club from 11.30 on each day of the races.

5th DEVONS v. D. BATTERY, 113 BRIGADE.

On Wednesday last the Battalion association football team, visited Witzhelden and played D. Battery 113 Brigade. The football during the first half was not of a very high class order mainly due to a bumpy ground and a rubber ball, but a slip by one of the halves allowed the gunner outside right to centre, which the skipper of the side put through the goal. This was the only goal scored throughout the game. For the Battalion Drummer Perks and Sgt. Leo played sterling football as also did Sergt. Johnson, but as a goalkeeper he is inclined to juggle at the wrong time.

THE CALCUTTA SWEEP.

Many thousands have tried to obtain, but comparatively few have succeeded in obtaining, tickets in the famous Calcutta Turf Club Sweepstakes. The draw was made in India at 9.30 on Saturday night. It is estimated that the first prize will be worth at least £50,000. This will represent 40 per cent. of the money subscribed, so the lucky drawer of the second will receive about £25,000 (20 per cent.) and the third £12,500 (10 per cent.). Horses drawn other than those placed divide 20 per cent., and the remaining 10 per cent. What visions of "telling the boss off" all this conjures up!

HIGHLAND DIVISION.

DUREN PERFORMANCES.

The seventh of the series of weekly performances arranged by the Highland Division in the Düren town theatre took place on Wednesday evening. Though the audience might have been larger, there was no lack of enthusiastic appreciation, and it was evident that the bulk of those present were music-lovers to whom these fixtures come as a genuine boon. The programme was excellent, and offered infinite variety. The first part was devoted to a short orchestral performance, and the second to a representation of Mascagni's popular opera, "Cavalleria Rusticana."

The orchestra was in capital form, and, skilfully directed by Kapellmeister Engel from Cologne—who achieved wonders in the matter of light and shade—had no difficulty in holding the rapt attention of the audience. Two Hungarian dances by Brahms in particular, were beautifully rendered, though the Tannhäuser overture also was an exceedingly fine performance. Terese Sarata who has appeared at these concerts on a previous occasion, gave a brilliant account of her powers in Paganini's well-known concerto in D. Technically well-equipped, this young artiste knows how to draw from her instrument a tone of exceeding purity and plays with genuine emotional feeling. Her strong sense of rhythm enabled her to tackle the intricacies of Paganini's music with ease and assurance, her performance of the concerto being consequently entirely satisfying. She received a most enthusiastic reception, and was compelled to concede an encore.

The other characters were admirably filled, and the chorus augmented for the occasion, not only sang well, but imparted just the right note of colour, and movement to a characteristic and charming setting.

A PEACE-TIME "PILL-BOX."

On the battlefield near Poelcapelle a Belgian farmer has returned, and has already cleared, levelled, dug, and planted with wheat several acres of his holding. A German "pill-box" forms a home for himself and his family.

The Agricultural Relief of Allies Committee is helping this class of farmer to get back to the land by gifts of suitable English live-stock. Many hundred head of stock—cattle, pigs, and poultry—have already been distributed among needy and industrious small-holders in Belgium. The Committee hope also to help Serbia and France in the immediate future.

"OLD SCOUTS" CLUB.

AN INTERESTING PROJECT.

A most encouraging initial meeting was held on Friday evening in the Y.M.C.A. grounds at Lindenthal, when it was unanimously decided to form an Old Scouts' Club.

There were twenty-two intending members present, representing all ranks of scouting from scout to scoutmaster. We hope to see some commissioners later! When a list of names, addresses and troops had been taken, it was found that the star of London was in the ascendant, but practically the whole of the British Isles was represented. Numerous letters were received from those who were unable to attend the meeting, but who are desirous of joining the club.

It was decided to form three separate sections, which will consist of

(a) A "refresher" class for old and prospective scout officers. This was felt to be a great necessity, and will do much to get us au fait with scouting again, so that we shall be more proficient than ever on our return to Blighty.

Any instructors (and there must be many in the Rhine Army) who are willing to give instruction in any particular subject, such as woodcraft, first aid, signalling, nature study, etc., etc., are earnestly asked for.

(b) An amusements section for outdoor scouting, rambles, excursions and games.

(c) A "pow-wow" circle, to discuss problems appertaining to scouting in general and the organization of troops in particular. This circle will also deal pro tem with the business of the club.

Meetings will be held every Wednesday evening at 5.30 p.m. in the Y.M.C.A. grounds at Lindenthal (VI Corps Soldiers' Club, take cars 1 or 2 from the Cathedral and get off at the park) when the programme for the following Saturday afternoon will also be arranged.

Gunner F. Garness was elected Minute Secretary, and Mr. R.H. Percival (Y.M.C.A. Headquarters, Rhine Army) was appointed Organizing Secretary, and will be pleased to answer any communications from intending members, or those willing to help forward the movement in any way.

The predominant note throughout the meeting, over which Rev. A. Jarvis presided in his customary genial manner, was that of keenness and enthusiasm, and our numbers rapidly promise to increase. The future is full of promise, and if all old scouts in the Rhine Army will rally round us, success is assured. We must work together, keep smiling, and remember our good old motto: "Once a scout, — always a scout."

EVERY DAY.—2.30 to 4.30 Cinema performance in the large hall. 5 to 6, Impromptu concert in the music room.

On Sunday evening, Colonel Gower Rees gave another of his interesting "talks," his subject being "Democracy." A delightful concert, given by the band of the 17th Lancers, (with the kind permission of Major M.G.Nicholls) followed. The concert hall was filled, many having to sit on the floor or stand up. Bandsman G.Jeffree gave a fine rendering of Liddell's "Abide with me," whilst Cpl. Hunt portrayed his skill in giving the "Post horn." The selection from Iolanthe and the grand Ballet Divertissement ("Our Army and Navy") was most heartily applauded. The conductor, Mr. W.H. Richardson, D.C.M. is to be warmly congratulated on the most enjoyable entertainment given. Included in the programme were three soloists: Lt. Simpson, K.R.R.C., who gave much pleasure in his singing of "Mountain Lovers"; LCp. Henley, who kept the audience amused by his songs from "Bing Boys on Broadway," and Rfm. Green who sang "Nirvana" and "Dear Home of Mine."

The first of the dancing classes (for beginners only) will take place in the ballroom of the British Empire Leave Club to-day Tuesday, at 5 o'clock.

At 7 p.m. "The Lyrics Concert Party" (by kind permission of Major W.C. Smith, D.S.O., M.C.) will give a programme. The "Lyrics" are formed out of "D" Coy of the 18th Bn. K.R.R.C. and are already becoming well-known for the excellence of their performances.

ADMISSION OF ALIENS.

NEW ORDER IN COUNCIL ISSUED.

The draft of a new Order in Council to regulate the admission of aliens into the United Kingdom was issued recently.

In the first part of the Order, dealing with restrictions on landing and the inspection and detention of aliens, it is provided that nothing in this part of the Order shall apply to an alien who has left the United Kingdom direct for some other country after residing here for six months and has been refused admission to that country and returned direct to the United Kingdom.

This apparently means that aliens who have been refused admission to one country are to be allowed to re-enter the United Kingdom without restriction.

It is proposed that aliens shall not be allowed to land except with the leave of an immigration officer. Leave to land will not be given unless an alien is in a position to support himself and his dependents, is not a lunatic, idiot, or mentally deficient, has not been certified as undesirable for medical reasons, has not been sentenced in a foreign country for any extradition crime, and is not the subject of a deportation order or an expulsion order.

Aliens will be allowed to land only at approved ports. The Order does not apply to aliens holding prepaid tickets to foreign destinations. Aliens will have to register themselves in the same manner as during the war. A central register is to be maintained by the Home Secretary.

Power is proposed for declaring prohibited areas and for closing clubs and restaurants frequented by aliens suspected of criminal or disloyal associations.

Power is given the Secretary of State to impose on any alien or class of aliens such restrictions (in addition to those in the Order) as to residence, reporting to the police, registration, or otherwise as he may deem necessary in the public interest.

A CALL FOR CHRISTIAN UNITY.

A circular issued by the World's Evangelical Alliance, and signed by many representatives of the Christian churches and organizations throughout the country, asks that in all churches on Whit-Sunday, June 8, special prayer shall be made for the intervention of God, and that Christian unity may make a notable advance.

Not alone in churches, runs the message, but also in homes and in private gatherings of Christians let this prayer ascend, for without His blessing the holy and Christ-like cause of unity cannot prevail.

MEISTERCONCERT AT THE BURGERGESELLSCHAFT.

There was a large and appreciative audience at Friday's concert in the large hall of the Bürgergesellschaft. Paul Bender opened the concert with five songs by Schubert in which he showed that his renommée is well deserved, although we thought that his voice had lost a little of its power. His method of singing, his absolute assurance in hitting the note, and, last, but not least, his incomparable pianissimo singing would make one forget that, and we feel d'accord with the audience that the second Schubert song, "Litanei," could not possibly have been sung with a more delicious pianissimo than that which Bender produced and which the spontaneous applause of the enthusiastic audience gratefully acknowledged. In "Vier ernste Gesänge" by Brahms, Bender's bel canto came to full advantage, while in the "Cophtisches Lied" by Hugo Wolf, we were glad to note that the singer can also display temperament. Paul Ludwig, violoncello-virtuoso from Düsseldorf and well known in London, introduced himself with the suite in C major by Joh. Seb. Bach for violoncello alone. This suite as well as the one by Reger, has been played a good deal lately at concerts in Cologne. The Bach Work enacts a very broad tone and not too large a hall if a desired effect is to be gained. Far greater was the success Ludwig achieved with his second appearance when he performed a "Serenade" by Martini and that wonderful Adagio from the Schumann concerto in which the tone of his magnificent violoncello did wonders.

Prof. A. von Othegraven was all a soloist could desire from an accompanist, delicacy of touch and that secure feeling to feel "safe," whatever alterations in the time one chose to make.

ANOTHER SEVERE DEFEAT OF AFGHANS.

EFFECTIVE BOMBING RAIDS.

NEW EGYPTIAN CABINET MINISTRY.

OFFICERS' MURDERERS ON TRIAL.

MURDER OF ENGLISH OFFICERS.

81 PRISONERS ON TRIAL.

Cairo May 24th (delayed). The Deirut murder trial has begun at Assiout. There are eighty-one accused, the charges embracing murder, unlawful assembly, war treason, incitement to sedition, riot, looting. The defendants are drawn from all classes, and include three policemen, an Omdah (chief magistrate of a commune), an advocate, a schoolmaster, landowners, butchers, three students, bootblacks, and a few fellaheen. All plead not guilty. Some of the accused are in hospital.

The general circumstances of the outrage are known, but various witnesses supplied harrowing particulars. One, a railway contractor's agent, said he was on the train which, when it reached Deirut, was attacked by crowds armed with sticks, clubs, and knives. Pope Bey, Inspector of Prisons, got out of the train and was beaten, while one officer was killed and his body flung back into the train, which, on proceeding, ran into the same scenes at the next station of Deirmo, where three officers or non-commissioned officers attempted to board the train. One stumbled and fell and was killed; the second was also murdered, and the third managed to climb on the engine. The Omdah pleaded for the life of the wounded officer, but the mob, shouting: "No! He will tell the whole story!" did him to death. One of the accused, said a witness, drank the blood of one of the dying officers. This witness heard a Coptic sheikh say to the crowd round the wounded officer, "Way torture him? Despatch him."

The Bimbashi Mohammed Rifaatha, belonging to the Prisons Department, deposed that, fearing Pope Bey's life was endangered, he offered him a fez and a blanket to disguise himself in, but he refused. The witness saw soldiers defending themselves with luggage and soda-water bottles.

Mohammed Sadyk Efendi, an Egyptian Army officer, deposed that there were two other Egyptian officers and fifty-five other ranks, all unarmed, in the train. He tried to get into touch with the men at Deirut, but could not reach them. Cross-examined by the President of the Court, he said he considered he had done his duty as an officer. The Egyptian soldiers in the train were not under his command.—Reuter.

HANDING THE TERMS TO THE AUSTRIAN DELEGATES.

The Peace conditions were delivered to the Austrian delegation on Monday afternoon. M. Clemenceau made a short speech and gave a synopsis of the draft. He informed the Austrians that no verbal discussion would be permitted, but they would be allowed a fortnight in which to present their written observations.

Herr Renner, standing, answered in French. At the end of his remarks he said: "We know you are the victors and we are decided to examine your conditions with the best will and to accept your advice."

His speech was translated into English and Italian and the brief sitting was ended.

SEVERE AFGHAN DEFEAT.

Peshawur 19th May (delayed). Saturday's victory is completer than reported. We captured four guns, and over 100 dead Afghans were counted in one small sector. A large enemy force attempted a night attack on Friday. We used star shells freely, the rapid fire disclosing a picture of the enemy rushing aimlessly about, with shadowy horsemen in the background. By dawn the Afghans had dragged their guns to the hilltops and began bombarding our camp. The heights were stormed, the Afghans first resisting stoutly, but the hilltops were taken after the leading regiments had been reinforced. Again the Afghan gunners stuck to their posts, and bayonet work ensued before the guns were captured. Our new mountain howitzers painfully surprised the enemy. After the heights had been reached the bulk of the Afghan force was seen in the valley, running hard. Our troops fired on them for ten minutes before they were out of range, and many of the enemy fell.—Reuter.

AFGHAN CAMP LOOTED.

Simla, May 19 (delayed). The following official communiqué is issued here: "We completely hold the crest of the ridge west of Dakka, Sherabad cantonment, and Robat Fort. In the Chitral affair on May 14 the enemy had seventy casualties. Yar Mahamad's gang of Afridi and Shinwari riffraff had sixty casualties on the 16th and 17th.

"Hundreds of stories are spreading on the frontier about the enormous loot obtained by Mohmands and Shinwaris from the Afghan camp after Dakka was bombarded. The Afghan officers and men fled directly the aerial attack began, and the tribesmen at once proceeded to loot rifles, ammunition, clothing, blankets, stores, &c. No doubt they secured a good haul, for the Afridis, inspired by their success, are now discussing the chance of raiding Basawal in order to loot the Afghan camp there, and are speculating on the chances of making their arrival coincide with another air attack. Reports from Chitral state that the local Afghan tribesmen are greatly excited at the prospect of loot from the Amir's troops."—Reuter.

NEW EGYPTIAN CABINET MINISTERS.

WELL TRIED OFFICIALS.

Cairo, May 22 (delayed). The new Egyptian Cabinet has been constituted as follows:

Mohammed Said Pasha, Premier and Interior.
Ismail Sirry Pasha, Public Works, War, and Marine.
Yusuf Wahba Pasha, Finance.
Ahmed Ziwar Pasha, Public Instruction.
Abdurrehim Sabri Pasha, Agriculture.
Ahmed Zulfikr, Justice.
Mohammed Tewfik Nessim Wakfs, Pious Foundations.

The new Ministry should greatly relieve the situation and help to restore order. The return to civil government will be beneficial in more ways than one, especially in the provinces where some of the officials have shown a tendency to stand by instead of buckling to with a view to getting things into proper working shape.

Military control is naturally not the most effective method of dealing with such recalcitrants, whom the new Ministry will best be able to deal with, so as to get a good grip of the situation. It is essentially a strong Cabinet, and is composed of good men, all public men with well-established reputations for integrity and straightforward dealing, while they have given the best proof of their honest patriotism by taking office in the present critical times. Mohammed Said Pasha was Prime Minister in Lord Kitchener's time, and the Ministers of Public Works, Finance, and Public Instruction have all held office. Reshid Abdurrehim Sabri won general esteem as Governor of Cairo, while both Ahmed Zulfikr and Mohammed Tewfik Nessim, members of the Native Bench, enjoy irreproachable reputations for strength of character and honesty of purpose. Reuter.

SITUATION IN NORTH RUSSIA.

It was learned recently that all is quiet just now in the Archangel region, and that the rivers and waters generally are falling rapidly. General Grogan, commanding the British Relief Force, arrived on the 26th, and was most cordially received by the anti-Bolshevik Russian officials and by the population generally. In Murmansk the initial stage of the Allied operations has ended. The advance was so rapid that the enemy had not much time to destroy ships, buildings, etc., in his retreat.

Riga was occupied by a German force on the 22nd, and the seat of Government has been removed to Ruda. It amounts really to a dictatorship. Von der Goltz returned from Berlin on the 22nd, and his behaviour, and that of the German force generally, suggests that they regard the district as part and parcel of Germany. Not the slightest attention appears to be given, however, to orders from Berlin.

In Esthonia the North Russian forces continue their advance, and there have been many desertions to them from the "Reds."

The question of assistance to the Baltic provinces is being considered by a committee of the Paris Conference.

Denikin's advance continues with success, but in Transcaspia the situation is much less favourable, owing largely, it is believed, to events in Afghanistan and to the presence in that region of large numbers of German prisoners of war.

CAMPAIGN IN POLAND.

STANISLAU CAPTURED.

The Polish Telegraph Agency, according to a telegram from Vienna, announces: "The Fourth Polish Infantry Division, commanded by General Alexandrovitch, on May 27 captured Kulusz and Halioz, and the same day entered Stanislau, where the Ukrainian detachments were disarmed."—Reuter.

DOPED CHINESE FIENDS.

Kem, 31st May.—Chinese who have been taken prisoner on the North Russian front have an utterly debased and degenerate appearance. Many of them say that they were destitute and obliged by force to aid the Bolshevists.

It is certain that the Chinese are almost invariably doped before a fight begins, consequently they fight like fiends and are insensible to wounds or danger. Finnish Bolshevists are almost equally ferocious, presenting a marked contrast in physique and physiognomy to the Russian National Army. These prisoners are now repairing the railway line and bridges which they helped to destroy. The Allies are well received in the liberated areas.—Reuter.

Helsingfors, 31st May.— This morning the Bolshevist battleship Petropavlovsk and three other warships appeared off the coast of Ingermanland to the West of Krasdaja and Gorka and shelled the coast. Seven British warships arrived on the scene, the encounter lasting fifty minutes. Finally the Bolshevist fleet fled to Kronstadt.—Reuter.

LAST CONTINGENTS FOR NORTH RUSSIA.

D.S.O.'s IN THE RANKS.

The last contingents of the North Russian Relief Force leave England this week. The Pretorian, with Brigadier-General L. de V. Sadleir Jackson, C.M.G., D.S.O., the commander, and most of the staff, and troops, left Tilbury yesterday; another ship sails on June 5; and the last transport, with artillery and details, will follow immediately. The force is up to strength, but the 10 per cent. surplus recruited for reinforcements is not quite complete, though recruits are coming in well.

More than four years of war has not lessened the British spirit of adventure. That is clearly illustrated by the composition of General Sadleir-Jackson's force. No man could enlist in the force unless he had previously served in the Army, and quite a large proportion of the volunteers for service on the Archangel front were time-expired men when the great war broke out. The trials and perils of war left many marks on them—men wearing four and more wound stripes are quite common in the brigade—but the call of duty brought out just the type of soldier suitable for war service in northern climes, and it is doubtful if any brigade has had in its ranks men with such a record of war service. D.C.M.'s and M.M.'s are very numerous. More than half the officers are officers of the Regular Army, and a large number of them wear the D.S.O. and M.C. decorations.

So earnest were demobilised officers of the special reserve and officers who had held temporary commissions during the war to take a part in the campaign about Archangel that, when they found no more vacancies for officers existed, they readily joined as privates, and it is a fine tribute to their patriotism that in the "other ranks" there are two non-commissioned officers wearing the ribbon of the D.S.O. and several with the Military Cross, which, of course, they won as officers. One corporal in an infantry battalion once commanded a battalion on the Western Front, where he also carried out for a considerable time the important duties of brigade-major. In one light trench mortar battery, with a personnel of forty, there are actually sixteen privates who held the King's commission during the war.

OFFICERS FROM FIFTY REGIMENTS.

In the commissioned ranks the same sacrifice were made. Two of the battalion commanders were brigadiers in France, and in one battalion the second in command and three company officers had commanded infantry battalions during strenuous days on the Western Front. Every arm of the service is represented, and the officers have volunteered from about fifty regiments of the British Army. In the artillery, there are sufficient highly-trained officers and non-commissioned officers to enable the artillery, with inclusion of Russian gunners, to be brought up to twenty-six batteries.

CONFIDENTIAL MEDICAL SHEETS.

PRODUCTION IN COURT REFUSED

The petition of Mrs. Lorna Rosa Anthony in the Divorce division asking for a dissolution of her marriage with Edwin Archibald Anthony, formerly a Major in the Army, on the ground that he was the cause of her illness failed, Mr. Justice Coleridge saying that he had come to the conclusion that petitioner had not made out her case. The Military authorities refused to permit the production of the respondent's Army Medical Sheets, owing to the necessity of maintaining the confidential character of these documents.

ARMY OFFICERS' UNIFORM.

The War Office desire it to be generally known that for the present no officer is required to provide himself with any uniform other than service dress or, for hot climates, khaki drill. An officer who at the present time provides himself with other than service dress or khaki drill uniform is therefore incurring avoidable expense.

BONUS FOR QUARTERMASTERS.

An Army Order just issued states that it has been decided that quartermasters and other officers who hold rank under Article 33a, 330 or 331, Royal Warrant for Pay, &c., but whose rate of pay is dependent upon the length of their commissioned service and not upon their rank, shall receive bonus at the rates provided for the rank they actually hold. This Army Order has retrospective effect.

ENORMOUS LAND SALES.

Sales of land and house property during the past week assumed extraordinary dimensions. Many great century-old estates are being broken up, ten or a dozen of which involve the amount of half a million pounds sterling.

Viscount Chetwynd's Wyndthorpe estate in Yorkshire is reported as being sold privately to the Doncaster Co-operative Society. Earl Ducie announces the impending sale by auction of his mansion in Portman Square and the Earl of Dartmouth is selling his Mayfair residence.

The example of the great landowners in unloading the whole or bulk of their properties is also apparently being followed by various public bodies and transactions on a very large scale promise to continue until the end of the summer.

The Times states that Lord Ribblesdale was married on Saturday last in London to Mrs. John Jacob Astor, widow of the American millionaire. The honeymoon is being spent at Gisburne Park, Lord Ribblesdale's country seat.

POLICE BALLOT FAVOURS STRIKE.

ACTION POSTPONED.

Latest information regarding the police strike suggests that there is very little hope that a strike will be averted as there are numerous indications that it will be universally supported by members of the Union. Mr. Marston, President of the Union, states that the die having been cast, the ballot has decided in favour of a strike and that as the movement was a national one the finding of the ballot could not be altered by any resolution passed at Sunday's demonstration.

The favourable reply from Mr. Lloyd George was stated to represent only the possibility of a strike being averted, and it is understood on high authority that no further expression is likely to be received from the Premier. The result of the police ballot was: for a strike, 41,539; against, 4,324: majority in favour, 40,215. It was announced at the demonstration that the Executive Committee has decided to postpone the strike until after the signature of the peace treaty.

DERBYSHIRE OIL WELLS.

VERY HIGH GRADE.

The preliminary analysis of the oil found at Hardstoft a few days ago bears out anticipations to a remarkable degree. The oil is free oil of a high quality and compares favourably with any of the well-known commercial oils in the world. The little hamlet of Hardstoft was visited by thousands of people during the week-end.

Yesterday another sample of oil was taken up. It was browner, thicker and more crude than that found originally. Drilling continues at other wells and it is expected that a definite result will be obtained at Brimington this week. Further blows of gas occurred at Eckington near Sheffield where oil has been emitted with sand. If this venture is successful the oilfield will be extended to Nottinghamshire and Staffordshire.

CANADIAN CHARGED WITH ATTEMPTED MURDER.

When charged at Windsor with the attempted murder of Joseph Kilian, a private in the Canadian Forestry Corps, Daniel Mitchell, a member of the same corps, said he was not perfectly sober at the time.

Kilian, who appeared in court with his head covered in bandages and wearing a tunic besplattered with blood, said Mitchell came into the hut with some tea, and he offered him 6d for a drink. Witness pulled out his pocket-book, which contained £ 26 in notes and 8s in money, but having no change promised to pay next day. Shortly after he left the hut to go to his quarters he was struck a heavy blow on the back of the head, and remembered no more. The blow was struck from behind.

Evidence was given that accused was seen running away from the spot, near which an iron bar with blood and hair on it was found.

Prisoner was committed for trial at the Berks Assizes.

WAR TROPHY REFUSED

Demobilized Whitstable sailors and soldiers, having protested against a German gun being placed in the town, because "it may possibly have caused injury or death to some of our Whitstable boys," the Whitstable Urban District Council have decided to refuse the offer of the gun which a few weeks ago they agreed to accept.

AUSTRALIANS' ENGLISH BRIDES

The Australian Imperial Force is now getting home to Australia at an increased rate. No fewer than eighty-seven transports have now sailed for Australian ports, carrying a total of 3,885 officers and 77,000 other ranks, as well as 509 nurses.

One hundred and ninety-two Australian soldiers married English girls last week. Over 11,000 wives and children of soldiers are awaiting embarkation for Australia, and a number of well-equipped "family" ships have been allotted, and are being fitted for their transportation.

LONDON'S NEW FIRE CHIEF.

Mr. Arthur Reginald Dyer, senior divisional officer of the London Fire Brigade, has been selected by the General Purposes Committee of the London County Council for the position of chief officer of the brigade, in succession to Commander Sladen, Royal Navy. There were 118 applications, and these were reduced to twenty after reference to the Fire Brigade Committee. The last three to be chosen for final selection were Commander W. R. D. Crowther, Royal Navy, Mr. A. R. Dyer, and Commander A. N. G. Firebrace, Royal Navy.

The salary is £1,100 a year, rising by annual increments of £100 to £1,500, with quarters, &c., the value of which is estimated at £200 a year.

SMALLEST AEROPLANE IN THE WORLD.

Paris, Sunday.—The aviator Bossoutrot is experimenting successfully with what is believed to be the smallest aeroplane in the world. It is a monoplane named the Mosquito. It has a span of four metres (13ft) and a 20 h.p. motor. It flew for an hour yesterday at a height of 1,500 metres (about 5,000ft).—Exchange Telegraph Company.

The King has approved of the term of office of the Earl of Liverpool, G.C.M.G., M.V.O., as Governor General of the Dominion of New Zealand, being prolonged until June, 1920.

N.C. 4 COMMANDER ALSO KIDNAPPED.

FOLLOWING THE FASHION.

Commander Read, of the American seaplane N.C. 4, received a delirious welcome when he arrived in London yesterday, and the proceedings followed the Hawker and Grieve precedent.

It was Hawker who rescued him from the hands of the crowd outside Paddington Station and conveyed him in his car to the Aero Club. The British flier had been one of the first to meet his rival and congratulate him on his great feat.

No sooner had the train stopped than the airman was boisterously greeted by American officers. Tumbling over one another with excitement and unceremoniously brushing aside their senior officers, the impetuous Yanks made a straight dash for the captain of the N.C. 4. He was lifted bodily out of the carriage, hoisted shoulder high and borne away at double speed to the end of the platform, where an enormous crowd gathered round. A big American officer, who was equipped with a megaphone, called for three cheers for Commander Read and the response was deafening. "Three cheers for Hawker" was his next injunction and Read heartily joined in.

The escort again started off at a run, still carrying the airman shoulder high. Hawker, who followed, was then noticed and was lifted up and carried after the American.

With the utmost difficulty Hawker managed to get abreast of Commander Read and prevailed upon the party which surrounded him to return to the station. After a struggle Read contrived to climb into the back of Hawker's car and the proceedings were then resumed according to schedule.

OSTEND RESUMES PRE-WAR ATTRACTIONS.

After nearly five years of war Ostend is resuming its ordinary life as a holiday resort. A start was made on Sunday with the re-opening of the famous Casino. Less than twelve weeks ago the great salons of the Casino presented a hideous scene of devastation and wanton destruction. Although occupying so prominent a position on the sea front the buildings themselves escaped actual damage throughout the constant bombardment from sea and air. The use of nine tons of glass has repaired all damage thus occasioned.

During the German occupation the place was absolutely gutted. Every stick of furniture was taken away, the beautiful tapestries were slashed and torn by German bayonets and every mirror in the halls removed, together with the copper candelabra. Despite all this, however, every reminder of war has now been effectively removed.—Reuter.

BRIGADIER'S LUCKY ESCAPE.

An aeroplane piloted by Brig. General Vyvyan, with the Marquis of Londonderry as passenger, while flying from Tadcaster to London was forced to descend at Carlton, Selby. It landed in a boggy field and charged a fence with the result that it was overturned into a dyke and wrecked. The occupants escaped with a severe shaking.

HOSE FOR UNRULY CROWD.

Following the arrest of a discharged soldier at Wolverhampton on Saturday, a hostile crowd, thousands strong, assembled outside the police station. They were dispersed by the fire brigade who turned a hose on them after numerous windows had been broken and a number of persons injured by stone throwing.

FULL GRATUITIES FOR POSTAL OFFICIALS.

The Air Ministry announces that it is proposed to embody a special provision in the Finance Bill exempting from taxation all benefits payable to officers and other ranks. No assessments on these benefits will therefore be made.

It has also been decided that officers and men, who as postal servants were entitled to full civil pay whilst serving in the Royal Air Force, are no longer precluded from receiving discharge gratuities to which they otherwise would be entitled.

NO A.R.A. MEETING THIS YEAR.

Owing to the number of troops still overseas and the uncertainty existing as to the exact composition of the Army of the future, it has been considered necessary to defer resuming the pre-war A.R.A. matches until 1920. For the same reason, there will be no A.R.A. annual rifle meeting at Pirbright until 1920. At the National Rifle Association Rifle Meeting in the current year, however, both the A.R.A. club houses and messes will be open, as before the war.

MARGATE BOAT RESUMES.

The famous paddle-steamer Royal Sovereign made its first trip of the season to Margate on Sunday, being the first passenger steamer to arrive since the outbreak of war. The vessel was cheered all the way down the river and had a tremendous reception at Margate. It will sail regularly throughout the season.

It is reported that in the early part of this month the order of the Central Control Board (Liquor Traffic) forbidding treating in licensed houses will be revoked.

Among the first revivals of old soldiers' gatherings is that of the Royal Scots, which takes place on the 21st June.

WHAT GERMANY STANDS TO GAIN.

We pointed out in a recent article, (1) that Germany so far had not given much signs of repentance, and, (2) that if once she accepted the Peace terms, there were compensations to be obtained.

Are the conditions really so insupportable as the Germans would have us believe? It is impossible to answer this question in the affirmative.

Let us take a few of the points at issue.

The question of the Saare Basin was dealt with in an article published the other day, and we need not therefore go into it again. We merely point out that the coal-mining area of the Ruhr district is not annexed, and to come nearer home, the valuable lignite mining district West of Cologne is still available for producing briquettes, so largely used in this district for industrial purposes.

Then as regards West Prussia and Upper Silesia, it must be remembered that both these represent Prussian conquests, the handing over of which to the newly-constituted Polish State is vitally essential. We are confronted with this dilemma.

Either Poland must be stifled, and twenty-five millions of Poles are to be subjected to German pressure, or else two millions of Germans must resign themselves to exist under equitable Polish rule, with guarantees, which the Polish State has recently solemnly furnished, as to civil and religious equality.

Then, as regards Dantzig. This is of course an extremely difficult problem. It is one which confronts one everywhere—in which conflicts have arisen between coastal towns with a mercantile population, and a Hinterland which speaks another tongue. Poland must have access to the sea, and it would be more difficult for the Poles to do without Dantzig than for the Southern Slavs to forego Fiume. Moreover Dantzig is to be a free town under Polish sovereignty, under conditions very similar to those which formerly prevailed until, at the end of the 18th century, it fell a prey to Prussian spoliation.

Moreover it must not be forgotten that those territories which Germany loses, affect Prussia alone (with the exception of Alsace-Lorraine); this denotes a valuable weakening of Prussian hegemony in Germany. Until we can be quite sure what the spirit of the new Germany is going to be, anything that weakens Prussia, the home of militarism, cannot but be considered as a blessing in disguise for Germany itself.

But we can go further and ask ourselves:—Do the Peace terms contain nothing advantageous for Germany?

On the contrary tremendous benefits are conferred on the German people. First of all it is purged of the appalling plague of militarism, with the attendant evils of conscription and burdensome armaments. The officer caste will no longer exist, and in future there will only be 4,000 holders of Commissions. The day of the dashing lieutenant (schneidigen Leutnants), as well as of generals who dabbled in politics, is over. The supremacy of civil administration over military power is clearly laid down. Germany is now free to devote herself to the pursuit of commerce and industry, free from the alarums and excursions of the peace-compelling-sabre and shining mail. Henceforth no agricultural labourer, no artisan or workman will any longer be compelled to abandon his field or workshop for two or three years to perform degrading bodily service under coarse and brutal N.C.O.'s and arrogant officers. No intellectual will henceforth be compelled to be a pebble crusher on the barrack square throughout a whole year.

Vast forces will be released for useful work. Thus, freed from the threats of the Prussian Moloch, the remainder of humanity will follow suit, and free itself from militarism.

No mention is made of an industrial war. Germany is left free to make good the heavy losses she has caused the entire world. Doubtless the burden of milliards is a heavy one, but has anyone any doubt as to the capacity of the Germans for hard work and industry? Moreover the profiteer is a figure not unknown in Germany both during and after the war; doubtless something might be extracted from him and people of his kidney, the steel and iron magnates, and leaders of industry.

To sum up, the following points may be reckoned as assets to Germany from a democratic point of view:—

(a) The return of Alsace Lorraine to France;
(b) The decision to take a plebiscite in Schleswig;
(c) The abolition of conscription;
(d) The handing over of those who are held guilty for the conduct of the war to the Allies.

This last step is only necessary because the German people do not possess the necessary strength to undertake the punishment themselves.

By decent behaviour, by proofs of change of heart, by sincere conversion, Germany may, after a probationary period, be admitted into the League of Nations, and possibly obtain minor concessions which she regards as essential.

But Justice must precede Mercy. The two handed engine at the door stands ready waiting to strike once and then no more. Let Germany reflect whilst yet there is time. If the Pan-Germans succeed in driving the German people into a hopeless resistance, that would be the logical crowning to their criminal procedure.

It is to be hoped that the Germans will see this and not allow themselves to be duped by the siren voices of the instigators of warfare. For that would indeed prove to be "Finis Germania."

OUR RHINE TRIP.

51st ROYAL SUSSEX REGT.

We had heard a good deal from other Battalions about their trips on the Rhine, and were wondering if we should get a turn. It appeared one night in orders that we were to go on the following Wednesday. General excitement prevailed, especially as only a certain percentage were to go. The fateful morning dawned cloudy and misty and the pessimists were loud in their prophecies that it was going to be cold and wet, especially those unfortunates who were not going. As things turned out, however, they were wrong.

An early breakfast and the party marched to the station and were taken by special train to Beuel, arriving there about 8.45 a.m., or in Army

A FARCE.

(FOR STAGING DIRECTIONS APPLY TO AUTHOR.)

"Twas evening, and the weary dispensers of knowledge were taking a quiet relaxation after their fatiguing preparations of the morrow's lessons, when a rude voice disturbs the serenity of the slumbrous atmosphere, startling the busy flies and causing even the sunbeams to quiver.

"Anybody 'ere on heducation"? "Yes, Sergeant!" replies a small voice from somewhere off the floor in the distant corner of the room. "Ah-has"! (With fiendish glee)—"Come on, me lad; I 've got a job for you." And like a good soldier, the brain-fagged "Education-Wallah" rose from the dusty floor, to obey the behests of the tyrant, though under protest.

The door banged, and as the footsteps ceased to echo down the corridor, the room resumed its slumbers, the flies resumed their activities, and the sunbeams danced with ecstacy, as if to say—"Education?? Pshaw"!!

Out into the baking square stumped the oppressor and the oppressed to where a drowsy and perspiring party of full-rank Privates were standing, a wheelbarrow in their midst.

"Here y'are, me lad. Take this 'ere barrer down to the Q.M. Stores, and say I sent yer."

How the Muses must have wept as they saw their fond admirer struggling along behind so unromantic a vehicle as a wheelbarrow! Ye Gods! Who can say that the British Tommy can't speak his own language? He who thinks so should have heard the weird and wonderful Anglo-Saxon phraseology which emanated from the profusely perspiring "Ptes."

But we will not prolong the agony; suffice it to say, that in course of time the luckless party reached its destination,—that hive of industry, the Q.M. Stores. Hive! did we say? Then the bees must have been honey-gathering, for the sole occupant of the imposing edifice occupied by "Q.M." was a burly storeman who, enraged at being rudely awakened from his well-earned nap, grumpily demanded "What the deuce, etc., do you chumps want? Where's yer quarter-master-sergeant?"

In reply to this polite request for information, our hero stated that he was the mediator despatched from "Z" Coy, and that he had orders to bring back those articles tabulated on A.F. 3096. (Our interpreter-general states that this cryptic expression means: Articles Forwarded 30; ditto asked for 96.

"You won't get no harticles 'ere" was the only reply elicited from this "guardian of the tower." And so, perforce, the long suffering and utterly disgusted "E.W." had to "about turn" and trudge back to the Company, barrow and all.

Now ponder this tragic little episode, dear readers, and I think you will concede that even the despised Education Staff occasionally do a bit for their King and Country, in spite of the prevailing opinion that theirs is the scrounge, and the "cushiest" job of the A. of O.

P.E.D.E.

THE BATTERY OFFICE.

It is a shrine. No-one ever appears at his ease there save hardened criminals whose familiarity with the word "Office" breeds a lofty contempt for the sacred precincts of this noble establishment.

Usually here are prepared all documents relating to every phase of a man's history from the colour of his eyes to his ultimate destiny. Very occasionally one espies an A.F.Z. 10—that "Open Sesame" to the paradise of civil life, but more often it is a smaller form whose hieroglyphics tell of sundry lapses on the part of good soldiers which are referred to in the cold, calculating terms of "crimes."

The presiding genii of this place most marvellous are termed Pay and Battery Clerks, and these two, in most instances, wear spectacles and 'camel' backs, and without exception possess tempers of the electric variety — touch them and see the flush. This temperament is reputed to be fostered by the numerous enquiries which every soldier makes without fail at least six times per day in the following terms: "Say! Bom, how many down am I on the leave list" or "When will demob. start for the '16 men." Occasionally it is varied with "Can I have an advance next pay day" and "Have my credits come through?" All these and others serve to sour and sear the best of Battery clerks.

Having attained to a sufficient degree of acidity, the genii are fully qualified to deal with matter of which the following is an excellent example. "Return ooxoo animal Classification." For the preparation of which the following instructions must be carefully followed:

Total of Columns W and X on last return minus columns Y and Z on the next return should equal the total of columns O and P on the return of January '18.

Our battery clerk scratched his head and thought so much on the example given that he is now in hospital with a lacerated brain and poisoned finger. When it is considered the answer could so easily have been given, the O.C. reported him as malingering and sent in the terms herewith "Ref: Return ooxoo — Animal Classification. — Details fully given, net result A Lemon," giving complete satisfaction to all concerned.

When the war raged (and the O.C. also) the Battery Office was always at the waggon lines, as far as was possible from the noise of the guns as this disturbed the afternoon nap of the clerks. Nowadays the "office" moves first to secure convenient and "cushy" premises. Compré?

FORELLA.

vocabulary 08.45 hours. A short march across the famous bridge and we embarked. We had had visions of being packed together as on a transport, but this was really to be a pleasure trip and there was plenty of room for all. The boat sailed about 9.40 a.m., and by this time the sun was breaking through. Although there was still a little mist it was not sufficient to stop us from appreciating the grandeur of the scenery of the famous Drachenfels. Cameras were snapping in all directions and the enthusiasts were promising those unfortunates who had no camera, a complete set of views. This promise by the way has not yet been redeemed in the majority of cases. The time passed rapidly and everybody was astonished to find it was past 2 o'clock when we were nearing Coblenz. Only a short time was allowed on shore, but sufficient to enable people to buy views and souvenirs and for the camera fiends to load up with film packs, etc.

The return journey was accomplished much more quickly and we disembarked at Bonn about 6.20 p.m. Our train was waiting in Beuel station and we were home again about 8 o'clock, and everybody voted it a really first-class trip and a very enjoyable day. The fact which amazed everybody most was the wonderful system of cultivation prevalent everywhere, the apparently most inaccessible places on the steep banks being cultivated.

FAMOUS BUILDINGS.

THE M.I.R.

I feel it advisable to commence this article by clearing up the mystery of the above letters, as there has been much controversy as to their meaning. They stand for "Minor Injury Repository" but this is the merest camouflage, covering, as it does, a bigger gambling den than Monte Carlo, for it is in the M.I.R. that is played that iniquitious game known as "Swinging the Lead." The M.I.R. is not an imposing edifice on a ninth landing of an estaminet up a noisome alley. The furniture is best described as "Scrappy" consisting for the greater part, of sugar boxes, six-foot forms with St. Vitus Dance, and moth-eaten G. S. Blankets. The sole ornaments are a few instruments of torture and a vast quantity of bottles containing peculiar liquids. The owner of this emporium is the M.O., or "Malignant Obliterator." He is assisted by an N.C.O. (who has been washed overboard from the Orderly Room or the Education Committee) also a couple of "spare parts" who have had previous experience of "dosing men," in the cook house. The "spare-parts" are the "Knock about Comedians" of the M.I.R., doing juggling turns with number nines to amuse the audience, in the M.O.'s absence. These men, however, are of opinion that they are the only M.O.'s worth a button, and were it not for petty jealousy they would have brass plates in Harley Street and a crowd of wealthy clients in the "Boneyard."

An orderly Sergeant drawing up his Parade State over night for the following day allots so many players. He does this by marking on the Parade State Sick=16, and underneath=M & D. 8— light duty=3=excused duty 4. The latter representing the prizes to be awarded. The players assemble sharp at 7.15 and march to the Casino where they are amused by the "spare-parts" until the M.O.'s arrival. On this gentleman's entry, the game commences. He calls "Pte.Pye,"—a youth approaches. "What is the matter with you?" "Influenza, Sir." "Um," the M.O. consults a paper. "Medicine and duty." And the wretched gambler bolts for the mess room with vague hopes of a crust while fifteen tempters of providence take their money off "Influenza" and back rheumatism with a trifle on "Sore throat" for a place. And so the game goes on. The lucky winners of the seven prizes are convinced that they are nature's "lucky children," and if they continue to tempt the goddess of chance they must surely one day rope in that wonderful first prize known as "Ticket"; while the unhappy loser feels that the luck must change if he perseveres, so he studies all the patent medicine advertizements for new diseases, and carries on. No motto is displayed over an M.I.R. yet every soldier, old and young, knows it. Mary Queen of Scots may have had "Calais" engraven on her heart, but every real "Lead-swinger" has imperishably modelled with number nines on his liver the slogan of his tribe.

If at first you don't succeed,
Try, try again.

E.M.F.

TROOP HORSES,

AND THEIR HABITS.

As I passed the riding school where our horses live, I glanced inside to see if all was as it should be. Everything was quiet; some of the horses were lying down, and the others were standing in sleepy attitudes with eyes half-closed and only an occasional flick of the tail to disturb the evening air. I passed on.

The little chestnut pony on the end of the line nearest the door looked up sharply as the figure of his troop-leader faded away in the distance, and he said in an undertone, to the old mare by his side: "Locks! Did you see him? Always looking around, isn't he?"

Locks, who had been in the troop before the war and all through it, merely said "Yes." What she meant to have said, only it was too tiring, was, "Why on earth worry one at this time of night about a miserable troop-leader?"

She was an old hand, a real "old soldier," and her parade head collar had the Mons ribbon neatly stitched on to it. What she didn't know about cavalry soldiers and cavalry horses was hardly worth knowing.

The pony looked round and caught the eye of the Hotchkiss pack horse, old "Milky," fat as butter, and lazy as any horse ever was. He had a wonderul habit of rubbing his tail absolutely raw in the quickest of time, especially if it had just been attended to by some energetic person who could "pull" tails.

Now "Milky" and the pony were great pals, and generally did most things together, and this evening they were out for mischief. Said the pony, "Look at that ugly brute next to you. How did he ever become a cavalry horse?"

"Well, he is said to be a hard worker, y'know." Thus spoke "Milky," high priest of laziness. The horse referred to was very nearly asleep and showed no signs of having heard anything. He was long in the back, straight of shoulder, ewe-necked and both his forelegs seemed to come out of the same hole in front. His coat was bad and his neck was raw where his companions had bitten him. Yet he was not a bad sort by nature. He never ought to have been a riding horse at all, and he knew it. What made things worse, was the fact that the others knew it and resented his presence in the troop. They were not above telling him so quite plainly, and a ghastly sore marked where some evil genius had planted his hoof in no uncertain fashion. But the worst of his enemies, by a long way, were "Milky" and the pony. They stood near him, and detested him; and they did their utmost to make his life unbearable.

The pony leaned forward and said in a husky whisper: "Roll into him a bit." "Milky" grinned and started to sway to and fro sideways, suddenly sideslipped and bumped into our ugly friend, waking him up with a start. Milky feigned sleep and the pony hung his underlip in the very depths of slumber. The ugly one said "Can't you ever leave a chap alone?" and then subsided.

For five minutes there was silence and then the pony whispered again. "Tap him gently, Milky." "Milky" raised his off hind slowly and then shot it out with unerring accuracy, catching the ugly one right in the middle of the flank. A loud squeal followed, the victim's ears went back, round swung his quarters, and the fun began. He let out full blast with both legs at "Milky", caught him fair and square, and then did it again. Milky slipped on the wet ground, and went down with a "wallop". Every horse woke up and started kicking.

This was too much for "Locks", who had been watching everything from the start. She whipped round and quick as a flash her teeth gripped the pony's neck. Eventually they calmed down, and once more all was quiet.

On my way back, I looked in again. I may have been mistaken, but I think I saw a large grin on the face of the ugly horse in the corner. "What have they been up to," I said to myself. The ugly horse winked solemnly and I walked on—wondering.

ORGANIZER, AUTHOR AND COMEDIAN.

SUCCESSFUL CONCERT AT LULSDORF.

No. 1 Section D.A.C., Eastern Division, held a concert in their entertainment hall at Lulsdorf on Friday evening, when everything went with a swing from start to finish. Lieut Gilbert was responsible for arranging as well as the actual presentation of the programme, while he also proved himself to be a smart comedian, an adept facialist and an actor of no mean ability.

In such a feast of good things it would be difficult to single out any item more deserving than another of the title of "piece de resistance" but perhaps this honour is due to the tabloid sketch entitled, "The Dream and the Realization", because of the fact Mr. Gilbert is author of the sketch as well as principal in the caste.

The other items on the programme were enthusiastically received. Driver Winter contributed several numbers in fine style, and his catchy choruses were quickly taken up by the audience. Gunner Hughes is a second George Formby, and his quaint singing and clever grimaces made him a strong favourite. Sentimental songs were given in tasteful style by Lieut. Couchan and Gunner Jann. Driver Brashier, character comedian gave "The Farmer's Boy" which was vigorously encored.

An unusual "turn" was given by Mangat Rham, one of the Indian drivers attached to the section. This member gave a song in Hindustani, and received an encore.

Lieut. Couchan and Gunner Rice played the piano accompaniments with efficiency, while Sergeant-Major Dawson made a popular and tactful chairman.

ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL.

52nd DEVON REGT.—"D" COY. VERSUS "B" COY.

Recently "B" Coy. defeated a team representing the rest of the Battalion, and immediately after the game "D" Coy. sent out a challenge to the winners, resulting in a match played on Thursday, at Burscheid.

The prospect of a hard tussle drew a large crowd, and the Regimental Band played selections before the start, and during the interval.

"B" Coy. heralded their arrival by means of a "Jazz" Band, which created a terrific din, the procession marching through the streets of Burscheid preceded by a standard bearer carrying the white ensign and the company flag on the end of a long pole. "D" Coy. not to be outdone, also gathered a "Jazz" Band and hoisted their pennant. After threatening for some time, "D" Coy. were rewarded. Pearson, receiving a pass from his inside-right, scored the first goal of the match.

Excitement ran high at the commencement of the second half. The "D" five made a swift onslaught on the "B" goal, and, with a "daisy-cutter," Pearson put them two up. Play now became very fast, with "B" pressing hard, but the "B" defence clearing, play went from mid-field to "B's" goal area, where a penalty was awarded against them, which, however, did not materialise.

Each custodian in turn was given many anxious moments, and midway through the second half, following pressure of "D's" defence, Scott, for "B" Coy., managed to get the ball just over the goal line. "D", playing confidently, eventually ran out deserved winners of a very fast and exciting game by 2—1.

For "D" Coy., Roberts, the goal-keeper played a very good game, as also did Lt. O'Neil, Sgt. Crocombe and Palmer, in the defence, while in the forward line, Bell, Pearson, and Cutler, were all worthy of mention.

For the losers, Sgt. Davis in goal, Lt. Cairns at centre-half, Skidmore at right-half, and Mitchell at outside-left each played a splendid game.

SUMMER SOCCER.

9th CHESHIRES' INTER-PLATOON FOOTBALL LEAGUE FINAL.

An exciting match took place at Dersdorf on Saturday, between No 5 Platoon, B. Coy., and No 2 Platoon A. Coy. During the first half, No 5 Platoon played an extremely fast game. They employed "kick and rush" tactics with good results, scoring 3 goals.

In the second half No 2 Platoon pulled together in great style, and succeeded in scoring 2 goals.

Much amusement was caused by B. Coy's Jazz Band which played various popular airs before the match and at half time.

Final score:—

No 5 Platoon 3 goals; No 2 Platoon 2 goals.

488 S.B. v. "F" A.A. BATTERY.

A very interesting and close game was played at Ippendorf on Monday between 488 Siege Battery and "F" A.A. Battery. The former batted first and compiled 48, and the Anti-Aircraft Gunners replied with 55. The chief scorers were (488 Siege Battery) Gnr. Cartwright 10, Times 7, and Naylor 6; for the winners:— Gnr. Hallam and Gnr. Hadley 8, Lieut. Havell 6; Corpl. Masters 5.

REMARKABLE BILLIARD MATCH CONCLUDED.

Very fine form was displayed by Newman and Falkiner in the 16,000 level billiard match which concluded at Thurston's Hall, Leicester Square on Saturday night. It was a remarkable game and few finer performances have ever been seen.

The result was as follows:—

Newman ..... 16,000.
Falkiner ..... 13,234.

TRIBUTE TO NATIONAL STUD.

It is a tribute to the National Stud that their only four entrants for the Derby—the Panther, All Alone, White Heat, and Grand Almoner—are all likely to see the post, (Says "The Scout" in "The Daily Express"). At present the National Stud is impersonal, and the death of its principal would not—as in the case of an ordinary breeder, who is also the nominator—make a nomination void. If, however, the proposal of the Stewards of the Jockey Club is carried on June 16, entries will have to be made in future in the name of the director of the stud—Captain Greer holds this responsible position at present—who will be regarded as the owner for nomination purposes. In the event of his death entries would become void.

FROM ROLLS-ROYCES TO BARROWS.

A GUINEA FOR A BATH-ROOM.

Reuter's Agency telegraphs as follows:—

Epsom caterers are already assured of a harvest unparalleled in the annals of the classic race. Every room is booked at prices of which Park Lane house-owners might well be envious, applicants for bathrooms offering a guinea nightly being turned away.

Every possible conveyance from Rolls-Royces to barrows has been snapped up while caravans are arriving on the Downs like battle zone ration wagons. Many are occupied by discharged soldiers, who, profiting from their campaigning experience, are carrying sheets to sleep in the open air.

The majority of the boxes have been booked at prices considerably in advance of pre-war days, one box in the grand-stand fetching 70 guineas.

The result of the drought during the past month has rendered the course parched and unless an ardently hoped for downpour occurs shortly, the running will be somewhat uncomfortable for the horses.

Despite the fact that most of the Derby colts have never run on any other course than Newmarket, including The Panther, the latter continues a strong favourite, any odds against him being eagerly accepted.

"THE PANTHER'S" PROGRESS.

It becomes more and more difficult to imagine that The Panther can be beaten (writes a correspondent in The Observer on the eve of the race). The reports from Newmarket concerning his progress continue to be most satisfactory, and we may safely assume he will strip a much better horse than when he beat Buchan a neck in the Two Thousand Guineas. It was generally agreed that day that his condition was capable of much improvement. Of course, most of his rivals will also have improved in the meantime, but the impression is that The Panther will show an advance.

13 WICKETS FOR 22 RUNS.

LIEUT.-COL. BOND IN BRILLIANT FORM AT ALTENRATH.

The H.Q. Coy, 51st Royal Sussex Regt. played Z. Coy, at Altenrath on Saturday, when the former won by an innings and 88 runs. For H.Q. Lieut.-Col. Bond performed the hat-trick and took 7 wickets for 9 runs, while Sergt. Bowyer captured 3 for 6 during Z Coys 1st Innings.

In the 2nd Innings Lieut.-Col. Bond took 6 for 13 and Sergt. Evans 4 for 4. The latter ran up a total of 52, when he retired, and Lieut.-Col. Bond contributed 33 and Lieut. Argent 29. Scores:—

Z Coy (1st Innings) 19; Z Coy (2nd Innings) 36; H.Q., (1st Innings) 147.

HIGH SCORING AT FRENZ.

13 AND 111 S.B.A.C.'s RUN UP TOTAL OF 225.

Some interesting cricket was witnessed at Frenz last week when teams representing 227 and 248 S.B.A.C.'s and 13 and 111 S.B.A.C.'s respectively met on the 83rd Brigade R.A.S.C. ground.

Cpl. Bellamy and Pte. Duxbury opened the innings for 227 and 248 Cols., but the first wicket fell with only 8 runs registered. Sergt. Bennett and Cpl. Bellamy made a useful stand and the score was raised to 71 before the former was bowled for a well-played innings of 36 runs. The innings closed for 140, Cpl. Bellamy being top scorer with a useful innings of 44.

13th and 111 S.B.A.C. made a poor start with their innings, 2 wickets being down for only 15 runs, but with the advent of Cpt. Bowman, ably assisted by L/Cpl. Olham and Pte. Devereux their opponents' total was soon passed, Capt. Bowman scoring 65 by good sporting cricket. His innings included 9 fours. Scores:—

227 and 248 S.B.A.C.'s ... 140;
13 and 111 S.B.A.C.'s ... 225.

FOOTBALL MATCH.

LOWLAND D.H.Q. GENERAL MESS v. 212 EMPLOYMENT COY.

The above teams met in a return match at Ohligs on Sunday in tropical weather and before a good attendance. The Employment Coy. was soon active through their wingers but poor shooting spoiled their play.

In the second half the mess pressed heavily and at last broke the ice through the goalie misjudging a corner kick taken by Stevenson. Amond and Gallacher added further goals.

Result: Mess, 3; Employment Coy, 0.

Heddon played a good game for the 212 while Gallacher was always prominent for his quick footwork.

5 FOR 7 IN TWO OVERS.

DEADLY BOWLING AT ERP BY MEMBER OF CAPT. BOND'S XI.

Some interesting cricket matches are being played at Erp, each Company of the 2/4th Duke of Wellington's Regt. being anxious to take down Capt. Bond's Eleven. On Friday "B" Company were the opponents. In this match Capt. Bond's Eleven was weakened through the absence of North (demobilised) and Bond (on leave). On the two former occasions the finish has been rather exciting, but this one proved an easy win for Capt. Bond's team.

Thanks to a splendid innings by Cpl. Albone, who scored 61 not out and Sutcliffe and Sharpe (14 and 12 respectively) the total reached 117. In reply "B" Company could only muster 64. (Capt. Green 21), the bowling of Brewis and Cpl. Albone being almost unplayable. Cpl. Albone took 5 wickets for 7 runs in a couple of overs.

LIGHT DIVISION D.A.C.

2nd SECTION v. 1st SECTION AND H.Q. AT OBEREMBT.

The Light Division D.A.C. opened their cricket season at Oberembt on Saturday with a very favourable start. The match was 2nd Section v. 1st Section and H.Q. Owing to the brilliant bowling of Lieut. Plissonneau who took 6 wickets for 14 runs, and B.S.M. Daley who took 5 wickets for 7 runs, the innings of No 1 Section and H.Q. were very short lived.

In the 1st innings the only batsman to reach double figures was Capt. Webb who scored 14; and in the second innings B.S.M. Odie was run out for 19.

The leading scores by No 2 Section batsmen were Lieut. Plissonneau (48), Dr. Milnes (not out 34), Gnr. Ward (not out 33), Cpl. Frost (19), and B.S.M. Daley (14). Scores:—

No 2 Section (1st innings)..... 175
No 1 Section and H.Q. (1st innings)... 28
No 1 " " " (2nd innings) .. 38

C COY 52nd MANCHESTERS v. 2nd EASTERN BRIGADE H.Q.

An interesting cricket match took place at Geistingen last week between the above teams before a large number of spectators. Walley and Musk were the chief scorers for the home team, who made a total of 114. Scores:—

2/4 HANTS v. 51st HANTS.

The officers of 2/4 and 51st Hants played a very pleasant cricket match at Buckhulsen on Saturday. For the 51st Hants Lieut. Goudly took 5 wickets for 16, and 2nd Lieut. Hickmann 3 wickets for 6. The 2/4 batted first and were all out for 56. Corpl. Thomas was top scorer with a well compiled 16.

The 51st went in and the first pair settled down at once, and scoring was brisk. Major O'Brian a left handed bat with a nice style made some powerful drives and Lieut. Goudly displayed some nice scoring strokes all round the wicket. The first wicket fell at 26 and 2nd Lieut. Hickman came in to take up the scoring. He proved to be a good right hander with a pretty style, and he settled down to business at once. In the latter part of the innings Lieut.-Col. Irwin got in some heavy batting and eventually carried his bat.

The innings closed at 135, leaving 51st Hants winners by 79 runs.

A most enjoyable cricket match was played on Saturday on the Exerzier Platz, Merheim, between "D" Battery, and "B" Battery, 187th Brigade R.F.A., London Division. "D" Battery won the toss and decided to bat first. Gnr. Crompton was in fine form, putting together 37 with very nice cricket.

The feature of the afternoon's sport was the partnership of Gnr. Headland and Lieut Nesham. The former contributed a clean 25, whilst the latter gave a really fine exhibition of cricket for 50. "D" Battery shortly after closed the innings with 162 to their credit.

"B" Battery went in, but could do nothing against the bowling of Ford, (6 for 9) and Lawrence (4 for 26). Sergt. Clarke was top-scorer with 10. They were dismissed for 35.

Both gun and waggon were extremely well turned out, the harness left nothing to be desired, and the driving was excellent.

Sergt. Frith as No 1, his drivers and limber gunners are to be heartily congratulated on their well merited success.

Football Season Extension.

It is generally anticipated that the proposal to extend the Association football season so as to include the last Saturday in August and the first Saturday in May will be carried at the forthcoming annual meeting of the Football Association says Sporting Life. Claims are being put forward in various directions for the credit of proposing the compromise that has found such ready acceptance. It is necessary, therefore, to place on record that it was first mooted by the representative of Exeter City F.C. at a general meeting of the Southern League, that it was unanimously adopted at that meeting, and instructions were given to the secretary to bring the matter before the F.A. Subsequently the Football League adopted the proposal, and it has now been approved by the F.A. Rules Revision Committee.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

WHAT DID YOU DRAW?

RESULTS OF DERBY SWEEPSTAKE DRAWS.

There must surely be comparatively few members of the Army of the Rhine who have not subscribed to at least one of the many sweepstakes organised by various branches of the service.

Corps' Clubs in the large towns in the occupied areas catered for Officers (those in Cologne, Duren and Bonn being particularly well patronised) while the British Empire Leave Club provided facilities for "other ranks" to have a "flutter."

The 6th Corps Officers Club draw took place on Monday evening, when it was announced that no fewer than 8,400 tickets had been sold. For some unexplained reason, the promoters of the sweep included in the draw several horses that were scratched from the great race, some time ago.

Appended is the complete list of horses drawn for the ticket numbers indicated.

One of the most striking features of this Tournament should be the exhibition of Physical Training as demonstrated by teams of women belonging to the R.A.F. It should prove to be one of the finest missionary efforts in that direction which has yet been attempted. This will be the first occasion on which women have taken part in the Tournament.

OPERA BY VOTE.

"TRISTAN" TOPS THE POLL IN A NOVEL PLEBISCITE.

It will be interesting to soldiers out here to note the recent innovation in operatic arrangements made at Bradford.

Mr. Francis Laidler, the lessee of the Alhambra Theatre, where the Beecham company is to give a week's performances next month. desired to consult the music-loving public as to the operas they wished to hear.

About 800 people accepted Mr. Laidler's invitation to vote for their favourite works, and the poll resulted as follows:—

"Tristan and Isolda."
"Samson and Delilah."
"The Magic Flute."
"Aida."
"La Bohème."
"Tannhäuser."
"Madame Butterfly."
"The Marriage of Figaro."

Among the operas in the repertory which were "unplaced" were "Boris Godounov," "Romeo and Juliet," "Louise," "The Golden Cock," "Othello," "Falstaff," "The Fair Maid of Perth," "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Faust," "Pagliacci," and "Il Trovatore."

Mozart's "Il Sera[illegible]," was at the bottom of the poll.

BRITISH EMPIRE LEAVE CLUB.

TO-NIGHT'S LECTURE.

"THROUGH THE RUSSIAN TERROR."

The usual dance in the Ballroom is cancelled and by special request the Rev. R. Cortier Forster, for many years British Chaplain at Odessa, has consented to lecture to-night on his personal experiences during "Two Years of the Russian Revolutions."

The lecturer will narrate his personal experiences throughout "the Russian Terror"; how the movement grew; the secrets of the Revolution; the Reign of Terror; and in addition, he hopes to show some of the results of Bolshevik rule, on labour in Russia.

The Rev. Courtier Forster has first-hand information on everything that appertains to the hideous revolution, and all who have time will be amply repaid in going to hear him. His versatile manner, and the special thrilling nature of his subject, call for the heartiest support.

The lecture will be given at 7 p.m. in the theatre of the club, and the chair is to be taken by Lt.-Gen. Sir C.W. Jacob, K.C.B., K.C.M.G., Commanding II Corps. The orchestra of the 18th Bn. K.R.R.C. (by kind permission of Lt. Col. H.A. Vernon D.S.O.) will play at 6.30 p.m.

SPORTS MEETING.

"C" BATTERY, 190th BRIGADE R.F.A.

The village of Overath lies nearly twenty miles due east of Cologne on the verge of the neutral zone, and its garrison of a Battery and a Battalion form one of the outposts of the Army of the Rhine.

At present this Battery is C/190th Brigade R.F.A. and on Saturday last in a blaze of sunshine they held a most successful sports meeting. Every event on the programme went with a swing, and this was undoubtedly due to the keeness and enthusiasm of the Battery Commander, Captain E.J. Bray, M.C., R.F.A., and his Officers, N.C.O's and men.

The events which called for the most applause, were the wrestling on horseback, the V.C. race and the Musical Chairs. In the wrestling "B" sub-section ate up the rest of the Battery. In the V.C. race the Transport Officer of the Fusiliers proved a dangerous competitor, and the fourth officer home rode a great finish half hidden beneath an enormous sack of straw with his right spur firmly anchored in his horse's quarters. In the musical chairs Driver Tilley won easily by the wily expedient of seizing his chair before he dismounted and by seating himself upon it in mid air.

The following are the results of four of the other items of the programme.

MULE RACE. 1. Pte. Goostray, 23rd R.F.'s. 2. Dvr. Park C/190. Bde. R.F.A.

OBSTACLE RACE. 1. Pte. Wilson, A/23rd R.F's. 2. Sgt. Price, A/23rd R.F's.

HALF SECTION JUMPING. 1. Dvr. Allan, C/190 Bde., R.F.A. 2. Dvr. Pech, C 190 Bde., R.F.A.

100 YARDS FLAT RACE. 1. Lcp. Wager, C/23rd R.F. 2. Pte. Gordon, D/23rd R.F.

"THE NEW SIN."

RHINE ARMY DRAMATIC COMPANY AT THE DEUTSCHES THEATRE.

The producing of a play, in face of the uncertainties of present day military life, is as full of difficulties as a sardine tin is full of fish. This view must be shared by Lieut. S. E. Percy, who had to overcome innumerable difficulties before he could stage Macdonald Hasting's three-act play "The New Sin" at the Deutsches Theatre, Cologne, on Monday. Having carefully selected his caste, changes and more changes became involved, until only three of the original artistes selected remained in the programme.

With such a generous proportion of eleventh hour changes, the excellence of the production is all the more creditable to those concerned.

"The New Sin" strikes an original note in modern plays and more than one moral is pointed as the story is unfolded. But the theme centres on the extraordinary will of one Mr. Cutts who, in the course of his worldly activities contrived to amass a large fortune by manufacturing so unromantic a commodity as suspenders. He makes a will and then dies, leaving a few thousand pounds to each member of a rather extensive family. But, by the insertion in the will of an eccentric proviso, not one of his children are eligible to derive any benefit under it until such time as one of the sons (who apparently was not a particularly warm favourite of his dad's) chooses to die.

To divulge further the thread of this engrossing story would be giving too much away, since the enjoyment of the play depends to a great extent upon the unexpectedness of the situations reached.

A CAPABLE CASTE.

The presentation of the play was fairly evenly divided among seven characters, the impersonations of whom were, in every case, extraordinarily well done by members of the Rhine Army Dramatic Company, on Monday.

A thoroughly capable piece of acting was observed in Lieut. C.F. Balls (Border Regt.) representation of D.L. Davids, J.P., L.L.C. His part was no easy one, but the naturalness with which he submitted the smug, self satisfied draper, whose very action and course jest suggested "self-made," was indicative of more than a nodding acquaintance with the dramatic art

Little need be said of the acting of Lieut. Percy, whose reputation has now spread far and wide in Rhineland. His extraordinary versatility enabled him to fulfil the most diversified roles with equal success. Monday's effort was no exception, and he gave a representation of Hilary Butts in a manner that revealed strikingly, the conflicting emotions that that character passes through in the course of the plot.

As Jim Benziger, Lieut. J.P. Cox, R.F.A., was perfectly at ease. He found in his part plenty of scope for submitting a rather irresponsible, pleasure loving, popular playwright, and he did it in every way successfully.

Will Grain, a Lancashire labour M.P., was in the hands of Lieut. C. Spiegelhalter, Lancashire Fusiliers. His broad accent and somewhat dogmatic bearing were perfectly true to life.

Lieut. D.A. Onions, 2nd Monmonth's, made his debut as an actor, and as Peel, the old servant, gave a performance so successfully that his name will undoubtedly find a place on subsequent programmes.

In his impersonation of Maximilian Cutts, Lieut. N. Mellor, R.G.A, displayed a decided sense of the dramatic. The gradual evolution from a state of ravenous hunger and illness to normal condition, received sufficient emotional treatment without being overdone.

Lieut. W.E. Mocatta, West Yorkshires, although not making his appearance until the play was well advanced, was capital as Stuart-Campbell.

During the intervals, the "Tabs" Orchestra, under the direction of Conductor H. Porter, rendered agreeable selections. The play will conclude a six nights run on Saturday.

RHINELAND ATHLETICS.

SPORTS AT DORMAGEN.

Lovely sunshine, tempered by gentle breezes, favoured the athletic sports held under the auspices of B. Coy., 13th Battalion K.R.R.C. at Dormagen on Sunday afternoon. An attractive programme had been arranged and there was a good entry. Capital features were the transport race, the one mile flat race (open), wrestling on horseback, and the one mile flat race (confined to the Company) The comic events, which were well supported, provided much amusement.

53rd WELSH SPORTS MEETING.

ATTRACTIVE PROGRAMME AND LARGE CROWD AT ALFTAR.

The 53rd Welsh Regt. held an enjoyable sports meeting at Alftar on Wednesday, in glorious weather, and before a large gathering of spectators.

Below is a list of the chief events with the names of the prize winners. The open events caused the most excitement, but none was more amusing than the wrestling on mules. The number of shirts torn must have made the Quartermaster weep.

The competition for the champion Company ran very keen and by winning the last event of the day, the Inter Company Relay Race, "A" Company managed to put themselves ahead, beating "C" Company by half a point.

GUESTS OF THE GAY GORDONS.

The Sports held by the 51st Gordon Highlanders at Duren on Saturday last provided a great day. Before a tribunal of judges Major General Sir David Campbell, K.C.B., Brig. General A.B. Ritchie C.B., C.M.G., Lieut-Col R.M. Dudgeon, D.S.O., M.C. Major J.A. Wolfe-Murray D.S.O., M.C., Major Colvin V.C., Major T.B. Lawrence, D.S.O., M.C., D.C.M., and several others appeared all and sundry to take their trial in sports, and under that array of medal ribbons, no wonder they flushed with pride.

To the attractive music of the 3rd King's Own Hussars Band, the field was filled by dashing Lancers, sturdy Hussars, Artillerymen, Flighty R.A.F's, Black Watch, Seaforths, Camerons, Argylls, all eager to compete with the Gay Gordons. It was indeed a merry party. A little band of nursing sisters entered the field when all was ready for the feast. We thank them for adding the finishing touches.

Everyone was out to be happy and to make others happy. Who can deny that the Commander of the Battalion, the soul of the battalion, was himself jumping the hurdles more successfully than plenty of younger men? Strangers were made welcome and changed to friends, no man went away a stranger to those Gay Gordons, fun and laughter reigned supreme.

When at last the prizes were distributed and thanks accorded to that array of honoured judges, committee and all, the cheering was great.

True Recipe for BALDNESS.

"I now feel convinced that only very few men, under 60 years, need remain bald," so says Signor Lavreitzski, a well-known Italian Scientific Chemist, who has discovered that Glysophate in its concentrated form possesses remarkable hair-growing power, and even in 21 days can produce new hair on bald patches that may have been denuded of hair for several years. The revivified growth, it appears, is natural and gradual, whilst the hair is youthful in colour and strong in texture. Professor Lavreitzski's preparation will in most cases prove its marvellous hair-producing properties in less than a dozen applications. Everyman who would like to correct the ugliness of baldness is strongly advised to give Concentrated Glysophate a fair trial. It may truly be called a scientific cure for baldness and is the most reliable method of getting rid of that appearance of "premature age" so often associated with the lack of hair.

No 3 Army Cinema, Germania Theatre, Hohe Strasse.— Harry Carry and Molly Malone in "The Scarlet Drop" (five part Transatlantic drama); "Some Story"; "Kids and Scaltiways" (one part comedy) "As he Soweth" will be shown on Friday and Saturday next.

Novels on the Films.

The African Films Productions, Limited, are, we hear, producing quite a number of famous novels in South Africa. They have already produced Rider Haggard's famous story, "King Solomon's Mines," and are working on H. de Vere Stacpoole's "Blue Lagoon" and H. Seton Merriman's "With Edged Tools," besides other subjects of more than ordinary interest.

A Change of Name.

As a result of a newspaper competition, Odette Goimbaut, the dainty little British film actress, has changed her French nomenclature and as Mary Odette we shall know her when she appears in the Britisn Actors new production, "The Castle of Dreams." Gertrud M'Coy, Fred Groves, A.E. Matthews and Henry Vibart are also in the caste.

O. Henry Stories.

The Vitagraph Co., are, we observe, showing several O. Henry films among which are "Mammon and the Archer" and "One Thousand Dollars."

All O. Henry enthusiasts would be pleased if the amusement caterers for the Rhine Army would include one or two of these inimitable short stories on the programmes occasionally.

Surprise Plays.

Grainger have commenced the issue of a new series of pictures called Surprise Plays. They claim that each one has, packed away in the story, a surprise that would never be thought of by the majority of the audience. The first of the series is the "White Lie," starring Bessie Barriscale.

Latest Releases.

There were three pictures of note released last week. The first is "The Bravest Way" featuring the well-known Japanese actor, Sessue Hayakawa. The scenes are laid in America, but the situations are peculiarly Japanese. It is the simple story of a man who sacrifices his love on the altar of loyalty to a murdered friend. "The Blindness of Divorce," featuring Bertha Mann and an all-star cast, shows the consequences that may follow the reckless breaking of the marriage tie. It is emblematica of the American problem play. Among the English releases is a film adapted from Eagar Wallace's "Pallard the Punter," a romance of sport, villainy, adventure, and racing.

The Victory Leaders.

A film entitled "The Victory Leaders" has been given by the Stroll Company in aid of the St. Dunstan's Fund for Blinded soldiers and sailors. The great interest in the film lies in the fact that it displays the individual characteristics of the men who have made history. Clemenceau is there, Beatty is there, so is the King, the Prince of Wales, and Prince Albert. It is a film of historic interest.

AMIR OF AFGHANISTAN ASKS FOR PEACE.

BRILLIANT CAVALRY ACTION.

KOLTCHAK CONTINUES TO MAKE PROGRESS.

NEW TERRITORIAL COMMANDS.

AMIR ASKS FOR AN HONOURABLE PEACE.

"GREATEST SINCERITY."

The India Office has issued the following:

The Viceroy of India reports that a letter from the Amir, dated May 28, has been received in Peshawur, and gives a summary of the first rough translation. The Amir, after a laboured explanation of his hostile acts, expresses desire for "an onourable peace useful for both parties," and asks that negotiations may be opened at Landi Kotal or Peshawur. He assures the Viceroy "with the greatest sincerity" that he "never intended severance of friendship," and states that he has sent instructions to the Afghan commanders to stop hostilities and the movements of troops. Certified copies of these instructions were enclosed in these letters.

Further information received by the India Office from the Government of India, dated May 31, shows that Thal Fort has resisted all Afghan attempts to take it, although the adjacent village has been completely gutted by the enemy. An unsuccessful attempt has been made to rush our post at Sadda (th rty miles from Thal, up the Kurram Valley), and some fighting continues near Lakka Tigga (ten miles south-west of Sadda).

The arrival of our aeroplanes at Miramshah in Waziristan, is reported to have eased the local situation as regards the tribesmen in that neighbourhood. Our post at Manjhi, to the south of Murtaza, where the Gomal Valley bebouches from the mountains, was unsuccessfully attacked during the night of May 29-30.

CAVALRY PURSUIT.

The situation at Parachinar continues satisfactory. There has been no further action by Nadir Khan.

It is reported that there have been no new developments at Miranshah; some Mahsud Lashkars are reported in the vicinity of Jandola, but the attitude of the Bhittanis is stated to be stil satisfactory. Further south, near Murtaza, a squadron of our cavalry pursued a party of three hundred Waziris and Mahsuds who ven ured into the plains. Twenty were killed and five captured, and several more wounded. Our casualties were eight.

There is no change in the situation on the Dakka front. Reconnaissances and foraging expeditions have been carried on regularly by our cavalry. Sistan is quiet. The leading men there are volunteering to raise levies.—Reuter.

ENEMY IN RETREAT.

Simla, 26th May. Aeroplanes report that large numbers of the enemy are retiring westwards between Jalalabad and Kabul. It is also reported that stores and munitions are being moved from Jalalabad to Gandamak. Tirah is quiet, and favourable reports regarding the Afridis have been received. The attitude of the Mohmands, — in spite of the strain on their loyalty by the presence of Afghan troops and leading Mullahs in their country, is excellent.

The 23rd Chitral Scouts and the Mehtar's bodyguard co-operated with the British mobile column in attacking the Afghan regulars and tribesmen who were holding a line on the Bashgul River. The British gained all their objectives, and the enemy fled towards Asmar, leaving behind four guns and a large number of arms and stores. The enemy dead are estimated at 250. The British casualties were comparatively slight. The Chitral Scouts suffered the most heavily. There were eight killed and twenty-three wounded. The Chitrals fought well.—Reuter.

NEW TERRITORIAL COMMANDS.

The War Office announces the following further appointments to the command of divisions of the new Territorial Force:

East Anglian:—Major-General S. W. Hare, C.B., formerly of the K.R.R.C.

Home Counties:—Major-General J. R. Longley, C.B., C.M.G., formerly of the East Surrey Regiment.

North Midlands:—Major-General A. R. Hoskins, C.M.G., D.S.O., formerly of the North Staffordshire Regiment.

Major-General Hare in the European War commanded successively the Scottish Rifle Brigade, T.F., (1914-15) 86th Infantry Brigade (1915), 82nd Infantry Brigade (1916), T.C. Tel-el-Kebir (1916), and 54th Division (1916-19).

Major-General Longley served as an adjutant of Volunteers in 1903, and in the European War commanded successively the 82nd Infantry Brigade, M.E.F. (1915), and 10th Division Egypt (1915-19).

Major-General Hoskins served on the Staff in Egypt (1896-1900), in South Africa (1900-1903), in Egypt and France (1903-14), as a Staff brigadier-general in East Africa (1915-16) and with the 1st East African Division (1916-17), the East African Force (1917), and the 5th Indian Division (1917-19).

MEXICAN TROUBLE RENEWED.

New York.— A telegram from the frontier town of Cuidad Juarez reports that Generals Villa and Angeles attacked Chilsuahua City on Sunday. All communication has been cut off.—Reuter.

ORDERS TO GERMANS IN LETTLAND.

CURTAILMENT OF ACTIVITY.

A semi-official telegram from Berlin says: "The German Armistice Commission at Spa reports that the Entente Powers presented a fresh Note yesterday regarding the German troops still in Lettland and Lithuania. The Note declares that the German forces are to be left in the Baltic provinces, but must be withdrawn to a line to be marked; and, secondly that General von der Goltz can be retained in his command on the following conditions:

"1. He must receive orders from Germany to establish a Coalition Government, in which all the Lettish parties are to be represented according to their importance.

"2. All arms must be restored to the Lettish troops.

"3. The mobilization of the Lettish forces must be permitted without restriction.

"4. Complete freedom for the new Lettish Government in all its official acts must be assured.

"A period of fifteen days is granted, from June 1, for the acceptance of these conditions, and after the expiration of this time the question of Von der Goltz's further stay will be considered afresh."—Reuter.

CATTLE EPIDEMIC IN EGYPT.

Cairo, May 26. There seems to be an ever-increasing crop of disastrous consequences of the recent disturbances which inevitably fall on the provincial landowners and fellahin. Attention has already been drawn to the loss due to the escape of water from the Assuan reservoir and the damage to railways. It now appears that for two months it was impossible for veterinary inspectors to exercise their usual control over rinderpest and other epidemic diseases, and this fact has entailed a great extension of the plague. The movement of the cattle into infected areas was unrestrained, diseased cattle were not isolated, and protective inoculation was suspended, and even now cannot be carried out expeditiously in many places in Upper Egypt. The result is that the provinces are now faced with a severe and widespread epidemic, which will naturally react on agriculture generally, seeing now how largely it depends upon the cattle of the country. A good bull costs £40, but the indirect loss is probably out of proportion. The infected provinces are Assuan, Girga, Assiut, Fayoum, Galiubia, Sharkia, Gharbia, Manufia, Behera, and Dakahlia.—Reuter.

AMERICANS DENOUNCE THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

In the American House of Representatives, Senator H. Johnson, one of the leaders of the Republican Progressive group, strongly denounced the League of Nations covenant.

He described it as gigantic war trust which was not a league to promote peace but a pretext for power. The result of it was that America, who was respected and beloved last year, has now, as the result of meddling with foreign proulems, made many powerful enemies.

Senator Johnson described American consent to the decision about Shantung as the blackest page in American history, adding, "as a Californian I am not willing to submit any race problems we may have to the jurisdiction of the League of Nations."

KOLTCHAK'S PROGRESS.

Omsk. 24th May.— Koltchak's offensive is continuing successfully in the Perm-Kazan railway sector. A number of villages have been taken, with many prisoners and stocks of war material. Severe fighting has occurred near the mouth of the Viatka river, the enemy being repeatedly repulsed.— Reuter.

TURKS RESIST GREEKS.

According to an official report received in London, Turkish resistance to the Greek occupation of Aivali has been insignificant. Only four soldiers were killed. The Turkish troops, after having set fire to the barracks, retired to the interior. On the same day, 29th May, Greek troops occupied the town of Kassaba, East of Smyrna. No incident occurred during these operations.—Reuter.

SULTAN OF EGYPT MARRIED.

Cairo. 25th May.— The marriage was solemnised yesterday of the Sultan with the daughter of Sabri Pasha, the former Governor of Cairo and present Minister of Agriculture.

LONDON SPECIALS' EARLY RELEASE.

MEDALS TO BE ISSUED.

Sir Edward Ward, chief staff officer of the Metropolitan Special Constabulary, in an order on Saturday, stated that all ranks of the Metropolitan Special Constabulary will be released from continuous service from noon on Monday, the 16th inst.

The announcement was also made that the King has approved of the issue to special constables of a medal (with ribbon) to be called the "Special Constabulary Long Service Medal."

Authority has been given for the establishment of a Metropolitan Special Constabulary Reserve, to be employed only in cases of emergency. These who desire to join the reserve need only intimate their willingness to the officer in charge of their station and sign a declaration.

INVALID OFFICERS AND NURSES.

It is provided by an Army Council Instruction just issued that the cost of treatment of tuberculous officers and nurses on full or half-pay will henceforth be payable out of Army funds. Where the disabili y is caused in and by military service, actual expenditure on treatment up to £3 3s a week is allowed. Officers receiving this grant are ineligible for rationand lodging allowance. Similarly the board and washing allowance of 21s 6d a week of Army and V.A. nurses in receipt of the grant will be reduced to 4s a week washing allowance.

BRITISH PRISONERS IN KURDISTAN.

In the House of Commons yesterday Mr Pratt, replying on behalf of the India Office to Captain Ormsby-Gore (C.U., Stafford), who asked where the reported outbreak in South Kurdistan had taken place, said: The outbreak occurred at Suleimaniyeh, a town in South Kurdistan, in ex-Ottoman territory, where a Kurdish notable has obtained temporary control of the town after an engagement with the local levies, in which the latter appear to have been worsted. The British officers and staff are prisoners, but are reported to be unharmed. Steps are being taken to extricate them and to deal with the situation. The Kurdish chief's action seems to be due to a wish to establish himself as an independent ruler.

EX-PRISONERS OF WAR VOLUNTEER.

It is officially announced that there are two hundred Russian officers in the camp at Newmarket, some of them being ex-prisoners of war, who have volunteered to join the Russian National Forces. They will accordingly be sent, at the earliest opportunity, to Siberia and North Russia

SMUGGLED BY THE R.A.F.

It was stated at the Board of Agriculture yesterday that information has been received that there were sixty-four dogs in the Royal Air Force Headquarters camp which had been brought in without undergoing quarantine.

KIMMEL MISTAKEN ARREST.

After being kept in custody since the Kimmel Park riots three months ago, Sapper Walter Patrick Walsh, Canadian Engineers, was yesterday acquitted by the Liverpool court-martial of mutiny charges. Without the defence being called for, and as a result of the statement made by Lieutenant Gauthier for the prosecution, the court and prosecuter agreed with defending counsel that a mistake had been made and the accused was immediately released.

The Government subsidy for the flour industry this year is 47 million pounds.

ITALIAN GIRL'S NAIVE LETTER.

"EGREGIOUS SIR."

The following is an exact copy of a letter received by Mr. Hay Halkett at Woolwich Police Court from a young woman in Italy. Names of persons and places are, of course, omitted:—

"Egregious Sir, City Magistrate, England, of Woolwich, S.E.—Kindly excuse, sir, if also this time I write to you, but as I have had the proof of your exquisite gentility, when in the 8 January, 1919, I have again taken the liberty of write to you for information of the Sapper — that for your aid I have had its news properly from Himself from — in the what he was recovered for a seriously illness.

"After that, I have been knowing that He has left this Hospital, but thenceforward I have not known nothing beyond. So, sir, I pray of your courtesy (if this is possible) a some news of Him. I am displeasing to disturb you but as I know not his precise address, and knowing that he is from Woolwich, have taken the courage of write ou, and I hope that you will be so genteel of answer a short line to this regard.

"Believed not, sir, that I may have a adventurer whatsoever, and that I made this inquiry for motive not goods, but I assure you that is only, and merely, for the sincere friendship that I have allways kept for Him, again from the December, 1917, when I with my family were to the Front, and I cannot understand the reason, because He not may have given me its news of health again.

"Now I ask to you sincerely pardon of my liberty, and with the my infinite thanks, I remain for allways of you, sincerely, grateful and obliget—."

CRITICISM OF MR. JUSTICE DARLING.

PERILS OF THE BENCH.

Criticising Mr. Justice Darling, "The Law Journal" in its current issue quotes Bacon's words to a newly-appointed judge:—"Let your speech be with gravity, as one of the sages of the law, and not talkative, nor with impertinent flying out to show learning."

"Even some of the most experienced judges," it goes on to remark, "have sometimes been known to disregard this excellent advice. Mr. Justice Darling, in his summing up in a murder trial at the Old Bailey last week, in which a soldier was convicted of murdering his sister-in-law, chose to make an elaborate reference to the conduct and fate of Nurse Cavell. For this introduction of the name of the heroic woman into a sordid trial in a criminal court there was neither occasion nor excuse—no occasion, because it had not the slightest relevance to the case before the court, and no excuse, because it showed an ill-regard for the memory of the brave woman to whom, on the bringing of her remains to her native land, the whole country had just paid a moving tribute.

"In his summing-up in what became known as the 'Cissie Raymond' case, the learned Judge was pleased to compare the prisoner—whom he merely bound over in £50—with Galahad. Literary allusions are not wholly unwelcome in legal proceedings, but this kind of flippancy can scarcely be said to be appropriate to a criminal trial. A seat on the Bench is not without its perils for judges who are tempted to talk things that do not come strictly within the province of their judicial duties."

R.A.F. AERODROMES RELINQUISHED.

The undermentioned landing grounds and aerodromes are being relinquished by the R.A.F.: Orsett (Essex). Greenland Top (Yorks); Benton (Northumberland), Broomfield (Herne Bay, Kent); Dunkeswicke (Yorks); Gilmerton (Edinburgh), Grove Park (Kent); Hedon (Yorks); Horsegate (Durham). Monthorpe Gate (Yorks), Palmer's Farm (Essex); Pluckley (Kent), Thornaby (Yorks), Westpole Farm (Herts), Winterton (Yorks). The landing ground at New Chapel (Surrey) will not be available for a period of two months from May 24.

In future the aerodrome at Hounslow will be reserved entirely for civilian flying, and R.A.F. machines will only land there in cases of emergency. R.A.F. machines using any aerodrome not owned by the Government will, for the present, pay the ordinary civilian fees.

OMINOUS COAL OUTLOOK.

The Coal Controller has informed the Humber Coal exporters that the embargo placed on the export of Yorkshire coal is due entirely to the extraordinary shortage in output and the demands of the home market.

With the imminent reduction of working hours he fears that the outlook for this year is very bad.

GOVERNMENT PLANES AUCTIONED.

The first sale by auction of Government aeroplanes was held on Monday. Altogether sixteen machines were sold and realised 3,160 pounds. The prices obtained ranged from sixty to three hundred and sixty pounds.

OFFICERS KILLED IN TRAIN ACCIDENT.

According to a report from Hermannstadt (Transylvania) an accident occurred at the Bendery (Bessarabia) railway station, eight coaches being smashed, eleven persons being killed and forty injured, most of them, the report adds, being French and British officers. —Reuter.

FLYING THE ATLANTIC OCEAN.

TWO MACHINES NEARLY READY.

St. John's. Admiral Kerr, of the Handley Page, who has arrived here from Harbour Grace, says that the machine will probably make her first trial flight next Monday, following this with one or two others, and will then make the Transatlantic attempt on the first suitable day after.

The construction of the machine is ahead of scheduled time, and unless the weather conditions for the next fortnight are unfavourable the start will be made not later than June 15.

Captain Alcock, the pilot of the Vickers machine, says he expects to make a trial on Wednesday or Thursday, and the real flight within ten days.—Reuter.

HAWKER'S PLANE ON EXHIBITION.

The battered wreck of the Sopwith aeroplane upon which Mr. Hawker and Commander Grieve made their gallant attempt to cross the Atlantic, now lies on the roof-garden at Selfridge's. It was hoisted up by a derrick from Oxford-street on Saturday, and yesterday large crowds had the opportunity of inspecting it. Little but the body remains. The propeller has been snapped off short, almost as if the aeroplane had crushed on its nose: the exhaust pipe is bent double, the planes have practically disappeared, and of the fabric most is broken away, that which remains hanging in shreds. A network of wire stays enwraps the machine in hopeless complication, while of the rudder nothing is left but a skeleton framework. The fragments would scarcely be recognised as an aeroplane.

N.C. 4 TO BE DISMANTLED.

Washington.— Mr. Daniels, Secretary for the Navy, has announced that the seaplane N.C. 4 will be dismantled and taken back to the United States.

No attempt at a flight from Europe to America was ever contemplated.— Reuter.

OVER A MILLION UNEMPLOYED.

The total number of unemployed persons on May 2, according to the donation records, was 1,093,400, as compared with 1,060,245 on March 28—an increase of 33,155. The total of 1,093,400 was made up of 402,151 men and 1,348 women demobilized from H.M. Forces, and 689,933 civilians. Of the latter 452,132 were women and girls.

An analysis of 1,082,759 of the policies lodged at May 2 revealed that 63,930 of the unemployed persons were in receipt of the reduced donation which is paid to civilians after the expiry of first period of 13 weeks' unemployment; of this number nearly two-thirds were women.

Increases in wages which came into operation in April affected nearly 1,300,000 workpeople (including about 1,000,000 coal miners), while about 400,000 workpeople benefited by reductions in hours of labour.

There is still a large amount of transitional unemployment. In the cotton, linen, jute, and the textile bleaching, dyeing, calico printing and finishing trades employment was bad generally and the building trade continues slack, except for maintenance and repairs.

GREAT INCREASE OF POOR RELIEF.

During the March quarter the number of recipients of Poor Law Relief in England and Wales rose by ten thousand to a total of 466,000.

The increase was most marked in the engineering and mining districts. The working classes committee is recommending the London County Council immediately to prepare a scheme for the construction within five years of at least 29,000 houses, including those replacing insanitary areas, and to start clearing such insanitary areas at once.

OVERSEAS TROOPS' FAMILIES.

The War Office has decided to extend the period within which wives and families of overseas officers and men (excluding Dominion and Colonial Forces) may claim free passages home, to 31st August 1919. If an unmarried officer or soldier should marry by this date, his wife can claim a free passage. It is pointed out that wives and families of officers and men who embarked for the United Kingdom after Nov. 28, 1918, are not entitled to a free passage.

MEMORIALS ON BATTLEFIELDS.

The Battle Exploit Memorials Committee, a representative committee of senior officers appointed to consider claims made by units to erect on battlefields permanent memorials of their exploits, announces that, owing to the difficulty found by some units in submitting by 1st June the required particulars of their claims, it has been decided that the appointed date by which claims must reach the secretary of the committee, War Office, Whitehall, S.W. 1, is now for all units 1st September 1919.

SCOTTISH FISHERMEN'S DEMAND.

At mass meetings of Scottish fishermen held simultaneously at Peterhead, Fraserburgh, Buckie, Wick and Lerwick, it was decided that fishing should be suspended until the 9th June.

Speakers complained of the lack of a minimum wage and demanded that the Government should take the whole catch and pay the fishermen a share of the profits.

THE FUTURE OF EDUCATION.

War is not necessarily totally maleficent. At the commencement many of us saw great possibilities for good following in its train. Our young men and women, more or less steeped in indolent enjoyment of life, so far as individual opportunity permitted, were suddenly brought face to face with the grim reality — strive or die. A sense of individual and personal responsibility in national affairs was awakened and we hoped that our manhood and womanhood, after the struggle, would be benefitted.

The war lasted long however, long enough for many feet to grow weary whilst trudging the long lane. Our finer sensibilities and aspirations have became dulled, maybe, because the turning was so distant. Are we too tired to reap now the benefits which appeared so likely to accrue from the bloody struggle when we started the terrible journey nearly five long years ago?

Probably the safest index as to the nature of the answer to this query is to be found in our attitude regarding education, — "education" in its broodest and finest sense.

We shall not be very far from the truth in averring that England had but little system in the real, pregnant part of education before the war. We were perhaps just realising this; shall we now realise it fully and amend matters? Are we ready to take full advantage of the lessons the war should have taught us?

The German system was much more thoroughly systematised and the youth with brains capable of benefitting by education was given many facilities for that training which enabled him to rise and thus become a greater national asset. The German universities were endowed, state and otherwise, to such an extent that it made our university grants look like those of a suburban charity school. Having brains, the German youth, of almost any station, could proceed to the University. So could the British youth, but the struggle and the competition were much keener, the graduates fewer.

We remember hearing a responsible statesman some years ago, state that although Germany had its continuous path, broad and fairly free, from the lowest rungs of the educational ladder to the University, it had not our splendid system of night schools! German youth had much to be thankful for in that. Night schools were mere tinkerings with the subject — a soldered patch on a leaky boiler. Boys and girls fagged out by a day spent in the office or workshop were sent into a school to learn — many of them to learn "Science". Could any worse cruelty any greater sham be imagined? Growing youth put on to brain work when bodily exhausted. Brain work made secondary by being placed at the end of the day. Yet, because of an innate desire for knowledge and a wonderful grit on the part of teachers and taught, the night schools did much good. No, if it is worth while educating our youth — and surely we realise now that it is — let us give them a fair chance, let us take those of promise and make them valuable assets to the nation by placing their education first. First give them the tools then ask them to use them.

If we are to remain a nation of the first class we must educate — not merely teach. That is to say we must train the scholar to observe, to reason and to deduce, not merely to acquire a parrotlike acquaintance with such previously established facts as twice two are four.

We met some time ago a young man who could repeat the tags at the end of the Latin grammer, without mistake, yet he was camped beside a windmill for weeks ere he realized that it could turn round to work in a wind from any direction. He could do the Greek also; but he had not acquired that power of observation which turns the long dreary road of life into a wonderfu sylvan glade packed tight with Nature's beauties.

If our education is to fit us for the impending strenuous struggle for existence it must "lead out" our youth to observe, to think to reason. In other words it must include real Science. Not the science we did in earlier days when in doing "stinks" we detected, say, nitric acid by numbers. That is straining the memory, not training the mind. In short, in the words of Lord Avebury, "children should be trained to observe and to think, for in that way there would be opened out to them a source of the purest enjoyment for leisure hours, and the wisest judgment in the work of life".

Languages and arithmetic history and geography are all worthy subjects and must be taught more or less, as memory subjects. But let us go beyond that, let us have schools accessible to all, wherein, having acquired the necessary fundamental facts, the youth of the Empire may be lead "to observe and to think." Instead of making schooldays a nightmare of dry-as-dust facts let us try to inculcate a love of learning, the learning itself is bound to follow. Many beneficent results will accrue.

To take an example. One result would be the decrease of disease. Educate our Youth to observe and to reason that certain results are bound to accrue from neglect or misuse of the body — not that they may occur to some people, but that they are always the logical outcome of certain actions, — and Youth will take care of itself and of the strength and beauty of its body. Another result would be a minifying of our food problem. Give the farmer a scientific education, not necessarily teaching him the facts of the higher chemistry, botany or bacteriology but just train him to observe and to reason, and our food output would be enormously increased. But beyond the mere immediate profit, and it would accrue in hundreds of ways, there will remain the greater enjoyment of life by all who are equipped to participate in its secrets, and we shall realize with Bacon that "no pleasure is comparable to the standing upon the vantage ground of truth." The secure "truth" is only open to the individual who can observe the facts and reason out the deductions.

Let us "lead out" our scholars not only to know and to do things but to know why they do them. Work will be much more interesting to the worker and when the next grave national crisis arises we shall not find an administration of lawyers rushing about seeking frantically the few men who know, for instead of few they will be many and easily found.

THE LATEST IN ALARMS.

The recent war is responsible for a multitude of various types of alarms: gas-alarms, raid-alarms, trip-alarms; so that after four-and-a-half years they are the rule rather than the exception, and the introduction of just one more will come as no surprise. Our battalion made its triumphal entry some time ago into this village of streamlets, rivulets, and estaminets, and at once the stampede for accommodation began. On entering the new sanctum allotted to this department we found ourselves almost entirely surrounded by officialdom. This is not conducive to a contented frame of mind, and the result was that such an enormous cyclone of wind necessitated our speedy evacuation.

After untiring efforts on the part of our Figurehead of Wisdom, we discovered a secluded apartment, to whose dizzy heights authority seldom deigns to climb. Here we were sheltered from the stormy blasts, but nevertheless we considered it expedient to be prepared for any eventualities. To this end we concocted an elaborate system of alarms for the prevention of too unforeseen an interruption.

Accordingly, the inventive genius of our staff was called upon to turn his scientific abilities to account, and in due course our "Importabel" was installed. By an intricate arrangement of photographic apparatus, electric wires, bells, etc. (which O. C. signals had appropriated from the local "Postamt" for his own particular advantage), the importance of any visiting local celebrity was recorded as he passed a hidden camera. Away up in our retreat the ringing of the bell gave us due warning, and we knew from the length of the ring by whom we were honoured, wnether it be a Battalion runner, C. O., or Brigadier-General. The contrivance gave entire satisfaction, and its continued success lulled us into a false sense of security.

Suddenly an afternoon's work was rudely disturbed by the fusion of wires, explosions and smashing of electric bells—fragments of meta flying in all directions. Alas! the importance of the new visitor was beyond the registering powers of our invention, the door opened, and into the chaos strode — —!!

The best laid schemes o' mice and men.

F.M.A.

IN SPIRIT AND IN TRUTH.

Although we are apt at times to belittle tha precious place called England and to maintain that the sea has made us insular and narrow, yet the old customs still cling and the old associations are still wistfully calling and we never sing more heartily than when it's "Carry me back to dear old Blighty."

And one of the sweetest recollections of that best of all places is Sunday. Sunday in the army is a trying sort of day. Somehow or other you can't help thinking of the "old folks at home," and the peacefulness and quietude of it all. Somehow, the memory of that hard earned day of rest seems to sear itself right into your mind and unconsciously you look round for something to help you to forget.

But sometimes the thought intrudes: will it ever be just the same? Will we just drop back into the old place and go on as we did before, just as if the hordes of Prussia had not been greedy and we hadn't lent a hand to crush their bloated autocracy.

Perhaps we'll be different; perhaps we'll carry back some little moments of our stay on the continent; some habit, maybe, that will secure always to remind us that for a time we sojourned among a foreign people; perhaps it is too much to hope that we will return free and untainted after all the horrors that for some time has been our portion, but even if we've got to go back smudged in some way let's keep our Sundays decent.

Let's remind ourselves that we're a peg above any continental nation in this, and that the "gambling drunkenness, and other vices" that flourish here are being kept under in the place that we call home.

We might be slow, insular, and even a bit thickheaded, but we've proved to the world that we're clean and in more senses than one.

And its "hats off" to the men who are trying to give us a cheerful time on Sundays.

They know something about human nature, they do. They know that if they don't give us something to do and think we'll go to the dogs because the devil can always find something for an idle fellow to do.

And its no money-making concern this. There's no royal road to fortune for the promoters — just the satisfaction of knowing that they're helping us along.

And where are those who oppose this noble effort and whose views are rightly described as "narrow religious beliefs."

It is desecrating the Sabbath to seek happiness and thus keep free from vices what would otherwise prove too strong.

Is it a wrong interpretation of Christ's words "The Sabbath was made for man, not man for the Sabbath" to suppose that He would condone the course we take. The conditions that apply here are vastly different to those in England. Temptation and opportunities for evil abound, and the fight is hard enough as it is, but take away our recreation and healthy games and it's all over.

If the Bible gives progressive teaching and you tell us that it does, then progress; and in the way seems strange remind yourself that the teaching of Jesus Christ superseded the simple ancient beliefs of Abraham.

We're going forward and cannot be hampered by bigotry and prejudice, so come and lend a hand and we'll preserve for ever the spirit of sanctity in the English Sabbath.

52nd COMPANY OF CROSSBOWMEN.

Now it chanced that a certain ruler having large treasures, communed with himself in this wise. He that carryeth his treasure in his girdle shall assuredly fall amongst thieves, even like they who were captains of the King's hosts in the beginnings of the great War (against the Huns, the Turks, the Men of Austria, the Czeko-Slovaks, the people of Togoland and the tribes beyond the Zambesi). Moreover he that lendeth his treasures to him that cannot pay his mess William, shall he not appear after the fourteenth day before the G.O.C. in all the might of his wrath. Now, therefore, will I call unto the Pioneer even Kudmore — or — Less, and command that he shall fashion a cunning chest of iron, and in it will I bestow that which hath seemed good to me, and it shall be hidden from the sight of man in a place known unto mine own eyes, and peradventure to the eyes of him that marketh well my words.

THE EPISTLES OF PETER BIRSE, JUNIOR.

A FAMOUS SCHOLAR AND COLOGNE.

Dear Maister Editor,

Sittin' smoakin' the pipe o' paice on the ruif-gairden o' m' patreeshian billet, an' readin' m' lest buk's "Polis Budget" i' the gowden rays o' the settin' sin, aw was rudely interrupit th' ither nicht b' a fella-Scottie fa had made a breelyant deescovery. A curn days praiviously, tae lat ye un'erstan', we were speckalatin' in oor fauvrit' pubbie on th' orijin o' the figgers "4711" on the bottels o' the jenuin "O de Coloan" for which the toon is faum'd.

Ses I wi' an Inglish air o' "Alone I did it," an' the self-komplaisansy, tae say naething o' the injinuity o' a Sherlock Holmes, "dae ye notis 'at the toatal o' the figgers "4+7+1+1" amoonts tae 13"?

"An' fat aboot it"? remaurk'd m' frien' Rorie Mc Flummocks, the moadest author o' the pome "The Loonie 'At Fuppit The Doggie."

"Weel," ses I, "we'll laive it at that i' the noo, an' maybe some o's 'll explawn the "13" in a fylie."

An' so Rorie, brackin' in on m' "Polis Budget" reveries in an inchantit gairden far fae the maddin' crood, burst oot wi' the momentous news 'at he'd made a sensawshunal deescovery. As aw jaloos'd it was the scint bottel konundrum, tho as for his oreejinality aw had ma doots. Fae paridy Tam Gray —

The paths of Rorie lead but to the knave.

"Oot wi'd" aw shoutit, nae verra weel plais'd, for m' intellecktual pride had been woundit an' m' readin' interrupit.

"Ye'll maybe, min," drawl'd oot Rorie, "'at ye deescover'd 'at the figgers "4711" toatall'd "13." Weel a've fun' oot, nae without a michty hip o' burnin' o' midnicht ile, 'at if ye toatal the figgers backarts, that is 1+1+7+4, ye get "13" as weel."

ALGEEBRA AN' GEEOMETERY.

"Nyod Rorie," ses I, "ye've been at yer Algeebra or yer Geeometery buiks or something. That kolossal brain-wave never struck yer noodle dreck, an' ye needna try tae blaw me up 'at 'at's oreeginal. Min, it's nae in ye. But if it's yer ain, Rorie, yer anither unkent jeenius hoddin' yer licht anaith a busshel, ane o' Scotlan's maist breelyant maithemateeshans. Coloan hasna seen yer marra sin Duns Scotus, alias "Doctor Subtilis" was here i' the early 'eers o' the 14th sentury.

"That was the 'Subtle Doctor'," Rorie quately observ'd, withoot as muckle as a keek at a Laiten Dickshanur, so ye'll see, maister Editor, fat nenner o' skolar m' frien' Rorie Mc. Flummocks truelly is. He's nae intellecktual licht-wecht, aw shure ye.

But for a' his smertness an' mental ackrabatics he's nae i' the same street as the celebrawtit Scotchman, Duns Scotus, ane o' the graitest fidders o' skolastic thocht this warld has ever seen, fa's been sleepin' the sleep o' the just this sax hunner 'eer i' the Minority Kirk in Coloan. This beeryin' i' the kirks is an auld fashun'd custom tae chait the deil, but i' the days fan steam-haitit coffins, fittit wi' ventilawtors an' lined wi' skelfie peyper were never draimt o', the kirk was dootless a warmer place than the yaird ootside tae lie in.

Gyan offen aw daunder alang efter aw'm supper'd tae pey m' respecks fornent the depoasitery o' his mortal remawns. There's a conseederable amoont o' doot as to gin he was railly deid fan they coffin'd him, as fan an ill-faur'd craiter i' the toon wi' mair keeriosity than weed menners open'd his kist, the Scotchman was fund tae hae ackwally turn'd roon'! He was maybe lyin' unaisy kin' on his breeks pooch 'at he keepit his bawbees in, tho' in that case, aw'm thinkin', he wid hae lain as he was.

AS DEID AS QUEEN ANNE.

For the turnin' roon' story aw'm indetit till a man they ca' Paulus Jovius, tho' a name like that, aw'll alloo, is hardly a garrantee o' perfeck probity or heestorickal ackuraissy. Be that as it wull, Duns Scotus is noo deid beyon' dispyute, as deid as Queen Anne, or Jerry's "Hymn o' Hate."

But he's only deid in a feesical sense. Far ever weel-learnt carlies sic like's yersel' gaither thegither, in kirk or collidge, in leebrary or club, his name is spoken wi' deferenshyal respeck, an' it behoovs ilka Scotchman on the Rhine tae veesit the last restin'-place o' this breelyant skolar raither nor drap a crockodeel tare on the millocky o' banes o' th' eleven thoosan' virjuns fan puckles o' them were maybe nae virjuns at 'a.

Foe fawmus Scotus was may be gaug'd fae the fack 'at three distinck countries claim the place o' his nateevity — Scotlan', Inglan', an' Irelan'. Dunse in Berickshire, Dunstane in Noarthumerlan' an' Downpaitrick (Dunum) in Irelan' a' claim the honor, an' i' the regretabel absens o' rejistrars' or kirsenin' reckords it's maybe deeficult tae proov' offeeshally. But a Scotchman o' the name o' Dempster wi' praiseworthy industry has publish'd a quarto volyume tae proov' b' a dizzen distinck argymints 'at Duns Scotus was a Scottie, an' up t' the time o' gyaun t' press nae leeterary competitors hae enter'd tae Inglan' or Irelan'. So Scotlan' has it han's doon.

A MAITHEMATEESHAN AT OAXFORD.

Aboot the time 'at the wyse-ackers were argybargyin' aboot gin they were livin' i' the last 'eer o' the 13th sentury or the first 'eer o' the 14th, Scotus was busy grindin' hard at Oaxford, far he disteengwish'd himsel' as a maithemateeshan o' the first watter, an' was made a Profeesor o' Filosofy. At that time, accoardin' t' ae vreeter, there were 30,000 studen's at Oaxford, but aw'm o' opeenyun 'at he was an unmeetagatit leer. Thirty thoosan'! It's perfeck styte. Fae Oaxford the Scottish Profeesor prosaidit tae Pairis, far he was made the reseepient o' a Doctor's degree, an' far he demonstrawtit his deealecktickal skeel wi' his maisterly defence o' the Immaickulat' Consepshun, fat ever that micht be. They awfu' wirds, maister Editor, fairly get me doon orthografickally, but that b' the wye.

In 1308 he travell'd tae Coloan t' cross soords in debate wi' Tammas Aquinas, at that time ane o' the maist learned men in Yourup'. It was th' auld diskusshun — auld an' aye nyou — Faith versus Reason; Tam was rationalistick, Scotus skeptickal. Maist o's nooadays are rationalists, full rationalists aw micht say, but we've little or nae faith an' the quartermaisters get the raisins.

The majistrawts an' Toon Cooncil o' Coloan, dootless i' their chauns o'offis, gae Scotus a verra herty an' kordial resepshun, tho there's nae wird o' a "free an' aisy" i' the "Jermawnia" or a bankwit i' the Dom Hof hottel. Anither bit jobbie the geeftit Scotchman had in han' was the foondawshun o' a universaity for Coloan, but as that institooshan wasna foondit appawrently till auchty 'eer efter, aw presoom the maisens were on strick, or the suddint an' unexpeckit demyse o' Scotus pit a stoap t' the projeck.

He deid o' hemorrage i' the brain on the auchth day o' Novem'er 1308, three days afore the Mairtamas term — a wyse kin' o' a time t' dee — an' sax 'eer earlier nor the Battel o' Bannockburn. Little, aw's warran', did he think 'at sax hunner 'eer efter, his beerial-place wid be veesitit b'

Yours respeckfully

ARMY MULE PREFERS TEA TENT.

75th BRIGADE, R.F.A. SPORTS MEETING AT CROSS KONIGSDORF.

The 75th Brigade, R.F.A. Sports were held at Marianhof Farm, Gros Konigsdorf on Saturday under ideal weather conditions. The Band of the 9th Battalion D.L.I. was present with the kind permission of Lieut-Colonel J. W. Jeffreys, D.S.O.

The mule skurry caused some mirth, one animal seeming to prefer the attractions of the Church Army tea tent to the course, or it might have been the driver's preference.

The C.R.A., Brigadier-General J. S. Ollivant C.M.G., D.S.O., kindly distributed the prizes at the conclusion of the Sports. He remarked on the large number of wins for "C" Battery and hoped that it would act as an incentive to the other Batteries to get square at the next meeting. The only thing he did not quite like, was the way the winning Mounted Wrestling team pulled the losing team of their horses by the hair but perhaps it was the fault of that team for having their hair so long.

After the prizes were distributed, the Brigade Commander, Lieut-Colonel S.W.L. Ashwanden D.S.O., addressed the men, and the meeting closed after cheers were given for the C.R.A., the Brigade Commander, and the President and Secretary of the Sports Committee, Major D.E. Jones M.C. and Lieut B.H.B. Stockton M.C.

THE "ROBIN HOODS"

9th CORPS CONCERT PARTY AT MUNSTEREIFEL.

A large and thoroughly appreciative audience greeted the "Robin Hoods," the 9th Corps Concert Party, on their appearance at the Girl's School, Munstereifel on Monday evening. The party proved exceedingly interesting and entertaining both in serious work and in lighter vein, and their efforts were rewarded by continuous rounds of applause. The ovation of the evening was given to Aubrey Ford, the conductor of the orchestra, who, in his violin solo, "Hijri Kadi," displayed excellent technique and very fine tone, while as an encore he rendered in fascinating style Dvorak's "Humoresque."

Others well worthy of mention among the party were Corpl. Cannon, a comedian of no mean ability who "pulled the house in" with his "local vicar" stunt, Corpls. Davis and Daunt the female impersonators, and the wearers of some really gorgeous Paris creations, Pte. Leonard, the clever juvenile lead, Sergt. Lee and Cpl. Seville, both the possessors of good baritone voices, and L./Cpl. Anderson, the hard working pianist.

"Ragging Thro' The Rye."

Two of the most successful items on the programme were Cpl. Hannon's rendering of Billy Merson's, famous "Signora", and the duet "Ragging Thro The Rye", by Cpl. Davis and Pte. Leonnard.

Shortly the "Robin Hoods" are producing a revue "The Pearl Chase" and considering the extensive amount of "props" they possess, and that Capt. J. B S. Payne is producing the revue, it is more than possible that the party will surpass all other revues yet produced in Rhineland. Certainly Capt Payne is to be congratulated on having got together a show containing so many legitimate members of the variety stage.

BOXING CONTESTS.

In a series of boxing contests at the National Sporting Club on Monday night, Arthur Bishop Caerphilly beat Alf Mansfield, Aldgate, on points in a fifteen rounds contest, and Jack Doyle, Salford, beat Billy Eynon, Merthyr, on points also in a fifteen rounds bout. Both contests were for 200.

Roland Todd, Marylebone, was disqualified in the thirteenth round in a bout with Eddie Feathers of Haslingden.

Arthur Wright, Birmingham, contested fifteen rounds with Staff Sergeant Zimmer, the former winning on points. The two latter contests were at the Ring.

51st SOUTH WALES BORDERERS' TUG-OF-WAR.

In the preliminary qualifying round in the 51st South Wales Borderers Tug-of-War held on Monday evening to decide who should pull in the final at the Sports the following afternoon, "C" Coy. beat "A" Coy. by 2 pulls to nil, and "B" Coy. beat "D" Coy. by 2 pulls to one pull. A full account of the Sports will appear in an early issue of The Cologne Post.

BERLIN BETTING — 5,000,000 MARKS

Last week's races at Grunewald near Berlin brought 220,000 marks for tickets alone, the highest figure reached since the opening of this race-course.

Totalisators have shown that the people of Berlin have risked bets amounting to 5 millions of marks.

GRAND PARADE WINS THE DERBY.

HIS FIRST RACE AS A 3-YEAR OLD.

THE FAVOURITE BEATEN.

1. GRAND PARADE
2. BUCHAN
3. PAPER MONEY.

The Derby — a Victory Derby — was run yesterday afternoon amid scenes of almost unparalleled gaiety and animation. During the past four years the great classic of the English turf was run at Newmarket when Pommern, Fifinella, Gay Crusader and Gainsborough were the winners respectively, but with the restoration of peace time conditions charming Epsom was again the venue.

The spell of beautiful weather, an abundance of money, and the existence of an Army of Unoccupation combined to render the crowd a record one. Many of those present had been more or less out of touch with racing form during the past twelve months, but ere the dawn of Derby day there were few unacquainted with most of the stable confidences so freely and generously published during the past few days. The Panther, the hero of the Two Thousand Guineas, remained the favourite among all classes of race-goers, but was destined not to figure among the first three.

Thirteen horses ran.

THE WINNER.

Grand Parade (bl. c. by Orby—Grand Geraldine). Owner, Lord Glanely. Trained by Barling at Newmarket. Won five of six races as a two-year-old. Not run this season. Colours black, red, white and blue belt. Last betting: 100 to 8.

A WELSH OWNER.

It is not often one hears of Wales in connection with flat racing. No Jockey Club fixture is held in the Principality, and there is not a training quarter of note there. Few Welsh sportsmen figure in the list of owners, the most prominent being Lord Glanely, who ran Grand Parade and Dominion. Whereas Dominion has been seen in several events this season, Grand Parade was having his first race as a 3-year-old. He was credited with being a much better colt than the Newmarket Stakes winner, and his 2-year-old form was good enough to justify Mr. Weatherby placing him second to The Panther in the Free Handicap, only 2lb. separating the pair.

CRICKET MATCHES.

"D" SIEGE PARK (64), V. 310 BDE. R.F.A. (33).

At Meyerhof Farm, Duren, on Sunday. The Siege Park batted first, but a poor start was made against the bowling of Carter and Cox, 6 wickets being down for 29 runs. Duxbury, Williams, and Mumford, however, retrieved the position, and the innings closed for 64. The R.F.A. Bde. batting collapsed before the bowling of Mumford and Lee, none of their batsmen reaching double figures, and were all dismissed for 33 runs, leaving the Siege Park winners of a pleasant game by 31 runs.

For 310 Brigade R.F.A. Carter took 4 wickets for 17 runs, and Gill took 3 wickets for 9 runs.

For "D" S.P., Sergt. Mumford took 4 wickets for 8 runs, and Pte. Lee took 4 wickets for 15 runs.

No 2 SECTION (134) v. No 3 SECTION. MIDLAND D.A.C. (57).

On the former's ground on Sunday afternoon; the home team batting first, recovered after a disastrous start, Jones contributing 42 in Jessopian style, and Lieut Rich with 58 (not out) helped the score considerably—to 134; the visitors opened well but apart from Haigh, who with some lively cricket made 24, they did not last so long, and finished up with a total of 57.

53rd Welsh Regt. (62) v. 51st Bedfords (129 for 9); at Hennef on Saturday; after quite an interesting game the 51st Bedfords won by 67 runs and 1 wicket after being 7 wickets down for 34 runs, but a fine stand by Sergt. Carter and Sergt. Elliot pulled the game out of the fire by a bright display of batting in which they scored 29 and 43 respectively. Capt. Price was top scorer for the "Welsh" with 28 runs.

THE TAUNTON TIE.

OFFICIAL STATEMENT BY THE M.C.C.

The following official statement was issued last evening at Lord's. The Committee of the M.C.C. have not been appealed to as regards the decision of the umpires in this case, but recognising the public interest taken in it they have ascertained the actual facts from the respective captains and the umpires, which are that:

"The umpires had every reason to believe that Sussex would bat only ten men, having been told so by the tenth Sussex batsman when he came in, and, so Street reports, by the Sussex captain. On the ninth wicket falling Street removed the bails, but on some intimation from the pavilion that Mr. Heygate, who had been, owing to rheumatism, unable to field, was coming in, the Sussex captain asked the Somerset captain if he had any objection. Some discussion took place among the Somerset eleven whether Mr. Heygate should be allowed to bat, with the result that the Somerset captain left it to the umpires to decide what should be done. Meantime several minutes more than the legal two minutes had elapsed, and the umpires, taking all these facts into consideration, decided to terminate the match."

The Committee agree with the decision.

RHINELAND "JOCKEY CLUB."

SUB-COMMITTEE TO CONTROL RACING IN OCCUPIED AREA.

Horse racing in the British occupied area has now its own governing body in the form of a Sub-Committee, whose powers will be similar to those of the Jockey Club and the National Hunt Committee in England.

Thus no race meeting will be held without the sanction of the committee, whose permission to hold race meetings will only be accorded subject to the course being passed as suitable by an officer appointed by them.

In the preliminary rules that have been drawn up, it is laid down that:

(a) All horses, other than those running in races confined to "other ranks," will be registered with the Racing Sub-Committee prior to running.

(b) The owner will, in order to secure registration, forward to the Sub-Committee a statement giving the name, age, sex, colour, and description of the horse he wishes to register with particulars (if any) of the horse's previous running under any rules of racing or in races in the B.E.F. This statement will include the owner's name, initials, rank, and unit, will be signed by him, and be countersigned by an officer not below the rank of Brigadier-General.

(c) A fee of five marks will be forwarded with the application for each horse for which registration is desired.

(d) Registered horses will not be permitted to compete in races confined to "other ranks."

MARRIED v. SINGLE.

The Cavalry Division H.Qrs. had a very interesting game fixed up under the above heading and it was decided on Tuesday. The single "Stakes" batted first but only made 35 against the bowling of Sergt. Keevil and Spr. Evans, the former taking 4 for 16 and the latter 4 for 15. The married brigade started well, Lieut. C.R. Jenning and Spr. Dearnley making 24 before the latter was well caught by Bennett. The final score was 64, giving the seniors a victory of 29 runs. Cpl. Adams took 6 for 18. To say the least of it, the losers were greatly surprised as they were so sure of defeating the old 'uns.

BONN AMUSEMENTS.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—I agree heartily with the suggestion made by Staff Sergeant who cites the fact of how appreciated would be an open-air bar for the boys, and a glass of English ale to dispense with the invariably horrible "dope" bought in cafés in Bonn and its locality. To the "O.R." after his day's work nothing would be, could be, more appreciable.

Another point often mentioned here, the paucity of amusement, generally, in the place for troops in the near neighbourhood and in the town itself, as compared with other places and numbers of troops. Are we ever to be favoured with a visit here from such concert parties as "The Tabs," "Lena Ashwell Concert Party," the "British Rhine Army Dramatic Co.," for a protracted period, to give all, or as many as can a chance! At present we have, to my knowledge, a Corps Cinema, and we have to thank Captain Godfrey and his "Pedlers," "The Red Patches," "The Prongs," for the good cheer they have hitherto given us — in the two latter cases for short periods only — too short in the opinion of many. Can we appeal to you to assist us, and if room in your paper can be found I would suggest, if I may, that the views of others be asked to assist those who cannot always be on the spot but who would, I feel sure, assist to help provide a little more amusement here than is at present available.

L.W.M.

THE NEW ERA.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.— In partial agreement with your correspondent on the above subject, I would like to add the following:—

The New Era must bring with it the New Man. The New Man is born not of flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God. It is equally true that the Golden Age, which wise men can discern on the horizon, is coming not through men's efforts, but by God's will. We can neither hasten nor delay it by so much as an hour. The Law of Love, and a Rule of Righteousness is the Divinely-ordered solution to the troubles of all time, and it is greatly to our advantage to fall into line with its principles now. All other reforms and panaceas are half measures, alleviating distress here and there; causing unrest to slumber for a time, but only to break out with increased violence later on.

Whether we are wise, or whether we are foolish, the New Era rolls on just the same, but the foolish will suffer most, because the time comes when they must either obey its Law of Love, or fall, and it is hard to obey a law which is in direct conflict with the customs of centuries.

FOR THE SAKE OF SPORT.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—I read with interest in your paper the other day that Lieut. Hayes is now Champion Wrestler of the Army of the Rhine.

It gives me great pleasure to hear that there is still interest in this old-time sport, and may I suggest a match between Lieut. Hayes and myself to still further this interest.

I have not wrestled since the Olympic Games in 1908 and am therefore a veteran, but for sport's sake I shall be delighted to wrestle Lieut. Hayes after a little training.

Will you kindly submit my proposal to him.

SOLDIERS AND THE HOUSING PROBLEM.

DISCUSSION BY MEN OF THE LONDON D.A.C.

An interesting debate on the Housing Problem took place at Westhoven on Thursday amongst the men of the London D.A.C. Attendance was voluntary, but there was quite a high percentage of the men present. The discussion was opened by an address by Lt.-Col. Wheatley, the Commanding Officer, who reminded the men that apart from any present interest in the subject, it was of great prospective importance to the young soldiers of the Rhine Army by virtue of the fact that in a few short years, most of them will be contemplating matrimony, and that if no public effort to improve housing conditions were made large numbers of them would be without hope of getting the right type of house to live in, which, as the Colonel jocularly pointed out is only secondary in importance to the right type of girl. He went on to describe the condition of housing before the war, especially with regard to overcrowding and unfit dwellings, and explained that owing to the cessation of building work during the war the problem had become accentuated. He concluded by explaining the method and intention of the Government proposals.

A large number of the men took up the discussion, and one of the first questions raised was that of the rent. One soldier suggested that the houses should be let at five shillings per week, as he anticipated wages falling back to their pre-war level, but it was generally agreed that with the present price of materials it was impossible to hope for such a low figure. When the questions of materials was raised another man found it hard to understand the delay in brick-making at the present, for whilst on the one hand we constantly hear of employers short of labour, he knew of men at Southend-on-Sea being sent by the Labour Exchanges to brick-works, only to find that employers were not yet ready to start them. There was a strong and unanimous feeling that the new houses should all have bathrooms and wash houses, and if possible be lit by electricity. No enthusiasm was shown for a proposal in favour of central heating, the men displaying the good old English prejudice in favour of an open fireplace. Several men expressed the hope that as far as possible, a decent sized back-garden might be arranged. Many other matters were discussed and the liveliest interest was maintained to the end.

THIRTY-SIX CHILDREN.

WONDERFUL ARMY RECORD.

What is probably the unique record of the war stands to the credit, in more than one respect, of a French family. When war broke out, M. Vanhee, a French cultivator at Reninghe, near Ypres, had thirty-six children twenty-two sons and fourteen daughters. Twenty of the sons fought on all fronts, and thirteen were killed; three were discharged on account of their serious wounds; one went through the operation of trepanning; another returned blind and deaf; a third had both legs amputated; and a fourth, who, when war broke out, was a valet de chambre of Pope Pius, was four times wounded. In 1917 the widow of one of the sons was killed by a German shell at Dunkirk. The father of this family and one of his daughters met a tragic end. In October 1918, they went to Lille to take part in the centenary celebrations of a relative. Met on their return by a German patrol, they were shot.

Another warning against the danger of keeping live shells and fuses as war trophies has been issued by the Home Office.

BOY SCOUTS NEW NOISE RECORD.

American boy scouts, to the number of 8,000, gave a hearty greeting in New York recently to Sir Robert Baden-Powell, and in identally established what the New York Sun describes as "a new record for concentrated, sustained, uninterrupted noise at a given time and place." Madison square Garden was the scene of this ovation Mr. William McAdoo, former Secretary of the Treasury, paid a tribute to the energetic work done by the scouts in assisting the war loan campaigns. "They insisted," he said, "on selling me the very bonds I was trying to sell myself, and wouldn't be denied by anything less than all I had in my pockets."

What is described as "super-pandemonium" broke out when Sir R. Baden-Powell rose to address the gathering. When Sir Robert could make himself heard he told the boys of his pleasure in accepting their message of greeting for the British Scouts, but added that he did not approve of the use of the word cousins. "We are not cousins," he said, "but brothers, and I shall take that message home—that you look upon hem as brothers: brothers in deed, — brothers in action."

DETECTIVE'S EFFECTIVE DISGUISE.

A constable at Clerkenwell Police Court, who arrested a betting man, told the Bench he succeeded in watching the man by hanging about the street on a pair of crutches with one foot in bandages. At the right moment he threw down the crutches and arrested the man. The latter was fined £20.

ARTISTS' RIFLES RECORD.

The Bishop of London, preaching at the memorial service in St. Pancras Church, Euston-road, N.W., for the Artists' Rifles (28th London Regiment), exhibited in the pulpit an officer's stick given to him by the Artists when he visited them in France on Good Friday, 1915.

He said the stick would always be one of his most treasured possessions, as many of the men who gave it to him had since laid down their lives. For that reason he would have allowed no one except himself to take the service.

The Artists' Rifles were sent to France in October 1914. They then numbered under 700, but over 14,000 recruits had since joined and nearly 10,000 had been gazetted to commissions The were 5,642 casualties, 1,745 being fatal. Eight Artists won the V.C. and 625 the Military Cross.

VARIETY OF LORRY JUMPING.

Corporal Gerald Robert Andrew Scott, 21, and Harry George Stone were charged at Bow-street with stealing a Crossley motor car, value £800, the property of the Air Ministry.

Scott told the magistrate that he saw the car left unattended, and he, with Stone, decided to drive in it to Wales to visit some relatives.

They were committed for trial.

RUSH FOR MIXED BATHING.

Mixed bathing in the ornamental lake in Cranbrook Park, Ilford, was yesterday morning allowed for the first time. Nearly 300 bathers were welcomed by Sir Peter Griggs, M.P. for Ilford. The 60 women exceeded the number estimated and over-flowed the accommodation provided in the boat-house.

GERMAN FEMALE SPY SHOT.

The story of a woman being denounced as a spy was told on Saturday by Capt. W. H. Hatcher, master of the Cunard steamer Phrygia, which has just returned to Liverpool after transporting nearly 400 Russian and Greek refugees from the Crimea to Constantinople.

"Among the guests at a dinner in a British warship in Yalta Harbour," he said, "was a fascinating woman about 25 years old, who in the middle of the meal was denounced as a spy by a member of the secret police, a Cossack Royalist known as the 'White Devil.' He wanted to shoot her there and then, but eventually she was taken ashore.

"When arrested she was quite calm, and exclaimed: 'I know my penalty. I suppose I am to be shot.' The 'White Devil' said the woman had caused 7,000 officers to be shot by denouncing them to the Bolsheviks."

PROPELLER FOR RAILWAY TRUCK.

A trial trip has been made from Grunewald, Berlin, to Beelitz with a vehicle consisting of an ordinary railway carriage driven by a motor and air propeller.

Fourteen Germans, including Ministers and railway experts, took part in the trial. The inventor maintained that the apparatus was capable of driving an ordinary goods truck at ordinary speed and thought that a large number of parts of Army planes now being scrapped might thus be profitably turned to account.

THE REAL "DOINGS."

"How did you manage to get drunk?" asked the magistrate at Thames Police Court on Saturday of a man charged with that offence. "Oh," was the reply, "I got hold of a drop of the right stuff."

The Magistrate: Where did you get it? We should all like to know (Laughter).

Defendant: Oh, at a local pub.

The Magistrate: It is the best advertisement the house has ever had (Laughter).

Answers to Correspondents.

[The flow of correspondence, since the Cologne Post was instituted, has been enormous, and the Editor would like to point out that only a certain number of the innumerable questions can be answered in each issue. Should any inquirer find that his question has not yet been answered, he can have the assurance that it will receive attention in due course, and the answer will appear accordingly. Many questions have been received which could be answered much easier by the Adjutant of the unit concerned, and all such cases which affect the unit commander must be taken to him and not sent here. — Ed.]

BRITISH EMPIRE LEAVE CLUB.

A most successful entertainment was given by "The Lyrics" Concert Party last night "D" Company of the 20th Bn K.R.R.C.), by kind permission of Major W.G. Smith, D.S.O., M.C.

Every seat in the large hall and gallery was filled, and space would not allow for many who tried to get in.

L/Cpl. Henley's Song "Shurr Up" was much appreciated, as also were the several songs given by Rfn. Green.

L/Cpl. Miller made a most excellent and charming girl and among other numbers his duet with L/Cpl. Henley was received with much applause.

Throughout the performance the lighting effect was a striking feature, especially in the storm scene.

The performance came to an end with a most amusing item, "Four German Prisoners" sung by Capt. Gray, Lt. Burgess, L/Cpl. Henley and Rfn. Holden, which caused great amusement.

The first of the dancing classes held in the Theatre yesterday was a huge success, and Corporal Heather proved a most efficient teacher.

HOW HE KEPT FIT.

The Wandsworth Coroner (Mr. Danford Thomas) asserted, in the course of a case that during the war he was often 16 hours in the trenches without any sleep and felt as fit at the end of them as at the beginning.

COSSACK VENGEANCE ON RED ARMY.

BOLSHEVIST SACRILEGE.

GERMAN INTRIGUES IN PERSIA.

BRITISH AMBASSADOR TO TURKEY.

GERMAN ACTIVITIES IN PERSIA.

BOLSHEVIST DEFEAT.

Last night the War Office issued the following:

The Jangalis are a tribe in the province of Gilan, in North-West Persia, and inhabit the thickly-wooded country near the main road between Kazvin and Enzeli. Their forces, during the early phases of the war, had been trained by German officers, and until August, 1918, their attitude towards us was hostile. Then, however, abandoning all hopes of receiving the long promised support of German and Turkish troops, they sought to ingratiate themselves with us, and an agreement was made with them whereby it was hoped to secure the safety of our important line of communication between Kazvin and the Caspian. Under the terms of this agreement the Jangalis undertook not to send parties to the Kazvin-Enzeli road nor to its vicinity. The relations between the British military authorities and the Jangalis continued friendly, but Kuchi Khan, the leader of the Jangalis, adopted an increasingly hostile attitude towards the Persian Government taking over the control of Government departments such as telegraphs.

Events proved at this time that Kuchi Khan aimed at making the Gilan province independent of Persia, and that he was working in collusion with the Bolsheviks in Baku and the Caucasus. Moreover, he had broken the terms of our agreement with him by holding up the traffic on the Kazvin-Enzeli road. In December the offer of most reasonable terms to Kuchi Khan by the Persian Government was refused, and the Persians asked for our co-operation in dealing with him. In view of our assurances to Persia, it was decided to assist her, this assistance being limited to co-operating with their troops to the extent of two sections of an Indian mountain battery with an adequate infantry escort and aeroplanes, whilst our armoured cars and the garrisons of our posts kept open the Kazvin-Enzeli road. Colonel Storreselsky, Commandant of the Persian Cossack Division, was in command, and should Kuchi Khan not surrender on their being called upon to do so, the plan of operations was for columns to advance from Ardabil in the north, Resht in the east, and Zinjam in the south, against the Jangali strongholds of Kusha and Fumen.

Kuchi Khan refused to surrender, and the columns, moving forward early in April, captured Fumen on the 14th, and Kuchi Khan fled. The Jangalis were routed, and one German and two Bolshevik officers taken prisoners. Further operations consisted in hunting down fugitives, a ship with two sections of Gurkhas on board preventing their escape by sea. Early in May Kuchi Khan had been driven out, the province of Gilan restored to the authority of the Persian Government, and the object of the operations had been fully accomplished.

BRITISH AMBASSADOR FOR TURKEY.

PROJECTED MILITARY COUP IN BERLIN.

According to a statement made at a public sitting of the Communal Workers Council in Berlin, the Military have prepared a counter revolutionary coup which was to have been carried out yesterday.

Though this statement must be viewed with scepticism, evidence of inspired action against the Government can be discerned in the incessant attacks made upon it by the Conservative press. —Wireless.

GERMAN PRISONERS ON STRIKE.

A strike of German prisoners was reported at a meeting of the Worcestershire War Agricultural Executive on Saturday. It was stated that twelve refused to go to work on the farms earlier than usual. When they were confined to cells all the prisoners in the camp struck work in sympathy.

Mr. J. Davies: Cannot steps be taken to make them work?

Mr. T. L. Walker: It is not right that German prisoners should be our masters and dictate their hours of work. The military should take stronger measures to enforce discipline.

COSSACK VENGEANCE ON RED ARMY.

ANTI-BOLSHEVIST RISING.

Ekaterinodar, 20th May. — Two of Deniken's main forces are advancing on Tsaritzin, the first along the Ekaterinodar-Tsaritzin railway. The second started from the South-east of the Manitch Lake system and is pushing due North along the Tsaritzin high road. The Bolshevist forces are caught in the arms of the pincers thus formed. About half the distance to Tsaritzin has been covered.

On the Donetz front the Bolshevists have occupied Lugansk. An aviator who visited several centres of the anti-Bolshevist rising on the upper Don recounts that Bolshevists and Communists appointed almost all Jews as commissaries and members of local Soviets. These declared that all Cossacks not fighting with the Reds would be exterminated.

On their beginning to carry out this threat the Cossacks seized any sort of weapons and fell on the Red garrison at Migulinsky. Over one thousand Communists were killed and proper arms were secured by the Cossacks, who next went to the stations at Kazanskaya and Veshinskay, where they dealt summarily with the Communists. Their successes quickly set the whole region of the upper Don ablaze and already over five thousand prisoners have been taken. The cossacks bitterly repent their momentary yielding to the Bolshevists and are resolved upon vengeance. —Reuter.

COMMUNION CLOTHS AS PETTICOATS.

Ekaterinodar, 21st May.—The frequent acts of sacrilege and the blasphemies of the Bolshevists have been a powerful contributory cause to the religious revival in Kuban territory. Amongst the sacrilegious offences committed by the Bolshevists in the diocese of Stavropol were the use of communion cloths, which were converted into petticoats by Bolshevist women.—Reuter.

AFGHANISTAN SITUATION IMPROVING.

AMIR'S GLARING UNTRUTHS.

Reuter learns that the position in Afghanistan from a military point of view has been much relieved both in the Tochi and Kurram Valleys. What developments are likely to arise as a result of the Amir's latest steps cannot be foreshadowed until further and more definite information is available of the Afghan attitude.

In the meantime it is well to point out that the statements and suggestions made by the Amir, both in his letter to the Viceroy and his orders to his generals, contain glaring inaccuracies. The suggestion that the Afghans were obliged to take defensive measures as a result of any act of the British is, of course, quite untrue. There was no question of a British move, the fact being that Afghan troops came over the border in a dozen places, and were mobilizing against our frontier as rapidly as possible, when they had received no provocation whatever.

Simla, 2nd June. — Reinforcements moving to Thal drove the enemy off the hills to the southward. Aeroplanes co-operated with the infantry and bombed and machine-gunned the enemy. We successfully attacked and dispersed a body of men in the vicinity of Miranshah and destroyed four towers. — Reuter.

ARCHANGEL COMMUNIQUÉ.

The War Office last night issued the subjoined communique:

The following news has been received from Archangel: On the night of May 30 a Russian scout company surrounded a detachment of Bolsheviks south of Malo Beresnik (on the Vaga River), and captured forty-seven prisoners and two machine-guns. On the Vaga one of our aeroplanes, dropping bombs, obtained a direct hit on an enemy barge.

NORTH RUSSIA MEDAL.

Asked whether a special medal will be awarded for the Russian expeditions which have been in progress since the armistice, Mr. Churchill said that as the operations are still continuing it is impossible to estimate their scope. It is therefore difficult to state whether a special medal will be required. He added that a clasp will certainly be awarded to men who have undergone hardships in North Russia.

HEADSTONES ON WAR GRAVES.

The War Graves Committee has arranged for inscriptions chosen by the next of kin to be inscribed at a cost of 3½d per letter on monuments marking the graves of soldiers buried in France and Flanders.

The rumour that British troops in Transcaucasia are to be replaced by Italians has caused general dismay locally. — Reuter.

ASQUITH REPLIES TO LORD FRENCH.

KITCHENER AND SHELLS.

In order that Mr. Asquith should have the opportunity of dealing with the statements made by Field Marshal French in his book "1914", a luncheon was given at the Connaught Rooms on Tuesday by Mr. Oswald Partington, formerly Chief Liberal whip.

Mr. Asquith, in the course of his speech, said he was going to show that not only had the allegations of deliberate apathy, calculated and callous neglect, during the first year of the war on the part of the Government in the provision of an adequate supply of artillery and ammunition for the armies in the field, no foundation in fact, but that no one ought to know better that it had no foundation, than Lord French himself.

Referring to Lord French's account of the visit paid to him in Paris by Lord Kitchener, Mr. Asquith said: "The Government received—I received—a message from Lord French as to his contemplated movements, which I communicated to my colleagues, and with regard to which it is no exaggeration to say that it filled the whole Cabinet with consternation. There are several of my colleagues here who sat in that Cabinet, and they will bear me out that it filled us with consternation. And why? Because the movement which it indicated would, in our judgment, have amounted in effect to leaving our Allies in the lurch in the moment of their extreme need, and the consternation which we felt was shared and expressed to us in moving terms by the head of the French Government. It was in these circumstances that Lord Kitchener, at the unanimous request of his colleagues, undertook his mission to France—a mission which successfully achieved our common object, and which, in my judgment, saved our cause from an indelible reproach."

On the subject of shells Mr. Asquith said: "Lord French's ridiculous suggestion that his action in this matter had something to do with his subsequent removal from the command is hardly worthy of serious notice," continued Mr. Asquith. "He remained in full command for more than six months, and though I heard strange rumours, which appear to have had more foundation in fact than I then believed, I never took the pains to inquire what part he had played, or whether he had played any part, in the newspaper campaign which he now claims to have inspired. When his retirement came, and I take myself the full and sole responsibility for it, it was for reasons that had no more to do with the supply of shells than with the next eclipse of the moon."

PREMIER AND LORD FRENCH.

Mr. Lloyd George having had his attention called to a statement that it was he who insisted on the recall of Lord French from the supreme command in France, said this statement was a pure invention.

RELAXATION OF LIQUOR RESTRICTIONS.

FREE CHURCH PROTEST.

A deputation from the National Council of Free Churches which included Dr. Meyer and Dr. Scott Lidgett, attended the Central Liquor Control Board yesterday. The object of their visit was to protest against the recent relaxation of the Board's restrictions, which, they stated, had rendered great services to the health and efficiency of the country.

The deputation urged that the health of the children had greatly improved, drinking among women had greatly decreased and home conditions generally showed marked improvement. A return to pre-war conditions in the drink traffic, they said, would be deplorable after the good that had been done by wartime regulations and they urged that such step should not be taken.

Lord D'Abernon told the deputation that the Central Liquor Control Board had never been in favour of restricting the beer supply.

NO-TREATING ORDER REVOKED.

The Central Control Board gave notice in last night's "London Gazette" that the article of the Liquor Control Regulations entitled "Treating prohibited" is revoked.

The "No-Treating Order" was, says an official statement, principally aimed at the suppression of two practices which were causing grave trouble and loss of naval, military, and industrial efficiency during the early months of the war, namely, group—treating, or the practice of each person in a group taking his turn to stand drinks all round, and the practice of the indiscriminate treating of members of the Forces, particularly when home on leave or travelling. Owing to the operation of the order, these practices have by now been so long in abeyance that the good sense of the community should suffice to prevent their revival, with the wasteful and excessive drinking to which they lead. The Central Control Board have, therefore, come to the conclusion that the maintenance of the Order, with the attendant minor inconveniences which are involved by a prohibition of treating, and which have been generally accepted by the public during the emergency period of the last four years, is now no longer required in the national interest.

LONDON EDUCATION RATE DOUBLED.

It was stated at the last meeting of the London County Council that the total cost of education in London had risen within the past two years by over two million pounds, or thirty per cent. The expenditure had been doubled since 1904 and the Chairman of the Education Committee thought it certain to be doubled again within the next fifteen years.

CIVIL SALUTES TO BRITISH OFFICERS.

COLONEL LABOURITE'S ANXIETY.

Colonel Wedgwood (Ind. Newcastle-under-Lyne) asked the Secretary of State for War whether Germans in the occupied territories had to take off their hats and step off the side walk on meeting British officers, and whether this practice was likely to be continued on the signature of peace.

Mr. Churchill said he understood that when Germans spoke to British officers they were required to take off their hats. (Hear, hear.) As regarded the last part of the question, he saw no reason to suppose that the practice would be discontinued on the signing of peace. This was one of the military regulations appropriate to the period of occupation. These regulations were much less severe than those which the Germans were accustomed to impose in territory occupied by them.

Colonel Wedgwood: Will the right hon. gentleman answer my question? Are the Germans forced to take off their hats when they pass British officers in the streets? Is he aware that this practice is very unpopular among British officers—(laughter)—and is he aware that this is not imposed where the American army is in occupation?

Lieut.-Colonel Sir J. Norton-Griffiths (U., Wandsworth, Central): Before he answers that question, is it not a fact that always before the war it was the custom all over Germany for civilians to step off the sidewalks when they met an officer?

Colonel C. Lowther (C.U., Lonsdale): In view of the supreme importance attached to the question by Colonel Wedgwood, will the right hon. gentleman give the House an assurance that no order will be issued altering this state of things and compelling British officers to go off the sidewalk and to salute the German people? (Laughter.)

Mr Churchill: I am sure it is very foreign to the British nation to take harsh advantage of their position, but it is considered that an army of occupation in an enemy country is entitled to certain defin te acts of submission and respect from the inhabitants. We believe our regulations in that respect will bear comparison with any regulations of any other Great Power. I am certainly not prepared to say that our Army ought to be deprived of this recognition. (Cheers).

Colonel Wedgwood: If the American army does not find it necessary—(Cries of "Oh.")

The hon. member was unable to proceed further.

Mr. Churchill: I am quite content to be guided by the opinion of the officers responsible for the conduct of the British Army. I am quite certain they are not likely to err on the side of undue severity. (Hear, hear.)

EX-ARMY PAY CLERK ON TRIAL.

STOLEN PAY DRAFTS.

At Tower Bridge Police Court, Cecil Hall, aged 35 described as an accountant of 155, Trinity-road, Wandsworth-common, was again remanded in custody on a charge of stealing fifty demobilization postal drafts of the negotiable value of £700 from the huts at Buckland, Dover, between the 24th January and 2nd February.

Mr. Percival Clarke, who appeared for the Director of Public Prosecutions, said that 50,000 demobilization postal drafts were sent by the Controller of the General Post Office to Mr. Parfrey, the officer in charge of the huts, and they were put in a place of security. Each draft could be made out for any sum up to £14, and later 5,000 were discovered to have been stolen. During the time when the robbery was committed the prisoner was employed in the Army Pay Office at the huts under Mr. Parfrey, and it was astounding that he should have been engaged in such a position of trust; certainly the authorities did not know as much as the prosecution did about him.

Evidence would be given that he had exceptional opportunities of obtaining, altering, and stamping drafts, because he was apparently left alone at night in charge of the office in which the drafts were kept, his duty being to answer the telephone. On the 1st February a book containing fifty of the drafts was missed. The prisoner had by that time been demobilized. In April, five of the drafts from this particular book were cashed at various post-offices, four for £12 10s each, and one for £13 10s. The names of the persons to whom the money was paid were not known as those of demobilized soldiers. On May 3rd a taxi-cab driver picked up the prisoner as a passenger at Kennington Oval and drove him to Waterloo Station. The prisoner, said Mr. Clarke, left in the cab four drafts from the same book, and the cabman took them to the police.

At the conclusion of Mr. Clarke's statement formal evidence was given.

BRITISH SEAMEN REFUSE TO SAIL TO GERMANY.

The crew of the steamship Burgomeister Schroder, lately taken from the Germans, was due to leave Hull for Hamburg but the crew refused to sail. The vessel, now flying the British flag, signed on a British crew at Perth for Montreal, and at Leith loaded flour for Rotterdam, to be delivered as part of the arrangements made by the Americans for feeding the Germans. She was coaling at Hull when the crew ascertained she was to be diverted to Hamburg. Negotiations were opened up between the Sailors' and Firemen's Union and owners and the crew eventually agreed to take the steamer to Rotterdam.

WILFUL MURDER AGAINST CANADIAN SOLDIER.

A verdict of wilful murder against William Jordan, aged 30, a Canadian soldier, of Seaford Camp, was returned at an inquest at Lewes on Robert Nye, aged 62, a rag and bone collector, of Lewes, who was found dead in a shed in a chalk pit with terrible injuries to his head.

By an Army Council Instruction just issued the maximum compensation to members of the Queen Mary's Army Auxiliary Corps for loss of kit on active service is increased from £3 10s to £12.

BOMB OUTRAGES AGAINST AMERICAN POLITICIANS.

MAN'S HEAD AS CLUE.

Washington.—Late on Monday evening an internal machine exploded outside the door of Attorney General Palmer's residence. One of the men who were placing the bomb in position was killed. The house was badly damaged, but neither Mr. Palmer nor any member of his family was hurt, as they happened to be on the first floor.

Almost simultaneously similar explosions occurred at the rear of the residence of the United States District Judge Hampson at Pittsburg. There were also attempts made to blow up the home of Major Davis, at Cleveland, Ohio, and the home of Municipal Justice Hayden at Roxbury, Massachusetts.

The only fatality was that of the criminal. The officials express the opinion that the outrages denote a recrudescence of the recent bomb plot, when explosives were sent through the post to various prominent politicians and officials.—Reuter.

Washington, 3rd June. — A man's head has been discovered on a roof three hundred feet from the Attorney-General's house, where the bomb explosion occurred. This, with other clues in the possession of the authorities, is expected to lead to the apprehension of a gang of anarchist plotters whose headquarters are believed to be at Philadelphia. In the Senate, after a number of speeches denouncing the bomb outrages, Mr. Walsh, Democrat, reintroduced the Bill which failed to pass last Winter. It provides for much severer penalties for acts of violence designed to overthrow the Government. The police of Pittsburg have arrested a man named Johnson, president of a Society styling itself as the Independent Workers of the World. Johnson barricaded his house and made theatrical flourishes with a revolver before being overpowered by detectives.—Reuter.

CIVIL RE-SETTLEMENT OF OFFICERS.

JOCKEYS AND PLUMBERS.

At a meeting of the Society of Engineers at Burlington House last night Mr. A. Stewart Buckle lectured on his recent visit to France as a member of the Commission appointed by the Ministry of Labour to study the question of re-settlement of officers in civil life.

Amongst the men who had come before him, he said, were a fireman who had attained the rank of major, a plumber, and a jockey who had reached captain's rank.

Mr. J. Harvey Darston, Controller at the Ministry of Labour, explained the method adopted by the Re-settlement Commission, who investigated about thirty cases daily. They had been called the Disappointments Department, chiefly because too much had been expected of them.

The economic position of the country was such as to prevent rapid re-settlement. The situation, however, was improving, and the average number of officers placed in a week had gone up from two hundred to three hundred and seventy. The Appointments Department alone had made three hundred grants. What they wanted was officers with secondary school education, but those who had risen from the ranks to high military distinction would be helped to secure good positions when they returned to civil life.

IMPENDING SERIOUS SHORTAGE OF COAL.

The effect of shorter working hours in the mining industry was the subject of a debate in the House of Commons yesterday.

Sir Auckland Geddes stated that the coal position is very serious, the estimated output for the twelve months from July next, when the reduced hours come into force, being under 217 million tons as compared with 287 million tons in 1913.

The consumption of coal for inland purposes and bunkers in 1918 was 196 million tons, compared with 210 million tons in 1913 and the exports were 34 million tons compared with 77 million tons. In order to preserve approximately the same quantity of coal for inland consumption and bunkers from July 1919 all the present restrictions of consumption must be fully maintained and the exports must be reduced to 23 million tons annually.

The estimated deficit on the coal industry for the twelve months from July next is forty-six and a half million sterling. To meet this, the consumer must pay an increased price of 4s. 6d. a ton or the deficiency must fall on the taxpayers.

BRITISH AIRSHIP FOR ATLANTIC FLIGHT.

News that dirigible R 34 will leave England in a fortnight for America has caused the aviators at St. John's, who are assembling their machines for the trans-Atlantic flight, to hasten their preparations. It is stated that a famous General will probably be one of the crew to fly the Atlantic in the R 34. The commanding officer will be Major G. H. Scott, and the crew will probably number twenty-five.

PROGRESS OF SMALL HOLDINGS.

Mr. Fiond, Assistant Secretary to the Board of Agriculture, informed the Select Committee on Pensions yesterday that nearly four thousand acres have been acquired for ex-soldiers. The Board is negotiating for a further twenty thousand acres. Small holding colonies, where houses are being erected and men settled on the holdings, are being developed in Lincolnshire, Carnarvonshire and Nottinghamshire and at Amesbury, Wiltshire. The Board has received altogether 834 applications for settlement, of which only 111 have been rejected.

The House of Lords decided yesterday that bequests for saying masses for the dead are legal.

JOAN OF ARC.

It is not good to dwell overmuch in the dim and luring past, but there are occasions when it is fitting and wholesome for us to turn back the pages of history and read a lesson from olden times. We have a day or two ago passed a notable anniversary. In early summer of the year 1431 Joan of Arc was burned in the market-place of Rouen as a heretic, an apostate, and an idolater. Her restless courage was untowardly matched by the unheroic caution of Charles VII of France, and her impetuous sortie in succour of Compiègne failed despite the bravery of the Maid of God and her men. Captured by the Burgundians she was unransomed by the king whom she had previously led to victory and was then delivered into the hands of the English. The tribunal before which she was tried was a reverend court of pedants and clergy who in letters represented the University of Paris and in politics the dynasty of Burgundy. The trial was protracted rather than equitable, and for once the English, forsaking the fair ideals of chivalry, yielded to base passions of revenge.

But the Maid's work was done before she went to the stake. The doux pays de France had sorely needed a patriot and deliverer. Agincourt had brought her low and her pride was humbled in the dust. Henry V of England, who has seldom received his due in the annals of monarchy, was more than a successful general; he was one of the ablest strategists of the Middle Ages.

In a few years Normandy was conquered systematically without the pillage and arson that almost invariably accompanied the warfare of these times, and England's alliance with Burgundy was ominous for France. The Treaty of Troyes disinherited the Dauphin, proclaimed Henry V the heir to the kingdom of France, and arranged for the marriage of Henry and the Princess Catherine. These were the days of "La France anglaise." Soon all was changed, for the enthusiasm of Joan of Arc inspired her countrymen with new courage and bred a strong spirit of nationality that could not be denied. On th e foot-hills of the Vosges she tended sheep and sorrowfully watched the desolation of Champagne till the mystic voices spoke in her ear and called her to warriors' work. Orleans stood between the English and the dominion of southern France; and Orleans, despite the valour of Dunois, was in sore jeopardy. The "Battle of Herrings" seemed inevitably to leave the city at the mercy of Sir John Fastolf. But the Maid and the rough Armagnac soldiery who followed her raised the siege of Orleans and began the deliverance of France. Charles VII was crowned in the Cathedral of Rheims in 1429. Joan of Arc fulfilled her prophecy and her mission. Her highest hopes were deferred by a lack of heroism and ideals that will always tarnish the memory of her king and his courtiers, but slowly the English lost ground and their dream of French conquest faded away. In 1453 France was independent and united, and Calais remained the only token that her people had once bowed the knee to England.

There are few more striking events in history than the appearance of Joan of Arc in the Hundred Years' War. Her simplicity and beauty of character, her fervent and unselfish devotion, her intense patriotism redeem a tedious and barren story of strife. She triumphed by her courage, her ideals, and her faith; and she delivered the country that was dear to her. We are not greatly concerned that M. Anatole France has sought to put in the prose of rationalism an epic of poetry and faith. The Maid of God still captivates mankind for fair vision and noble aspiration. Her spirit has been abroad once more on the very fields of ancient battle. For more than four and a half years France has been in the throes of alien domination, and she has been sustained by the spirit of faith and unconquerable patriotism. Now she is scarred but triumphant, sore for her stricken soil but proud in her deliverance. Let us pay our homage to the spirit of France and of her wondrous Maid, and look forward hopefully to a new era of national prosperity which shall be free of selfishness and bitterness because it is founded on chivalry and righteousness.

THE ROMANCE OF FATIGUES!

BY THE WANDERER.

"Fatigues!" How we hate the mere sound of the word. The chief aim in life of many a British soldier is to "dodge" that pleasant (?) duty.

But let us pause awhile, let us sit down and ponder over the possibilities, yea, even the romance of fatigues. I wonder if my worthy reader ever paused to consider or to learn that fatigues have been recorded in history!

To-day I have been reading of the wonderful fatigues which the Roman soldier used to be put on in the 3rd Century. It would be a very hard thing for historians to trace the nation that "invented" fatigues.

The Roman soldiers were duly warned for fatigues in the same way that Tommy is warned to-day. He built walls and roads which are in use do-day.

As I read my history to-day, I pictured before me the little parties of Roman soldiers on fatigues on the now famous Roman roads. I seemed to see the burly red-faced sergeant in charge. The Roman Sergeant had his eagle eye on a couple of "dodgers" who did not realize their part in making Roman history.

It was a hot day, and the stones seemed to get heavier, but the road must be "well and truly laid." Had these roads not been so laid much credit would have been lost to the Roman race. Those soldiers could make roads, and they could fight their fatigues. Their works are with us to-day; many do not remember their battles. They made history and they made roads!

Go to India and what do you see? There you may travel hundred of miles along magnificent military highways which will outlive our glorious empire — all made by British and Indian soldiers — surely a magnificent fatigue, a worthy monument of their arduous work. In many a remote outpost of our empire you will find splendid swimming baths, roads and forts all built by protesting grousing but, at heart, good-natured British soldiers. So, dear young reader, the next time you are warned by your platoon sergeant for one of those dirty jobs just try looking for the cheery, useful side of your fatigue and you may be surprised at your own growing interest in it.

Another useful and amusing idea I will pass on to you. Keep a record of the variety of fatigues in which you take part. You will, at the end of a year, be amazed at the variety of jobs on which you have helped. You will find you have made roads, cut tunnels, constructed bridges, picked grass, with a fork supplied for the job, peeled potatoes, scrubbed floors etc. etc.

I could fill volumes were I to go over all the list of fatigues, but it has been a glorious experience. Surely it is fit and manly training for the University of Life where only "live" men may win scholarships!

A JOY FOR EVER.

By E. T.

Many cameras have been rested on the Suspension Bridge at Cologne to record the scenes and aspects of the Rhine during the day. Of many, by far the most impressive view has escaped notice.

Pause awhile, any fine evening, at the Deutz end of the Hängebrücke, and look across the river to the Dom. The scene is worth an idle half hour when the sunset glow is fading. There are many twilight silhouettes dear to those who have an eye to beauty. Edinburgh Castle to the Scot, the Houses of Parliament to the Londoner, the Place de la Concord to the Poilu.

But none portray in such a compact space so many monuments to the efforts and activities of that insect, man. None earn so well the name "Cosmopolitan Corner." Here gathe", eddy, and flow away many human streams; while Father Rhine slips silently past a beautiful Cathedral, a massive bridge, a large railway-station, a fine church, a sombre museum, and these backed by many lesser minarets and towers.

As the daylight fades behind the Dom, the twin spires turn to jet, and the varied outline of the picture stands clear cut against the sky. When the details of the foreground merge into the ebony blackness, points of light peep out here and there, and are reflected in the hurrying river.

The station dome lights up and soft rays of yellow light creep out from the boats moored along the riverside.

Desultory strains of music from some quayside café carry across the water. Venice? Geneva? The mind ranges abroad for its prototype.

A little later the promenade arc-lights shine out to disclose the great river's prevaling mood. To-night its waters are inky black, last night a slaty blue; to-morrow night—who can say? They will cheat you, anyway.

If familiarity has dulled your eye to the beauty of the picture, stand with your back to it and look at it under your arm. A fresh position renews the lease.

The Germans talk of culture. If but a small portion of their own created art could penetrate their stony and grasping souls, the world to-day would have been spared a vast and irreparable destruction.

FIFTY-SECOND COMPANY OF CROSSBOWMEN.

THE PARABLE OF THE HIDDEN TREASURE.

Now the habitation of the ruler was in the city of König-shov-em, and the ruler called one Erelf, the master of his chargers and of his light draught-horses, and of his pack ponies, (save two), and of his mules (not a few) and of his goat, and spoke unto him saying "Command him that watcheth the chargers that "whiskers" be brought forth and saddled for I would fain go forth, and one spoke to another saying "wonder where 'emorfto'." And he rode forth towards the going down of the sun, and his Kleenman was even as his shadow on a sunny day.

And when he had journeyed a little way he lifted up his eyes and beheld his treasure-house, wherein was stored all manner of things of food, of raiment and of engines of war, and he spoke to one Broadstreet, the keeper of his treasures, saying, "Prepare a place for more treasures I wot of," but he answered and said, "How so, my Lord, for the place is too strait even now." So the ruler passed on even to the gates of the city where stood two sentinels that did guard the entrance by day and also by night, and one spoke to them that were within saying "Guard Turn Out" and it was even as the sentinel commanded. And the ruler beheld them and he perceived one that had his safety catch forward, and the ruler was wrath lest his chief Demobber should meet death unawares on his return after sundown. And he spoke to the sentinel saying "On the morrow shalt thou again guard the city and, yea, even on the day following likewise, that thou shall see the error of thy ways." And some that were hard by laughed him to scorn saying "A-ha, A-ha."

Now they journeyed forth until they came nigh to a place where the four winds of heaven did blow on to a grinding mill and there was one apparelled like unto a rifleman but withal lacking his girdle, and his back was round even as the dome of the synagogue of St. Paul, who when he did espy the ruler, set his countenance towards a pillar on which was set a sign written in divers colours, beyond which man durst not go. And he that was called Kleenman spake to the ruler in this wise "What manner of soldier is this; knoweth he not what is written in Sect. XVIII, I.T. Shall he not be chided by the Aressem, moreover hath he none to instruct him in the way to Nekbakwaresbend?" And the ruler answered and said "He is of those that hew wood and draw water, yea, and wax fat," and the Kleenman pondered these things in his heart.

COLOGNE OPERA HOUSE.

"AIDA."

"Aida" takes us far away into the distant past, to the land of the Pharaohs, where stately fanes stood in honour of Ammon and Isis. And yet the elemental human passions, love and hate, burned in these old Egyptians' bosoms as in ours!

Tuesday's performance was a sumptuous feast of colour, picturesque scenery, artistic grouping and music. Viewed merely as a succession of impressive tableaux the performance was noteworthy. The stately palaces, the awe-inspiring temples through which priests and priestesses moved with dignity, the old Nile flowing slowly, made a striking background for a superb representation.

The audience followed with intense interest the course of Aida's love for Rhadames to thwarted by Amneris' jealousy, to its tragic close.

L'eternel feminin is naturally the pivot on which the action turns and it were difficult to be imagine more adequate renderings than those of Berta Grimm-Mittelmann as Amneris and of Mimi Werhard-Poensgen as Aida. The prolonged duel of these two for the heart of Rhadames was intensely dramatic and the duet in the second was a veritable tour-de-force of vocalisation.

Equally impressive were the male rôles and Herren Krauss (Rhadames), Lindlar (the king) Liszewsky (Amonasso) and Gless (the Chief Priest) received enthusiastic calls. The choruses gave splendid support as in the hymn "Allmächtiger Phta."

FORTHCOMING HENLEY REGATTA.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir, — I hear some ardent oarsmen are getting up an eight for the King's Cup at Henley. This is splendid, but if the eight claims to be representative of "The Army of the Rhine" I have some misgivings. I hope "Dame Rumour" is in this case "a lying jade" because she informs me that the eight is only in the very elementary stages of training, both individually and as a crew.

Now, sir, we all have an interest in this venture if it is to represent us, and we naturally are anxious not to make a poor show against the Mother Country and the Dominions. The question is, do we realise what we are up against? The standard in the King's Cup is likely to be as high as in the grand Challenge Cup. Australia has been training on the Thames for three months New Zealand's crew has magnificent physique, described by The Times as "almost perfect," and the English crew is composed almost entirely of Old Blues.

Henley is due in a month's time, and to put soft untrained men into a grand challenge crew four weeks before the race, must be almost unprecedented. Finally, if this crew is to be representative, is it the best crew obtainable from the Army of the Rhine? Nothing but the best is good enough. I write for information. I do not know the name of a single member of the crew, but I should like someone qualified to judge to dispel the misgivings inspired by Dame Rumour.

THE NATIONAL ANTHEM.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir, — May I be permitted to draw the attention of your readers to a tendency which strikes me as being frought with evil consequences. At a recent Church parade service a Padre took it into his head to deliver a preliminary comment upon what he conceives to be the principles voiced in the British National Anthem. He tells the men not to be afraid to sing "God save the King" because when we sing it we sing it for our fathers and mothers and sisters and brothers and hearths and homes and country, which are merely all represented by one man — the King, — "who has no more share in the Government than my little finger!"

I take exception to this innovation, on principle. I do not dispute that His Majesty does stand for all those ideals, but I protest very strongly against the departure involved in finding it necessary to make an apology for the National Anthem in order to induce people to sing it. The logical conclusion to the Padre's exhortation is that a man who adheres to Republican principles may sing our National Anthem just as conscientiously as anybody else.

It is a case of trying to make out that our National Anthem is conceived in the same spirit as the French, which is absurd. It is childish to try to prove that white is black. Our National Anthem is essentially a monarchial National Anthem; it is a hymn by means of which the Nation expresses itse ternal loyalty to oux King who never dies.

WAR SAVINGS ASSOCIATIONS.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir, — I have been informed by an officer who is working a War Savings Association in his battalion that investments suddenly ceased and that he found the cause was a paragraph which had appeared in a paper in England to the effect that owing to the approaching issue of a new loan, the issue of War Bonds had been stopped. The men thought this applied to War Saving Certificates and that they would lose their money if they put any more in.

As War Savings Associations are rapidly being formed in Units of the Rhine Army, I shall be grateful if you will, through the medium of The Cologne Post notify thet fact that whatever the intention of the Government may be regarding War Bonds, the sale of War Savings Certificates will in no way be affected, in fact the Government proposes to arrange that the life of a War Savings Certificate shall be lenghtened to 10 years instead of 5. After the fifth year the interest will continue to grow or the sale of one penny per month and an additional bonus of 1/-will be paid at the end of the tenth year, so that in ten years a man can see 26/- in his investment of 15/6.

A WARNING.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.— The following incident I send as a warning to others. To-day a friend and I had the misfortune to miss our tram. So we hailed a passing motor-lorry driven by a German. The driver gave a nod to our gesticulations for a lift, we promptly jumped up behind, and caught hold of the tailboard. However, we soon let go again and found ourselves lying in the road. The reason for our undignified position in the dust will soon be understood. Along the inside edge of the tailboard had been driven about a hundred tacks, each protruding half an inch.

My pal's hands are in an awful state. I am just a little more fortunate but I shall take home to England, on the palms of my hands, some excellent records of German Kultur.

COLOGNE AMUSEMENTS.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—With regard to your article in "Sports Reflections" on Cologne Amusements, Rambler remarks that during the daytime, excursions on the river by steamer, rowing on the lake at Lindenthal, etc. provide ample recreation for energetic other ranks. Certainly they do, but what "hopes" we have of such pleasures during the daytime!

My own battalion is one which has seen two years or more service, and is now on parade from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., and again from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. So perhaps you can guess now that the grouse is about the scarcity of time; not the scarcity of variety.

SUCCESS OF "THE Q-VICS."

9th LONDON'S CONCERT PARTY AT NIEDERAUSSEM.

After a most successful first night show on Monday last "The Q-Vics" made their second appearance before an enthusiastic audience on Wednesday evening. For the combination and general excellence of their performance "The Q-Vics" are to be commended. Notwithstanding the lilliputian dimensions of the stage, and the inconveniences common to a rural concert hall, the whole thing went with a swing.

The band of the 9th London's, under Band-Sergeant Leary, rendered an overture in spirited fashion. After the opening chorus, L/Cpl. Gus. Aslett sang "Give Me The Moonlight," which called for much applause. A concerted number of topical interest, entitled "Want to go to Bye Bye," by Bobby Howes, Jock Ling, Dick Joy and Mr. Brooks was extremely good. Sgt. Dick Joy's rendering of "Moonlight" and "L'il old Home" were quite features of the performance, while Sgt. Temple was distinctly clever as a card manipulator, juggler and mimic.

A 'Kliner' Revue.

But the ovation of the evening went to Jock Ling, who, by the way, is the Ling of "Ling and Lingford." He certainly made a decided hit with "The Worse you Are," his patter being exceptionally witty.

In "Why Am I Always the Bridesmaid?" Bobby Howes and Jock Ling caused roars of laughter, Howes being exceedingly funny as the lady.

"Are you alright?" described as "A Kliner Revue in one Kline" quite tickled the audience. The frantic endeavours of the impecunious Jock and Bobby to get past the ticket collector at the station had the house in an uproar. Worthy of mention, too, was a clever burlesque of "Maryland" by Bobby Howes.

In the female role 2nd Lt. Smith was a distinct success, though the dresses, one must admit, call for variety.

Mr. King, last but not least, is to be complimented for his excellent services at the piano.

PLATOON CHAMPIONSHIP FINAL.

53rd S.W. B.'s—A COY, No 4 v. THE DRUMS.

At 6 p.m. on Saturday these teams lined up before the largest and most enthusiastic crowd seen on the Borderers ground this season. A considerable amount of midfield play marked the opening stages in which the half-backs of both teams predominated, notably Hesketh for No 4 Platoon and Bowring for the Drums. Mathurst also was a considerable source of annoyance to the platoon defence. The breather was sounded with the teams "As you were." After the restart No 4 broke away with Nixon leading the forwards and a goal resulted. This reverse livened the Drummers up and ten minutes later Mathurst, receiving the ball from Bowring, made all square with a pretty shot. Flushed with their success, Drummers played up well and Wilkinson placed them ahead with a shot close in. With 15 minutes left to play No 4 were awarded a penalty for hands. Greeslauf took the kick and shot straight at the keeper but it was too hot for him to hold and the deficit was wiped off. Drums were awarded two penalties in quick succession but Nowring failed with both, to the great chagrin of their partisans. Time was called with the score 2 all. Lieut Harlow refereed a remarkably clean game to the satisfaction of all. Considerable interest was taken in this competition and a good crowd and game are assured for the replay this week-end.

KALK KNOCK-OUT COMPETITION.

17th ROYAL FUSILIERS v. 57 SIEGE BATTERY R.G.A.

At Overath on Saturday. The gunners were rather lucky winners by the odd goal in three. The game was marred unfortunately by the unsportsmanlike attitude of some of the spectators. Referees are but human. We all make mistakes. The pity is that one cannot compel one of these so called "sportsmen" among the spectators to take the place of the man they barrack. Referees do make mistakes. Don't the players? Do not the most brilliant "goalies" occasionally let through easy goals? This unsportsmanlike feature spoiled a good game.

R.A.S.C. BILLIARD MATCH.

At the Bakeries Y.M.C.A. Hut a very exciting Billiard match was played on Monday between the R.A.S.C. Bakers and the R.A.S.C. Transport (Kalk). Teams, 6 aside, games 100 up.

At the close of the second game the home team were leading by 83 points. The visitors then played two of their best men, Pte. Waite and Pte. Best, who reduced the Bakeries' lead down to 11. The last game was most exciting, both players wanting 3 for game. Results:—

Bakeries 505
Transport 525

OFFICERS AND SERGEANTS V. OTHER RANKS.

A cricket match was played at Frenz between officers and sergeants, 83rd Bde. R.A.S.C., and other ranks, 83rd Bde. R.A.S.C., and resulted in a win for the former by 10 runs after an exciting finish. For the winners Capt. Bowman scored 24, 2nd Lieut. Shearer 20 (not out), and Sergeant Mumford 13, the last mentioned also capturing 8 wickets for 29 runs. For the other ranks Pte. Elley was run out at 28, and Pte Walker scored 18; Williams captured 8 wickets for 27.

INTER-ALLIED LAWN-TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIPS.

The Inter-Allied Lawn Tennis Championships were begun in Paris on Tuesday with the eliminating rounds. Each nation is represented by two players, who compete in two singles and one doubles. The French pair, A.H. Gobert and Samazenilh, proved successful in the singles matches against the Roumanians, N. Misu and Eremie.

CRICKET CUP & OTHER MATCHES.

13th KINGS v. 51st KINGS (LIVERPOOL REGT).

A match played on Monday between 13th Kings and 51st Kings on the former's ground at Beuel resulted in an easy win for the "13th" by an innings and 25 runs. For 13th Kings, Col. Potter scored 29, and Lieut. Bailey 22. Scores:—

SOUTHERN DIV. M.T. COY. (51) v. 2/4th HANTS REGT. (49) on Wednesday; for the former the leading batsmen were Pte Parkes (14); Pte Potter (14), and Pte Buller (14). Major Drysdale took 3 wickets for 15, and Sergt Albery 4 for 15; for 2/4th Hants the top scorer was Lieut Wiltshire (15).

161 BDE R.F.A. (50) v. "G" BTY, ANTI-AIRCRAFT R.A. (65) at Seigburg-Muldorf on Wednesday; for 161 Bde Capt. Lamax carried his bat for 14, and Bdr. Kennett scored 10, for "G" Bty. Sergt Armstrong compiled 19 and Bdr. Wiseman 11, while Gnr, H. Smith gave a magnificent bowling display, taking 8 wickets for 20 runs.

CAVALRY DIVISION H.Q. (85) v. A.P.O. COLOGNE (62).

At Quadrath on Wednesday. The winners rattled up 85, Spr. Smith (15), being top scorer, but Spr. Evans, (14), Lieut. Fox, (13), and Spr Bliss ran him very close. The start of the P.O.'s innings was certainly sensational, four wickets falling for 6 runs, Spr. Smith doing the damage as he had claimed three victims in his first three overs which were maidens. C.Q.M.S. Sharmen and Spr. Tadwell batted well the former scoring 26, The Cavalry Div. H.Q. thus won their second game in connection with the cricket cup.

3rd KING'S OWN HUSSARS v. 52nd GORDON HIGHLANDERS.

A double hat-trick occurred during the Gordons, innings; they had scored 54 for 3 wickets and then 6 wickets fell in 6 balls, 3 from Mr. Hatherley's bowling and 3 being stumped in succession off Mr. Huggins' bowling; the last 7 wickets only added 2 runs. Scores:—

3rd King's Own Hussars	69

NO. 70 SQUADRON (65) v. 5th RAILWAY TELEGRAPH CO. R.E. (45), at Bickendorf, on Wednesday. For the R.A.F. Sergt. Welch and Cpl. Philpott opened the innings, making 26 for 1st wicket, when Sergt. Welch was bowled for 13, Cpl. Philpott being dismissed almost immediately for 10; after Maj. P. Huskinson contributed 12 in good style, wickets fell rapidly, 8 being down for 50. At this stage Wood made a stand, putting on 15 out of 16 for the last 2 wickets. Bowling for 70 Sqdn., Bolton was again in good form and bowled effectively, taking 8 wickets for 17. Spr. Newman, for the R.E's, was the only one to reach double figures, hitting 17.

4th F.S. COY (MAPS) v. 1/6 W. YORKSHIRE REGT.; at Kiettenberg Park, Sulz; after a rather exciting finish the Yorkshiremen won by 3 runs. Lieut. Col. McLeod (Maps) all but pulled his side through, making a useful 20 (not out). Result:—

The Derby was run at 1500 hours on Wednesday. The telegram containing the result was handed in by Reuter's Agency at 1517 and delivered in Cologne at the office of The Cologne Post at 1530.

SPORT IN ENGLAND.

A ROYAL DERBY.

STEWARD'S HANDICAP WON BY HIS MAJESTY'S VICEROY.

The King and Queen accompanied by the Prince of Wales, Prince Albert, Prince Henry, Princess Mary and the President of Brazil witnessed the Derby on Wednesday. Contrary to expectations rain fell sharply before the race but did not affect the course, which was very hard. The exodus from London to Epsom exceeded anything known in the past, all roads and railways being packed. The regulation which forbade the landing of aeroplanes within a certain radius of the course led to the abandonment of plans by the Handley-Page Company to take visitors by air, but the Avro Company had 32 machines engaged landing at a spot outside the prohibited area.

The second race provided a Royal victory, the King's horse Viceroy winning the Steward's Handicap. Results:—

Juvenile Plate:— 1, Hardbake (2—1 on); 2, Ampanda (6—1); 3, Eve (100—7) and Knight of Derry (100—7) a dead heat. Seven ran.

Steward's Handicap:— 1, Viceroy (9—4); 2, Dorelus (5—1); 3, Lady Farmer (4—1). Nine ran. The victory of His Majesty's horse created great enthusiasm.

PANTHER DELAYED AT THE START.

The Derby:— 1, Grand Parade (33—1); 2, Buchan (7—1); 3, Paper Money (7—1). Thirteen ran. Roamer was ridden by J. Childs, otherwise the runners were the same as the probables.

Place Betting:— 33—4 against Grand Parade, evens Buchan, and Paper Money.

The Panther was delayed at the start and got badly away. Paper Money led from Roamer, White Heat, and Grand Parade, with the favourite Panther fourth, and Coriolanus last. Rounding Tattenham Corner, Paper Money led from Grand Parade, Buchan, and Sir Douglas with the favourite nearly last. Close to home Grand Parade challenged and won an exciting race by half a length. Two lengths separated the second and third. Sir Douglas was fourth, Tangiers fifth, and Bay of Naples last. The time was 2 minutes 35 4/5 secs.

Casterham Plate:— 1, Tarvie (9—2); 2, Latour (6—1); 3, Pourville (4—1). Six ran.

Ranmore Plate:— 1, D.N.P. (7—2); 2, Polygram (6—4); 3, Brioche (9—4). Six ran.

Epsom Plate:— 1, Twincat (5—4); 2, Merville (9—2); 3, St. Agnes Eve. Seven ran.

ROYAL NAVAL, MILITARY, AND AIR FORCE TOURNAMENT.

A FITTING INNOVATION.

The strong desire expressed in both the British and French Armies that the latter should be enabled to take part in the Tournament, which opens at Olympia on the 26th June, has received official sanction. The French Minister for War has notified that the French Army will furnish the Musical Ride. The Ride will be given in the picturesque colours of the French Cavalry, and 25 Trumpeters will be included in the Detachment to furnish the requisite music.

The Ride has, during the 36 years in which the Tournament has been in existence, been given by all the most famous regiments in the British service, and the allotment of the Ride this year to our Allies is a most fitting and welcome innovation.

The Musical Drive will be furnished by the British Army und the unit selected is A Battery, Royal Horse Artillery. Another musical attraction will be the presence of the famous Band of the Royal Marines, who will furnish music throughout the run of the Tournament.

SWEEPING CHALLENGE TO CARPENTIER.

Those behind McGoorty are tiring of empty innuendoes, and are devoting their energies to a match with Georges Carpentier, who shows no inclination to tackle the American. The latter has proved himself the most genuine proposition in England by clearing out H. Rolph, P.O. Curran, Tom Gummer and Harry Reeve. The future must answer for itself (says the "Referee"), but in justice to the position of boxing at this period the Tricolour representative should be induced to make a match with McGoorty, whose friends will find a sum up to £5.000 for a side wager, and will agree to an 80 per cent. share, or winner to take all, of the purse that may be given. A meeting between these celebrities was on the tapis before the War, and it would be interesting to know if Mr. A.F. Bettinson's contract has been allowed to lapse.

WAR CUP POLO "TOURNEY."

The first round of the war Cup Polo Tournament concluded at Ranelagh with a victory for Lord Stallbridge's Cavalry C/Team against the R.A.F. team by 6 goals to. 3.

Teams: Cavalry:— Major W.H. Pearson, Capt B.C. Pearson, Ld. Stallbridge and Cpt. Lowther.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

Racing in British Occupied Area.

We all note with pleasure that the Commander-in-Chief has directed that a Sub-Committee of the Rhine Army Sports Committee be formed to control racing in the British Occupied Area. This Sub-Committee will have the same powers, so far as concerns racing in the British Occupied Area, as the Jockey Club and National Hunt Committee have in Great Britain. The Sub-Committee, or rather, the Racing Sub-Committee is composed as follows:—

President — Brig. Gen. H.H. Tudor, C.B., C.M.G., R.A. Members — Brig. Gen. N.W. Haig, C.B., C.M.G.; Brig. Gen. P.O. Hambro, C.B., C.M.G., 15th Hussars; Brig. Gen. G.F. Boyd, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., D.C.M., R. Ir. Regt., Major C.M. Longmore, D.S.O., R.A.; Secretary — Lt. Col. E.H.L. Beddington, D.S.O., M.C., 16th Lancers.

Army Championships.

At the conference held at G.H.Q., on the 26th ult. to settle various points in connection with the Army Championship it was decided to adhere to the date already fixed — viz, the latter half of September — for this important fixture. The Championship will consist of the following events:

(1) Boxing; (2) Tug-of-War; (3) Athletic Sports; (4) Basket Ball; (5) Cross-country run.

Such a comprehensive programme will undoubtedly evince much enthusiasm and augurs well for the success of the project.

Rhine Trips.

I have received a letter, signed "Sufferer," from a correspondent who suggests that the present lack of catering arrangements on the Rhine Army pleasure steamers should be remedied. The addition, he argues, of an orchestra, composed of either our own men or Germans, and a bar and meals served by the E.F.C., at a reasonable figure, would be to us, as it is to our Allies, a real pleasure trip. The suggestion is sound; such accessories are necessary for the complete enjoyment of a river trip. And why spoil the ship for a ha'porth of tar?

THE RAMBLER.

GAMES AT DUREN.

51st GORDONS SUCCESSFUL GATHERING.

"The Commanding Officer hopes that all ranks will enjoy themselves at the Sports." This was the wish expressed in orders by Lieut. Col. R. M. The meeting was held on Saturday at Duren and was a magnificent success.

A FOREST OF DEAD MEN.

GRUESOME STORIES OF RUSSIAN BOLSHEVISM.

A most enthralling, though at times gruesome lecture was given by the Rev. Courtier Forster, late Chaplain of Odessa, on Wednesday evening, at the British Empire Leave Club.

Lt. Gen. Sir C.W. Jacob, K.C.B., K.C.M.G., Commanding 2nd Corps took the chair and in introducing the lecturer, explained that Mr. Courtier Forster had a full knowledge of his subject, having lived in Russia for over 8 years and knowing intimately all classes of Russian society. The Hall was packed, the audience including Lt. Generals Sir C.W. Jacobs, Sir A.L. Haldane, Maj. Gen. A.L. Deverill, Sir S. Lawford and Brig. Gens. Tulloch Rotton, Ellishart and Oldfield. There were also present many ladies.

The Rev. Courtier Forster opened his lecture with a brief account of the growth and the main tenets of Bolshevism, and went on to explain that he was in Russia all through the beginning of the war and during the 1st and 2nd revolutions, and after many adventures and various terms of imprisonment escaped into Austria, where he stayed through the Austrian revolution. Later he managed to make his way to Switzerland and so home to England. The main doctrines of Bolshevism were the same as those held by the Anarchists and Nihilists, the most important of which are.—

(a) The abolition of God and the belief in goodness, sin, heaven and hell or any life but the present.
(b) The abolition of the rite of marriage and all family life and responsibility and the introduction of free union among the sexes.
(c) The complete abolition of all rights to private property, so that no man should call anything, even that which he had in his pocket, his own.
(d) The complete abolition of any form of Central Government and the formation of local Soviets.

Cruelty and Barbarity.

The lecturer then described the life which he had lived during the Bolshevic Regime in Odessa. These Terrors of Society were not allowed to take possession of the place quietly but fighting proceeded for 3 days in the streets. On one occasion 19 wounded officers and men prisoners were foully done to death by them, and their bodies thrown into the harbour. In the harbour scenes of the utmost cruelty and barbarity took place. Over 400 officers and men were tortured—chained to planks and slowly roasted in front of the furnaces; torn asunder by winches, their eyes gauged out and then large stones tied to their feet and their bodies dropped into the sea.

The wife of one murdered officer bribed a diver to go down and try to rescue the body of her husband. He went over the ship's side but almost immediately pulled the cord to be hauled up again. "Have you found your man?" they asked. "No" he replied, "nothing on earth will persuade me to go down again for the stones on the feet of the men cause them to stand upright and the force of the water has raised their hands above their heads and the whole of the bottom of Odessa Harbour is as a Forest of Dead Men." He gave other instances of whole families being murdered including young children.

FROM DUREN TO JEDBURGH.

POPULAR GORDON HIGHLANDER C.S.M.'s FAREWELL.

The popularity of C.S.M. George Balfour, C. Coy. 51st Gordons, was testified to on Tuesday, when all ranks of the company met and presented him with handsome and valuable gifts on the occasion of his departure from Düren for Jedburgh, Scotland. C.S.M. Balfour, who originally belonged to the 10th Black Watch and has seen much active service, has been identified with the 51st Gordons since last summer, and the battalion has found in him a hard-working and capable N.C.O.

The testimonial was arranged by Lieut. J. Robertson, the popular commander of C. Coy. and C.Q.M.S. Latham carried out the idea with practical effect.

In making the presentation in presence of officers, N.C.O.s and men of the company, Lieut Robertson made eulogistic reference to C.S.M. Balfour's services. C.S.M. Balfour, he said, had seen service on the Grecian, Egyptian, and French Fronts, and had done much to make the company what it was.

C.S.M. Balfour, in reply, expressed his regret at leaving the Battalion and particularly the company. The gifts he would treasure not only as souvenirs of Rhineland, but as the tangible expression of their good will and comradeship towards him (applause).

Hearty cheers were raised at the close of the gathering.

C.S.M. Balfour left for Blighty on Wednesday.

SUICIDE AFTER RE-CALL.

After receiving a military notice a soldier in the Labour Corps named Harry Aistrup, of Gedney, South Lincolnshire, was found hanging from a beam on the farm premises of Mr. A.H. Munson, of Gedney, where he had been employed for 14 months.

A few days ago he received a notice to rejoin, and it was stated at the inquest that he was afterwards very quiet. It was stated that most of the time he was in the Army he had spent in hospital.

A verdict of Suicide while Temporarily Insane was returned.

ABBEY WAR BELLS.

The war peal of bells at Westminster Abbey were consecrated yesterday morning, and rung for the first time for many years, in honour of the King's birthday. Originally there were only five bells. Three have been added, and the whole restored, and it is now the heaviest peal in London.

WITH MILITARY HONOURS.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE PRIVATE ARUNDALE.

The funeral of the late Pte. G. Arundale 55032 of "C" Coy. 2/4 Bn. Duke of Wellington's Regt., who was accidentally killed on 28th May 1919, took place on Saturday, with full military honours, at Südfriedhof Cemetery, Cologne. The coffin, covered by the Union Jack and numerous wreaths from officers, N.C.O's and men of the battalion, was borne by men of the transport section (to which the deceased was attached) from the cemetery gates to the graveside, the regimental Band playing the Dead March in "Saul." The whole of "C" Coy's Officers, N.C.O's and men followed.

The officiating clergyman was the Rev. C. G. Huck, M.C.C.F.

At the conclusion of the service the firing party fired three volleys, and the buglers sounded the "Last Post" and so ended a sad but impressive ceremony.

The coffin was of polished pitch pine, with brass fittings, and bore the following inscription: "55032 Pte. G. Arundale, 2/4 Duke of Wellingtons. Born 9th September 1899. Accidentally killed, 28th May, 1919."

20,000 MARKS IN ONE DAY.

52nd DURHAM'S WAR SAVINGS ASSOCIATION.

This Association was formed in the first week of last month, and for the three weeks ending 24th May, contributed 80 pfennings short of 19,700 marks, making a total of 1,457 War Savings Certificates purchased.

Two Companies—"B" and "D"—were each responsible for over 20,000 marks in a single day, and in two weeks the War Savings contributions in this unit totalled no less a sum than 60,461 marks—equivalent to 1,465 certificates.

SOLDIERS RECREATION CLUB.

One of the less generally known but extremely useful institutions in Cologne, is the Recreation Club run by the Christian Association at 19 Apostelstrasse, near the Neumarkt. The club provides recreation in the form of chess, draughts, dominoes etc. and plentiful refreshment at low prices. Tea, chocolate, lemonade, and biscuits are always on sale during the hours the club is open, viz. 10.30—12.00, 2.0—4.0 and 5.0—8.0. Bible classes are held in a special room each evening at 6.30 and on Sundays at 3.0 and 7.0, special talks are carried on, on the purely undenominational lines characteristic of the Association's policy.

OLD SCOUTS' CORNER

BY HAWK EYE.

Our meeting on Wednesday evening went off very well, and ten new members were enrolled.

We are in touch with Headquarters in London, and soon an abundant supply of literature should be available, which will considerably facilitate our progress.

A very novel suggestion has been made, which will be brought up at our next meeting, (Wednesday) 5.30 p. m. in the Y.M.C.A. grounds, Lindenthal. So be sure to come early.

To-morrow (Saturday) we are rambling in the direction of Bonn, and are meeting at the tram terminus (by the Hohenzollern Bridge) at 2.45 p. m., so as to allow plenty of time in which to catch the 3 o' clock tram. All old scouts and their friends, whether members of our circle or not, are heartily invited to join us on this excursion. Those who have cameras by all means bring them along.

Mr. Silverwood (Y.M.C.A. Deutz) is simply pining for suggestions re future trips etc. — so please oblige him.

BRITISH PRISONERS RELEASED IN RUSSIA.

REFORMS IN INDIA.

ARMISTICE TERMS FOR AFGHANS.

OFFICER MURDERED IN OCCUPIED ZONE.

PREMATURE OPTIMISM ABOUT PETROGRAD.

STRONG BOLSHEVIST DEFENCE.

Copenhagen. 4th June.— The latest Esthonia communiqué is as follows:— "Esthonian troops in Eastern Lettland continue their victorious forced marches against Kreutzburg on the river Dvina. They captured 1900 prisoners, a battery of heavy artillery and a number of machine guns on the 1st and 2nd June. Reports continually appearing in the Press about the capture of Petrograd are very premature. Vigorous counter-attacks by the Bolshevists in the West and North-West of Gatchina continue. Their repulse by the Northern Corps has not yet achieved a decisive result. Nothing is known at the Esthonian headquarters of the Finnish advance on Petrograd from the North. Similarly at the West of Luga on the Petrograd-Pskoff railway the Northern Corps is solely engaged in repelling attacks."—Reuter.

CONTINUOUS ANTI-BOLSHEVIST FRONT.

Reuter learns that the advance of the Esthonian and Russian Northern Corps continues successfully. The report of the capture of Peterhof last week is not confirmed and it appears that no advance along the coast has been made by the Esthonians. The attacking troops are within 15 miles of the town of Luga and have cut off Pskoff. The Bolshevists on the Eastern edge of lake Peipus have withdrawn and the troops on the Southern front in Esthonia have joined hands with those on the Eastern. The important railway junction at Volmar has been taken by the Esthonians and the Bolshevists on the coast of the Gulf of Riga have retreated. There is thus a continuous anti-Bolshevist line from the Gulf of Finland to East Riga.

CHINESE RED GUARDS AT PETROGRAD.

A Helsingfors message states that almost complete strikes are taking place in the Petrograd munition factories. Putilorff and other large works are surrounded by strong detachments of Red Guards, including Chinese, who on Saturday last turned machine guns on the workers.

Many Bolshevist public departments have lost their staffs through the flight of the Communists, who are fearing punishment if Petrograd is taken.—Wireless.

BRITISH PRISONERS RELEASED FROM RUSSIA.

The first batch of British officers to be released by the Bolshevists, under an arrangement for exchange of prisoners, has been taken to the Finnish frontier. The officers were suffering in various degrees both mentally and physically and were in rags. Most of the party, which numbered eighteen, had been incarcerated in Bolerskie prison, one of the largest criminal prisons in Russia. Their appearance presented a great contrast to that of the two Bolshevists who were exchanged for them. These were well dressed, had plenty of luggage and were well fed and happy. One of the Russians exchanged was Raskolnikoff, the Red "Admiral". He declared that he had been wonderfully well treated since his capture and signed a statement to that effect in Russian and English.—Wireless.

BRITISH IN TRANS-CAUCASIA.

BOLSHEVIST DETERRENT.

Ekaterinodar. General dismay has been caused by a rumour that it has been decided to withdraw the British forces now in Trans-Caucasia and to replace them by Italians. According to a newspaper despatch, two Italian ships have already landed Italian marines at Batoum. It is pointed out here that it is solely due to the presence of the British troops that order has hitherto been preserved in a very highly charged atmosphere and amidst the conflicting claims of the various native nationalities. Only the special qualities and great experience of the British, it is contended, are able to cope with the turbulent elements in Trans-Caucasia and to ensure that the Bolshevists do not turn the native rivalries to their own account. "Swapping horses" in such circumstances would be a most dangerous proceeding, and might well prove a fatal experiment.—Reuter.

With regard to the report that the British troops now in Trans-Caucasia are to be replaced by Italians, Reuter's Agency learns in well-informed quarters that the project has been for some time past, and still is, under consideration. While no confirmation of any decision having been reached in the matter can be obtained, it is stated that action on the lines indicated may be possible, but will probably not take place in the near future.

The Central News telegraphed to Viscount French asking if he intended making any statement in regard to Mr. Asquith's speech. The following reply was received: "I am saying nothing for the moment.—French."

GOVERNMENT REFORMS IN INDIA.

DEVOLUTION OF DUTIES.

On the second reading of the Bill for the reform of Government of India Mr. Montagu, Secretary for India, said that, if the second reading were carried, the Government intended to refer the Bill to a joint committee of both Houses.

This Bill, he said, was the bridge between Government by agents of Parliament and Government by representatives of the Indian people and it must be in such a form that it should not be static but fluid. They must form an intelligent electorate in India and give it power through some such institution.

For the present it was necessary to reserve some functions to Parliament, transfer other functions to representative bodies, and gradually to transfer those duties which were reserved. The proposals of the Bill were merely intended to cover the transitional period and provision was made for examination at a stated period into the working of the scheme.— British Wireless Service.

ARMISTICE TERMS TO AFGHANISTAN.

TWENTY MILE LIMIT.

Reuter learns that the terms of the armistice proposed to the Amir of Afghanistan include the withdrawal of the Afghans to a line twenty miles within their own borders, while we maintain our present positions, and that the frontier tribes be discouraged by the Afghans from further hostilities.

HANDICAP RACE FOR KABUL.

QUEEN-MOTHER ON SCRATCH.

Peshawar.—Interest now centres on Kabul. Marching towards that city are certain Afghan troops and behind them an envoy bearing General Barrett's reply to the Amir's armistice proposal. Behind him again is Seleh Mahomed, the Afghan Commander, who asserts that he has been recalled but is undoubtedly going to Kabul with ulterior purposes. Bringing up the rear and likely to reach Kabul first is Hagrat Bibi, the Queen Mother, who is in possession of the late Amir's fleetest motor cars. Stirring events are possible when these conflicting personages and elements meet at Kabul.

According to information brougth by the recent Afghan deputation the report seems to be confirmed that Nasrullah Khan, the Amir's uncle, is alive and well. He is said to be lodged—not locked up—in the citadel and allowed a certain amount of exercise. The Amir ocassionally visits him and apparently discusses with him matters of policy.—Reuter.

BOMBING RAID INSTRUCTIONS.

In the House of Commons yesterday Lieut. Commander Kenworthy (L., Hull, Central) asked the Secretary for India if day and night aeroplane bombing raids had been carried out against Jelalabad and other Afghan towns; if so what steps were taken to avoid the killing of women and children in these raids; and would he publish assurances on this subject for the information of the Moslem subjects of the Empire and of our Allies.

Mr. Montagu: As far as I know there has been no night raid. I am informed by the Government of India that every care has been taken to confine these operations to military objectives. As regards the last part of the question, the well-known conduct of the British Army in this connection makes it unnecessary to give any assurance. (Cheers.)

Replying to a further question from the same member, Mr. Montagu said that no instructions had been given as to the height from which bombs will be dropped in the day time.

BOLSHEVISTS AND MUSSULMANS

There are signs that Bolshevist propaganda in Afghanistan and India is continuing mainly on the lines that European states intend to do away with all Mohammedan races.—Reuter.

MURDER IN THE OCCUPIED ZONE.

FRENCH OFFICER VICTIM.

Copenhagen, 3rd June. A Berlin telegram says: "The newspapers here publish reports from Biebrich, near Mayence, to the effect that a French officer there struck with his riding whip a tram conductor who would not stop at his orders. The conductor thereupon dealt the officer such a violent blow on the head with the driving handle of the tramcar that the officer immediately fell down dead. The conductor, whom French soldiers did not venture to arrest on the spot owing to the threatening attitude of the crowd, managed to escape into unoccupied territory."—Reuter.

PRIVATE AND C.O. TEST CASE.

CIVIL v. MILITARY LAW.

Judgment in the action brought by Mr. Christopher Henry Heddon, solicitor, of Ripon and Harrogate, formerly a private in the Army Service Corps, against Major C. C. Evans, for damages for alleged false imprisonment, malicious prosecution, and slander, was delivered yesterday in the King's Bench Division by Mr. Justice McCardie. In the result, his lordship found for the defendant on the facts of the case, but he dissented from the statement of the law submitted by the defence as to the superiority of military tribunals over the civil courts.

The words complained of by plaintiff were, "I knew you were a rogue. Now I know you are a damned fool. Get out." This, plaintiff alleged, had relation to his profession as a solicitor. "Will you never tell the truth?" was another statement complained of. By the defence filed. defendant admitted the arrests, which he claimed arose out of the administration of military discipline. He denied the statements complained of were in relation to plaintiff's professional conduct, and pleaded that they were spoken without malice and were privileged. Defendant further claimed alternatively that the arrests were ordered by the General Officer Commanding, Northern Command.

His lordship, in the course of his judgment, said the case raised a question of constitutional importance. The whole of plaintiff's alleged injuries sprang directly and solely from the military relationship which existed between plaintiff and defendant, who was plaintiff's commanding officer. They were exclusively associated with the purported administration of military discipline by the defendant, and consequently, counsel for defendant submitted that this action would not lie. This contention was based on a judgment by Chief Baron Kelly, who, delivering the views of ten judges in Dawkins v. Rokeby, in 1873, stated that the authorities showed that cases involving questions of military discipline and duty alone, were cognisable only by military tribunals, and not by courts of law. His lordship, continuing: If the words of Chief Baron Kelly bear the meaning which has been assumed and has been relied upon by the defence, they have created a principle the importance of which cannot be overstated, and the limits of which can scarcely be fixed.

DEFINITION OF MILITARY LAW.

In order to test the defendant's contention, it was essential to distinguish between military law on the one hand, and martial law on the other. The latter was quite foreign to the point at issue and, in the sense that it meant the suspension of the ordinary law, and the temporary government of the country by military tribunals, was unknown to the law of England. Military law was to be found in the Army Act, the Rules of Procedure, King's Regulations, and Army Orders. The result of legislation which was consolidated in one Act in 1879 was that a man who entered the Army must submit to the code of punishments sanctioned by Parliament, and to the tribunals which were authorised to administer that code. Plaintiff in this action contended that, if a court martial or an officer acted without jurisdiction and inflicted a sentence on a soldier which they or he had no power to impose, whereby the soldier suffered in his personal liberty, an action for false imprisonment would lie, although the acts complained of arose in the course of military discipline.

It was a settled principle of English law that a man who, without lawful authority, caused another to be arrested, imprisoned, or otherwise injured in his person or property, was liable to an action for damages. Did this great protective rule of law apply to the acts of military tribunals? His lordship could see no reason for exempting military officials from the operation of this rule. The matter was put plainly by Lord Haldane in "The Laws of England," vol. 25, p. 91, when he wrote:

"Members of courts-martial and naval and military authorities generally are responsible as individuals to any person injured by reason of their having acted either without or in excess of their jurisdiction."

MILITARY JURISDICTION.

Proceeding, his lordship said: If the acts of military tribunals or officers were insusceptible of supervision by the Civil Courts, the gravest consequences might ensue. It can scarcely be that military men are alone the interpreters of military law. If so, they become above the civil law. The judges are the interpreters of the law. Military law, I conceive, is a part of the law of the realm. It rests on statutory basis, and the soldier is a person subject to two states of law—military law and civil law. It seems to me, as a matter of principle, that the liberty of the soldier should not be infringed, nor should his person be invaded, save in so far as that infringement or invasion is justified either by the law military or the law civil. The question of justification should ultimately be determined by the ordinary courts of law. It is for those Courts to determine the extent of military jurisdiction given to military officers and tribunals by Act of Parliament.

Upon what might be termed the doctrine of compact, said his lordship, the defence based a further submission that the courts could not inquire into the doings of military tribunals. If this doctrine meant that any act in the purported administration of military law or discipline was beyond the challenge of the civil courts, whether with or without the actual jurisdiction entrusted to military tribunals or officers, it constituted a doctrine of the gravest constitutional importance. The compact of a man who entered the Army, whether voluntarily or not, was that he would submit to military law, not that he would submit to military illegality.

OFFICERS LIABLE TO ACTION.

Having referred in detail to the many cases cited during the hearing, his lordship said he had arrived at the following conclusions:

1. That a military tribunal or officer would be liable to an action for damages if, when acting in excess of, or without jurisdiction, they or he directed that to be done to another military person, whether officer or private, which amounted to assault, false imprisonment, or common law wrong, even though the injury purported to be done in the course of military discipline.

2. If an act causing injury to personal liberty or property were within the jurisdiction and in the course of military discipline, no action would lie on the ground that the act done was done maliciously, or without reasonable and probable cause. The House of Lords alone was free to hold that an action would lie for the malicious abuse of military authority.

He had to inquire whether the present defendant acted without jurisdiction and whether he falsely imprisoned the plaintiff. If so, he could award damages to the plaintiff. But he was not free to award damages for malicious, groundless abuse of authority.

FACTS OF THE CASE.

Dealing with the facts of the case, his lordship said it would have been better if defendant had brought plaintiff before a court-martial, but prima facie he had authority to deal with plaintiff under Section 40 of the Army Act. The sentence of fourteen days confinement to barracks was one defendant had power to impose, and his lordship held that in this matter plaintiff suffered no injustice. The argument that the conviction was void because it involved forfeiture of pay did not succeed, because the only pay lost was the corps pay, whereas, in his lordship's opinion, the Act referred to ordinary pay. Further, he was unable to say that plaintiff had established any evidence of illegal commitment; and, secondly, he was satisfied that in sending plaintiff to the detention barracks defendant was acting under orders from the Northern Command. His lordship decided that the claim for slander failed, because he held that the words complained of were not spoken of plaintiff in connection with his profession as a solicitor. He was unable to find that defendant acted beyond his jurisdiction with respect to the several matters complained of by the plaintiff, and he further held that plaintiff had not established that defendant acted maliciously or without reasonable and probable cause as alleged by his statement of claim.

In conclusion, his lordship said: I could wish that in the series of proceedings against the plaintiff there had been a fuller observance of every one of those technical requirements which, though not vital, are yet useful, and should have been followed throughout. The feelings of the plaintiff which led him to commence this litigation were deep and genuine, but some parts of his conduct were wrong, some unwise, and some over-impulsive. He failed to bear in mind that, although he had left France, he was still in the Army, and that he owed a high and constant duty of obedience. I cannot overlook the occasions when he ignored authority and was absent without leave. On the other hand, I think that a greater measure of tact and a different method of treatment on the part of more than one officer would have prevented the occurrence of all of this unhappy history. The discipline of the Army must be firmly maintained, but the enforcement of that discipline may well be assisted by the recognition of the fact that a soldier, whatever his position may have been in civil life, is appreciative to the full of just and sympathetic consideration. There must be judgment for the defendant.

Mr. Watson intimated that, having established an important principle, plaintiff would not appeal on the facts.

Mr. Justice McCardie, on this understanding, said judgment would be without costs.

END OF SPRING DROUGHT.

The weather chose Derby day of all days for the break-up of the drought, which had prevailed for twenty-five days. The longest Spring period without rain during the last sixty years was from March 18 to April 15, 1893—twenty-nine days. Prior to Wednesday no rain had fallen since May 9, when there was only about a sixteenth of an inch, and the preceding five days were dry, so that this Spring has come very near to creating a record. The dry May followed on an extraordinarily wet Winter, and 1919 has so far given nearly 13½in of rain (the average being 8.82in), or about as much as we may usually expect to get during the first six months of the year.

PEACE PAGEANT ON THE THAMES.

One of the greatest days of the Peace Celebrations in London will be the tribute of the Thames to the Mercantile Marine. Three hundred boats manned by merchant seamen and decorated with flags will form a magnificent pageant extending from the Tower Bridge to Chelsea.

It is hoped that on this occasion all London will be singing. Choirs aggregating fifty thousand trained voices will be located along the river embankments. Thirty bands will be stationed at convenient spots. The decorations of the shores, embankments, bridges and strings of barges will be of a kind and scope never before attempted in the history of the Thames.

SENIOR OFFICERS CLUB.

Admiral Wemyss has accepted the presidency of the Senior Officers Club. Among the Vice-Presidents are Admiral Sir David Beatty, O.M., General Sir Archibald Hunter and General Sir William Birdwood, while over 240 Admirals and Generals have already joined.

The objects of the club are to arrange for sets of residential flats for retired officers and their families, also clinical institutions in which subalterns, as associate members, will enjoy the same privileges as the senior officers who are members of the club. These institutions will be for the treatment of tuberculosis, heart and dietetic troubles, rheumatism and other diseases resulting from the strain of war.

DERBY COURSE OFFENDERS.

The number of persons charged before the Epsom Magistrates for offences on Derby Day was twenty. The charges included one for suspected welshing, three for playing Crown and Anchor, fourteen for dice-throwing and one for playing a game called "Billy Fairplay."

VOTES FOR AMERICAN WOMEN.

Washington. 4th. June. — The Senate has adopted a resolution in favour of Women's Suffrage, the resolution having already been passed by the House of Representatives.

An amendment to the United States Constitution embodying Women's Suffrage will now have to be submitted to the various States for ratification.—Reuter.

HUGE HOUSING SCHEME FOR LONDON.

29,000 DWELLINGS.

The London County Council has approved the recommendation of its Housing Committee that within five years dwellings to accommodate some 145,000 persons shall be provided. The estimated number of dwellings is 29,000 and if possible 10,000 of these dwellings are to be ready by the end of March 1921.

ASSISTING BRITISH AVIATION.

A luncheon was given at the House of Commons yesterday for the purpose of discussing the future of British aviation. Among those present were H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, Mr. Winston Churchill, Sir Douglas Haig, and Commander Read, the American trans-Atlantic flyer.

Brig. General Seely, in proposing the health of Commander Read, said he could assure our American friends that there was no trace of envy on our part for his splendid performance. We recognized that the Americans had brilliantly succeeded where we had gloriously failed.

Dealing with the Government's attitude to aviation the Air Minister said that it must and will do a number of things. For instance, every one of our lighthouses will be fitted to project vertical beams. It would also be a great thing if the railway companies would paint the names of stations on the roofs. There must also be more landing grounds and good air maps, which are totally different from land maps.

The Prince of Wales, briefly responding to the toast of his health, declared his great interest in aviation and spoke with pleasure at the presence of Commander Read, whom he congratulated very heartily on his great achievement.

BRITISH ATTEMPTS ON THE ATLANTIC.

St John's. 4th May. Major Partridge, who came here for the British Admiralty in connection with Colonel Porte's flying boat, is being recalled. From this it is inferred that Colonel Porte's project of flying the Atlantic has been abandoned in favour of the official attempt to cross the ocean by dirigible.—Reuter.

THE BESTOWAL OF TITLES.

Replying to Brig-General Page-Croft (N.P., Christchurch) in the House of commons, Mr Bonar Law said that his attention had been called to the suggestion that all recommendations for titles should be referred to a committee of the Privy Council in order to advise the Prime Minister if anything was known against the character of the proposed recipients and to consider the adequacy of the reasons for the proposed honours, but that he proposed to take no action in relation thereto.

Sir R. Cooper (N.P., Walsall) asked at this point the Speaker intervened. Can the right hon gentleman deny that honours have been conferred in recent times on persons whose character would not bear investigation—(laughter and cries of "Oh, oh!")—and if not.—

HIGH PRICES FOR GOVERNMENT MOTORS.

Motor lorries and cars, most of which were seriously the worse for wear made big prices in many instances yesterday, when, by order of the Ministry of Munitions, a number of lots were offered at the Motor Transport Repair Depôt, Bromley-road, Catford.

A Sheffield Simplex motor with an open touring body, looking the worse for wear, was sold for 620gs. and a similar car fitted with a limousine body made 610 gs. A small two-seater car, dismantled, made £157. Other light Singer cars went at 210gs and 270 gs. and Sunbeams from 300gs to 400gs. Two three-wheeled auto-carriers fetched 40gs and 45gs respectively. There was a good demand for lorries. British Berner three-ton lorries fetched from 180gs to 630gs, Commer 30cwt lorries 450gs and Dennis 30cwt lorries from 340gs to 375gs.

COTTON STRIKE PENDING.

The Cotton Operatives Ballot resulted in 267, 650 votes being cast for insistence on a forty-six and a half hours week and thirty per cent advance in wages. Only 6,347 voted against the proposal.

A conference of employers and operatives held at Manchester yesterday failed to reach an agreement. The operatives will tender notices to take effect on the 23rd June.

GIANT SUPER-TYPE AIRSHIP.

The firm of Armstrong-Whitworth is constructing near Selby, Yorkshire, a super-type of rigid airship to be known as the R 39. The air ship will be 685 feet in length and 85 feet maximum diameter, with a gross lift of 80 tons and net lift of 45 tons. It is anticipated that it will develop a speed of eighty miles per hour. Its capacity will be three million cubic feet.

VICKERS CANADIAN STRIKE.

Montreal. 4th June.— Nearly three thousand employés of Canadian Vickers, Ltd., have struck for a forty-four hour week.—Reuter.

Over eighty per cent. of demobilized men have been reabsorbed in civil employment. For those who after twenty-six weeks have failed to secure work the Ministry of Labour announces that the weekly out of work donation will be continued for a further thirteen weeks at the rate of twenty shillings for men and fifteen shillings for women. The allowances for children will remain unchanged.

OUR FAME.

The Cologne Post is far on the road to fame. Its history has been brief but interesting, and the auspices are propitious. Some have slighted it, some have smiled at it, some have criticised it, and some have reviled it. The moods of man are many, his attitudes are variable, and his foibles are perplexing. It may be true, if Sir Walter Scott will look down in pardon upon us, that "ne'er was flattery lost on Journalist's ear," but our newspaper welcomes every notice of friend or foe. In an age of unblushing advertisement it does not advertise itself, yet it is known even in strange places. Has it not been mentioned in the august House of Commons? We blush to find its fame, and faintly find our words in Shakespeare —

"Bless thee, Bottom! bless thee! thou art translated.
Thou art our very friend."

It was Horace Walpole who wrote: "We are forced to ask every morning what victory there is for fear of missing one." Yes, we look each morning for some fresh tribute to The Cologne Post, and we fear lest even one is missed.

Let us break the latest news gently to our readers. We are now "patronized by royalty." Were it not that our editor is a modest, serious-minded, man these magic words would be henceforth emblazoned on our first page. How many of our fellow-men have striven with heroic courage to earn this honour for their wares! Yet we have gained it, we who often thought our sweetness was wasted in the desert air of alien territory. Begone, false modesty! we pause on our road to fame that we may bask awhile in the sunshine of royal favour.

Last week the Prince of Wales was the honoured guest at the anniversary festival dinner of the Printers' Pension Corporation. Many of our fellow-journalists and other distinguished people were present. The Prince has already proved that he is a graceful and ready speaker —and we who have been overseas know that he has long since won his spurs on the sterner field of battle—and his was the speech of the evening. In it he made a kindly reference to The Cologne Post. He assured the audience that "they can take comfort in the fact that a large staff of British printers are daily engaged in producing an excellent British newspaper in Cologne."

Most gratefully we thank the Prince of Wales for his gracious words. Encouragement is good, and it is helpful even when it is not fully deserved. Fame is the spur that the clear spirit doth raise, says Milton, and now that our newspaper has tasted the sweets of fame its staff will gladly continue to scorn delights and live laborious days. Their labours would be lightened if they had "the large staff of British printers' mentioned by the Prince, but they will carry on without this happy aid. A newspaper is made or marred by its public, and if The Cologne Post is to be worthy of the British Army of the Rhine it must be helped by friendly criticism, good-natured advice, and happy gifts of literary genius.

In fine, the Prince of Wales has helped us.

"A prince can make a belted knight,
A marquis, duke, and a' that."

—and we shall not say him nay he does honour us in any of these ways, but even now he has given to us the stimulus we crave and the ideal we need.

NOTES ON PHOTOGRAPHY.

(VI)—BY WILLIAM R. PATTERSON, F.R.G.S. etc.

My attention has been drawn to the matter of prices charged by photographic establishments in Cologne for developing, printing and enlarging. From the information I have received it appears that some firms are making reasonable charges. Also, so great is the amount of work that passes into their hands, that they have neither the time nor the staff to do all the work thoroughly.

For the benefit of The Cologne Post readers, I have purposely interviewed several of these firms and have selected one which I believe will give satisfaction to the majority of amateurs. Those, therefore, who desire the best results should communicate with me through The Cologne Post, or call upon me. I have stipulated that our readers have precedence and that the work be well done. I shall always be glad to hear of any complaint relating to inferior work or overcharging, and to investigate the cause. The following list of prices has been arranged:—

It is to be hoped that we may soon have a photographic exhibition in Cologne in aid of some worthy institutes and I trust that troops will do their utmost to support it. Readers should, if possible pay a visit to the Art and Photographic Exhibition at Bonn in aid of the British Red Cross which is to be held on the 6th, 7th and 8th of this month.

MULES AND THEIR WAYS.

BY ONE WHO HAD SOME.

Have you ever thought seriously about these creatures the long—eared hybrid you see fastened to the G. S. wagon which brings up your rations, clothes, etc., from the dump? Have you ever heard them referred to by the old R. F. A. personnel as "long eared Barbary Wallahs?" But they are useful for some things. If you want a cap changing, give it to one of them and let him chew it for a minute or two. After that, no self-respecting "quarter bloke" would refuse to change it without having tears in his eyes.

The time when the moke, dink or mule gets the driver really "husky" is when the whistle blows for stables. One starts at 11.30 to groom these long-eared, slab-sided pieces of anatomy and has perhaps prepared their coats to look something like coats, with a liberal use of brush, curry—comb and bad language, when the time comes to draw feeds. You fly like the wind for your feeds and when you come back the worst has happened. The C. O. is only two or three pairs away and your mokes are enjoying a roll or a mudbath and they arise with mud umpteen inches thick on their withers.

It is just this that makes the enraged driver tell the mule what he thinks about it, its parents and all its relations in Africa. They give you a splendid time when out for rough exercise. You feel as though you are sitting on some church steeple, the bone on their backs sticks up like the Pyrenees. Is it anything strange that the driver asks like the king of old, "Who will rid me of this turbulent pest?" The answer comes back: "Only one person, Madam Demobilization." "Well then" says the R.F.A. bloke, with all his mates, "Roll on Demob."

A TRAGEDY.

(BY W. H. LEE.)

He sat deep in meditation. Should he? To drink, or not to drink, that was the question. He reviewed his past life. He had had some decent times. Yes, he'd had some decent times but the moment had now arrived when he must decide a matter of life and death. His eyes wandered to the black bottle on the table and it was with an obvious effort that he withdrew his gaze.

Yes. He would. With a gesture of impatience he siezed the bottle, withdrew the cork, and swallowed the contents at a single draught. The bottle dropped from his nerveless hands and with a sigh he sank back into his chair. What he had done could never be recalled. A cold sweat broke out upon his forehead. His hands gripped the arms of his chair with all his remaining strength.

His soul was racked with remorse. He was well aware that the pernicious liquid should have been kept as a last resource. And now what did the future hold for him? Nothing. It would be a black void. Oh what had he done and why; oh: why had he done it? He had drunk the last bottle of Bass in the mess and it would be fully a week before the next consignment was received.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

The Editor, in publishing letters from Correspondents, will use his own discretion, and if necessary limit the publishing of correspondence on any subject whatever. It must be understood, however that he is not responsible for the views stated.

All communications for this column should be brief and to the point, and preference will be given to those which bear the writers' signatures for publication. No letter will be published unless accompanied by rank name, and unit of sender, which are needed for the purpose of reference.

Many letters of a perverse nature have reached the office, and the Editor wishes to point out that these only cause waste of time both to the writer and the Editor himself. Letters of this nature will not be published.

A "CIVILIAN HABITS" COURSE.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.— Enclosed is a copy of a letter which I received when on leave from a Leeds lady.

Sir,— My husband has been demobilized, and as I am not sure where to address my very just complaint as to his general behaviour I am forwarding it to The Cologne Post, seeing that he left Cologne.

Before the war my husband was just one of those ordinary every-day middle class sort of men, on whom we are told the British Empire was originally built. He responded to the great call and in his turn went out to fight (about which there is nothing to complain). That was many years ago. A week ago he returned home — a changed man. His once easy command of the English language has given place to a strange jargon. He concludes all his martial commands to our maid with "I dey, I dey" or "Oxo"— words which, as he utters them, do not sound like terms of endearment, and everything in my household falls under the heading of "Nix good" or "Vat is dat."

Meal times are our worst trial. At breakfast my husband makes a grab for the loaf, and with a huge dirty jack-knife cuts off a third, which he appropriates as his right, calling it his "ration." He brings his dirty old mess tin to the table and actually insists on drinking tea out of it. For the remainder of his bread ration he has found some secret hiding place.

He divides all the food up at every meal in a strange and barbarous manner, and anything over he calls "buckshee" and promptly claims it. He refuses to sleep in a bed, but rolls himself in a blanket and using his coat for a pillow and his overcoat for a quilt, he sleeps on the floor.

But worst of all he goes out on what he calls "scrounging expeditions" and returns with vegetables and even chickens which he says he has "won," but which I have an awful suspicion come from the gardens of our neighbours.

Can the Editor of The Cologne Post please use his influence, to see that husbands are specially trained in home life for at least a month before being sent home.—A distressed Wife.

HOUR OF OPERA'S COMMENCEMENT.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.— Might I be allowed to point out, as briefly as I can, a failure on the part of the "Post" (now almost regarded as an official organ, certainly deserving of its success and popularity) which has, I know, put many besides myself, to some certain amount of inconvenience.

In last Sunday's issue — the 1st June — an announcement to the effect that "Aida" was to be played at the Opera House at 6 o'clock on the following Tuesday appeared in the weekly programme. The hour quoted, however, was incorrect, the performance starting at 5.30.

I arrived half an hour late and, besides missing some of the best music, etc., unfortunately had to commit that greatest of all "Opera-goers" crimes—late arrival. You will see that in making this complaint (although I hesitated before writing anything in the nature of a "moan" to such an enterprising journal as the "Post") I am not only doing it in my own interest, but in the interests of all those who visit the Opera, and all entitled to an undisturbed enjoyment of the most excellent productions to be witnessed there.

ENGLISH AS SHE IS WRIT.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—Regarding the last paragraph in columm 4, of page 2 of your issue of May 4th, which shows what can be done with a dictionary when one really tries, a friend of mine yesterday purchased a razor, on the case of which are given directions for stropping. Thinking these might be as amusing to your readers as they were to myself, here they are:—

"If a Razon not keep his fineness of Cut, so is the fault always through wrong treatment by using the Razorstrop. Therefore take note of the following:— "Direction:

(1) put Edge and back of the Razor simultaneous of the Razorstrop.
(2) don't press the blade of the Razor to much and move same slight over the Razorstrop.
(3) don't lift the back of the Razor if you will turn the blade; by this means, the blade will be round and dull."

WHO WERE THE FIRST CIVILIANS?

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,— Apropos your article in "Cologne Post" dated Sunday, May 25th, 1919, referring to British civilians in Cologne,

May I through the medium of your paper state, that about January 17th, 1919, a party of British civilians arrived in this city and were in occupation at No. 2 Headquarters Buildings, for about two months. They were known as the Civil Advisory Board and the President was Mr. H.H. Haldin, K.C. This Board was only in Cologne temporarily, and has now been broken up, the members returning to England.

This information I know to be accurate, as I myself, served with this Board during its stay here.

HUMMING AT CONCERTS.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir, — Would you please bring to notice through the medium of your valuable paper the following:—

It was my good fortune to hear a concert at the Y.M.C.A. Bonn, to-day, given by a celebrated singer, where several well-known sentimental songs were sung. During the singing of several of the items the troops started humming to themselves. To both artistes and audience, the habit is very irritable.

Hoping you bring this complaint forward, and that a general improvement will come of it.

"THE SPARE PARTS" AT ENGELSKIRCHEN.

EXCELLENT ENTERTAINMENT BY 10th QUEEN'S CONCERT PARTY.

A very successful concert was given on Monday evening at Engelskirchen by "The Spare Parts," the concert party of the 10th Queen's. The Battalion orchestra rendered selections during the intervals.

Pte. Maltay did extremely well and his songs "Great Red Dawn" and "Joan of Arc" were greatly appreciated by the audience. Another pleasing item was Lieut. Harwood's rendering of "Old Dadlow." "A Little Bit Of Love" by "Alice" and Pte Alford was also good. The concerted items were quite a feature of the evening.

"Lights Out" — the finale — terminated an excellent evening's entertainment.

THE CALCUTTA SWEEP.

HEART-RENDING TALE OF CABLES AS DUMB AS THE TOMB.

The Calcutta Derby sweepstake of 1919 will go down to history as the "blackest" one of its long and honourable career.

I know this (writes "Orion" in the Daily Express) because I am one of the victims of this year's sweep. I hold a block of ten tickets. On Monday at the latest I should have learnt the result of the draw, which took place in Calcutta on Saturday last.

In normal times the result is flashed round the world in a few minutes. At the time of writing, three days after the fateful draw, not a word concerning it has come over the cable. Worse—a thousand million times worse—no word is expected for days! The cables are as dumb as the tomb regarding the Calcutta sweep.

Quotations about jute and chutney and such like are, however, choking the lines of communication between India's coral strand and the dear old homeland, but not a whisper has been allowed to come through concerning the most important event of our times. Uninteresting items about the situation in Kafiristan, Baluchistan, Afghanistan, and other miserable stans are coming over freely, though.

INTOLERABLE SITUATION.

The fact is, an intolerable situation has been created by the refusal of the Post Office authorities, or some one, to grant special and preferential privileges to the only piece of news that matters just now. For nearly five years Englishmen have submitted as cheerfully as possible to the censorship of cables because they recognised that censoring was necessary, but I warn the Government before it is too late, that if the result of the Calcutta Derby sweep is withheld from the people of the country that shouldered uncomplainingly the heaviest burden of the greatest war in the history of the world much longer, something serious will occur.

Phew! A man has just informed me that the Calcutta Club are going to run a St. Leger sweep, and will I take some tickets. Not in these! No more for me until the cables are working normally.

MUSIC FOR THE MALADES.

On Thursday evening one of the wards of No 2 C.C.S. was upwards of a hour a scene of much brightness, it being the occasion of a visit from the Salvation Army Band. Under the baton of Bandmaster F. Dare the Band rendered some interesting items, including, "Under the Colours," "Rock," "America," "Redemption," "New-Zealand," "Abide with me." The recitations of Miss W. Haines and Captain Feat at the piano, were well received. The Band was accompanied by Commissioner Mapp, Col. Laurie and Staff. Captain Hush's words of cheer were much appreciated by the boys.

It is interesting to know that the Band is out to do all it can for the benefit of the men of the Rhine Army and in this connection are giving a sacred concert on Sunday afternoon in the S. A. Hostel Hohe Strasse.

"B" COY. 51st GORDONS v. 2nd H.L.T.M. BATTERY.

Played at Duren on Wednesday. The game was keenly contested in the first half, neither side scoring. The Trench Mortars were the superior side on the second half, but the Gordons had a fine defence. Pte Welmot scored for the T.M.'s in ten minutes and five minutes later Lieut Ewing added another. The Gordons made several great attempts but were unable to overcome the "Trench Mortars" defence. Close on time Pte Welmot scored another goal.

Score:— Trench Mortars 3; Gordons 0.

STILL UNBEATEN.

93rd BRIGADE R.G.A. v. LABOUR CORPS.

At Kalk on Friday an interesting game ended in the R.A. favour by 4—nil. All the goals came in the first half. The 92rd are still unbeaten and possess a goal average of 33—5. They will be glad of any matches at Kalk with Battalion XI's.

Although the King and Queen were present at the Derby the observance of the event was not quite restored to pre-war practice. Members of the Jockey Club did not dine with his Majesty at Buckingham Palace.

"D" COMPANY'S DAY OUT.

5/6th ROYAL SCOTS SPORTS MEETING AT OHLIGS.

Enthusiasm for sport raged high amongst the officers and men of the 5/6th Royal Scots on Tuesday when a sports meeting was held at Ohligs. Despite heavy showers of rain every one stood fast till the finish, when the only cry one heard was "give us a Battalion sports meeting every week," if possible.

It seemed to be "D" Company's "day out," as they carried everything in front of them at 5—a—side football, tug of war, mule racing, and wrestling on mules. As is usual, the mule racing and wrestling on mules brought forth shrieks of laughter, where the onlooker watched the rider trying to "spur" on the stubborn beast while it in turn put him through some rather curious evolutions.

A miniature range was open during the afternoon.

SOUTHERN DIVISIONAL RACE MEETING.

EXCELLENT FIRST DAY'S RACING.

Except for a slight shower of rain, the weather was fine for the first day's Southern Division Race Meeting at the Race Course, Exerzier Platz, Merheim, yesterday afternoon.

AN INTERESTING SYSTEM.

By "JERRY M."

It happened some years ago that the question was put to me as to whether there was a definite law at work behind what may be called "chance happenings."

In the course of my study of "systems" I came across some very interesting features. The one I have now in mind I call the "twelve" system. On testing it I found that records extending over some ten years, showed remarkable results, the frequent inclusion of a long priced winner making things very satisfactory.

The races chosen to work on were handicaps, of over £150 value. What I discovered was that the majority of winners came from the middle weight competitors, and the following simple system was devised.

Find the difference in weight between the "top" and "bottom" weights. Thus, if the top weight is 9st 6 lbs. and the bottom weight is 6st 0 lbs. the difference will be 3st 6lbs. or 48 lbs.

Now divide this result by 2 which equals 24. From this deduct the "measure," or the first figure in the "difference" (48 lbs.) in this case 4, so 24—4=20 lbs.

All that now remains to be done is to add this result to the bottom weight, in this case 6st which gives 7st 6. Now the horse carrying this weight (or the nearest to the weight) is our System horse. It sometimes occurs, though rarely, that two horses carry the same weight. In this case, both must be supported.

How the System Has worked.

Now for a few results which will speak for themselves:—

Lincoln Handicap 1914. Top weight, Spanish Prince 8st 9 lbs; bottom weight Surge 6st 0 lbs; difference 2st 9 lbs or 37 lbs. 37 divided by 2 equals 18. Take the first figure in difference 18—3=15, add this to the bottom weight, 6st and you obtain 6st 15 lbs=7st 1 lbs. This was the exact weight carried by Outram who won at 25 to 1. The same day in the 4 o'clock race, the weights ranged from 9st 5 lbs. to 7st 9 lbs. or 24 lbs. difference half this 12 deduct 2 and add to 7st 9 lbs.=8st 5 lbs the weight carried by Star of Doon, won at 100 to 6.

Liverpool, March 26th, 1914.— The scale was 9st to 8st 5 lbs. or 37 lbs. half is 18 subtract 3=15 6st 5 lbs. 15 lbs.=7st 6 lbs. the nearest to which was 7st 5 lbs. carried by China Cock won at 8 to 1.

Liverpool March 27th.— Scale 9st to 7st=28 half is 24 deduct 2=22 7st. 22=8st 8 lbs. carried by Light Brigade won 11/10.

Warwick March 31st.— We missed a winner by 1 lbs. only, the system showing a weight of 8st 1 lbs. The winner carried 8st 2 lbs.

Newbury April 1st.— On a scale of 9st to 7st 8 lbs. (difference 20 lbs.) we get 8st 2 carried by Lie-a-Bed won at 10 to 1.

Newbury April 2nd.— Scale 9st and 6st 1 or 41 lbs. result = 7st 4 lbs. The nearest weight carried was 7st 3 lbs. Major Symons who won at 3 to 1.

Eglington April 3rd.— On a scale of 11 st 12 lbs and 9 st 10 lbs or 30 lbs we get 10 st 9 lbs carried by the winner at 10 to 1.

Note that all dates are consecutive, with a winner indicated 6 days out of 7, and we only bet on Races over £150!!!

The Chester Cup 1919.— Scale 9 st 7 lbs to 6 st 5 lbs we get 7 st 4 lbs indicated carried by "Tom Pepper" won at 100 to 8.

The Victoria Cup Hurst Park May 10th 1919.— Scale 9 st 3 to 6 st 4, or 41 lbs, we get 7 st 8lbs the nearest to this is 7 st 11 lbs carried by "Carados" won 100 to 8.

Lewes May 12th.— Scale 8 st to 6 st 3 lbs we get 6 st 13 lbs the nearest was 6 st 9 lbs carried by "Sir Ashby" won at 5 to 1.

Chester May 13th.— Scale 8 st 13 lbs to 6 st 12 lbs we get 7 st 8 lbs nearest 7 st 9 lbs carried by "Bidston" won 9 to 2.

Space forbids more proofs, but it will perhaps be interesting to apply the system to results as they come along from time to time. And while making no claim to its infallibility, I leave readers to judge it on its own merits. If it affords a little amusing pastime, then it has achieved some purpose.

FUTILITY OF 'DRUG-TAKING' FOR NERVOUS WEAKNESS.

A copy of Dr. Muller's latest work, "The Way to Health," is enclosed in each box.

"Taking tonics or stimulating drugs, in cases of Nerve trouble, is folly of the worst kind. It is like giving neat brandy to a starving man. A temporary and misleading improvement is effected, which quickly passes, and leaves the exhausted Nervous system in worse plight than ever.

WHAT IS DR. MULLER'S NUTRIENT?

Dr. Muller has produced an exact counterpart of the essential Nutrient of which the Nerve Cells are composed, and on which alone they can be nourished, and further, by a special process of his own, has rendered this substance easily assimilable through the blood into the Nervous System; thus by Natural Means feeding, revitalising, and rebuilding the exhausted Nerve Cells to a state of robust and vigorous Nerve Health. The Muller Nutrient serves a treble purpose. It enriches the Blood, renders liability to attack from the insidious enemy of disease germs (such as Malaria) almost non-existent, and it builds by Natural Means a strong and Healthy Nervous System.

REBUILDS AND REVITALIZES THE BRAIN AND NERVE CENTRES.

EX-WAR SECRETARY ON ORGANISATION.

Lord Haldane attended yesterday's sitting of the Coal Commission and gave evidence on State organisation, basing it on his experience as War Secretary.

Mr. Justice Sankey said: "As the result of your efforts the army was very speedily mobilized and our forces were ready to go to war immediately war was declared."

"That is so" replied Lord Haldane," what we did was to concentrate on extreme rapidity of mobilization and the concentration of forces at one particular centre." On the 3rd August 1914, he stated, he was requested to go back to the War Office because he knew the whole scheme of mobilization. However, it only took a few minutes to give the necessary orders as everything was prepared years before.

Lord Haldane gave a long description of the organisation of the army and urged that the teaching of administration was as important as the teaching of tactics. He added the comment that in the army everybody who took to administration was looked down upon. The result was that the administrative class was very little developed and he was convinced that they could have got ten times the number of men if they had been given proper encouragement.

ENGLISH OIL STILL RISING.

Oil continues to rise at Hardstoft near Chesterfield. Yesterday it stood at over 2,000 feet, the borehole being about half full.

It is hoped to fix at the well-mouth by tomorrow a receiving tank capable of holding 200,000 gallons, in order that drilling may be recommenced at once.

Mr. Kellaway, Deputy Minister of Munitions. stated in the House of Commons yesterday, in reply to Mr. Broad, that the discovery of oil at Hardstoft, Derbyshire, was receiving the careful consideration of his Majesty's Government. He might be allowed to add that the oil had reached a height of about 2,400ft. and was rising at about a rate of 340ft per day. (Hear, hear.)

Colonel Wedgwood:— When does the hon. gentleman expect to decide whether this petroleum belongs to the Crown or to the owners of the ground?

No reply was given.

ONE THOUSAND TRAWLERS DEMOBILIZED.

Nearly a thousand trawlers and drifters which worked with the Navy during the war have been demobilized, and the Government, working in conjunction with the Fishing Vessels Owners Association, is engaged on a scheme for training demobilized officers and men for increased efficiency in the fishing service.

Unemployed fishermen at one port will receive quick notification of opportunities at other ports. The Government is also working out a scheme for the construction of standardized inshore fishing vessels for the use of small fishermen. By these methods it is hoped to effect considerable developments in the fishing industry and to increase the export trade.

HUGE SUN CLOUD.

The Yerkes Observatory, of the University of Chicago, announced the unusual celestial phenomenom of an enormous cloud of gas gathering on the eastern edge of the sun. The cloud first was observed two days ago, and has grown to be the largest of its kind ever observed at the Yerkes Observatory, where it is said now to be entirely detached from the sun and to extend about 340,000 miles in an arc along the sun's edge. The distance from the sun to the top of the cloud is estimated at 200,000 miles.

NEWS IN BRIEF.

Exciting scenes were witnessed at Killarney yesterday in connection with the conveyance to gaol of five young girls for selling flags without permission. A large crowd of sympathetic people forced their way into the railway station, cheering and singing Sinn Fein songs.

Mr. Churchill, in the House of Commons, stated that on May 21 the number of men serving in the Army, apart from commissioned officers, was 1,320,000.

It is stated that there is good prospect of a Victory Naval Review being held at Spithead at the end of July or the beginning of August.

At yesterday's meeting of the Chertsey Rural Council, Captain Beeney, the surveyor, called attention to the danger from fire amongst the bungalows on the banks of the Thames. Many of these were crowded close together, built of highly inflammable materials, and some were covered with tarred felting.

Seven Avro aeroplanes, under the direction of Colonel Henderson, of the Avro Joy-ride Company, plying between Hounslow and Epsom, carried forty-four passengers to the Derby yesterday, and, in spite of the unfavourable climatic conditions, brought back thirty by air.

For the information of British officers, non-commissioned officers, and men, it is announced that the British Officers and Soldiers Club and Y.M.C.A. at Nice is now closed.

At an inquest on two brothers who were drowned at Egham a verdict was returned yesterday of accidental death.

Of thirty applicants for the V.A.D. scholarships of the joint war committee of the British Red Cross Society and the Order of St. John, ten have passed the examination and received grants enabling them to be trained as doctors.
